1897 416. Cork bark, cut into squares or cubes, eight cents per pound; manufactured corks over three-fourths of an inch in diameter, measured at larger end, fifteen cents per pound; three-fourths of an inch and less in diameter, measured at larger end, twenty-five cents per pound; cork, artificial, or cork substitutes, manufactured from cork waste and not otherwise provided for, eight cents per pound.

1894 319. Corks, wholly or partially manufactured, ten cents per pound.

1890 434. Cork bark, cut into squares or cubes, ten cents per pound; manufactured corks, fifteen cents per pound.

1883 422. Corks and cork bark, manufactured, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 416, ACT OF 1897.

(b) Small tubes made of cork, used in fitting and holding metal stoppers in bottles, are manufactures of cork and not corks.—T. D. 24575, G. A. 5380.

(c) Suberit, so called, an article in the form of cubes, manufactured from pulverized cork, which may be derived from cork waste, or cork in any form, after being subjected to certain processes, is dutiable under the provision for cork, artificial, or cork substitutes, manufactured from cork waste, and not otherwise provided for, and not under paragraph 448 as manufactures of cork.—T. D. 24827, G. A. 5503.

(d) Articles made partly of metal and partly of artificial cork are dutiable as articles made in part of metal, there being no provision for manufactures of artificial cork or cork substitute.—T. D. 24830, G. A. 5506.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(e) The term "manufactured cork" is not synonymous with "manufactures of cork."—T. D. 10927, G. A. 422.

(f) Cork bark cut into thin triangular sheets, assessed as manufactured cork and claimed to be cork bark cut into squares or cubes. Held not to be manufactured and not to be cut into squares or cubes. Protest overruled and decision of the collector must stand.—T. D. 11091, G. A. 534.

(g) Cork ventilators are not dutiable as manufactured cork.—T. D. 13603, G. A. 1875.

1897 417. Dice, draughts, chessmen, chess balls, and billiard, pool, and bagatelle balls, of ivory, bone, or other materials, fifty per centum ad valorem.

1894 320. Dice, draughts, chess-men, chess-balls, and billiard, pool, and bagatelle balls, of ivory, bone, or other materials, fifty per centum ad valorem.

1890 435. Dice, draughts, chess-men, chess-balls, and billiard, pool, and bagatelle balls, of ivory, bone, or other materials, fifty per centum ad valorem.

1883 424. Dice, draughts, chess-men, chess-balls, and billiard and bagatelle balls, of ivory or bone, fifty per centum ad valorem.

1897 418. Dolls, doll heads, toy marbles of whatever materials composed, and all other toys not composed of rubber, china, porcelain, parian, bisque, earthen or stone ware, and not specially provided for in this Act, thirty-five per centum ad valorem.

1894 321. Dolls, doll heads, toy marbles of whatever material composed, and all other toys not composed of rubber, china, porcelain, parian, bisque, earthen or stone ware, and not specially provided for in this Act, twenty-five per centum ad valorem. This paragraph shall not take effect until January first, eighteen hundred and ninety-five.

1890 436. Dolls, doll-heads, toy marbles of whatever material composed, and all other toys not composed of rubber, china, porcelain, parian, bisque, earthen or stone ware, and not specially provided for in this Act, thirty-five per centum ad valorem.

1883 425. Dolls and toys, thirty-five per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 418, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Dolls contributed for an exhibition or for charitable purposes are dutiable.—T. D. 16998, G. A. 3426.

(b) Doll fans are dutiable as toys and not under paragraph 330 as fans.—T. D. 17843, G. A. 3777.

(c) Doll parasols are dutiable as toys and not under paragraph 360 as parasols.—T. D. 17843, G. A. 3777.

(d) Doll scissors about 1 inch in length are dutiable as toys and not under paragraph 140 as scissors.—T. D. 17843, G. A. 3777.

(e) Doll jewelry sets made of brass and glass, the latter in imitation of pearls, are dutiable as toys and not under paragraph 434 as jewelry.—T. D. 21430, G. A. 4505.

(f) Decalcomania or transfer pictures are dutiable as toys and not as lithographic prints.—T. D. 15576, G. A. 2836; T. D. 19254, G. A. 4131.

(g) Harmonicas, jew's-harps, music boxes, and magic lanterns when intended for the amusement of children and chiefly used as such are dutiable as toys and not as musical instruments.—T. D. 22096, G. A. 4679.

(h) Toy magic lanterns are dutiable as toys and not under paragraph 111 as optical instruments. Change in this act by the addition of the words "not specially provided for" to paragraph 111.—T. D. 21784, G. A. 4603.

(j) Dumb watches with chains of base metal held dutiable as toys and not under paragraph 434 as jewelry.—T. D. 21374, G. A. 4480.

(k) Hollow glass balls for Christmas-tree ornaments, known in trade as toys, are dutiable as toys and not under paragraph 100 as articles of glass, nor under paragraph 112 as manufactures of glass, nor under paragraph 193 as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 21718, G. A. 4589.

(l) Christmas-tree ornaments made of round metal wires wound with cotton thread and thickly set with short pieces of tinsel are not tinsel wire, lame, or lahn, are articles made in chief value of tinsel wire, lame, or metal threads, and are not toys. Assessed for duty as toys and claimed to be dutiable under paragraph 179 as tinsel wire, lame, or lahn. Though the classification was not correct, the protest was overruled.—T. D. 20615, G. A. 4341.

(a) Toys composed of india rubber being expressly excepted from the provisions for toys, Held, that toys (in this case consisting of imitation bagpipes composed of a rubber pouch with a small neck, into which is inserted a hollow wooden mouthpiece) composed wholly or in chief value of india rubber are not toys.—T. D. 22339, G. A. 4720.

(b) The fact that an article may be dealt in in the toy department and in toy stores is not sufficient to establish commercial designation of the article as toys.—T. D. 22559, G. A. 4784.

(c) Clowns of the character of toys, designed for use as Christmas-tree ornaments, held to be dutiable as toys.—T. D. 22559, G. A. 4784.

(d) Glass balls used for decorating Christmas trees and known commercially as toys are dutiable as such.—T. D. 22559, G. A. 4784.

(e) Ornamental odor or perfume flasks, or vinaigrettes of fancy design, composed, respectively, of base metal washed or gilded in imitation of gold or silver and of similar metal and shell or mother-of-pearl, provided with chains and rings to attach them to the wearer's necklace or chatelaine, expressly intended for use as articles of personal adornment, in the nature of jewelry, and not being adapted or suitable for use as toys or playthings for the amusement of children, are not dutiable as such. They were assessed as manufactures of metal and mother-of-pearl, respectively.—T. D. 22690, G. A. 4831.

(f) Parts of toys are not dutiable as toys unless they are intended to be used as such in their imported condition, and wigs for dolls being intended to form part of the doll and not to be used as toys, in their imported condition, are dutiable according to their component of chief value.—T. D. 23303, G. A. 4999.

(g) Paper boxes containing a number of pictures printed in black and white, to be traced over with a brush dipped in water in order to bring out their colors (each box being provided with a brush and water cup), and intended for the amusement of children, are dutiable as toys and not under paragraph 403 as books and printed matter.—T. D. 22710, G. A. 4836.

(h) Violins and accordions. A toy is an article designed as a plaything for children, and violins and accordions capable of being played upon as musical instruments by one who has learned to play such instruments are not toys and are dutiable as musical instruments regardless of their size, the quality of their tone, their price, or the cheapness of their construction.—T. D. 22765, G. A. 4855.

(i) There is no commercial understanding as to violins and accordions that would indicate which are and which are not toys.—Id.

(j) Cheaply made tin cups incapable of holding water and used by children as playthings are dutiable as toys.—T. D. 23088, G. A. 4933.

(k) Diminutive bird cages made of tin and intended to be used exclusively by children as playthings are toys.—T. D. 23165, G. A. 4955.

(l) Small articles made in the form of bread, with a mouse made to spring therefrom on opening, cheese, and a cigar case with a spring made to throw out imitations of cigars, and a pot with a handle, all except the cigar case capable of holding candies, held dutiable as toys and not as fancy paper boxes.—T. D. 23197, G. A. 4973.

(n) Lanterns composed of metal and glass, ranging from 2½ to 5 inches in height and from 2 to 3 inches in diameter at the base, the sides of colored glass, known commercially as toys, are dutiable as such.—T. D. 15859, G. A. 2959 followed; T. D. 23910, G. A. 5189.

(a) Dolls, dolls' hats, and dolls' dresses stamped out of cardboard paper by the lithographic process found to be commercially known as toys and held to be dutiable as such.—T. D. 24687, G. A. 5429.

(b) Miniature breech-loading guns 5½ inches long and miniature breech-loading pistols 1¾ inches long are not toys.—T. D. 24768, G. A. 5467.

(d) Small egg-shaped bonbon boxes made of metal, such as are dropped from a mechanical device in the form of a hen on depositing a coin, are dutiable as toys.—T. D. 24785, G. A. 5477.

(e) The exception herein of toys made of earthen or stone ware applies only to such articles when made wholly or in chief value of earthen or stone ware. Small beer steins of eathenware and metal (metal chief value) held to be dutiable as toys.—T. D. 24866, G. A. 5523.

(f) Cheaply made-up triplicate mirrors measuring 3 by 4 inches or less held to be dutiable as toys. T. D. 23281, G. A. 4992, modified.—T. D. 24869, G. A. 5526.

(g) Small metal boxes decorated and made in fancy shapes held to be manufactures of metal and not toys.—T. D. 25082, G. A. 5601.

(h) So-called dolls' fans found to be too small to be used as articles of utility even by children and held to be dutiable as toys.—T. D. 25250, G. A. 5660.

(i) Diminutive glass mugs 1¼ inches in height, fitted with metal caps and so colored on the inside as to simulate the appearance of a mug filled with foaming malt liquor, are dutiable under this paragraph.—T. D. 25294, G. A. 5680.

(j) Finger rings for children are dutiable as jewelry.—T. D. 25309, G. A. 5684.

(k) Water-color paints contained in boxes other than tin when the invoice value is 25 marks or 30 francs or less per gross boxes are dutiable as toys.—T. D. 25355, G. A. 5697.

(l) Cone-shaped cotton tents or miniature Indian tepees too small in size to be of practical utility and designed for and used by children in play are dutiable as toys.—T. D. 25489, G. A. 5747.

(m) Diminutive articles of blown glass ornamented and representing dogs, deer, and spinning wheels, set upon drawn-glass bases and too fragile to be used by children, are not toys.—T. D. 25492, G. A. 5750.

(n) A collection of small benches, tables, shrubbery, and flowers, a green felt mat, and a fence, etc., the whole representing a picnic ground with a number of dolls as the picnickers, invoiced and packed separately for convenience, but sold for a lump sum as an entirety, held to be a toy.—T. D. 25493, G. A. 5751.

(o) Painted metal ornaments pivoted within a metal ring, so as to revolve when placed over the flame of a lamp or candle, and Christmas-tree ornaments in the form of flowers, composed of metal, held to be dutiable as toys.—T. D. 25508, G. A. 5759.

(p) Rubber dolls and doll heads are dutiable under this paragraph. Figures of children with elastic cords attached thereto; grotesque, military, and other figures, such as clowns, horseback riders, animals, etc., are toys and not dolls, and when made of rubber are expressly excluded from classification under this paragraph.—T. D. 25511, G. A. 5762.

(a) Diminutive canoes, some of wood and some of birch bark, held to be dutiable as toys.—T. D. 25644, G. A. 5803.

(b) This paragraph does not provide for parts of toys. Unframed grotesque mirrors are not dutiable thereunder, but fall within the provisions of paragraph 112.—T. D. 25662, G. A. 5809.

(c) Narrow bands of stamped tin or other soft base metal, attached to the centers of which is a toy watch made in imitation of bracelets, held to be dutiable as toys.—T. D. 25694, G. A. 5817.

(d) Microscopes and compasses (dividers) flimsily constructed and of trifling cost are dutiable as toys.—T. D. 25714, G. A. 5826.

(e) Workboxes furnished with sewing and mending requisites of a character and size suitable only for children's use are dutiable under this paragraph.—T. D. 25770, G. A. 5851.

(f) Position babies—small bisque or chinaware figures with a flat base—hollow, with the interior surface coated with a glaze, and having a circular orifice in the head of each figure, are dutiable under paragraph 96 and not under this paragraph.—T. D. 26012, G. A. 5913.

(g) Toy steins not exceeding 40 pfennigs each in value and one-eighth of a liter in capacity found to be in chief value of metal and held to be dutiable as toys and not decorated earthenware.—T. D. 26095, G. A. 5948.

(h) Oil lamps about 4 inches in height, with colored reservoir and globe and with a base of uncolored molded glass, fitted with metal burners, are dutiable as manufactures of glass and not as articles of decorated glass nor as toys.—T. D. 26111, G. A. 5956.

(i) Small circular mirrors with metal rims and backed with cardboard bearing a printed advertisement are dutiable as mirrors and not as toys.—T. D. 26112, G. A. 5957.

(j) Small metal bells used to attach to toy animals, reins, and rattles, but also used by themselves as toys, are dutiable as toys.—T. D. 26178, G. A. 5969.

(k) Ping-pong balls are not toys.—United States v. Strauss (136 Fed. Rep., 185; T. D. 25995), reversing 128 id., 473; T. D. 25004, followed; T. D. 26184, G. A. 5975.

(l) Water-color paints in boxes fitted with brushes, the articles being invariably and universally dealt in by the wholesale trade as entireties, are dutiable as entireties. Those suitable only for use for children in play as toys, the others as paints.—T. D. 26209, G. A. 5984.

(m) Automatic pencils in the form of a gun, made of metal and wood, provided with a movable lead which is made to protrude from the barrel by pressing the trigger, are neither toys nor pencils of wood, but are dutiable under paragraph 193 as articles in part of metal.—T. D. 26306, G. A. 6020.

(n) Small brass chains costing less than 2 cents each, designed and intended for the amusement of children in play and imported attached to or separate from toy watches, are dutiable under this paragraph and not under paragraph 434.—T. D. 26335, G. A. 6027.

(o) Thin sheets of gelatin with advertisements printed thereon by lithographic process are dutiable as lithographic prints and not as toys. T. D. 25522, G. A. 5765, modified.—T. D. 26349, G. A. 6030.

(p) Toys composed in chief value of india rubber are dutiable as manufactures of rubber, being expressly excluded from classification under this paragraph by the terms thereof.—T. D. 26509, G. A. 6077.

(c) Small finger rings composed of brass, of small size, flimsy construction, such as are ordinarily packed in penny packages of candy as prizes, are dutiable as toys and not as jewelry.—Strauss v. United States (suit 3106, T. D. 26903), reversing without opinion T. D. 22125, G. A. 4688, followed; T. D. 27156, G. A. 6297.

(d) Celluloid toys are dutiable as toys and not as articles of pyroxylin.—Thomas v. Schwartz (140 Fed. Rep., 989; T. D. 27065), affirming 140 id., 302; T. D. 26657, and T. D. 25379, G. A. 5706, followed; T. D. 27205, G. A. 6310.

(e) Figures in the form of infants in a standing position, composed of china or bisque, about 8 inches in length, unsuitable for use as ornaments and designed exclusively as playthings for children, are dolls.—T. D. 27206, G. A. 6311.

(f) Certain watch chains of steel, of usual length, and fob chains, found to be articles of utility and not playthings and held dutiable as manufactures of metal. Other chains, shorter than the usual length and of flimsy character, unsuitable for any other use than amusement of children, held dutiable as toys.—T. D. 27305, G. A. 6349.

(g) Full-size violins designed for and intended to be used by children in play and so flimsily and cheaply constructed as to preclude their use as musical instruments by students or musicians, valued at less than 2 marks each, are dutiable as toys. Violins valued at 2 marks net each and upward held to be musical instruments.—T. D. 27557, G. A. 6417.

(h) Garments composed in part of cotton or wool, attached to cardboards and forming uniforms for soldiers, policemen, etc., and clowns' costumes, the size limiting their use to children of less than 12 years of age, are dutiable as toys.—United States v. Schwarz (T. D. 27773), affirming T. D. 25532, G. A. 5770, followed; T. D. 27867, G. A. 6527.

(i) Artificial Christmas trees designed and intended for the amusement of children in play are dutiable as toys.—T. D. 28180, G. A. 6599.

(j) Metal figures or nippes representing various kinds of animals, used generally as ornaments, are dutiable as manufactures of metal and not as toys.—Samstag v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 756; T. D. 28261) followed; T. D. 28296, G. A. 6638.

(k) Small silk flags are dutiable as manufactures of silk and not as toys.—T. D. 28373, G. A. 6654.

(l) Stuffed ducklings and chicks are not toys.—Morimura v. United States (141 Fed. Rep., 383; T. D. 25872), reversing T. D. 25234, G. A. 5655, followed; T. D. 26064, G. A. 5930.

(m) Celluloid balls used in the game of ping-pong are dutiable as articles of collodion and not as toys.—United States v. Wanamaker (T. D. 26055).

(n) Metal figures of horses, deer, etc., single and in groups, which are known in trade as metal novelties and are used as metal or cabinet ornaments rather than as toys, are dutiable as manufactures of metal and not toys.—Samstag v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 756; T. D. 28261).

(o) To warrant a finding that certain articles are commercially known as toys, there must be evidence of a general, uniform, and definite usage and not of one that is merely local and personal. The testimony of employees of a retail house, whose only knowledge is of what has been done or known in such house, is wholly insufficient to establish a commercial designation not corroborative of ordinary understanding.—Woolworth v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 1007).

(a) Jew's-harps, harmonicas, metallophones, and similar articles used chiefly for the amusement of children are dutiable as toys and not as musical instruments. Review of inconsistent decisions.—Borgfeldt v. United States (124 Fed. Rep., 473).

(t) Metal compasses with a combination pen and pencil attached are not toys.—T. D. 12978, G. A. 1529.

(a) A manufacture of wood, leather, and glass, resembling an accordion, but when opened shown to be a camera, accompanied by pictures which can be inserted in the rear portion and viewed through the glass lenses, is not a toy. Assessed as an article of glass.—T. D. 10751, G. A. 304.

(b) Tin candleholders for Christmas trees held to be toys and not manufactures of tin.—T. D. 14945, G. A. 2574.

(c) Decalcomanie or transfer pictures are toys.—T. D. 19254, G. A. 4131.

(d) Brownie albums or decalcomanie books, containing lithographic prints so prepared that they may be transferred to articles by what is known as the "decalcomanie process," are dutiable as toys and not as lithographic prints. Sustaining T. D. 19254, G. A. 4131, and the Circuit Court.—United States v. Borgfeldt (C. C. A.), (86 Fed. Rep., 899).

(f) Garlands made by twisting lame around a metal wire and cutting off the lame threads so that they project on each side of the central wire, chiefly used for dressing Christmas trees, are toys.—T. D. 11848, G. A. 839; reversed, Wanamaker v. Cooper (C. C.), (69 Fed. Rep., 465).

(g) Japanese paper kites are toys and not ornaments.—T. D. 11032, G. A. 475; T. D. 14063, G. A. 2114.

(h) A knife, fork, and spoon, constituting a set, held not to be toys.—T. D. 13656, G. A. 1894.

(i) Toy knives and forks not suitable for table use held to be toys and not table knives and forks.—T. D. 14809, G. A. 2492.

(j) Small bull's-eye lanterns held not to be toys.—T. D. 13657, G. A. 1895; reversed, T. D. 15859, G. A. 2959.

(k) Small cylindrical bull's-eye lanterns, intended chiefly for the amusement of children, are dutiable as toys. T. D. 14685, G. A. 2407, reversed.—T. D. 15859, G. A. 2959.

(l) Magic lanterns valued at $24 to $36 per dozen held to be toys.—T. D. 11422, G. A. 705.

(m) Magic lanterns costing from 50 marks per dozen to 38 marks each held to be toys.—T. D. 12002, G. A. 915.

(n) Slides designed for use in magic lanterns for the amusement of children are dutiable as toys and not as manufactures of glass. T. D. 10859, G. A. 354; T. D. 12711, G. A. 1360, reversed.—T. D. 15081, G. A. 2634; in re Borgefeldt (C. C.), (65 Fed. Rep., 791).

(p) Masks are not toys.—T. D. 13975, G. A. 2080.

(q) A piece of mechanism consisting of a clown sitting in an easy-chair, the lower portion of the chair secreting a music box and spring, imported as an advertisement for a show window, is not a toy.—T. D. 10751, G. A. 304.

(t) Toy flutes composed of metal held dutiable as toys and not as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 14734, G. A. 2456.

(a) Certain harmonicas found to be toys.—T. D. 11839, G. A. 830; T. D. 12109, G. A. 971; T. D. 12118, G. A. 980; T. D. 13197, G. A. 1618.

(b) Harmonicas invoiced at from 59 to 88 pfennigs per dozen held to be toys.—T. D. 11037, G. A. 480.

(c) Harmonicas invoiced at not more than 9.35 marks per dozen held to be toys.—T. D. 12141, G. A. 1003.

(d) Harmonicas composed of wood and metal (metal chief value) held to be toys.—T. D. 12977, G. A. 1528.

(f) Harmonicas invoiced at 1.41 to 2.50 marks per dozen and which can be used in the accurate rendition of popular or operatic airs are not toys.—T. D. 11037, G. A. 480.

(g) Harmonicas with celluloid coverings were imported, the harmonicas and coverings being separately invoiced, the harmonicas assessed at 45 per cent as manufactures of metal and the coverings as articles of celluloid. The complete harmonicas with covering costing less than 1 mark held dutiable as toys.—T. D. 13302, G. A. 1682.

(h) Harmonicas made of wood and metal and harmonica cases of celluloid, imported on the same vessel, but in different boxes and under different invoices, are dutiable as toys and not as manufactures of metal or as manufactures of wood, respectively, according to the material of which they were composed.—Blumenthal v. United States (C. C.), (72 Fed. Rep., 48).

(i) Calling certain articles musical instruments in an alternative part of the protest does not estop the importer from claiming that they are dutiable as toys, as asserted in another part of the protest.—Id.

(j) Certain musical instruments, "Heliken in Kisten," composed of wood, metal, paper, and leather (wood chief value) held not to be toys. They were assessed as manufactures of metal, but the Board does not decide as to the correctness of the assessment.—T. D. 13433, G. A. 1770.

(k) Post horns of brass, intended to give bugle calls and coaching blasts, are not toys.—T. D. 13241, G. A. 1662.

(m) Jew's-harps held not to be toys.—T. D. 11017, G. A. 460; T. D. 11562, G. A. 737; T. D. 13657, G. A. 1895; reversed in T. D. 15016, G. A. 2593; T. D. 15859, G. A. 2959, wherein jew's-harps are held to be toys.

(p) Music boxes wound with a lever held not to be toys.—T. D. 12850, G. A. 1446; reversed (65 Fed. Rep., 415).

(q) Certain small round and square music boxes held not to be toys.—T. D. 12965, G. A. 1516.

(r) Music boxes, small in size, of inferior quality, playing less than six tunes, not musically accurate, wound with a key permanently affixed to the outside of the box, easily operated by a child and costing 8.35 francs or less each, are dutiable as toys and not as manufactures of metal.—Jacot v. United States (C. C.), (65 Fed. Rep., 415).

(s) Tin whistles or fifes, crude musical instruments with six holes on which many airs can be played, are dutiable as toys.—T. D. 11992, G. A. 905.

(a) Owls made from paper pulp and feathers, intended for the amusement of children, are toys.—T. D. 10906, G. A. 401.

(b) Tin plates having stamped thereon the child's story of cock robin, together with birds and figures, not suitable as plates to eat from, are toys.—T. D. 11989, G. A. 902.

(c) Pincers or eyeglasses, costing less than 3 cents a dozen and not aiding the vision, are toys and not eyeglasses.—T. D. 12139, G. A. 1001.

(e) Toy spyglasses held to be toys.—T. D. 14697, G. A. 2419.

(f) Brass scales and weights of the kind commonly used in families in weighing medicines are not toys.—T. D. 12964, G. A. 1515.

(g) Miniature sewing machines composed of metal held to be toys and not manufactures of metal.—T. D. 15145, G. A. 2671.

(h) Certain small telescopes and fioroscopes or microscopes held not to be toys.—T. D. 14153, G. A. 2152.

(i) Small trick glasses held to be toys and not manufactures of glass.—T. D. 14942, G. A. 2571.

(j) Certain glass tracing slates held to be toys and not slates.—T. D. 14943, G. A. 2572.

(k) Toy watches held to be toys.—T. D. 13229, G. A. 1650.

(l) The fact that a "toy" broadly defined is an article mainly intended for the amusement of children does not warrant the conclusion that anything chiefly used to decorate an object designed to amuse children is to be classed as a toy.—Wanamaker v. Cooper (C. C.), (69 Fed. Rep., 465).

(m) Metal thread, known as tinsel, tinsel thread, lametta, etc., but never as a toy, is not dutiable under this paragraph merely because it is used almost exclusively for decorating Christmas trees. Reversing T. D. 11848, G. A. 839; T. D. 10730, G. A. 283; T. D. 12997, G. A. 1548.—Wanamaker v. Cooper (C. C.), (69 Fed. Rep., 465).

(n) This paragraph was in force until January 1, 1895, the date when paragraph 321, act of 1894, went into effect.—T. D. 18538, G. A. 3994.

(o) India-rubber balloons uninflated are not toys.—T. D. 10889, G. A. 384.

(p) Wax angels usually employed for decorative purposes are not toys.—T. D. 10918, G. A. 413; reversed, T. D. 12991, G. A. 1542.

(r) Figures of papier-maché and wood held to be toys.—T. D. 10875, G. A. 370.

(s) Music boxes and pistons of cheap construction, intended for the amusement of children and fit only for such use, are toys.—T. D. 10908, G. A. 403.

(t) If decorative china earthenware (A, B, C mugs, cups, saucers, plates, and muffins) is bought, sold, and used under the name of "toys," it is to be classified as toys and not as decorated earthenware, and it is unimportant whether the articles are used as playthings for children or for household purposes.—Zeh v. Cadwalader (C. C.), (42 Fed. Rep., 525).

(u) The term "toys" is to receive the signification ordinarily attributed to it in common speech, unless evidence shows that it has a different trade signification, that is, that it is differently used when applied to such merchandise by those engaged in commerce respecting it, and had such different signification at the date of the passage of this act.—Id.

(a) The question whether small earthenware cups, saucers, mugs, and plates having on them letters of the alphabet and figures of animals or the like are "toys" or "earthenware" depends upon the commercial meaning of the word "toys" if that differs from the ordinary meaning. Decided in this case to be toys and not earthenware.—Cadwalader v. Zeh (151 U. S., 171).

1897 419. Emery grains, and emery manufactured, ground, pulverized, or refined, one cent per pound; emery wheels, emery files, and manufactures of which emery is the component material of chief value, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

1894 322. Emery grains, and emery manufactured, ground, pulverized, or refined, eight-tenths of one cent per pound.

1890 437. Emery grains, and emery manufactured, ground, pulverized, or refined, one cent per pound.

1883 426. Emery grains and emery manufactured, ground, pulverized, or refined, one cent per pound.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 419, ACT OF 1897.

(b) Corundum ore crushed or ground by some process into fine grains is dutiable as ground emery.—T. D. 27059, G. A. 6277, affirmed in Myers v. United States (155 Fed. Rep., 502; T. D. 28386).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(c) Emery wheels, composed of emery and cement (emery chief value), are dutiable as emery.—T. D. 15244, G. A. 2737.

1897 420. Firecrackers of all kinds, eight cents per pound, the weight to include all coverings, wrappings, and packing material.

1894 323. Firecrackers of all kinds, fifty per centum ad valorem, but no allowance shall be made for tare or damage thereon.

1890 438. Firecrackers of all kinds, eight cents per pound, but no allowance shall be made for tare or damage thereon.

(d) Firecrackers are dutiable at 8 cents per pound.—T. D. 19905, G. A. 4235.

(e) Chinese bombs composed of gunpowder and bamboo (bamboo chief value) are not dutiable by similitude to firecrackers, but as manufactures of wood.—T. D. 24083, G. A. 5237.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(f) Certain merchandise classified as firecrackers and claimed to be dutiable as a non-enumerated article or as a manufacture of paper. Held, that the Chinese bombs are composed of wood and other material than wood not specially provided for, and that wood is the most significant feature, and that the remainder of the merchadise is composed of paper and other material than paper not specially provided for, paper being the visible and significant part.—T. D. 11687, G. A. 792.

(g) Firecrackers invoiced at so many matted packages and set down at a given price per matted package, with nothing to indicate the net weight of the firecrackers. Held, that no allowance can be made for the net weight of the onter case.—T. D. 12541, G. A. 1225.

(a) Invoice weight 99 pounds, while the weigher's return gave between 96 and 97 pounds to the package. Held, that duty should have been assessed on the weight as given by the weigher.—T. D. 15027, G. A. 2604.

(b) Firecrackers are dutiable on the gross weight, including the boxes or matting or rattan outside covering.—T. D. 15383, G. A. 2777.

1897 421. Fulminates, fulminating powders, and like articles, not specially provided for in this act, thirty per centum ad valorem.

1890 439. Fulminates, fulminating powders, and like articles, not specially provided for in this act, thirty per centum ad valorem.

1883 434. Fulminates, fulminating powders, and all like articles, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, thirty per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 421, ACT OF 1897.

(c) Fuses composed in chief value of gutta-percha, used for blasting purposes by being connected with and adapted to explode a detonator, which in turn fires a fulminate, are not dutiable under this paragraph as fulminates, fulminating powder, or like articles, but are dutiable under paragraph 450 of said act as manufactures in chief value of gutta-percha.—T. D. 15158, G. A. 2684, and T. D. 6213 followed; T. D. 24156, G. A. 5258.

1897 422. Gunpowder, and all explosive substances used for mining, blasting, artillery, or sporting purposes, when valued at twenty cents or less per pound, four cents per pound; valued above twenty cents per pound, six cents per pound.

1894 325. Gunpowder, and all explosive substances used for mining, blasting, artillery, or sporting purposes, when valued at twenty cents or less per pound, five cents per pound; valued above twenty cents per pound, eight cents per pound.

1890 440. Gunpowder, and all explosive substances used for mining, blasting, artillery, or sporting purposes, when valued at twenty cents or less per pound, five cents per pound; valued above twenty cents per pound, eight cents per pound.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 425, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Chinese-duck feathers from which down has been removed, and the extracted down, are dutiable at 50 per cent.—T. D. 19418, G. A. 4157.

(b) Certain piquets of dyed natural grasses held dutiable as ornamental stems and leaves and not as nonenumerated articles nor as manufactures of grass. T. D. 21459, G. A. 4511, Herman v. United States (121 Fed. Rep., 201), affirmed.—128 Fed. Rep., 420 (T. D. 25091).

(c) Artificial fruits composed of cotton, with a piece of metal thread in place of a stem, and designed for use as Christmas-tree ornaments are dutiable as artificial fruits and not as toys.—T. D. 22559, G. A. 4784.

(d) Artificial flowers composed of cotton, with a stem of wire covered with paper and some sprays of tinsel wire loosely attached about the stem, designed for use as Christmas-tree ornaments, are dutiable as artificial flowers and not as toys.—T. D. 22559, G. A. 4784.

(e) Crude ornamental feathers are dutiable at 50 per cent and not at 15 per cent as feathers and downs of all kinds crude.—T. D. 22892, G. A. 4889.

(f) Feathers not ornamental in their crude state are dutiable at 15 per cent. The provision for ornamental feathers covers that article which, though in a crude state, is naturally ornamental and requires no great expenditure of money or labor to fit it for ornamental use.—T. D. 22982, G. A. 4910.

(g) Crude ostrich feathers which became ornamental only after expenditure of considerable money and labor are dutiable at 15 per cent when imported in a crude state.—Id.

(h) Articles made in imitation of fruits are dutiable as artificial fruits and not as toys.—T. D. 23197, G. A. 4973.

(i) Wreaths and garlands made of metal or of metal and porcelain, in imitation of flowers and leaves, are dutiable as artificial flowers and leaves.—T. D. 23366, G. A. 5028.

(j) "Feathers manufactured" does not necessarily include manufactured articles composed in chief value of feathers. Fishhooks and flies made of feathers and metal (feathers chief value) are dutiable as articles in part of metal.—T. D. 24245, G. A. 5284.

(k) Spangled and beaded feathers are ornamental feathers and not beaded or spangled articles.—T. D. 24766, G. A. 5465.

(l) Goose feathers which have been subjected to processes of cleansing, stripping, and splitting are advanced within the meaning of this paragraph and are dutiable thereunder at 50 per cent ad valorem.—T. D. 25460, G. A. 5739.

(m) Isolepis and uva grass, adiantum, asparagus, magnolia wreaths, ruscus green, areca, cycas, kentia, macrozmia and orlando wreaths, preserved in their natural state by dipping in a chemical solution and intended to be used for ornamental or decorative purposes, are dutiable under this paragraph as "ornamental leaves, flowers, or parts thereof."—T. D. 25630, G. A. 5800.

(n) So-called feather bristles used in making brushes are not dutiable under this paragraph.—T. D. 25821, G. A. 5861.

(a) Artificial fruits in the forms of apples, pears, peaches, and oranges, made of soap, coated and colored with substances that render the forms impervious to water and impracticable for use as soap, found to be not fancy soap and held to be dutiable as artificial fruits.—T. D. 25968, G. A. 5894.

(b) Decorated earthenware in the form of fruit, designed for use as savings banks, are dutiable as decorated earthenware and not as artificial fruit.—T. D. 26235, G. A. 5996.

(c) Ornaments made chiefly of chip or straw, which are used in making women's hats, not resembling any known flower and not being known commercially as artificial flowers, are not dutiable under this paragraph.—T. D. 26688, G. A. 6143.

(d) Feather boas, feathers being the component of chief value, are dutiable at the rate provided herein for feathers "dressed, colored, or otherwise advanced in any manner" by virtue of the provision in section 7, tariff act of 1897, for articles manufactured of two or more materials.—T. D. 27673, G. A. 6467; affirmed in Legg v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 858; T. D. 28260).

(e) Millinery articles composed of feathers, wire, cotton, and buckram, and in which the feathers form the component material of chief value, but in which wire is an important component in the construction and in forming and maintaining the shapes, are dutiable as articles in part of metal and not as manufactures in chief value of ornamental feathers.—T. D. 27888, G. A. 6537.

(g) Crude egret or aigret feathers, not being ornamental in that state and requiring skilled labor to convert them into ornamental feathers, are dutiable at 15 per cent under this paragraph.—T. D. 24368, G. A. 5324.

(h) Ornamental peacock feathers in a crude state held to be dutiable as ornamental feathers.—Silva v. United States (127 Fed. Rep., 781; T. D. 24921).

(i) All crude feathers, whether used for ornamental purposes or not, are dutiable under the provision herein for crude feathers and not under that for ornamental feathers.—Brodie v. United States (135 Fed. Rep., 914; T. D. 25896), reversing abstract 3675 (T. D. 25772) and in effect overruling Silva v. United States (127 Fed. Rep., 781; T. D. 24921) and T. D. 25408, G. A. 5716; and Spero v. United States (135 Fed. Rep., 915; T. D. 25897), reversing T. D. 24910, G. A. 5540, followed; T. D. 26267, G. A. 6011.

(j) Only feathers which have been dressed, colored, or otherwise advanced or manufactured are subject to duty at 50 per cent under this paragraph.—Brodie v. United States (135 Fed. Rep., 914; T. D. 25896) followed; T. D. 27821, G. A. 6513.

(k) Furnished needlecases in the form of artificial fruits are dutiable under this paragraph.—United States v. Dieckerhoff (suit 3760, T. D. 27230), reversing Dieckerhoff v. United States (T. D. 26638).

(l) Leaves preserved in their natural state and used for ornamental or decorative purposes are dutiable at 50 per cent.—Kreshower v. United States (152 Fed. Rep., 485; T. D. 27826).

(m) Cycas-palm leaves which have been subjected to processes that restored their natural appearance and prevent decomposition and have been arranged in wreaths attached to a circular form of thin wire are dutiable under the provision for artificial or ornamental leaves and not under that for manufactures of palm leaf. T. D. 19982, G. A. 4247, and T. D. 21625, G. A. 4560, in effect overruled.—Kreshower v. United States (152 Fed. Rep., 485; T. D. 27826).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(a) Crude plumes and other feathers of birds of paradise, each with a small piece of skin attached, similar to those covered by G. A. 1428, are dutiable under this paragraph and not free as crude feathers.—T. D. 17935, G. A. 3810.

(b) Birds' skins dyed are dutiable under this paragraph and not free under paragraph 400, act of 1894, as bird skins prepared for preservation, but not further advanced in manufacture.—T. D. 18745, G. A. 4058.

(c) Artificial flowers for millinery use composed chiefly, in quantity and value, of cotton lace dutiable as artificial flowers.—T. D. 16858, G. A. 3377.

(d) Artificial flowers intended for use in ornamenting dresses, but suitable for millinery use, are dutiable as artificial flowers for millinery.—T. D. 18522, G. A. 3978.

(e) Entire skins of birds of paradise, with beak, claws, and plumage attached, similar to those covered by G. A. 315, are free and not dutiable under paragraph 328 as feathers.—T. D. 17935, G. A. 3810.

(f) Crude ornamental feathers (not artificial) suitable for millinery use, not dressed, colored, or manufactured, are free and not dutiable as ornamental feathers suitable for millinery use.—T. D. 16425, G. A. 3214.

(g) Uncolored goose feathers, stripped off the quills and put up in bundles, are free as crude feathers.—T. D. 16982, G. A. 3410.

(h) Crude plumes of birds of paradise are free as crude feathers and not dutiable as ornamental feathers.—T. D. 18068, G. A. 3870.

(i) Quills are free—T. D. 18747, G. A. 4060.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(j) The neck, breast, wing, and tail feathers of the white heron, with a sufficient quantity of the skin attached to preserve the feathers, is dutiable as feathers crude.—T. D. 12832, G. A. 1428.

(k) Magpies' tail feathers with a sufficient part of the flesh to hold the feathers in place are dutiable as feathers crude.—T. D. 12919, G. A. 1470.

(l) Bird skins with feathers on, dyed or colored, were assessed as dyed feathers and claimed to be crude feathers. Protest overruled without deciding whether the action of the collector was correct.—T. D. 12205, G. A. 1019.

(m) A bird skin in three strips united at the head with all its plumage and with the beak, the plumage being dyed, is dutiable as feathers colored, by similitude, and not as feathers crude, nor as birds, nor as bird skins, nor as non-enumerated articles manufactured or unmanufactured.—T. D. 15469, G. A. 2818.

(n) Owl bonbon boxes composed of paper, wire, feathers, and silk (feathers chief value), are manufactures of feathers and not toys.—T. D. 15146, G. A. 2672.

(o) The provision for artificial flowers was intended to cover such articles as are not only made in imitation of artificial flowers or parts thereof but as are designed for such decorative purposes as natural flowers are ordinarily put to and is not intended to include articles of utility.—T. D. 12681, G. A. 1330.

(r) Artificial leaves made of paper, cotton, etc., are parts of artificial flowers.—T. D. 11181, G. A. 540; T. D. 11182, G. A. 541; T. D. 12376, G. A. 1148; reversed, In re Zeimer (66 Fed. Rep., 740).

(a) Articles in the similitude of foliage leaves, the stem being of wire, the body of cotton cloth or paper, colored, stamped, shaded, and finished, designed to be grouped into sprays, bunches, etc., are artificial flowers.—T. D. 11378, G. A. 661.

(b) A manufacture of silk, cotton, and metal, made up as a bunch of lilacs with a small finger ring case concealed among the petals of the flowers, is dutiable as artificial flowers.—T. D. 11883, G. A. 874.

(c) Artificial leaves, if made of paper, are dutiable as manufactures of paper, and if from cotton, as manufactures of cotton, and not as artificial flowers and parts thereof. The fact that they are largely used in the millinery trade, in which they are commercially designated as artificial flowers or parts of artificial flowers, is not controlling; it being shown that they are also used in very large quantities by confectioners and known to the trade as artificial leaves.—United States v. Zeimer, 107 Fed. Rep., 912.

(d) Artificial leaves are not dutiable as artificial flowers or parts thereof, but at the rate provided for manufactures of the materials of which they are made. The fact that such leaves are known in the millinery trade as artificial flowers or parts is not sufficient to establish their commercial designation as such, where it is shown that in other trades such articles are not so known. Evidence of commercial designation must be definite, uniform, and general, and it is not enough that it obtains in a single trade.—T. D. 23171, G. A. 4961.

(e) Memorial designs of wreaths, garlands, and crosses, the framework, leaves, and branches of metal and the buds and flowers of porcelain, are dutiable as artificial flowers, this paragraph being applicable to all artificial flowers of whatever material.—T. D. 11364, G. A. 647.

(f) Metal pins, attached to ornaments in the form of flowers made of celluloid and serving as ornamental heads, are dutiable as ornamental flowers and not as pins nor as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 14706, G. A. 2428.

(g) "Metal piques," representing a flowering plant, the stem and branches composed of wire, with buds and flowers on each branch, designed for trimming hats, are dutiable as artificial flowers and not as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 14722, G. A. 2444.

(h) Small india-rubber tubing, colored and fashioned to resemble stems of natural flowers, are dutiable as artificial flowers.—T. D. 13438, G. A. 1775; reversed, T. D. 14213, G. A. 2177; T. D. 19769, G. A. 4217; United States v. Simon (C. C.), (84 Fed. Rep., 154).

(i) Goose quills fit into brass penholders, the whole forming penholders, are not free.—T. D. 13424, G. A. 1761.

(j) Quills, black and white, from the wings and tails of geese, turkeys, etc., only changed from their original condition by cleaning and by dyeing the black ones, are free and not dutiable as ornamental feathers.—T. D. 14738, G. A. 2460; United States v. Stearns (C. C.), (75 Fed. Rep., 833), affirmed by C. C. A. (79 Fed. Rep., 953).

(k) Skins of birds of paradise, the entrails, flesh, and bones of which have been removed, while the beak, claws, plumage, remain attached to the skin, are free.—T. D. 10762, G. A. 315.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(l) Imitation birds made of ornamental feathers are dutiable as crude feathers and not as stuffed birds.—T. D. 10253, G. A. 31.

(m) Ostrich feathers and tips curled, dyed, and mounted are manufactured ornamental feathers.—T. D. 10253, G. A. 31.

(a) Feather trimmings composed of feathers dyed and prepared and then attached by adhesive gums to strips of cotton cloth are manufactured feathers.—T. D. 11238, G. A. 597.

(b) Artificial flowers for millinery purposes, composed of jet or glass, are dutiable as artificial flowers and not as imitations of jet or manufactures of glass.—T. D. 10408, G. A. 99.

(c) An artificial flower with petals, stem, and leaves, with a small paper box in the center, not discernible without close inspection, used for confectionery, was assessed as an artificial flower and claimed to be dutiable as a fancy box. The flower being the predominant feature the protest is overruled, though the Board does not hold that the article was properly assessed.—T. D. 10493, G. A. 143.

(d) Artificial flowers and leaves manufactured from cotton and paper, not suitable for millinery purposes, but for use of confectioners in ornamenting cakes and for other decorative purposes, are not dutiable as artificial flowers, but as manufactures of paper or cotton according to the component material.—T. D. 10794, G. A. 347.

(e) The proper interpretation of this paragraph is: Feathers crude or not dressed, etc., 25 per cent; feathers dressed, colored, or manufactured, 50 per cent; dressed and finished birds for millinery ornaments, 50 per cent; artificial feathers and flowers for millinery purposes, 50 per cent.—T. D. 10658, G. A. 242.

(g) Paragraph 780 does not cover the manufacture of quills into any completed article.—T. D. 10394, G. A. 85.

(h) Quill toothpicks are not free.—T. D. 10889, G. A. 384; United States v. Borgfeldt (C. C. A.), (79 Fed. Rep., 953).

426. Furs, dressed on the skin but not made up into articles, and 1897 furs not on the skin, prepared for hatters' use, including fur skins carroted, twenty per centum ad valorem.

329. Furs, dressed on the skin but not made up into articles, twenty per centum ad valorem; furs not on the skin, prepared for hatters' use, 1894 twenty per centum ad valorem.
492. * * * dressed fur pieces suitable only for use in the manufacture of hatter's fur. (Free.)

444. Furs, dressed on the skin but not made up into articles, and 1890 furs not on the skin, prepared for hatters' use, twenty per centum ad valorem.

1883 450. Hatters' furs, not on the skin, and dressed furs on the skin, twenty per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 426, ACT OF 1897.

(i) Partly manufactured rugs made by cutting and matching together pieces of fur and sewing them temporarily are dutiable as furs dressed on the skin and not under paragraph 438 as dressed leather or goatskins, paragraph 450 as manufactures of fur, nor section 6 as nonenumerated articles. Vandegrift v. United States (not reported) followed and T. D. 21805, G. A. 4706, reversed.—T. D. 22931, G. A. 4897.

(j) Furs purchased at the London sale and subjected to a process of manufacture after such purchase and before importation should be appraised by adding the necessary cost of such manufacture and a reasonable profit within the limitations of section 11 of the administrative act. The dutiable value of such furs purchased in England in 1899 and shipped to the United States in 1901 is the market value of such articles at the time of exportation, and to include in such value interest on the amount paid therefor a year before is error against which a protest will lie. The action of the local appraiser in fixing the market value, by adding such interest, and the action of the General Appraisers in affirming his finding, held illegal.—T. D. 23558, G. A. 5090.

(a) Squirrel skins sewed together, with a temporary muslin lining, intended for the purpose of holding the skins in place and protecting them, which is removed before they are finally cut to pattern to be used in making or lining garments, are dutiable at 20 per cent ad valorem as "furs, dressed on the skin, but not made up into articles," under this paragraph and not as manufactures of fur at 35 per cent under paragraph 450.—T. D. 24746, G. A. 5457.

(b) The market value of furs exported from London is the price fixed by the last annual public sale prior to the date of shipment, with interest thereon at the rate of 5 per cent per annum to the day of shipment.—T. D. 24765, G. A. 5464.

(c) Russian sable skins which have been subjected to a process of dressing which has so changed their condition from that of the raw skin that furriers would convert them into articles of apparel without further dressing, are dutiable under this paragraph as "furs, dressed on the skin," notwithstanding that a certain firm of furriers, doing a very high-class business in manufacturing and selling fur articles, would not make up into articles the said skins in their condition as imported without further dressing.—T. D. 25169, G. A. 5630.

(d) Fur which drops from rabbit skins that have become heated in the bales in which they are packed, which is unfit for use by hatters in making hats, is not dutiable under this paragraph, but is free under paragraph 561.—T. D. 26955, G. A. 6246.

(e) So-called hares' combings, loose or dead hair removed in cleaning skins and used as an adulterant in the manufacture of cheap hats, but requiring further treatment for that use, held dutiable as waste and not as furs prepared for hatters' use.—United States v. Hatters' Fur Exchange (153 Fed. Rep., 595; T. D. 27971), reversing Abstract 11309 (T. D. 27363), followed; T. D. 28102, G. A. 6577.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(f) Persian and Astrakhan lamb skins are dutiable as dressed fur skins.—T. D. 15726, G. A. 2907.

(g) Squirrel tails with the tail bones removed and strings substituted and inserted so as to run from one end of the article to the other are dutiable as dressed furs on the skin not made up into articles and not as manufactures of furs.—T. D. 16985, G. A. 3413.

(h) Thibet furs, called lamb coats or lamb crosses, are dutiable as furs dressed on the skin but not made into articles and not as manufactures of fur. Following Mautner v. United States (84 Fed. Rep., 155).—T. D. 19136, G. A. 4109.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(i) Beaver and otter tails the fur of which has been dressed are furs dressed on the skin.—T. D. 13240, G. A. 1661.

(j) Goat and kid skins matched as to color, and temporarily sewed together in the form of crosses, plates, and rugs, are dutiable under this and paragraph 456, respectively.—T. D. 12985, G. A. 1536.

(a) Goose skins plucked of their feathers but with the down on, the skins dressed by rubbing alum or bran on the inner surface are furs dressed on the skin and not dressed feathers, dressed skins, nor nonenumerated articles.—T. D. 12838, G. A. 1434.

(b) Hamster (rat) skins, dressed and sewed together, forming plates about 4 feet square, are furs dressed on the skin but not made up into articles and not manufactures of fur.—T. D. 13180, G. A. 1601.

(c) Sousilk and squirrel skins, sewed together and designed for use in lining ladies' cloaks, are furs dressed on the skin and not manufactures of fur.—T. D. 13182, G. A. 1603.

(d) A mixture of fur and hair containing from 10 to 75 per cent of hatters' fur is dutiable as such and not as waste.—T. D. 12672, G. A. 1321.

(e) Cuttings accumulated in the manufacture of fur articles are dutiable as fur dressed on the skin and not as waste.—T. D. 13245, G. A. 1666.

(f) A sable robe composed of a number of dressed sable skins sewed together, with a lining of cheap silk, not made into articles of utility or ornament, are dutiable as dressed furs.—T. D. 14564, G. A. 2356.

(g) Thibet crosses are dressed furs on the skin and not manufactures of fur.—T. D. 12957, G. A. 1508.

(h) Thibet furs, dressed on the skin, which have been made up into coats and afterwards separated into parts for use as furs dressed on the skin and not as coats, for wearing apparel, are dutiable as furs dressed but not made up into articles, and not as manufactures of fur. Reversing T. D. 13864, G. A. 2017.—Mautner v. United States (C. C.), (84 Fed. Rep., 155).

(i) Rabbits' fur, commercially known as hatters' fur, but which has not been prepared for hatters' use, was assessed as dressed fur and claimed to be free as furs undressed or as hair. Protest overruled.—T. D. 13313, G. A. 1693.

(j) Rabbits' fur which has been cut from the animals' skin after having undergone treatment, technically termed carroting, been bleached and had the hair eliminated by plucking, is commercially known as hatters' fur, is dutiable as such although not prepared for hatters' use, and is not dutiable as waste nor as a nonenumerated article nor free as furs undressed nor as hair.—T. D. 17076, G. A. 3457.

(k) Pieces of lambskin sewn together temporarily for safety in transportation and also for the purpose of presenting a more inviting appearance to purchasers are not articles made of fur, but are dutiable as dressed furs on the skin.—Fleet v. United States (148 Fed. Rep., 335; T. D. 26824).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(l) Leopard and tiger skins are fur skins, and such skins in a finished condition, soft and pliable, and ready for use are dutiable as dressed furs and not free as skins.—T. D. 10795, G. A. 348.

1897 427. Fans of all kinds, except common palm-leaf fans, fifty per centum ad valorem.

1894 330. Fans of all kinds, except common palm-leaf fans, forty per centum ad valorem.

1890 [Not enumerated. Dutiable according to material.]

1883 428. Fans of all kinds, except common palm-leaf fans, of whatever material composed, thirty-five per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 427, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Embroidered fans are dutiable under this paragraph. They do not fall within the terms of the proviso to paragraph 339, which is limited in the scope of its application to articles and fabrics ejusdem generis with wearing apparel, textile fabrics, etc.—T. D. 24073, G. A. 5235.

(b) So-called dolls' fans held to be dutiable under paragraph 418 as toys.—T. D. 25250, G. A. 5660.

(c) Paper novelties in the form of fans found to be unfit for any practical use for fanning purposes and held not to be dutiable under the provision for fans of all kinds. They are dutiable as manufactures of paper. T. D. 25820, G. A. 5860, reversed.—Downing v. United States (141 Fed. Rep., 490; T. D. 26454).

(d) Kuskus root fans are dutiable as fans.—T. D. 16563, G. A. 3259.

(e) Holders for menu cards are not dutiable as fans or toys.—T. D. 18087, G. A. 3889.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(f) Protest against assessment of duty on paper boxes containing fans, as added to make market value, overruled.—T. D. 10240, G. A. 18.

(g) White screen fans having the appearance of being small fans, the frame covered with gauze of vegetable fiber, with a reed handle and a small silken cord, are dutiable as fans and not as screens.—T. D. 12317, G. A. 1089.

1897 428. Gun wads of all descriptions, twenty per centum ad valorem.

1894 331. Gun wads of all descriptions, ten per centum ad valorem.

1890 446. Gun-wads of all descriptions, thirty-five per centum ad valorem.

1883 440. Gun-wads of all descriptions, thirty-five per centum ad valorem.

1897 429. Hair, human, if clean or drawn but not manufactured, twenty per centum ad valorem.

1894 332. Hair, human, if clean or drawn but not manufactured, twenty per centum ad valorem.

1890 447. Hair, human, if clean or drawn but not manufactured, twenty per centum ad valorem.

1883 444. Human hair, * * * If clean or drawn, but not manufactured, thirty per centum ad valorem; * * *.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(h) Human hair, clean, drawn, and curled to be made into toupees, front pieces, wigs, etc., is hair not manufactured.—T. D. 12213, G. A. 1027.

1897 430. Hair, curled, suitable for beds or mattresses, ten per centum ad valorem.

1894 332½. Hair, curled, suitable for beds or mattresses, ten per centum ad valorem.

1890 450. Hair, curled, suitable for beds or mattresses, fifteen per centum ad valorem.

1883 443. Curled hair, except of hogs, used for beds or mattresses, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

1897 431. Haircloth, known as "crinoline" cloth, ten cents per square yard; haircloth, known as "hair seating," and hair press cloth, twenty cents per square yard.

1894 { 333. Haircloth, known as "crinoline cloth," six cents per square yard.
334. Haircloth, known as "hair seating," twenty cents per square yard.

1890 { 448. Haircloth, known as "crinoline cloth," eight cents per square yard.
449. Haircloth, known as "hair seating," thirty cents per square yard.

1883 { 445. Haircloth, known as "crinoline cloth," * * * thirty per centum ad valorem.
446. Haircloth, known as "hair seating," thirty cents per square yard.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 431, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Hair press cloth to come within this paragraph must be made of the same material as that covered by the other textiles included in that schedule, to wit, horsehair or the like.—T. D. 21200, G. A. 4448.

(b) Camels' hair press cloth made of the hair of the camel is not the hair press cloth covered by this paragraph and is dutiable as a manufacture of wool.—T. D. 27792, G. A. 6504.

(c) Hair press cloth containing no wool nor hair of the Angora goat, alpaca, or other like animal, is dutiable under this paragraph and not as manufactures of wool.—Caldwell v. United States (141 Fed. Rep., 487; T. D. 26489), followed as to such merchandise; T. D. 26634, G. A. 6124.

(d) Hair press cloth made of the hair of the camel is not the hair press cloth of paragraph 431 and is dutiable as a manufacture of wool.—Caldwell v. United States (141 Fed. Rep., 487; T. D. 26489) distinguished; T. D. 27792, G. A. 6504.

(e) Hair press cloth of which no further particulars of description were given in the opinion was held to be dutiable as hair press cloth and not as manufactures of wool.—Caldwell v. United States (141 Fed. Rep., 487; T. D. 26489).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(f) Goods made of cattle hair, known as press cloth, used in the process of manufacturing linseed oil is dutiable as a manufacture of hair and not as a manufacture of the hair of the goat, etc., nor as carpets.—T. D. 10505, G. A. 155.

(g) Felt made from cattle hair is dutiable as hair cloth and not as manufactures of hair.—T. D. 10526, G. A. 176.

432. Hats, bonnets, or hoods, for men's, women's, boys', or children's wear, trimmed or untrimmed, including bodies, hoods, plateaux, forms, or shapes, for hats or bonnets, composed wholly or in chief value of fur of the rabbit, beaver, or other animals, valued at not more than five 1897 dollars per dozen, two dollars per dozen; valued at more than five dollars per dozen and not more than ten dollars per dozen, three dollars per dozen; valued at more than ten dollars per dozen and not more than twenty dollars per dozen, five dollars per dozen; valued at more than twenty dollars per dozen, seven dollars per dozen; and in addition thereto on all the foregoing, twenty per centum ad valorem.

335. Hats for men's, women's, and children's wear, composed of the 1894 fur of the rabbit, beaver, or other animals, or of which such fur is the component material of chief value, wholly or partially manufactured, including fur hat bodies, forty per centum ad valorem.

451. Hats, for men's, women's, and children's wear, composed of the 1890 fur of the rabbit, beaver, or other animals or of which such fur is the component material of chief value, wholly or partially manufactured, including fur hat bodies, fifty-five per centum ad valorem.

400. Bonnets, hats, and hoods for men, women, and children, composed 1883 of * * * other material, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, thirty per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 432, ACT OF 1897.

420. Compositions of glass or paste, when not set, ten per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 435, ACT OF 1897.

(g) In strict commercial sense the term "precious stones" includes only diamonds, rubies, sapphires, and emeralds, although sometimes applied to alexandrites, cat's-eye, and other fancy stones, which, however, are generally designated as semiprecious stones.—T. D. 19449, G. A. 4166.

(h) Half sphere or spilt real pearls are dutiable at 20 per cent.—T. D. 21196, G. A. 4444.

(i) Emeralds in the form of oblong beads, which have been pierced or drilled, and polished, are dutiable as precious stones cut, and not free under paragraph 545 as not cut.—T. D. 21197, G. A. 4445.

(j) Merchants who deal in precious stones only are not competent to testify as to the commercial uses of articles of paste claimed to be imitation precious stones.—Lorsch v. United States (119 Fed. Rep., 476).

(k) Jade ornaments, tableware, etc., are not precious stones.—Tiffany v. United States (126 Fed. Rep., 255; T. D. 25051).

(l) Garnets are precious stones and when cut and polished for jewelry purposes are dutiable at 10 per cent under this paragraph and not under paragraph 115.—T. D. 23559, G. A. 5091.

(a) Sapphire compass, meter and electrical jewels, about one-sixteenth of an inch in length and diameter, concave or cup-shaped at one end and flat at the other, made of oriental and Ceylon sapphires, are dutiable either directly or by similitude as precious stones.—T. D. 24577, G. A. 5382.

(b) The words "otherwise ornamented or decorated" as applied to imitation precious stones and used in this paragraph imply effects produced by some superadded process and do not apply to imitations of ornamentations or decorations upon imitation precious stones, the whole being produced by a single molding or pressing process. Imitation cameos and intaglios produced by a single process of molding or pressing glass or paste, made in imitation of precious stones and not exceeding 1 inch in dimensions, are dutiable under this paragraph and not as manufactures of paste.—T. D. 24581, G. A. 5386.

(c) A bust made from lapis lazuli held to be dutiable as statuary of stone and not as a precious stone cut.—T. D. 24987, G. A. 5572.

(d) Umbrella handles in chief value of tiger-eye are not dutiable as precious stones cut.—T. D. 25083, G. A. 5602.

(e) Glass beads, unstrung, colored or tinted to imitate precious stones, are not dutiable as imitation precious stones.—T. D. 25088, G. A. 5607.

(f) So-called incrusted stones and other imitations of precious and semi-precious stones composed of glass and used in the manufacture of cheap jewelry are dutiable as imitation precious stones.—Lorsch v. United States (119 Fed. Rep., 476), reversing T. D. 19458, G. A. 4175, followed; T. D. 25105, G. A. 5610.

(g) Imitations of rock crystal composed of glass, ornamented after manufacture by painting, are excluded from classification under this paragraph.—T. D. 25198, G. A. 5644.

(h) Imitations of precious stones one-eighth of an inch in diameter, composed of glass or paste, having foil backs and drilled through with two holes, held to be dutiable as imitation precious stones and not as beads.—T. D. 25267, G. A. 5671.

(i) The provision herein for imitation precious stones is not limited to such as are intended for jewelry purposes, but includes those that are used as stove ornaments or in lamps. Imitation precious stones exceeding an inch in dimensions are dutiable as manufactures of glass or paste under paragraph 112.—T. D. 25329, G. A. 5687.

(j) Shell cameos are dutiable as manufactures of shell and not as precious stones.—T. D. 25512, G. A. 5763.

(k) Jasper, tiger-eye, sardonyx, and carnelian, such as are usually employed in the manufacture of jewelry, held to be dutiable as precious stones.—T. D. 25525, G. A. 5768.

(l) Articles of paste, colored and decorated in imitation of the eye of the peacock, are not dutiable under this paragraph but as manufactures of paste.—T. D. 25664, G. A. 5811.

(m) Pieces of white onyx in the form of keystones, fit only to be mounted for use as jewelry, are dutiable as precious stones cut but not set, under this paragraph, and not as manufactures of onyx, not specially provided for, under paragraph 115.—T. D. 26014, G. A. 5915.

(n) Small sapphire jewels intended for use in the construction of phonograph instruments are dutiable either directly or by similitude as precious stones under this paragraph and not under paragraph 97.—T. D. 26015, G. A. 5916.

(a) Imitations of precious or semiprecious stones which have been subjected to any process of hand cutting or engraving after molding or pressing are excluded from the provisions of this paragraph.—T. D. 26206, G. A. 5981.

(b) Agate or onyx keystones cut and polished and bearing emblematic lettering are dutiable as precious stones cut but not set.—T. D. 26309, G. A. 6023.

(c) Lettered keystones made of glass or paste in imitation of white onyx are excluded by reason of such lettering from the provisions of this paragraph and are dutiable as manufactures of paste.—T. D. 26388, G. A. 6053.

(d) Small pieces of mother-of-pearl cut into forms suitable for inlaying violin keys and other parts of musical instruments are dutiable as manufactures of mother-of-pearl and not as precious stones or imitations thereof.—T. D. 26506, G. A. 6074.

(e) Goldstones, an imitation of aventurine, not exceeding 1 inch in dimensions, are dutiable as imitation precious stones. Pieces or lumps of the same material exceeding an inch in dimensions are dutiable as manufactures of paste.—T. D. 26555, G. A. 6089.

(f) Articles of paste made in imitation of jet are not imitation precious stones.—T. D. 26706, G. A. 6149.

(g) Multi-colored stones made of paste held to be dutiable as imitation precious stones.—T. D. 26723, G. A. 6155.

(h) Heads for hat pins made of paste simulating various precious stones and material, and partly drilled, are dutiable as imitation precious stones.—T. D. 26770 G. A. 6167.

(i) Imitation coral designed for use in the manufacture of cheap jewelry held to be dutiable as imitation precious stones.—T. D. 26922, G. A. 6236.

(j) Pieces of colored glass backed with foil, made in the form of fleurs-de-lis, designed for attachment to women's hats or dresses and not suitable for use as settings for jewelry, are not dutiable as imitations of precious stones but as manufactures of paste.—T. D. 26989, G. A. 6257.

(k) Imitations of precious stones, in forms, possessing three dimensions, are dutiable under this paragraph in cases where they do not exceed 1 inch in any two of their dimensions. Such articles exceeding 1 inch in any two of their dimensions, and imitation precious stones in the form of disks exceeding 1 inch in diameter, are dutiable as manufactures of paste under paragraph 112.—Lorsch v. United States (146 Fed. Rep., 379; T. D. 27007), reversing 135 id., 214 (T. D. 25785), and T. D. 25251, G. A. 5651 followed; T. D. 27112, G. A. 6289.

(m) Reconstructed or artificial rubies, produced either synthetically or by molding small pieces of genuine rubies into compact masses, the same being identical in composition with the natural ruby, are dutiable as precious stones cut, either directly or by similitude.—T. D. 27278, G. A. 6336.

(n) Hemispherical rock crystals cut intaglio and painted held to be dutiable as precious stones. The fact that rock crystal is a precious stone and that they have been cut brings them within the precise terms of paragraph 435 regardless of the subsequent process of painting to which they have been subjected.—United States v. Benedict (145 Fed. Rep., 914; T. D. 27032), affirming 135 Fed. Rep., 242 (T. D. 25783), and reversing T. D. 24614, G. A. 5402, followed; T. D. 27108, G. A. 6285.

(a) Rock-crystal balls suitable for jewelry purposes and not exceeding 1 inch in diameter are dutiable as precious stones cut; exceeding 1 inch in diameter, as manufactures of rock crystal.—T. D. 27160, G. A. 6301.

(b) Imitation precious stones, known as incrusted stones, are dutiable under this paragraph.—United States v. Downing (144 Fed. Rep., 1022; T. D. 27193), affirming 139 id., 155 (T. D. 26076), followed; T. D. 27292, G. A. 6342.

(c) Imitations of rock crystal intaglios, composed of paste and decorated by painting, are excluded from the provisions of this paragraph and are dutiable as manufactures of paste under paragraph 112.—T. D. 27346, G. A. 6367.

(d) Articles of paste made in imitation of diamonds, rubies, and other precious stones, not exceeding 1 inch in dimensions, backed with foil and pierced through from the surface to the back near the edge and at opposite sides, are commercially known as jewels and not as beads and are dutiable hereunder.—T. D. 27420, G. A. 6380.

(e) Pieces of precious coral, or that variety of relatively high cost known to and classified by the trade as precious stones susceptible of taking a high polish, cut by lapidaries and suitable only for settings for jewelry, are dutiable as precious stones, cut. Coral of other descriptions (much cheaper in comparison with the cost of precious coral and not intended for use as settings for jewelry) is dutiable as manufactures of coral.—T. D. 27726, G. A. 6482.

(f) Small brown diamonds weighing about one-sixteenth of a carat, with one surface cut and polished, intended for use as bearings in electrical instruments of precision, found to have been commercially known and dealt in prior to the time of the passage of the tariff act of 1897 as bort, and held to be entitled to free entry accordingly.—T. D. 28071, G. A. 6574.

(g) For tariff purposes, the specific designation by which articles are known and dealt in in trade at and prior to the enactment of a tariff act is controlling and conclusive during the life of such act.—Ibid.

(h) All varieties of coral, without regard to value, suitable for use in the construction of jewelry, including drilled corals and branch corals strung on cotton threads, are dutiable as precious stones not set and not as beads nor as manufactures of coral. T. D. 27726, G. A. 6482, modified.—T. D. 28131, G. A. 6584.

(i) So-called reconstructed emeralds composed of two pieces of aquamarine or beryl cemented together, green coloring matter applied between the stones producing the tint naturally pertaining to the emerald, held to be dutiable as precious stones.—T. D. 28295, G. A. 6637.

(j) Imitations of rock crystal, composed of paste and molded or pressed into the form of plano-convex lenses, less than 1 inch in dimensions, are dutiable as imitation precious stones and not as lenses of glass or pebble.—United States v. Robinson (140 Fed. Rep., 968; T. D. 26397), affirming T. D. 25760, G. A. 5841, followed; T. D. 26540, G. A. 6085.

(k) Imitation whole and half pearls, including those mounted on wires, and imitation rubies, emeralds, and rock crystals mounted on wires are dutiable as imitation precious stones. Imitation pearls pressed or drilled are dutiable as beads and not as imitation precious stones.—United States v. Weinberg and Weinberg v. United States (139 Fed. Rep., 1006; T. D. 26483), affirming T. D. 25563, G. A. 5781, and T. D. 25566, G. A. 5784, followed; T. D. 26554, G. A. 6088.

(l) Drilled opal balls are dutiable as precious stones cut and not as beads.—United States v. Gem Company (142 Fed. Rep., 283; T. D. 26491), affirming T. D. 25549, G. A. 5776, followed; T. D. 26586, G. A. 6097.

(a) Diamonds of the description known as bort, drilled and designed for use in wire drawing, are not dutiable as precious stones cut, but are free of duty under the provision for bort.—United States v. American Express Company (140 Fed. Rep., 967; T. D. 26490), affirming T. D. 25565, G. A. 5783, and United States v. Fifteen Drilled Diamonds (127 Fed. Rep., 753; T. D. 25046), followed; T. D. 26630, G. A. 6120.

(b) Articles made of paste in imitation of shell cameos are dutiable as imitation precious stones.—T. D. 25713, G. A. 5825, affirmed; United States v. Goldberg (139 Fed. Rep., 706; T. D. 25919).

(c) The provisions of this paragraph relate to precious stones prepared to be set in articles of jewelry, and small pieces of agate cut, polished, and grooved so as to be fited for use as scale bearings are not dutiable as precious stones cut, but as manufactures of agate.—Smith v. Computing Scale Company (147 Fed. Rep., 890; T. D. 27263).

(d) Small pieces of agate, cut, polished, and grooved for the purpose of being used as scale bearings, are more specifically provided for as manufactures of agate than as precious stones cut. The latter term is general, including in its scope many species, of which agate is one.—United States v. Lorsch (158 Fed. Rep., 398; T. D. 28513), reversing 152 id., 591 (T. D. 27829), and T. D. 25865, G. A. 5875.

(e) Pieces of hematite, or bloodstone, less than 1 inch in any dimension, designed and suitable for jewelry settings exclusively, held dutiable as precious stones.—T. D. 28437, G. A. 6669.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(f) Crystal balls held dutiable as precious stones not set.—T. D. 15975, G. A. 2999.

(g) Settings composed of agate, bloodstones, tiger-eye, crocodolite, and similar stones, cut in form suitable for use as settings for sleeve buttons, scarf pins, collar buttons, and other articles of jewelry, and not adapted for use as imported, are dutiable as precious stones and not as articles composed of mineral substances.—T. D. 18016, G. A. 3860.

(h) Rock crystal specimens unset are dutiable as precious stones unset and not as articles composed of mineral substances.—T. D. 17337, G. A. 3557.

(i) Glaziers' diamonds set are dutiable as precious stones set and not as glaziers' diamonds.—T. D. 15868, G. A. 2968.

(j) Rough opal dutiable as precious stone uncut and not free as a crude mineral.—T. D. 16963, G. A. 3391.

(k) This paragraph does not limit imitation precious stones to such as are intended to be used in the manufacture of jewelry.—T. D. 16980, G. A. 3408.

(l) Pearls, agates, onyx, rock crystals, and the particular description of pyrites and carbuncle hematites, which are used in the manufacture of articles of jewelry, are precious stones.—T. D. 17567, G. A. 3658.

(m) Diamonds (other than miners', glaziers' or engravers' diamonds), whether cut or uncut, are dutiable as precious stones and not free under paragraph 466, act of 1894.—T. D. 20699, G. A. 4355.

(o) Incrusted stones, so-called, consisting of circular, square, and oval forms of opaque glass of different colors, less than 1 inch in size, decorated with metal foil, bronze, paint, prints, and by other means, in designs representing crescents, heads of persons and animals, leaves, flowers, society emblems, etc., and intended for use in making scarf pins, sleeve buttons, and other articles of cheap jewelry, are not dutiable as imitation precious stones, neither are spherical forms of imitation hematite and of glass, less than 1 inch in diameter, mounted on metal posts or on pieces of metal wire, so dutiable, but are dutiable according to component material.—T. D. 19458, G. A. 4175; reversed in Lorsch v. United States (119 Fed. Rep., 476).

(a) Articles of glass made to imitate pearls held dutiable as precious stones and not as manufactures of glass.—T. D. 15849, G. A. 2949.

(b) Articles of glass cut with facets and made to imitate rubies, emeralds, etc., intended to ornament regalia and not to be made into jewelry, not set and not exceeding 1 inch in diameter, are dutiable at 10 per cent.—T. D. 16980, G. A. 3408.

(c) Imitation pearls having attached pieces of wire, the wire being intended as convenient means of setting them to articles of jewelry, are dutiable at 10 per cent.—T. D. 17567, G. A. 3658.

(d) Imitation precious stones not set, composed of paste, are dutiable as precious stones not set and not as manufactures of paste.—T. D. 17399, G. A. 3590.

(e) Small pieces of glass or paste, made into various forms and designed and fit only for use in the manufacture of cheap jewelry, such as sleeve buttons, rings, shirt studs, scarf pins, etc., are dutiable at 10 per cent.—T. D. 17567, G. A. 3658.

(g) Diamonds cut but not set are dutiable under this paragraph, and not free under paragraph 467 (1894). The word "diamond" in the latter paragraph covers only miners', glaziers', and engravers' diamonds not set, and is only a heading to that paragraph, and restricted to the particular diamonds therein enumerated. Reversing T. D. 15820, G. A. 2920.—United States v. Frankel (C. C.), (68 Fed. Rep., 186); affirmed (79 Fed. Rep., 995).

(h) Imitation precious stones held to be dutiable under this provision, regardless of the fact that they are ornamented or decorated.—T. D. 24608, G. A. 5401.

(i) Imitations of precious stones with metal backs held dutiable as imitation precious stones and not as manufactures of metal and paste.—Lorsch v. United States (119 Fed. Rep., 476), reversing T. D. 19458, G. A. 4175, followed; T. D. 24250, G. A. 5289.

(j) Certain so-called incrusted stones and imitations of pearls and half pearls held to be dutiable as imitation precious stones.—G. A. 5289 affirmed without opinion; United States v. Lorsch et al., Suits 3353, 3354 (T. D. 25463).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(k) Spheres about one-half an inch in diameter, cut from rock crystals, with figures and designs engraved thereon and pieces of wire inserted, by means of which they can be attached to articles of jewelry or worn on watch chains, are dutiable as precious stones cut but not set.—T. D. 13346, G. A. 1726.

(l) Pieces of glass less than 1 inch in dimensions, colored to imitate the turquoise, pierced and strung upon cords, presenting the appearance of beads, are dutiable as precious stones unset.—T. D. 13347, G. A. 1727.

(a) Half spheres of colored glass made to imitate precious stones held dutiable as precious stones unset.—T. D. 13350, G. A. 1730.

(b) Garnet pallet slabs, commercially known as jewels, suitable for use in the manufacture of clocks but not watches, are dutiable as precious stones cut but not set.—T. D. 13364, G. A. 1744.

(c) Performed faceted beads, known as chain stones, cut from crude agates and designed to be set and incorporated into jewelry, held dutiable as precious stones cut but not set and not as nonenumerated articles.—T. D. 14142, G. A. 2141.

(d) Certain garnet pallet slabs and large sapphires held dutiable as precious stones cut but not set and not as watch jewels.—T. D. 13809, G. A. 2003.

(e) Pieces of glass colored in imitation of Colorado sapphire, black and white onyx, and amethyst, are dutiable as imitation precious stones.—T. D. 14234, G. A. 2198.

(f) Glaziers' diamonds set in metal and mounted with stocks or handles of wood are dutiable as precious stones set.—T. D. 11067, G. A. 510; T. D. 12043, G. A. 956.

(g) Round pieces of glass less than 1 inch in diameter, perforated on each side, colored, and cut with facets upon one surface in imitation of precious stones, intended to be attached to the tops of ladies' combs, are dutiable as imitation precious stones.—T. D. 12682, G. A. 1331.

(h) Imitation stones composed of glass cut but not set, to be used in the manufacture of sleeve buttons, etc., held dutiable at 10 per cent.—T. D. 14390, G. A. 2274.

(i) Certain pearl beads strung composed of glass and other substances (glass chief value) made to imitate pearls and known as wax pearls held dutiable as precious stones.—T. D. 17504, G. A. 3643.

(j) Glass beads strung, of two kinds, one consisting of small brown beads, which were a poor imitation of precious stones known as "cat's-eye," and the other of larger size, and also an imitation of precious stones, are dutiable as imitations of precious stones not exceeding 1 inch in dimension not set and not as manufactures of glass. Reversing 77 Fed. Rep., 605.—Morrison v. United States (C. C. A.), (84 Fed. Rep., 444), reversed in 179 United States 456.

(k) Articles made of agate, such as paper weights, paper cutters, knife handles, etc., held dutiable by similitude to precious stones cut but not set. In order that the similitude clause may apply, it is only necessary that a substantial similarity shall exist in any one of the particulars mentioned in the statute and not in two or more.—Hahn v. United States (121 Fed. Rep., 152), reversing T. D. 23432, G. A. 5053, followed; T. D. 24433, G. A. 5339.

(l) Cups, shoe hooks, handles for penholders, and other completed articles, manufactured from agate or onyx, are dutiable under this paragraph by virtue of their similitude to precious stones. Agate is one of the precious stones though sometimes deemed the least precious of them. The term "precious stones" applies to all stones known as precious, whether in their original condition or advanced beyond it, by cutting, polishing, etc., so long as they remain stones in the commercial sense of the word.—T. D. 18872, G. A. 4069; reversed by the Circuit Court (91 Fed. Rep., 755) but sustained by the Circuit Court of Appeals in Hahn v. United States (100 Fed. Rep., 635).

(a) Small cups, shoe hooks, glove-hook handles, knife handles, paper weights, slabs for match boxes and for blotting papers, and similar articles made of agate and onyx, are dutiable by similitude as precious stones, being identical in material with well-known kinds of precious stones, although advanced by their manufacture into specific commercial articles beyond the condition of precious stones. Sustaining T. D. 18872, G. A. 4069, and reversing the Circuit Court (91 Fed. Rep., 755).—Hahn v. United States (C. C. A.), (100 Fed. Rep., 635).

(b) Agate penholder handles, tiger eye or crocodolite articles, manufactured by a process called "cutting," from crude stones known to trade and commerce in this country as agate and tiger eye or crocodolite, and as varieties of precious stones, and bought and sold as agate penholder handles and tiger eye or crocodolite penholder handles, and other similar names, are dutiable as precious stones and not free as agates nor dutiable as crude minerals nor stones as nonenumerated articles.—Hahn v. Erhardt (C. C.), (46 Fed. Rep., 519), reversed (55 Fed. Rep., 273) where they are held to be nonenumerated articles.

1897 436. Pearls in their natural state, not strung or set, ten per centum ad valorem.

1894 337. Pearls, * * * ten per centum ad valorem.

1890 453. Pearls, ten per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 436, ACT OF 1897.

(c) Drilled pearls, unassorted and unmatched, and of various sizes, colors, and qualities, but not set or strung, are dutiable by similitude as "pearls in their natural state, not strung or set," at the rate of 10 per cent ad valorem under this paragraph and section 7, tariff act of 1897.—Tiffany v. United States (112 Fed. Rep., 672), reversing 105 id., 766, and T. D. 22140, G. A. 4692, and in effect overruling 103 Fed. Rep., 619, and T. D. 19487, G. A. 4181, followed; T. D. 23751, G. A. 5149.

(d) So-called Japanese pearls, formed naturally by the pearl-bearing oyster, but induced by human initiative through the introduction of a plug of mother-of-pearl into the bivalve, held to be pearls in their natural state.—T. D. 25597, G. A. 5793.

(e) Pearls pierced and strung for convenience in transportation are not pearls strung as understood in the jewelry trade and are dutiable by similitude at the same rate as pearls in their natural state.—T. D. 25966, G. A. 5892.

(f) A number of drilled pearls, imported loose, matched as to size but not otherwise, except a mere regard for comparative color, and not with such care as would enhance their value as a collection, held to be more closely similar to pearls in their natural state than to an article of jewelry. The inexpensive process of temporarily stringing such pearls on a silk cord abroad, in order to facilitate their sale by enabling a prospective purchaser to judge of their appearance and effect when finally made into a necklace, held not to operate to exclude them from admission at the rate of duty applicable to pearls in their natural state.—T. D. 28246, G. A. 6617.

(g) Drilled pearls not strung or set are dutiable by similitude to "pearls in their natural state not strung or set."—Neresheimer v. United States (136 Fed. Rep., 86; T. D. 25876), reversing 131 Fed. Rep., 977; T. D. 24872, and T. D. 23748, G A. 5146, followed; T. D. 25986, G. A. 5899.

(a) Half, split, or sawed pearls are dutiable by similitude to "pearls in their natural state not strung or set."—United States v. Hahn (135 Fed. Rep., 349; T. D. 25901), affirming 131 Fed. Rep., 1000; T. D. 24873, and reversing T. D. 23750, G. A. 5148, and T. D. 19449, G. A. 4166, followed; T. D. 26013, G. A. 5914.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(b) Unset pearls pierced or cut are dutiable as pearls and not as precious stones.—T. D. 16972, G. A. 3400.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(c) Beads composed of thin glass filled or lined with fish scales or some substance or compound the component material of which is not known, known commercially as wax beads and pearl beads, but which are not manufactures of which wax is the component of chief value, nor pearls, are not dutiable as pearls nor under paragraph 459 as wax.—T .D. 14828, G. A. 2511.

437. Hides of cattle, raw or uncured, whether dry, salted, or pickled, fifteen per centum ad valorem: Provided, That upon all leather ex-
1897 ported, made from imported hides, there shall be allowed a drawback equal to the amount of duty paid on such hides, to be paid under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

1894 505. Hides and skins, raw or uncured, whether dry, salted, or pickled. (Free.)

1890 605. Hides, raw or uncured, whether dry, salted, or pickled, * * * (Free.)

1883 719. Hides, raw or uncured, whether dry, salted, or pickled, * * * (Free.)

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 437, ACT OF 1897.

(d) In the trade and commerce of this country the term "hides" applies to the skins of the larger animals, such as horses, oxen, cows, and bulls, while the term "skins" (paragraph 664) applies to the coverings of calves, sheep, and goats. Such distinction has been recognized in the tariff legislation for more than forty years.—T. D. 14059, G. A. 2110, and T. D. 14060, G. A. 2111, approved. T. D. 18739, G. A. 4052.

(e) The dividing line ordinarily as to weight between dried salted skins and dried salted hides is 15 pounds.—T. D. 21977, G. A. 4652.

(f) Hides of American cattle, the growth of the United States, are dutiable as hides of cattle and not free under paragraph 493 where the cattle had been exported alive, slaughtered in England and the hides reimported after being salted and disinfected.—T. D. 19130, G. A. 4103.

(g) Hides of the East India buffalo are dutiable as hides of cattle and not under paragraph 438 as leather nor free under paragraph 664 as skins.—T. D. 20276, G. A. 4305; T. D. 21657, G. A. 4574.

(h) Calfskins (weighing under 12 pounds and free under paragraph 664) and hides raw and dried were imported indiscriminately mixed and were assessed as hides. Held, (1) where dutiable goods are indiscriminately mixed with free goods a collector has the right, in the first instance, to assume that the mingling of the goods was intentional and with design to evade duty. No duty rests upon the collector to separate the goods according to their dutiable character and he is justified in treating the entire importation as prima facie dutiable; (2) where the confusion is accidental and not fraudulent in fact the burden rests upon the importer to affirmatively prove that such is the case and as to what portion of the goods the classification is incorrect, which proof may be made before the Board when brought before them under protest; (3) where, in an importation of dutiable hides mixed with nondutiable skins, the entire lot was assessed as hides, the presumption is that such as are not proved to be skins are hides.—T. D. 21900, G. A. 4624.

(a) Skins of cattle weighing under 12 pounds are free of duty.—United States v. Helmrath (145 Fed. Rep., 36; T. D. 27117), affirming 135 id., 912 (T. D. 25900), followed; T. D. 27294, G. A. 6344.

(b) Singapore buffalo hides found to be similar to the hides passed upon in United States v. Winter (134 Fed. Rep., 841; T. D. 25901), affirming Winter v. United States (T. D. 25184) and held to be free of duty as hides not specially provided for.—T. D. 26240, G. A. 6001.

(c) The expression "hides of cattle" is not shown to have any commercial signification which limits it to so-called straight-back cattle (cows, oxen, steers, and bulls) but rather to describe the species, i. e., domestic animals of the cattle family such as are concededly useful for the purposes which prompted the levying of a duty on hides; and hides of the domesticated East Indian buffalo are dutiable as hides of cattle and not free as hides not specilly provided for.—Rosshach v. United States (122 Fed Rep., 1020), affirming 116 id., 781; T. D. 20276, G. A. 4305, followed; T. D. 27021, G. A. 6268, reversed; United States v. Schmoll (154 Fed. Rep., 734; T. D. 27920) and id.; T. D. 28604.

(d) An importation of mixed hides and skins was held to be dutiable as hides, the importers failing to produce, on the order of the appraiser, two bales in addition to the one ordered for examination, and to offer evidence to show that the remaining bales of the importation were identical in composition with the examined bale.—Weil v. United States (115 Fed. Rep., 592).

(e) In the matter of an importation of mixed hides and skins, the line between which is drawn at 12 pounds, the quantity of each was held to have been shown satisfactorily by the evidence of experienced weighers who handled each piece, but weighed those only as to which they were in donbt.—United States v. Helmrath (145 Fed. Rep., 36; T. D. 27117), affirming 135 id., 912 (T. D. 25900).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(f) Hides exported from Venezuela or Colombia after the date of the proclamation of the President of March 15, 1892, are not free but dutiable under section 3 of the act of 1890.—T. D. 13766, G. A. 1960.

(g) Tiger, bear, wolf, and cat skins, lined and ready for use as rugs, are not free.—T. D. 13585, G. A. 1857.

438. Band or belting leather, sole leather, dressed upper and all other leather, calfskins tanned or tanned and dressed, kangaroo, sheep and goat skins (including lamb and kid skins) dressed and finished, chamois and other skins and bookbinders' calfskins, all the foregoing not specially provided for in this Act, twenty per centum ad valorem; skins for morocco, tanned but unfinished, ten per centum ad valorem; patent, japanned, varnished or enameled leather, weighing not over ten pounds per dozen hides or skins, thirty cents per pound and twenty per centum ad valorem; if weighing over ten pounds and not over twenty-five pounds per dozen, thirty cents per pound and ten per centum ad valorem; if weighing over twenty-five pounds per dozen, twenty cents per pound and ten per centum ad valorem; pianoforte leather and pianoforte action leather, thirty-five per centum ad valorem; leather shoe laces, finished or unfinished, fifty cents per gross pairs and twenty per centum ad valorem; boots and shoes made of leather, twenty-five per centum ad valorem: Provided, That leather cut into shoe uppers or vamps or other forms, snitable for conversion into manufactured articles, shall be classified as manufactures of leather and pay duty accordingly.

340. Bend or belting leather, and leather not specially provided for in this Act, ten per centum ad valorem.

339. Sole leather, ten per centum ad valorem.

342. Leather cut into shoe uppers or vamps, or other forms, suitable for conversion into manufactured articles, twenty per centum ad valorem.

455. Bend or belting leather and sole leather, and leather not specially provided for in this act, ten per centum ad valorem.

456. Calfskins, tanned, or tanned and dressed, dressed upper leather, including patent, enameled, and japanned leather, dressed or undressed, and finished; chamois or other skins not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, twenty per centum ad valorem; bookbinders' calfskins, kangaroo, sheep and goat skins, including lamb and kid skins, dressed and finished, twenty per centum ad valorem; skins for morocco, tanned but unfinished, ten per centum ad valorem; pianoforte leather and pianoforte action leather, thirty-five per centum ad valorem; japanned calfskins, thirty per centum ad valorem; boots and shoes, made of leather, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

457. But leather cut into shoe uppers or vamps, or other forms, suitable for conversion into manufactured articles, shall be classified as manufactures of leather, and pay duty accordingly.

460. Leather, bend or belting leather, and Spanish or other sole leather, and leather not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, fifteen per centum ad valorem.

461. Calfskins, tanned, or tanned and dressed, and dressed upper leather of all other kinds, and skins dressed and finished, of all kinds, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, and skins of morocco, finished, twenty per centum ad valorem.

462. Skins for morocco, tanned, but unfinished, ten per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 438, ACT OF 1897.

(a) The provision for "patent, japanned, varnished, or patent leather" has no limitation as to weight of hides per dozen.—T. D. 19100, G. A. 4099.

(b) Scrap leather of various kinds and dimensions, imported for use as leather, is dutiable as leather not specially provided for, the provision "all leather" covers any that has not lost its identity as leather.—T. D. 20010, G. A. 4256.

(c) Split seal skins tanned but not finished are dutiable under this paragraph.—T. D. 20042, G. A. 4264.

(d) Trade and commerce recognizes as morocco leather that article of leather made from goatskins. The style of leather made from sheepskins which resembles morocco and is known in trade as imitation morocco is dutiable as leather not specially provided for.—T. D. 22709, G. A. 4835.

(e) Turkish slippers, appliqued with metal threads, composed in chief value of leather, are dutiable as shoes made of leather and not as embroidered articles by virtue of the proviso in paragraph 339. This proviso applies only to articles embroidered and does not extend to appliqued articles. "Shoes made of leather" means shoes composed in chief value of leather, slippers belonging to the class of articles known as shoes and provided for in the tariff under that name. A subordinate designation of any article not described as such in the tariff act does not operate to withdraw it from a general class described in the tariff.—T. D. 23464, G. A. 5060.

(a) Chamois skins, dry salted, untanned, and with the hair on, are not dutiable under this paragraph, but are free as skins of all kinds, raw.—T. D. 24550, G. A. 5370.

(b) Pigskins tanned but unfinished, which are used occasionally for morocco, but chiefly for other purposes, are dutiable as leather and not as skins for morocco. This expression means such skins as are commonly or chiefly used for morocco.—T. D. 24564, G. A. 5376.

(c) East India sheepskins tanned but unfinished, which are chiefly used for morocco, are dutiable at 10 per cent ad valorem under this paragraph as "skins for morocco tanned but unfinished," and are not dutiable at 20 per cent ad valorem under said paragraph as "leather * * * not specially provided for."—T. D. 24684, G. A. 5426.

(d) Shoes made in chief value of rawhide are not "shoes made of leather." Hamano v. United States (1 Estee's Hawaiian Reports; T. D. 24946).

(e) "New Zealand basils" or "Cape sheepskins" are included in the term "skins for morocco."—Helmrath v. United States (125 Fed. Rep., 634; T. D. 25003).

(f) Sheets of so-called compressed sole leather, consisting of scraps or skivers of leather made cohesive by the use of starch and other substances, held dutiable as leather not specially provided for.—T. D. 25021, G. A. 5589.

(g) Leather strips about 4 feet long, of irregular width and thickness, cut from leather which has been dressed on one side, are dutiable as leather not specially provided for.—T. D. 27672, G. A. 6466.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(h) Rough leather, rough calf, rough kip butts, india tanned kips, and tanned calf are dutiable as tanned calfskins and not as leather not specially provided for.—T. D. 17398, G. A. 3589.

(i) Unfinished chamois skins are dutiable at 20 per cent. and not as leather not specially provided for.—T. D. 16289, G. A. 3118. (See T. D. 11701, G. A. 806).

(j) Lamb, sheep, or kid skins, which have been split and the grain side tanned in alum and white of egg, known in trade as white splits or white split skins, are dutiable as other skins and not as leather not specially provided for.—T. D. 17166, G. A. 3483.

(k) Indian moccasins are dutiable as shoes made of leather and not as manufactures of leather.—T. D. 17654, G. A. 3702.

(l) Leather for printers' rollers is dutiable as leather not specially provided for and not as skins not specially enumerated.—T. D. 15700, G. A. 2881.

(m) Scraps and pieces of skin, known in trade as canepin and not known as skins, are dutiable as leather not otherwise provided for and not as skins.—T. D. 17166, G. A. 3483.

(n) Tanned, dressed, and finished skins, or hides of steers or cows, known as harness leather, is dutiable as leather not specially provided for and not as sole leather, nor as skins not specially provided for.—T. D. 17662, G. A. 3710.

(o) "Ganffre leather," in pieces 28 inches wide and from 32 to 36 inches long, plain on one side and having on the other side an embossed pattern in silver and other colors, and designed to be cut and used in making dress trimmings, pocketbooks, and other articles, is dutiable as leather not specially provided for and not as skins not otherwise provided for, nor as manufactures of leather, nor as leather cut into shoe uppers or vamps or other forms.—United States v. Naday; Naday v. United States (C. C.), (92 Fed. Rep., 140); affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals (98 Fed. Rep., 421); T. D. 21819, G. A. 4611; T. D. 17774, G. A. 3730, reversed.

(a) Chinese shoes containing leather as chief value are dutiable as shoes made of leather and not as cotton wearing apparel, though the cotton may predominate in quantity.—T. D. 21587, G. A. 4547.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(b) Buffing leather, a skiver or splitting from the grain or side of tanned cattle hide, is leather not provided for.—T. D. 11411, G. A. 694.

(c) Scraps of sheepskin, goatskin, and deerskin, chiefly used for stuffing baseballs, are dutiable as leather not specially provided for or under paragraph 472 (1890) as waste.—T. D. 12128, G. A. 990.

(d) Strips of leather designed for use in the manufacture of sweat bands assessed for duty as manufactures of leather and claimed to be skins dressed and finished. Protest overruled, though the Board intimates that if the importer had claimed that the merchandise was dutiable as leather the protest would have been sustained.—T. D. 13243, G. A. 1664.

(f) Dressed oxhides known as Russia leather, chiefly used for razor straps, dutiable as leather and not as skins.—T. D. 14059, G. A. 2110.

(g) Dressed elk hides dutiable as leather not specially provided for and not as skins.—T. D. 14060, G. A. 2111.

(h) "White splits," used for covering stoppers or bottles, are dutiable as leather and not as skins.—T. D. 15172, G. A. 2698.

(i) Certain calfskins held dutiable as tanned calfskins and not as skins for morocco.—T. D. 13363, G. A. 1743.

(l) The term "other skins" does not apply to the hides of larger animals.—T. D. 14059, G. A. 2110; T. D. 14060, G. A. 2111.

(m) Tripoli skins, being goatskins, held to be skins for morocco tanned but unfinished.—T. D. 12130, G. A. 992.

(n) Thin leather in the piece, one side having a chamois finish, while the other has a surface dressed with a silver or bronze coating, held to be dutiable as dressed skins and not as leather not specially provided for, nor as manufactures of leather.—T. D. 14216, G. A. 2180.

(o) Ladies' kid shoes with woolen cloth quarters (leather chief value) held to be dutiable as shoes made of leather and not as wool wearing apparel.—T. D. 10665, G. A. 249.

(p) Slippers made from leather and embroidered with tinsel or metal thread are shoes.—T. D. 10766, G. A. 319.

(a) This paragraph is applicable, in the absence of any restrictive words, to all shoes made of leather, notwithstanding the fact that other materials are used in greater quantity; and Chinese shoes manufactured from various materials, including leather, cotton, silk, thread, and felt, but of which leather is the component material of chief value, are dutiable as shoes and not as articles of which leather is the component material of chief value, neither as specially provided for nor by similitude.—In re Wise (C. C.), (93 Fed. Rep., 443).

(b) Patent calf or patent leather used for shoe uppers held dutiable at 20 per cent and not at 30 per cent as japanned calfskins.—T. D. 10719, G. A. 272.

(c) Japanned calfskins used as upper leather are dutiable under the provisions herein for dressed upper leather, including japanned leather, and not as japanned calfskins.—United States v. Bittel (155 Fed. Rep., 554; T. D. 26925), affirmed in 4 C. C. A., 680.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(d) Cordovan leather, cut during the process of dressing into a shape suitable for recutting into shoe vamps, is dutiable as dressed upper leather and not as manufactures of leather. Reversing T. D. 10342, G. A. 63.—In re Salomon (C. C.), (48 Fed. Rep., 287).

(e) Skins dressed with the hair on and sewed together in pieces 18 inches wide, and from 36 to 48 inches long, and used indefinitely as rugs, mats, sleigh robes, and overcoat trimmings, are dutiable as skins dressed and finished and not as rugs.—Schlesinger v. Seeberger (C. C.), (40 Fed. Rep., 872).

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(f) The act of June 6, 1872 (17 Stat., 230), does not repeal the provisions of the act of March 2, 1861 (12 Stat., 189), August 5, 1861 (Id., 293), and July 14, 1862 (Id., 555), imposing duties on japanned, patent, or enameled leather or skins.—Movius v. Arthur (95 U. S., 144).

(g) Glazed calfskin, known to the trade as patent leather and upper leather, generally used for the upper part of boots and shoes, and invoiced as patent leather, is dutiable at 20 per cent and not under schedule C.—Keutgen v. Lawrence (1 Blatchf., 615; 14 Fed. Cas., 434).

439. Gloves made wholly or in part of leather, whether wholly or 1897 partly manufactured, shall pay duty at the following rates, the lengths stated in each case being the extreme length when stretched to their full extent, namely:

343. Gloves made wholly or in part of leather, whether wholly or partly 1894 manufactured, shall pay duty at the following rates, the lengths stated in each case being the extreme length when stretched to their full extent, namely:

458. Gloves of all descriptions, composed wholly or in part of kid or other leather, and whether wholly or partly manufactured, shall pay duty at the rates fixed in connection with the following specified kinds thereof, fourteen inches in extreme length when stretched to the full extent, being in each case hereby fixed as the standard, and one dozen pairs as the basis, namely: Ladies' and children's schmaschen of said length or under, one dollar and seventy-five cents per dozen; ladies' and children's lamb of said length or under, two dollars and twenty-five cents per dozen; ladies' and children's kid of said length or under, three dollars and twenty-five cents per dozen; ladies' and children's suedes of 1890 said length or under, fifty per centum ad valorem; all other ladies' and children's leather gloves, and all men's leather gloves of said length or under, fifty per centum ad valorem; all leather gloves over fourteen inches in length, fifty per centum ad valorem; and in addition to the above rates there shall be paid on all men's gloves one dollar per dozen; on all lined gloves one dollar per dozen; on all pique or prick seam gloves, fifty cents per dozen; on all embroidered gloves, with more than three single strands or cords, fifty cents per dozen pairs. Provided, That all gloves represented to be of a kind or grade below their actual kind or grade shall pay an additional duty of five dollars per dozen pairs: Provided further, That none of the articles named in this paragraph shall pay a less rate of duty than fifty per centum ad valorem.

1883 436. Gloves, kid or leather, of all descriptions, wholly or partially manufactured, fifty per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(a) Men's leather pique gloves held dutiable at $1 per dozen pairs and 50 per cent and not at $1.50 per dozen pairs and 50 per cent.—T. D. 14693, G. A. 2415.

(c) All gloves which are not men's gloves are to be classed together as ladies' or children's gloves. There is no distinction between boys' and girls' gloves. Reversing T. D. 14693, G. A. 2415.—Wertheimer v. United States (C. C.), (71 Fed. Rep., 949).

(d) Men's leather gloves, brick seamed and embroidered, are dutiable at one dollar per dozen pairs and fifty per cent and not at one dollar and fifty cents per dozen pairs and two dollars per dozen pairs and fifty per cent.—Wanamaker v. Cooper (C. C.), (69 Fed. Rep., 465).

(e) There is a well-settled distinction between ladies' lambskin and ladies' sheepskin gloves. Ladies' sheepskin gloves are not dutiable as ladies' lambskin gloves, but as other ladies' gloves.—T. D. 10911, G. A. 406.

(f) Gloves imported of four different kinds and in each line of the invoice the gloves were described as of a grade below the actual class or kind to which they belonged. The collector assessed five dollars per dozen pairs for misrepresentation in the invoice. Held not to be a manifest clerical error and the duty to have been correctly assessed.—T. D. 14686, G. A. 2408.

440. Women's or children's "glace" finish, schmaschen (of sheep origin), not over fourteen inches in length, one dollar and seventy-five 1897 cents per dozen pairs; over fourteen inches and not over seventeen inches in length, two dollars and twenty-five cents per dozen pairs; over seventeen inches in length, two dollars and seventy-five cents per dozen pairs; men's "glace" finish, schmaschen (sheep), three dollars per dozen pairs.

344. Ladies' or children's "glace" finish, schmaschen (of sheep origin), not over fourteen inches in length, one dollar per dozen pairs; over four-
1894 teen inches and not over seventeen inches in length, one dollar and fifty cents per dozen pairs; over seventeen inches in length, two dollars per dozen pairs; men's "glace" finish, schmaschen (sheep), three dollars per dozen pairs.

1890 [Dutiable under paragraph 458, page 639.]

1883 [Dutiable under paragraph 436, page 640.]

DECISION UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(g) Ladies' leather gloves assessed as lambskin and held not to be schmaschen.—T. D. 16832, G. A. 3351.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(h) Ladies' gloves, 14 inches or less in extreme length, manufactured from the skins of stillborn or immature kids, described as "schmaschen" low quality, costing from 14.50 to 15.25 marks per dozen, are dutiable as schmaschen gloves, at $1.75 per dozen pairs, and not at $3.25 per dozen pairs, and are not liable to the additional duty of $5 per dozen pairs, imposed by the first proviso.—T. D. 13799, G. A. 1993, In re Holzmaister (C. C.), (61 Fed. Rep., 645).

1897 441. Women's or children's "glace" finish, lamb or sheep, not over fourteen inches in length, two dollars and fifty cents per dozen pairs; over fourteen and not over seventeen inches in length, three dollars and fifty cents per dozen pairs; over seventeen inches in length, four dollars and fifty cents per dozen pairs; men's "glace" finish, lamb or sheep, four dollars per dozen pairs.

1894 345. Ladies' or children's "glace" finish, lamb or sheep, not over fourteen inches in length, one dollar and seventy-five cents per dozen pairs; over fourteen and not over seventeen inches in length, two dollars and seventy-five cents per dozen pairs; over seventeen inches in length, three dollars and seventy-five cents per dozen pairs. Men's "glace" finish, lamb or sheep, four dollars per dozen pairs.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 445, ACT OF 1897.

(d) Leather gloves, lined, pique, and stitched or embroidered, etc., are dutiable at $1.80 per dozen pairs in addition to the class rates in paragraphs preceding this; and gloves coming under two of the styles named in this paragraph are dutiable at the combined rates, in addition to the rates provided in the preceding paragraphs.—T. D. 19493, G. A. 4187.

(e) Leather gloves with three rows of embroidery on the back, each row presenting the appearance of three-plait crochet work, which effect is seen by the stitching through and on the inside of the glove, to have been produced by the needle with only one cord or strand of thread, are not "stitched or embroidered with more than three single strands or cords."—T. D. 19945, G. A. 4241, affirmed; United States v. Robinson (124 Fed. Rep., 1013).

(f) Leather gloves made from deerskin that has been tanned and finished without removing the hair, which present the appearance of fur-lined gloves, but are not in fact lined, are not chargeable with the additional duty of $1 per dozen pairs imposed upon lined leather gloves by the provisions of this paragraph.—T. D. 25173, G. A. 5634.

(a) Certain leather gloves ornamented with embroidered threads stitched thereon in the same manner by which a cord is formed, i. e., by doubling the leather and so showing six rows of needle holes in each glove, found to be embroidered with not more than three single strands and so not chargeable with the duty of 40 cents per dozen pairs prescribed in this paragraph, for embroidery.—T. D. 25742, G. A. 5834.

(b) The additional duties prescribed upon leather gloves in this paragraph are, as expressed in the act itself, cumulative, and, in a proper case, one, two, or all of such duties may be imposed upon the same gloves.—Douillet v. United States (133 Fed. Rep., 1007; T. D. 25811), followed; T. D. 26241, G. A. 6002.

(c) Certain leather gloves with three rows of embroidery, each row presenting the appearance of three-plait crochet work, the effect having been produced by the needle with only one cord or strand of thread, held not subject to the additional duty provided herein.—United States v. Trefousse et al. (154 Fed. Rep., 1005; T. D. 28000), affirming 144 id., 708 (T. D. 27023).

(d) The words "strands or cords" in this paragraph do not mean strands or cords of thread, but refer to the ornamentation on the backs of gloves known in the trade as strands or cords. The words are shown to have a technical meaning. Gloves on which more than three single lines of stitching have been used to produce the embellishments on the back are subject to the additional duty imposed by this paragraph on " * * * all gloves stitched or embroidered with more than three single strands or cords."—T. D. 25038, G. A. 5595.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(f) Men's leather driving gloves, the palms and front half of the fingers and thumbs lined with chamois, are subject to the additional duty of $1 per dozen pairs. It is not necessary that the gloves, in order to be covered by this paragraph, should be wholly lined.—T. D. 17736, G. A. 3722.

(g) Lisle thread gloves (known as Tilbury gloves) reenforced but not lined with leather are not subject to the additional duty.—T. D. 18636, G. A. 4034.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(h) Ladies' kid gloves embroidered with more than three single strands or cords are dutiable under this paragraph at 50 cents per dozen pairs, in addition to the other applicable rates herein specified, although such gloves may be known as "three row embroidered" gloves. The words "with more than three single strands or cords" refer to the actual number of single strands or cords upon the glove and not to any commercial designation. Sustaining T. D. 10910, G. A. 405.—Wertheimer v. United States (C. C.), (68 Fed. Rep., 186); affirmed (C. C. A.), (73 Fed. Rep., 296).

(i) Gloves having two rows of single cord embroidery between three lines or points of the material, raised up and sewed through and through, are not dutiable as embroidered gloves with more than three single strands or cords.—Wertheimer v. United States (C. C.), (77 Fed. Rep., 600).

(j) Men's leather pique or prickseam gloves were imported, when the collector assessed a duty of 50 per cent. and also an additional duty of $1 per dozen pair as men's gloves, and also an additional duty of 50 cents per dozen pairs as "pique or prickseam gloves," Held, (1) that the gloves are dutiable at 50 per cent, with an additional duty of $1 per dozen pairs; (2) that the additional duties provided for in this paragraph are alternative and not cumulative; (3) if the same article is included in two or more classes it need only pay the rate applicable to the highest of those classes. Reversing T. D. 10753, G. A. 306.—In re Wertheimer (C. C.), (50 Fed. Rep., 67); affirmed (C. C. A.), (55 Fed. Rep., 281); T. D. 14131, G. A. 2130.

(a) Leather gloves with three straight cords raised upon the back and lines of straight stitching known as Orleans or Paris points on the outside of and between the cords are not embroidered.—T. D. 12103, G. A. 965.

(b) When the final ad valorem rate of 50 per cent is assessed, the additional duties named in the preceding portion of this paragraph can not be assessed.—T. D. 14517, G. A. 2328.

1897 446. Glove tranks, with or without the usual accompanying pieces, shall pay seventy-five per centum of the duty provided for the gloves in the fabrication of which they are suitable.

1894 350. Glove tranks, with or without the usual accompanying pieces, shall pay seventy-five per centum of the duty provided for the gloves in the fabrication of which they are suitable.

1890 [No corresponding provision.]

1883 [No corresponding provision.]

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 446, ACT OF 1897.

(c) Lambskin pieces cut to such shapes that when fitted together they constitute all the parts of a glove and showing in themselves the outline of a glove, with the thumb holes cut and the finger shapes also cut, found to be partly manufactured gloves and not glove tranks.—T. D. 25858, G. A. 5868.

1897 447. Harness, saddles and saddlery, or parts of either, in sets or in parts, finished or unfinished, forty-five per centum ad valorem.

1894 [Not enumerated. Dutiable according to material.]

1890 [Not enumerated. Dutiable according to material.]

1883 415. Coach and harness furniture of all kinds, saddlery, coach, and harness hardware, silver-plated, brass, brass-plated, or covered, common, tinned, burnished, or japanned, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, thirty-five per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 447, ACT OF 1897.

(d) Whips and halters are dutiable as saddlery.—T. D. 19486, G. A. 4180.

(e) Bits and dumb jockeys are dutiable as saddlery and not as forgings nor as manufactures of gutta-percha.—T. D. 19133, G. A. 4106.

(f) Horse bandages are saddlery.—T. D. 21713, G. A. 4584.

(g) Whips and parts of whips are not dutiable as saddlery, but according to the material of chief value. T. D. 19486, G. A. 4180, reversed.—T. D. 23026, G. A. 4919.

(h) Horse-leg bandages are not saddlery.—Veil v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 856) followed; T. D. 23619, G. A. 5106.

(i) Sheets of rubber about 6 inches in length and the same in width, rolled tubular in form, used to cover the portion of the metal bit entering a horse's mouth as a protection to the latter, detachable, and ready to be further shaped to fit any bit and suitable for no other purpose, are properly dutiable as "saddlery and harness and parts of either, finished or unfinished," under this paragraph.—T. D. 24353, G. A. 5320.

(a) Girths, kneecaps, and rollers made principally of leather and in part of wool, bridle fronts composed of leather and metal bits, and fillet strings and wither pads made of wool are dutiable under this paragraph. Horse bandages are not.—T. D. 24354, G. A. 5321.

(b) An antique saddle and equine trappings of mediæval origin, though no longer put to utilitarian purposes, being in fact saddlery, are dutiable as such.—T. D. 24498, G. A. 5356.

(c) Horse blankets in part of wool are not saddlery.—T. D. 24701, G. A. 5431.

(d) Articles known as saddletrees, used only as framework for riding saddles, are dutiable as parts of saddles.—T. D. 25382, G. A. 5709.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(e) The word "saddlery" is to be taken as a noun and not as an adjective qualifying "hardware."—McCoy v. Hedden (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 89).

448. Manufactures of amber, asbestos, bladders, corks, catgut or whip
1897 gut or worm gut, or wax, or of which these substances or either of them is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this Act, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

351. Manufactures of amber, asbestos, bladders, * * * cork, catgut,
1894 or whip gut or worm gut, * * * wax, or of which these substances or either of them is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this act, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

459. Manufactures of * * * amber, asbestos, bladders, * * * catgut or whip gut or worm gut, * * * wax, or of which these sub-
1890 stances or either of them is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this act, twenty-five per centum ad valorem * * *

39. Asbestos, manufactured, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.
398. Bladders, manufactures of, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.
1883 488. Strings: All strings of catgut, or any other like material, other than strings for musical instruments, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.
714. Gut, and worm gut, manufactured * * * . (Free.)

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 448, ACT OF 1897.

(f) Gut manufactured into strings, but not fit for musical instruments, is dutiable as a manufacture of catgut.—T. D. 19582, G. A. 4203.

(g) Strings made from silk-worm gut are dutiable as manufactures of gut and not free under paragraph 517 as worm gut unmanufactured.—T. D. 20612, G. A. 4338; overruled (see T. D. 23699, G. A. 5132).

(h) Strings of worm gut and catgut not strings for musical instruments, but plain strings, to be made into fishing tackle, surgical sutures, etc., are dutiable as manufactures of gut and not free under paragraph 517 as gut unmanufactured.—T. D. 21566, G. A. 4539; overruled (see T. D. 23699, G. A. 5132).

(i) Cotton muslin coated with cork to a depth of about one-tenth of an inch and used in making insoles for shoes is dutiable as a manufacture of cork and not under paragraph 337 as cork carpeting.—T. D. 22619, G. A. 4810.

(j) Pieces of amber varying in length from about 1½ to 6 inches, not further manufactured than cut into pieces, and sawed and smoothed on one side for the purpose of testing their quality, and which are intended to be used for the manufacture of cigar holders and mouthpieces for pipes, are free of duty as amber unmanufactured, under paragraph 470, and are not dutiable as manufactures of amber under this paragraph.—United States v. Hahn (91 Fed. Rep., 755), affirming In re Hahn (T. D. 18872, G. A. 4069); In re Hahn (T. D. 23432, G. A. 5053) followed; T. D. 23957, G. A. 5198.

(a) Small tubes made of cork, used in fitting and holding metal stoppers in bottles, are dutiable as manufactures of cork and not as manufactured corks.—T. D. 24575, G. A. 5380.

(b) Suberit, an artificial cork or cork substitute which may be derived from cork waste, is not dutiable as manufactures of cork.—T. D. 24827, G. A. 5503.

(c) Handles for pyrographic apparatus, made of metal and a composition in part of cork, are not dutiable as manufactures of cork, but as articles in part of metal.—T. D. 24830, G. A. 5506.

(d) Sealing wax found in fact to be neither a wax nor a manufacture of wax and held dutiable as an unenumerated manufactured article.—T. D. 25595, G. A. 5791.

(e) Tennis gut, a manufactured article which is used to make strings for tennis rackets, found to be commercially known as catgut, and, being in the crudest form in which catgut is dealt in in the trade, held to be free of duty as catgut manufactured and not dutiable as a manufacture of catgut by similitude as catgut unmanufactured and not dutiable as a manufacture of catgut by similitude thereto nor as an unenumerated manufactured article. T. D. 23995, G. A. 5207, overruled.—T. D. 25940, G. A. 5887.

(f) Asbestos: Certain so-called engine packing held dutiable as a manufacture of asbestos.—T. D. 27056, G. A. 6274.

(g) Strung glass beads one-half filled, three-quarters filled, or wholly filled with wax found to be composed in chief value of wax. T. D. 28254, G. A. 6625, modified.—T. D. 28297, G. A. 6639.

(h) Refuse of cork bark coarsely ground, the principal object of grinding appearing to be for convenience in transportation, is dutiable as waste and not as manufactures of cork nor as unmanufactured corkwood.—Nairn Linoleum Company et al. v. United States (142 Fed. Rep., 214; T. D. 25917), reversing without opinion, T. D. 25334, G. A. 5692.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(i) Ground corkwood is dutiable as manufacture of cork and not free as corkwood.—T. D. 16220, G. A. 3099.

(l) So-called beelballs and white polishing balls are dutiable as manufactures of wax and not as nonenumerated manufactured articles.—T. D. 18013, G. A. 3857.

(m) Lubricating rollers or candles composed of cerasin and paraffin (cerasin chief value) are dutiable as manufactures of wax and not as nonenumerated manufactured articles.—T. D. 18220, G. A. 3930.

(n) Fishhooks with catgut snells (catgut chief value) are dutiable as manufactures of catgut and not as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 18226, G. A. 3936.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(a) Gut strings wound around with metal wire are dutiable as manufactures of catgut.—T. D. 13234, G. A. 1655.

(b) Wire-covered violin strings composed of cat or worm gut covered with wire (gut chief value) are dutiable as manufactures of gut and not as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 14741, G. A. 2463.

(d) Gut leaders are dutiable as worm gut manufactured and not as worm gut unmanufactured.—T. D. 15222, G. A. 2715.

(e) Rococo, Stearin-Kersin, Stettin, candles are not wax candles.—T. D. 15111, G. A. 2637.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(f) Racquet gut strings are dutiable as gut strings and not free as gut manufactured or unmanufactured.—T. D. 10397, G. A. 88.

449. Manufactures of bone, chip, grass, horn, india-rubber, palm leaf, straw, weeds, or whalebone, or of which these substances or either of them is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for 1897 in this Act, thirty per centum ad valorem; but the terms "grass" and "straw" shall be understood to mean these substances in their natural form and structure, and not the separated fiber thereof.

352. Manufactures of bone, chip, grass, horn, India rubber, palm leaf, straw, weeds, or whalebone, or of which these substances or either of them is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for 1894 in this Act, twenty-five per centum ad valorem. But the terms grass and straw shall be understood to mean these substances in their natural form and structure and not the separated fiber thereof.

460. Manufactures of bone, chip, grass, horn, India-rubber, palm-leaf, straw, weeds, or whalebone, or of which these substances or either of 1890 them is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this act, thirty per centum ad valorem.

399. Bone, horn, * * * all manufactures of, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, thirty per centum ad valorem.

395. * * * articles composed of grass, * * * palm leaf, whalebone, * * * or straw, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, thirty per centum ad valorem.

1883 453. India-rubber fabrics, composed wholly or in part of India rubber, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, thirty per centum ad valorem.

454. Articles composed of India rubber, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

455. India-rubber boots and shoes, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 449, ACT OF 1897.

(g) Willow sheets or squares, so called, one surface of which is composed of narrow strips of willow, called chip, and the other surface of bleached cotton cloth, are dutiable as manufactures of chip and not as willow sheets or squares.—T. D. 19388, G. A. 4152.

(h) Chip and straw braids or plaits stitched or sewed with cotton thread or cord in groups of two or more or into so-called plateaux about 18 by 36 inches in size, and which are intended and suitable for use in making and ornamenting hats, bonnets, or hoods (chip and straw chief value), are dutiable as manufactures of chip and straw and not under paragraph 409.—T. D. 22124, G. A. 4687.

(a) Kuskus-root fans are dutiable as manufactures of grass and not under paragraph 427 as fans, nor paragraph 208 as manufactures of wood, nor under paragraph 402 by similitude as assimilated to wall paper, nor under section 7 as nonenumerated articles.—T. D. 21056, G. A. 4421.

(b) Tennis balls composed of india rubber and wool (india rubber chief value) are dutiable as manufactures of india rubber and not under paragraph 366 as manufactures in part of wool.—T. D. 21673, G. A. 4578.

(c) Toys, being imitation bagpipes composed of a bag or pouch made wholly of rubber, with a small neck into which is inserted a hollow wooden mouthpiece, are dutiable as manufactures of india rubber and not under paragraph 418 as toys.—T. D. 22339, G. A. 4720.

(f) Miniature Mexican hats about 3 inches in diameter, made of straw and trimmed with colored cords, are dutiable as manufactures of straw.—T. D. 19414, G. A. 4153.

(g) The proviso to paragraph 391, that "all manufactures of which wool is a component material shall be classified and assessed as manufactures of wool," held to be limited to said paragraph or at most to the schedule in which it is found. Accordingly, tennis balls composed of wool and india rubber (rubber chief value) are dutiable as manufactures of rubber and not as manufactures of wool.—T. D. 22360, G. A. 4724.

(h) Bones which have been submitted to a process of crushing or grinding, producing an article known commercially as crushed or ground bone, which is fit for other than fertilizing purposes, are dutiable as manufactures of bone and are not free under paragraph 499 as bones crude, etc.—T. D. 23092, G. A. 4937.

(i) Straw mats are dutiable as manufactures of straw and not under paragraph 334 as mats of vegetable fiber.—T. D. 23144, G. A. 4954.

(j) Several varieties of Jeffery's so-called marine glue pitch found not to be composed in chief value of rubber.—T. D. 24117, G. A. 5248.

(k) Rubber bit covers are dutiable under paragraph 447 and not as manufactures of rubber.—T. D. 24353, G. A. 5320.

(l) Raffia cloth made from the separated fiber of the palm leaf is dutiable as manufactures of palm leaf.—T. D. 24435, G. A. 5341.

(m) Palm leaf preserved in its natural state by dipping in a chemical solution is not dutiable as manufactures of palm leaf, but falls within the provisions of paragraph 425 for ornamental leaves.—T. D. 25630, G. A. 5800.

(n) Toys composed in chief value of india rubber are dutiable as manufactures of rubber, being expressly excluded from classification under paragraph 418 by the terms thereof.—T. D. 26509, G. A. 6077.

(a) Gallilith umbrella handles are not dutiable as manufactures of horn by similitude.—T. D. 26733, G. A. 6159.

(b) Baskets made of ozier or willow, whether or not the material used in the construction thereof has been previously cut or split, held dutiable as manufactures of ozier or willow and not as manufactures of chip. Chip not shown to include in a commercial sense split willow or the chip of willow. T. D. 24811, G. A. 5495, modified.—T. D. 27208, G. A. 6313.

(c) Chip and straw braids, plaits, or laces stitched or sewed together with a cotton thread are, by reason of such cotton-thread component, not to be considered as composed wholly of straw or chip, and are therefore excluded from the provisions of paragraph 409 and are dutiable as manufactures of chip and straw under this paragraph.—Schmitz v. United States (146 Fed. Rep., 127; T. D. 27000), affirming 136 id., 268; T. D. 25895, followed; T. D. 27343, G. A. 6364.

(e) India rubber submitted to a process of vulcanization, the resultant product being known as soft india rubber, is dutiable under this paragraph. The words "hard rubber" in paragraph 450 preclude therefrom all manufactures of india rubber except the vulcanized india rubber which is known as hard rubber.—T. D. 27425, G. A. 6385.

(f) Rubber bulbs and cotton nets made to fit the same, intended to be used as entireties in pyrographic work, held to be dutiable as manufactures in chief value of rubber.—T. D. 27630, G. A. 6446.

(g) Bone articles that are at once penholders and paper knives are dutiable as manufactures of bone and not as penholders.—T. D. 28347, G. A. 6648.

(h) Scrap or refuse india rubber worn out by use, assorted and ground for convenience in transportation or remanufacturing, is not dutiable as a manufacture of india rubber, but is free under paragraph 579.—T. D. 28360, G. A. 6652.

(i) Balata is one of the great variety of gums generically and commercially described as india rubber and when crude is free of duty as india-rubber crude. Manufactured articles of balata would appear to be dutiable directly as manufactures of india rubber. Abstract 12042 (T. D. 27458) reversed. T. D. 23599, G. A. 5098; T. D. 23966, G. A. 5201, and T. D. 26751, G. A. 6164, in effect overruled.—Earle v. United States (153 Fed. Rep., 773; T. D. 27977).

(j) Braids made of horsehair and straw, horsehair and chip, and horsehair and cuba, respectively, horsehair being the component material of chief value, are dutiable by similitude as braids of the descriptions named in this paragraph.—T. D. 24817, G. A. 5496.

(k) Belting composed of balata and cotton (balata chief value) is dutiable as manufactures of india rubber.—Earle v. United States (153 Fed. Rep., 773; T. D. 27977) applied; T. D. 28298, G. A. 6640.

(l) The provisions in this paragraph relative to willow are intended to cover all manufactures made from willow, even though some of the willow may be known as a variety of chip. The provision in paragraph 206 is for all manufactures of willow without exception, while that in paragraph 449 is for manufactures of chip not otherwise provided for. Baskets made from the chip of willow are accordingly dutiable as manufactures of willow.—Ollesheimer v. United States (158 Fed. Rep., 977; T. D. 28598), affirming 154 id., 166; T. D. 27972.

(a) Articles of india rubber used as substitutes for bath sponges are dutiable as manufactures of india rubber and not as sponges.—Smith v. United States (149 Fed. Rep., 1022; T. D. 27746), affirming 143 id., 691; T. D. 27006, and T. D. 26091, G. A. 5944, followed; T. D. 27843, G. A. 6516.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(b) Crushed bone of the sizes known in trade as Nos. 1 and 2, or larger, is not commercially known as bone dust, is not used expressly for manure, is dutiable as a manufacture of bone, and not free as bone dust or substances expressly used for manure.—T. D. 17256, G. A. 3518.

(c) Dress bones are dutiable as manufactures of bone and not free as horn, horn strips, or horn tips.—T. D. 17933, G. A. 3808.

(f) Marine glue in which india rubber is the component of chief value is dutiable as a manufacture of india rubber and not as glue, as pitch or as a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 16222, G. A. 3101.

(g) Small india rubber pouches intended to be given away with a small clay pipe as an advertising novelty held dutiable as a manufacture of india rubber and not as smokers' articles.—T. D. 16348, G. A. 3177.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 450, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Leather sweat bands for hats are dutiable as manufactures of leather.—T. D. 15723, G. A. 2904; T. D. 19417, G. A. 4156.

(b) Furnished leather needle cases lined with silk, having two flannel leaves and containing hand-sewing needles, are dutiable as entireties and not as coverings. Leather being chief value, they are manufactures of leather.—T. D. 20043, G. A. 4265.

(c) A rug made of Chinese goatskins dressed, cut, matched, and sewed, sold in the form imported and ready for use in that form, is a manufacture of fur.—T. D. 21805, G. A. 4607.

(d) Caps composed of hair or fur of the rabbit are dutiable as manufactures of fur and not under paragraph 432 as hats composed of the fur of the rabbit.—T. D. 22228, G. A. 4708.

(e) Snuff boxes and patch boxes made in chief value of ivory, the lids decorated with miniature portraits painted in water colors, are dutiable as manufactures of ivory and not under paragraph 454 as paintings.—T. D. 19714, G. A. 4213.

(f) Pearl scales for use in making knife handles are dutiable as manufactures of mother-of-pearl and not under paragraph 153 as parts of knives.—T. D. 19768, G. A. 4216.

(g) Strips of pearl commonly called "pearl scales" or "stock pearl," chiefly used for knife handles, but also used on fans, opera glasses, button hooks, and for inlaid work, are dutiable as manufactures of mother-of-pearl and not under paragraph 153 as parts of knives.—T. D. 21346, G. A. 4473; United States v. United States Express Co. (C. C.), (94 Fed. Rep., 642).

(h) Shells having been subjected to a cleansing process by having been placed in chloride of lime to remove the animal matter and offensive smell, the value thereby being increased by about 10 per cent. Held, that even if it be admitted that the shells had undergone no process of manufacture they were properly classified under the last clause of this paragraph by the application of the similitude clause.—T. D. 20210, G. A. 4294; reversed (see T. D. 24720, G. A. 5442, post).

(i) Pieces of hard rubber 4 inches long, intended to be divided and made into mouthpieces for pipes, are dutiable as manufactures of hard rubber and not as smokers' articles.—T. D. 21719, G. A. 4590.

(j) Umbrella handles manufactured from hippopotamus teeth are dutiable as manufactures of ivory and not under paragraph 449 as manufactures of bone or horn. There is no settled, uniform, and unvarying trade designation for such merchandise and the common understanding must prevail. Where the law provides for a manufacture of a specific substance, the term is descriptive and not subject to trade understanding. The fact is, merely, whether the manufactured article is made out of the described substance, not as to its recognition in trade and commerce.—T. D. 22483, G. A. 4764.

(a) Imitation foxtails made of two or more kinds of fur are dutiable as manufactures of fur and are not free under paragraph 562 as furs.—T. D. 22519, G. A. 4775.

(b) The merchandise has undergone a change in its character by reason of labor expended thereon and is not longer fur, but a manufacture of fur.—Id.

(c) Gelatin pads used in transferring manuscripts for manifolding are dutiable as manufactures of gelatin and not under paragraph 398 as surface-coated paper nor under paragraph 23 as gelatin.—T. D. 22601, G. A. 4805.

(d) Ornamental odor or perfume flasks or vinaigrettes of fancy design composed of metal and shell or mother-of-pearl, provided with rings and chains to attach them to the wearer's necklace or chatelaine, and expressly intended for use as articles of ornament or personal adornment in the nature of jewelry, and not being adapted or suitable for use as toys or playthings for the amusement of children, are not dutiable as toys. They were assessed as manufactures of mother-of-pearl or shell.—T. D. 22690, G. A. 4831.

(e) Chatterton's compound, made from tar, resin, and gutta-percha, is found to be composed in chief value of gutta-percha and held dutiable as a manufacture of gutta-percha and not under paragraph 3 as a chemical compound.—T. D. 22871, G. A. 4882.

(f) Certain figures 5 feet 6 inches in height composed of pulverized stone, cement, plaster of Paris, and other materials, and colored and otherwise decorated were properly assessed as articles composed in chief value of earthy or mineral substances, or as manufactures of plaster of Paris, and are not free under paragraph 649 as casts of sculpture for the use of a religious society.—Benziger v. United States (C. C.), (107 Fed. Rep., 257); reversed (192 U. S., 38; T. D. 24977).

(g) The term "wool" as used in the act of 1897 does not include merchandise used for fur purposes and accordingly muffs and boas made from lambskins dressed with the wool on are dutiable as manufactures of fur and not under paragraph 370 as wool wearing apparel.—T. D. 23247, G. A. 4981.

(h) Small leather bags known as leather chatelaine bags, of various sizes, composed of a leather bag having a metal framework and a metal hook and clasp by which it is attached to the belt, girdle, or otherwise to a woman's apparel, or carried on the wrist by means of a chain, and used for purposes of utility rather than ornamentation, are dutiable as manufactures of leather and not as jewelry.—T. D. 23988, G. A. 5206.

(i) A wolf-skin rug with a lining and border composed of woolen cloth, fur being the component material of chief value, is dutiable under this paragraph and not as manufactures made wholly or in part of wool under paragraph 366 nor as rugs for floors under paragraph 382.—T. D. 24301, G. A. 5301.

(j) Vases and statuettes made of plaster of Paris are dutiable as manufactures of plaster of Paris and not as earthenware.—Bing v. United States (121 Fed. Rep., 194), reversing T. D. 23054, G. A. 4924, followed; T. D. 24443, G. A. 5343.

(a) Shells that are in their natural state, except so far as they may have been advanced in value or condition by being cleansed from offensive and extraneous matter by chemical baths, are not dutiable as manufactures of shell, but are free as shells in their natural state. But when such shells have been further advanced by polishing or grinding they are dutiable as manufactures of shell.—Schoenemann v. United States (119 Fed Rep., 584), reversing 115 Fed. Rep., 842, and T. D. 20210, G. A. 4294, followed; T. D. 24720, G. A. 5442.

(b) The provision for manufactures in chief value of shell is more specific than the provision in paragraph 408 for articles composed wholly or in part of beads, and shell and bead curtains (shell chief value) are dutiable as manufactures in chief value of shell.—T. D. 24736, G. A. 5451.

(c) Squirrel skins sewed together with a temporary muslin lining, intended for the purpose of holding the skins in place and protecting them, which is removed before they are finally cut to pattern to be used in making or lining garments, are dutiable at 20 per cent as "furs, dressed on the skin but not made up into articles" under paragraph 426 and not as manufactures of fur at 25 per cent under this paragraph.—T. D. 24746, G. A. 5457.

(d) Turtle shells from which the entrails, bones, and flesh have been removed and which have been treated with arsenic, dried, and then polished are dutiable as shells otherwise manufactured.—T. D. 24809, G. A. 5493.

(e) Scraps or skivers of leather made cohesive by the use of starch and other substances and pressed into sheets held dutiable as leather and not as manufactures of leather.—T. D. 25021, G. A. 5589.

(f) Gelatin in sheets, used for making theatrical lights, printing, etc., and which has been changed in name, character, and use from the ordinary gelatin of commerce, is properly dutiable under this paragraph as a manufacture of gelatin and not under paragraph 23 as gelatin. T. D. 16837, G. A. 3356, overruled.—T. D. 25236, G. A. 5657.

(g) Composition statuary not dutiable as plaster of Paris.—T. D. 25271, G. A. 5675.

(h) Gelatin films or strips with pictures thereon produced by photographic process, used in moving-picture machines, are dutiable under this paragraph.—T. D. 25426, G. A. 5723.

(i) Snowshoes made of wood and rawhide (rawhide chief value) are not dutiable under this paragraph, rawhide not being leather.—T. D. 25491, G. A. 5749.

(j) Shell cameos are dutiable as manufactures of shell.—T. D. 25512, G. A. 5763.

(k) A fur coat lined with wool held dutiable as clothing composed in part of wool, although fur is the component material of chief value therein.—T. D. 25629, G. A. 5799.

(l) Watch guards composed of sections of nickel-plated steel and of leather found to be composed in chief value of leather.—T. D. 25990, G. A. 5903.

(m) Plaster-of-Paris figures ornamented with gold leaf, the gold leaf being the component material of chief value, are not dutiable as manufactures of plaster of Paris, but as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 26098, G. A. 5951.

(n) Small pieces of mother-of-pearl cut into forms suitable for inlaying violin keys and other parts of musical instruments are dutiable as manufactures of mother-of-pearl and not as precious stones or imitations thereof.—T. D. 26506, G. A. 6074.

(a) Small shells, each crudely pierced with a single hole for stringing purposes, polished by the action of an acid bath in the process of cleansing and not by abrasion, are free of duty as shells in their natural state.—T. D. 26585, G. A. 6096.

(b) Pierced Tasmanian shells strung on cotton cords about 6 feet in length, knotted at the ends and not fitted with clasp, snap, or other metal device incident and usual to necklaces, are not commonly known as jewelry and are dutiable as manufactures of shell.—United States v. Hawaii Company (2 Hawaiian Rep., 320; T. D. 26778), affirming T. D. 25663, G. A. 5810, followed; T. D. 26798, G. A. 6175.

(d) Thin sheets of colored gelatin, designed for use in the manufacture of advertising novelties, held to be dutiable as manufactures of gelatin.—T. D. 27588, G. A. 6433.

(m) Necklaces composed of glass beads and perforated shells strung on threads are manufactures of shell and not manufactures of glass or jewelry.—T. D. 12122, G. A. 984.

(a) Certain shell necklaces held to be dutiable as manufactures of shell.—T. D. 13342, G. A. 1722.

(c) Leather cases containing shell opera glasses are dutiable with their contents as entireties as usual coverings.—T. D. 11412, G. A. 695.

(d) Rosaline articles consisting of bits of pink shell about the size of a pea, cut into balls, hearts, or other shapes suitable for use in the manufacture of jewelry, are manufactures of shell and not jewelry.—T. D. 10929, G. A. 424.

(e) Perles rosaline are manufactures of shell.—T. D. 12034, G. A. 947.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(f) Pieces of ivory for the keys of pianos and organs, matched to certain octaves, sold to manufacturers who scrape them to make them adhere to wood and then glue them to wood, were charged with a duty as manufactnres of ivory. The importer claimed that they were liable to a less duty as musical instruments. In a suit by him to recover alleged excess of duties the court charged the jury that if the articles were made on purpose to be used in pianos and organs, and were used exclusively in them, they were dutiable as musical instruments and not as manufactures of ivory. Held, that this was error, and that the articles, as imported, were manufactures of ivory.—Robertson v. Gerdaw (132 U. S., 454).

(g) Lambskin coat linings with the wool on are dutiable as articles of fur and not as dressed furs on the skin.—T. D. 10324, G. A. 45.

(h) Sheepskin in crosses assessed as articles made of fur and claimed to be dutiable as dried skins or as furs dressed on the skin.—T. D. 10883, G. A. 378.

(i) Linings for cloaks and coats consistiug of skins dressed, dyed, and sewed together, invoiced as "dyed tallapin sacs," are articles made of fur.—T. D. 10913, G. A. 408.

(j) Pieces of lambskin sewn together temporarily for safety in transportation and also for the purpose of presenting a more inviting appearance to purchasers are not articles made of fur, but are dutiable as dressed furs on the skin.—Fleet v. United States (148 Fed. Rep., 335; T. D. 26824).

(k) Shoe vamps are dutiable as manufactures of leather and not as leather not specially provided for as dressed upper leather.—T. D. 10342, G. A. 63; reversed, In re Salomon (C. C.), (48 Fed. Rep., 287).

(l) Leather bead cases dutiable as manufactures of leather and not as similar to pocket books.—T. D. 10510, G. A. 160.

(m) Leather and india-rubber footballs held dutiable as manufactures of leather and not as manufactures of india rubber.—T. D. 10557, G. A. 207.

(n) Photographic albums bound in leather, their interior part consisting of paper, are dutiable under this paragraph and not at 25 per cent as books, etc., at 20 per cent as blank books, etc., nor at 15 per cent as manufactures of paper.—T. D. 10347, G. A. 68; T. D 10774, G A 327; Liebenroth v Robertson (33 Fed. Rep, 457)

(o) Papier-maché violin cases empty are dutiable as manufactures of papier-maché and not as parts of musical instruments.—T. D. 10321, G. A. 42.

(a) Globes dutiable as papier-maché.—Fox v. Cadwalader (C. C.), (42 Fed. Rep., 209).

(b) Slabs or strips of pearl shell known as "mother-of-pearl scales for knife handles" are manufactures of shell.—T. D. 11581, G. A. 756.

(c) Shell-covered opera glasses composed of glass, shell, and metal, shell being the component material of chief value, are dutiable as manufactures of shell.—T. D. 12923, G. A. 1474; Young v. Spalding (24 Fed. Rep., 87).

(d) Shell-covered opera glasses made of shell, metal, and glass, the shell constituting two-thirds of the value, are dutiable as manufactures of shell and not as manufactures of glass, or of which glass is the component material of chief value, nor as manufactures of metal not specially enumerated or provided for.—United States v. Manasse (C. C. A.), (56 Fed. Rep., 828).

(e) In estimating the value of shell opera glasses, the value of the material should be taken at the time they are put together to form the completed glass.—Seeberger v. Hardy (150 U. S., 420).

(f) The question whether the opera glasses as falling within the description of paragraph 216 (1883) as manufactures composed wholly or in part of metal is not raised by the record, and no instruction based upon that interpretation having been asked of the court below, this court does not find it necessary to express an opinion on that subject.—Id.

1897 451. Masks, composed of paper or pulp, thirty-five per centum ad valorem.

1894 355. Masks, composed of paper or pulp, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

1890 463. Masks, composed of paper or pulp, thirty-five per centum ad valorem.

1883 [Not enumerated. Dutiable under paragraphs 407 or 433.]

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 451, ACT OF 1897.

(g) Toy masks, composed in chief value of paper or pulp and in part of wool, are dutiable as masks composed of paper or pulp and not as manufactures in part of wool under paragraph 366 nor as toys under paragraph 418. The provision for masks composed of paper or pulp in paragraph 451 held to be more specific than the provision in paragraph 366 for manufactures in part of wool.—T. D. 23425, G. A. 5050.

(h) Masks composed of paper or pulp and having attached thereto a flowing beard of wool, paper or pulp being the component material of chief value, are dutiable as masks and not as manufactures of wool.—T. D. 13975, G. A. 2080.

1897 452. Matting made of cocoa fiber or rattan, six cents per square yard; mats made of cocoa fiber or rattan, four cents per square foot.

1894 356. Matting and mats made of cocoa fiber or rattan, twenty per centum ad valorem.

1890 464. Matting made of cocoa-fiber or rattan, twelve cents per square yard; mats made of cocoa-fiber or rattan, eight cents per square foot.

1883 [Not enumerated. Dutiable under paragraph 432, page 427.]

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 452, ACT OF 1897.

(i) The present tariff like previous acts makes a clear distinction, for dutiable purposes, between articles of "matting" and "mats" of various kinds, and this distinction is uniformly recognized in trade and commerce.—T. D. 20923, G. A. 4396.

(a) Floor mats made of cocoa fiber are dutiable as "mats made of cocoa fiber" and not as "matting."—T. D. 20923, G. A. 4396.

(b) Any article to be used as a mat on the floor, made of cocoa fiber or rattan, that is a finished product and ready to be used in the condition in which it is imported is properly dutiable as a mat regardless of its size, the way in which it is woven, or the particular use to which it is to be put. "Billiard surrounds," so called, woven in one piece so as to form a runner aronnd a billiard table are dutiable as mats and not as matting.—T. D. 25164, G. A. 5625.

453. Musical instruments or parts thereof, pianoforte actions and parts thereof, strings for musical instruments not otherwise enumerated, cases for musical instruments, pitch pipes, tuning forks, tuning hammers, and metronomes; strings for musical instruments composed wholly or in part of steel or other metal, all the foregoing, forty-five per centum ad valorem.

1894

1890 [Not enumerated. Dutiable according to material.]

469. Musical instruments of all kinds, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

671. Catgut strings, or gut-cord, for musical instruments. (Free).

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 453, ACT OF 1897.

(c) Finished gut strings for musical instruments dutiable as "strings for musical instruments not otherwise enumerated" and not as manufactnres of catgut, etc., not specially provided for nor free as catgut, etc., unmanufactured.—T. D. 18733, G. A. 4046.

(f) Unpainted pieces of wood, sawed and shaped into the form of necks for violins and sold and adapted for use as violin necks, are dutiable as parts of musical instruments.—T. D. 22141, G. A. 4693.

(g) A toy is an article designed as a plaything for children, and violins and accordions capable of being played upon as musical instruments by one who has learned to play such instruments are not toys and are dutiable as musical instruments regardless of their size, the quality of their tone, their price, or the cheapness of their construction.—T. D. 22765, G. A. 4855.

(h) There is no commercial understanding as to violins and accordions that would indicate which are and which are not toys.—T. D. 22765, G. A. 4855.

(i) Pianoforte hammers, composed of wool, felt, and wood, are specially provided for in this paragraph and are not therefore dutiable under paragraph 366 as manufactures of wool.—T. D. 23170, G. A. 4960.

(j) Graphophones and phonographs are not musical instruments, and cylinders for the same are not dutiable as parts of musical instruments, but are dutiable according to the components of chief value. In this case the component of chief value found to be wax and the instruments to be dutiable under paragraph 448 as manufactures of wax.—T. D. 23195, G. A. 4971.

(a) Perforated strips of cardboard used in orchestrions and some kinds of piano organs as part of the sound-producing mechanism are dutiable as parts of musical instruments and not as sheet music.—T. D. 24803, G. A. 5489.

(b) Certain so-called "piccolos" or music boxes operated by the turning of a hand crank held to be dutiable as musical instruments. Alarm clocks fitted with a musical attachment in lieu of a gong or bell are not musical instruments but are dutiable as clocks.—T. D. 25310, G. A. 5685.

(d) Manufactures of granadilla wood, spruce, and maple advanced to such an extent as to fit them solely for use in the manufacture of musical instruments are dutiable under this paragraph and not under paragraph 198.—T. D. 25766, G. A. 5847.

(e) Pieces of granadilla wood, rough-turned and bored, designed for use in the manufacture of clarinets, but requiring several further processes of manufacture before they become parts of musical instruments, are dutiable as manufactures of wood and not as parts of musical instruments.—T. D. 27207, G. A. 6312.

(f) Full-sized violins, designed for and intended to be used by children in play and so flimsily and cheaply constructed as to preclude their use as musical instruments by students or musicians, valued at less than 2 marks each, are dutiable as toys. Violins valued at 2 marks net each and upward, held to be musical instruments.—T. D. 27557, G. A. 6417.

(h) Foochow gongs or tamtams made of composition metal dutiable as musical instruments and not as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 18726, G. A. 4039.

(i) Cheap music boxes being toys and musical instruments are dutiable as musical instruments and not as toys, because this paragraph does not contain the words "not otherwise specially provided for" as does paragraph 321.—T. D. 15722, G. A. 2903.

(m) Tuning hammers for autoharps, the handle of wood and the shank of metal, are dutiable as musical instruments and not as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 18154, G. A. 3911.

(n) Merchandise in the shape of a lyre about 18 inches high and 8 inches in width with rods and guides for turning and holding leaves of music is no more a part of a musical instrument than the music it holds and turns. It was assessed as a manufacture of metal.—T. D. 17276, G. A. 3538.

(o) Piano locks are not parts of musical instruments.—T. D. 17489, G. A. 3628.

(b) Chin holders and chin-holder pads composed respectively of metal and silk are not dutiable as musical instruments.—T. D. 10488, G. A. 138.

(c) Heads of violins, bridges, and tail pieces, and strings for violins and zithers are not dutiable as musical instruments but as manufactures of metal or of wood according to materials of which composed.—T. D. 10320, G. A. 41.

(h) Violin cases are not dutiable as musical instruments as being parts of violins, but at 100 per cent under section 7, act of 1883.—T. D. 10251, G. A. 29.

(i) Empty violin cases not dutiable as musical instruments.—T. D. 10321, G. A. 42.

(m) Violin boxes composed of wood, invoiced separately from the violins though packed with the violins, are dutiable as manufactures of wood and are not subject to the duty of 100 per cent under the act of 1883, section 7.—T. D. 10223, G. A. 1.

454. Paintings in oil or water colors, pastels, pen and ink drawings, and statuary, not specially provided for in this Act, twenty per centum ad valorem; but the term "statuary" as used in this Act shall be under-1897 stood to include only such statuary as is cut, carved, or otherwise wrought by hand from a solid block or mass of marble, stone, or alabaster, or from metal, and as is the professional production of a statuary or sculptor only.

575. Paintings, in oil or water colors, original drawings and sketches, and artists' proofs of etchings and engravings, and statuary, not otherwise provided for in this Act, but the term "statuary" as herein used
1894 shall be understood to include only professional productions, whether round or in relief, in marble, stone, alabaster, wood, or metal, of a statuary or sculptor, and the word "painting," as used in this Act, shall not be understood to include such as are made wholly or in part by stenciling or other mechanical process. (Free.)

465. Paintings, in oil or water colors, and statuary, not otherwise provided for in this act, fifteen per centum ad valorem; but the term "stat-
1890 uary" as herein used shall be understood to include only such statuary as is cut, carved, or otherwise wrought by hand from a solid block or mass of marble, stone, or alabaster, or from metal, and as in the professional production of a statuary or sculptor only.

470. Paintings, in oil or water colors, and statuary not otherwise provided for, thirty per centum ad valorem. But the term "statuary," as 1883 used in the laws now in force imposing duties on foreign importations, shall be understood to include professional productions of a statuary or of a sculptor only.

(a) Statuary in marble, claimed to be the conception of a deceased professional sculptor and reproduced from the originals under his direction, found upon inspection and the testimony of distinguished professional sculptors and experts not to be "the professional productions of a statuary or sculptor only," but copies or reproductions executed by artisans or by mechanical means. Articles produced in an establishment operated and managed by a person exercising the profession of a sculptor may be the productions of a professional sculptor, yet not the professional productions of a statuary or sculptor only.—T. D. 19353, G. A. 4144.

(b) "Paintings in oil or water colors" imported from Germany after the issue of the President's proclamation (Department circular No. 93, T. D. 19405), having reference to the reciprocal commercial agreement with the French Republic, are not entitled under the "most favored nation" clause to the reduced rates of duty provided for similar articles which are the product of France, in the absence of a special commercial agreement placing German products on a like basis, and duly promulgated by Executive proclamation.—T. D. 20351, G. A. 4310.

(c) Mineral or vitrified colors are not included within the term "oil or water" colors.—T. D. 21408, G. A. 4494.

(d) Frames attached to dutiable paintings are dutiable according to their component material of chief value and not at the rate provided for the paintings, either (1) on the ground that they are part and parcel of the paintings, the whole dutiable as an entirety, or (2) on the ground that they are usual coverings and dutiable at the same rate as the paintings under section 19, act of June 10, 1890. Query: As to whether the same rate would govern with regard to frames of paintings which are free?—T. D. 21816, G. A. 4608.

(e) It having been the uniform practice since 1866 in the case of dutiable oil paintings in frames to assess a separate and independent duty on the frames, tariff laws since enacted must be construed with reference to such practice; and the word "painting" can not be construed to include the frames in which such paintings are imported nor are the frames to be assessed as coverings under section 19, act of June 10, 1890, but they are to be classified as separate importations and are dutiable under paragraph 208 as manufactures of wood. Reversing 91 Fed. Rep., 523.—U. S. v. Hensel (98 Fed. Rep., 418).

(f) What productions are to be deemed professional productions of a statuary or sculptor it is difficult to state in general terms so as to embrace every article of the kind. It is sufficiently accurate, however, for this case to say that the definition embraces such works of art as are the result of the artist's own creation or are copies of them made under his direction and supervision, as distinguished from the productions of the manufacturer or mechanic. The definition does not limit the professional productions to those of the sculptor's creation. An artist's copies of antique masterpieces are works of art of as high a grade as those executed by the same hand from original models of modern sculptors.—Merritt v. Tiffany (132 U. S., 167); Tutton v. Viti (108 U. S., 312).

(g) Statues cut, carved, and wrought by hand from a solid block of marble by a person who is a graduate of a recognized school of art are "statuary, the work of a professional sculptor," and are dutiable under this paragraph without regard to the purpose for which they are to be used, the degree of artistic merit they possess, or the fact that they are copied from the works of other sculptors. Reversing the Board.—Townsend v. United States (108 Fed. Rep., 801).

(a) The term "statuary" is not limited to figures "in the round," that is, in full relief or insulated in every part. Held, accordingly, that sculptured figures partly insulated and partly in high relief are properly classifiable as statuary.—T. D. 23376, G. A. 5029.

(b) Photographs mounted on canvas stretchers and painted over in oil, so that the photograph is entirely obliterated, are dutiable at the rate of 20 per cent ad valorem under this paragraph as paintings in oil and not as manufactures of paper. The fact that the outline for the guidance of the artist who did the painting was produced by a mechanical process rather than by hand can not operate to change its present character. The finished work is an oil painting.—T. D. 23721, G. A. 5137.

(c) Statues cut, carved, or otherwise wrought by hand from a solid block or mass of marble, alabaster, or other material specified in this paragraph, by a professional sculptor or under his direction or supervision, are entitled to entry under this paragraph without regard to the purpose for which they are to be used, the degree of artistic merit they possess, or the fact that they are copied from the work of other sculptors.—Townsend v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 442), affirming 108 id., 801 and Sibbel v. United States (124 Fed. Rep., 105), reversing T. D. 21481, G. A. 4520, and in effect overruling T. D. 23029, G. A. 4922, followed; T. D. 23955, G. A. 5196.

(d) A screen made of wood, silk, and cotton, the panels of which are ornamented with landscapes and figures painted in oil, is dutiable as a painting in oil or water colors under this paragraph and not as a manufacture of cotton. United States v. Perry (146 U. S., 71) and other decisions cited and compared.—T. D. 24015, G. A. 5212.

(e) A bronze bust produced by the so-called cire perdue process, in which the statue is the result of a casting from the sculptor's original model in clay and wax, is not statuary wrought by hand within the meaning of this paragraph.—Tiffany v. United States (71 Fed. Rep., 691) followed; T. D. 24016, G. A. 5213.

(f) Statuettes are dutiable under provision for "statuary" in this paragraph, and without regard to their value, if produced as required by said paragraph.—T. D. 24047, G. A. 5224.

(g) The term "statuary" as used in section 3 and this paragraph embraces only figures "in the round," that is, in full relief or substantially so. Basreliefs in marble executed by a professional sculptor are not entitled to classification thereunder, but are dutiable as manufactures of marble under paragraph 115. T. D. 23376 distinguished.—T. D. 24048, G. A. 5225.

(h) An affidavit by the maker of a statue stating with respect to his professional status merely that he is "a professional artist" is not, when uncorroborated, sufficient evidence to establish his status as a "statuary or sculptor" within the meaning of this paragraph.—T. D. 24069, G. A. 5231.

(j) The term "statuary" as used in this paragraph has reference only to representations of the human or animal form and does not include representations of inanimate things or merely conventional or architectural objects, such as marble vases, pedestals, and bases.—T. D. 24758, G. A. 5462.

(k) A person who possesses artistic education and the ability to make statuary which gives a pleasing and artistic impression to the eye, though neither his education nor his skill be of a high order, is a "sculptor or statuary" within the meaning of this paragraph. The existence of such qualifications may be established by any competent evidence. Direct evidence bearing upon a sculptor's education or reputation or a certificate from a known sculptor, while valuable, is not indispensable. The statue itself is the best evidence of the training and skill of the sculptor, and since it need not be work that will satisfy a connoisseur, the inference that it was produced by a sculptor in the tariff sense is justified if it possess qualities that convey "a pleasing and artistic impression" to the average man. Marble and alabaster statuary not accompanied with certificates or other direct evidence of execution by a sculptor, but which in the examiner's opinion equaled or was better than the work passed upon in the Townsend case (infra), held to be "statuary, * * * the professional production of a statuary or sculptor," dutiable at 15 or 20 per cent ad valorem under various provisions and not at 50 per cent ad valorem as manufactures of marble or alabaster under paragraph 115.—United States v. Townsend (113 Fed. Rep., 442), affirming 108 Fed. Rep., 801 and reversing T. D. 21481, G. A. 4520, followed; T. D. 24822, G. A. 5501.

(a) A bust made from lapis lazuli held to be dutiable as statuary of stone and not as a precious stone cut.—T. D. 24987, G. A. 5572.

(c) A terra-cotta bas-relief is not within the terms of this provision, a bas-relief not being statuary within the meaning of the law and the material not being either marble, stone, alabaster, or metal.—T. D. 24247, G. A. 5286.

(d) Marble statues, each in three pieces, carved from solid blocks of marble, held to be statuary within the meaning of this paragraph.—United States v. Perry (133 Fed., 841; T. D. 25810), affirming T. D. 24986, G. A. 5571.

(e) Pictures painted by hand on cotton canvas or tapestry in aniline colors are not paintings in oil or water colors. The so-called tabernacle composed of gilded wood with figures painted upon the doors is not a painting within the meaning of this provision.—T. D. 26183, G. A. 5974.

(f) Paintings by hand in oil upon flax fabrics are dutiable under the provision herein for paintings in oil.—T. D. 26242, G. A. 6003.

(g) A marble fountain, so called, consisting of a group representing two reclining human figures with a surrounding basin carved in marble in the form of a shell, the figures constituting the most prominent and significant feature of the work, held to be statuary within the meaning of this paragraph and section 3. Accessory appliances for throwing streams of water over the group and illuminating it to heighten its effect, but which are not incorporated with it structurally, held to be separate articles for duty purposes.—T. D. 26247, G. A. 6008.

(h) Articles in the shape of folders about 9 by 6 inches in size, composed of silk and paper (silk chief value), ornamented on the front and back with floral and other designs in colors, are not dutiable as paintings in oil or water colors under the provisions of this paragraph, but are dutiable at the rate of 50 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 391 as manufactures of which silk is the component material of chief value.—T. D. 26631, G. A. 6121.

(i) A marble panel upon which are carved two figures of angels, the figures themselves being largely in full relief and preserving substantially their proportions in all directions, held to be statuary within the meaning of this paragraph.—T. D. 26967, G. A. 6252.

(j) Certain metal statuary made by a process in which the metal comes from the mold in an extremely rough state, having upon its surface pro-tuberances and incrustations which require that the entire surface of the statue must be carefully chiseled by the tool of the sculptor, the incrustations and protuberances removed and practically all the detail worked out by hand, is dutiable as statuary "wrought by hand * * * from metal" within the meaning of this paragraph and the reciprocal commercial agreement with Italy (T. D. 22373), and not as manufactures of metal under paragraph 193. Where certain detached marble bases are imported with statuary, and each base is shown to have been made for a particular statue, and in many, if not all, instances carved from ancient marble selected to match the patina or tone of the statue, the statue and its appropriate base form an entirety dutiable as statuary.—T. D. 27302, G. A. 6346.

(b) Hand-painted paper hangings are dutiable under the specific provision for paper in paragraph 402 and not as hand paintings under this paragraph.—T. D. 28157, G. A. 6586.

(c) Fire screens composed of bamboo frames tied together with silk strings, the frames inclosing hand-painted cotton panels, are dutiable as manufactures of cotton and not as paintings.—T. D. 28179, G. A. 6598.

(d) A circular object in several pieces, described as a "round cistern with haute relief, dancing cupids in Carrara marble," the prominent sculptural work thereon being children's figures in almost full relief, held to be statuary.—United States v. American Express Company (139 Fed. Rep., 89; T. D. 26403).

(e) Splash mats or screens made of wood strips joined or sewn together, on which the pictures have been produced by stenciling and hand painting, the decoration being secondary to their employment as articles of utility, are not classifiable as paintings.—Woolworth v. United States (152 Fed. Rep., 483; T. D. 27853).

(f) A statue of Bellona, by Gerome, made of ivory and cast bronze, the ivory predominating in value and the bronze in quantity, is excluded, by reason of the materials of which it is composed and the method of its production, from the provisions of this paragraph.—Tiffany v. United States (71 Fed. Rep., 691) and T. D. 24016, G. A. 5213, followed; abstract 6643 (T. D. 26390); reversed without opinion in Tiffany v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 168; T. D. 27982).

(g) Ceilings of wood, taken from an Italian palace, painted by hand, held to be dutiable as paintings in oil.—White v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 855).

(h) An antique ewer and basin, enameled in colors by a process not now known, and of great value, held to be dutiable under the provision for paintings.—Amerman v. United States (124 Fed. Rep., 298).

(i) Evidence found insufficient to show professional production of certain statuary.— Abraham v. United States (134 Fed. Rep., 1022; T. D. 25828).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(j) Paintings in oil colors upon pieces of silk are free and not dutiable as manufactures of silk.—T. D. 15831, G. A. 2931.

(k) Imitation tapestries painted in oil colors by free-hand without the aid of stenciling are free and not dutiable as manufactures of cotton.—T. D. 16429, G. A. 3218.

(l) Water-color paintings by leading Japanese artists, painted or mounted on paper screens, valuable as paintings and never used for the purposes of screens, are free and not dutiable as manufactures of paper.—T. D. 17637, G. A. 3685.

(a) Oil paintings in frames separately specified on the invoice were imported. The frames are dutiable according to the component material of chief value.—T. D. 17499, G. A. 3638.

(c) Busts and figures of Margherita, Faust, Napoleon, with accompanying pedestals, which are reproductions in alabaster or marble by amateurs or artisans of well-known designs by statuaries or sculptors, are not the professional productions of a statuary or sculptor only and are not free. Assessed for duty under paragraph 105 as manufactures of alabaster or marble.—T. D. 17046, G. A. 3427.

(d) Two bronze busts (of Adam Smith and General Grant) cast under the immediate direction and supervision of a professional sculptor in molds made from his original conception, the first for the Improved Order of Red Men, the second for presentation to the commissioners of Golden Gate Park, are free as the professional productions of a statuary or sculptor and also under paragraphs 585 and 688 and are not dutiable as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 17348, G. A. 3568.

(e) Statues, statuettes, and busts in marble, alabaster, and bronze of familiar subjects, reproduced by amateurs, artisans, or mechanical means, are not "professional productions of a statuary or sculptor only."—T. D. 18628, G. A. 4026.

(g) Two carved or sculptured figures in oak wood, representing adoring angels, of conventional design, produced in France from drawings executed by a professional architect and sculptor, held to be free as statuary, the professional productions of a statuary or sculptor, and not dutiable as manufactures of wood.—Morris European & American Express Co. v. United States (C. C.), (94 Fed. Rep., 643).

(h) Ornamental frames in which paintings are imported are not free.—Hensel v. U. S. (C. C.), (99 Fed. Rep., 722).

(i) Carved figures or statues in wood, made by a professional statuary or sculptor from designs made by another professional statuary or sculptor, shown by full-sized drawings, in the making of which statues it was necessary to first model them in clay and then take a plaster cast, from which the work in wood was done, are "statuary" entitled to free entry. 94 Fed. Rep., 643, affirmed.—United States v. Morris European & American Express Co. (C. C. A.), (101 Fed. Rep., 111).

(j) Bronze statues which are first casts from original models by sculptors of repute, the statues being "edited" or cast by bronze founders under the supervision and direction of the sculptor who executed the model, and chased or finished by the sculptor himself, are free of duty under this paragraph as statuary which is the "professional production * * * of a statuary or sculptor."—T. D. 26480, G. A. 6072.

(k) Drawings made with india ink, white paint, and a lead pencil were assessed as assimilated to paintings and claimed to be free as manuscripts. Protest overruled.—T. D. 11603, G. A. 779.

(a) Designs of flowers, landscapes, vines, and geometrical figures, sketched with a pencil and finished in water colors, assessed as water colors and claimed to be free as manuscript. Protest overruled.—T. D. 11185, G. A. 544.

(b) Enameled painting on copper is not a painting in oil or water color.—T. D. 11834, G. A. 825.

(c) Paintings in oil on copper plates held dutiable as paintings in oil.—T. D. 14230, G. A. 2194.

(d) Thin cards composed of gelatin mixed with zinc white (gelatin chief value), with paintings thereon in oil and water colors, the paintings costing upward of four times the value of the substance, are dutiable as paintings.—T. D. 13067, G. A. 1572.

(e) The Immaculate Conception, an oil painting on copper in an enameled frame of onyx, is dutiable as a painting and not as a plaque.—T. D. 12434, G. A. 1172.

(g) Oil paintings on shells mounted in velvet mats set in gilt frames, presenting the appearance of ordinary oil paintings, are oil paintings.—T. D. 11677, G. A. 782.

(h) Sketches painted in water colors on paper, intended as guides for designers at the Arnold Paint Works and cast aside after being once used, are dutiable as paintings and not free as not being merchandise.—T. D. 12310, G. A. 1082.

(i) An oil painting on a flat piece of porcelain about 12 inches long, 8 inches wide, and one-fourth of an inch thick, the painting done by hand and the piece subsequently glazed and fired, the painting being the valuable feature, held dutiable as a painting.—T. D. 13074, G. A. 1679.

(j) Pen and ink sketches held dutiable as assimilated to paintings.—T. D. 13299, G. A. 1679.

(k) Water-color paintings on silk, being silk screens (silk chief value), are not oil paintings.—T. D. 13308, G. A. 1688.

(m) Porcelain plaques held not dutiable as paintings.—T. D. 13427, G. A. 1764.

(q) Painted splasher mats with pockets held dutiable as paintings in oil or water colors.—T. D. 14915, G. A. 2544.

(a) A folding screen made of leather and wood, the panels painted in oil in various designs, held not dutiable as paintings in oil.—T. D. 14849, G. A. 2532.

(b) Paintings in oil colors combined with lithographic prints on plates or pieces of tin are dutiable as paintings in oil and not as lithographic prints.—T. D. 15413, G. A. 2807.

(c) Artistic paintings in oil upon a plain slab of porcelain, intended and used solely for ornamental purposes and not susceptible to any other use, and whose valuable and distinctive feature is the painting and not the porcelain, are dutiable as paintings and not as porcelain wares painted. T. D. 13074, G. A. 1579, sustained.—In re Davis Collamore (C. C.), (53 Fed. Rep., 1006).

(d) Fans composed of silk and bone, upon which are executed artistic paintings in water colors, of high value and merit, and which are displayed as ornaments and not used as fans, are dutiable as paintings in oil or water colors and not as manufactures of silk. T. D. 12797, G. A. 1393, reversed.—Tiffany v. United States (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 736).

(e) Paintings in oil upon panels of papier-maché, to go into the frames of a false door, are dutiable as paintings and not as manufactures of wood.—Godwin v. United States (C. C.), (71 Fed Rep., 950).

(f) Articles composed of several tiles put together in rows, their faces forming a surface on which a picture is sketched by free-hand with brown mineral paint prepared with oil or water, which is then fired and by vitrification made blue, the whole being then framed, are dutiable as painting and not as tiles.—Richard v. United States (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 517); reversed by C. C. A. (99 Fed. Rep., 268).

(g) Japanese wall decorations made of paper, or of paper and cotton, or of narrow strips of bamboo joined together with cotton cord, and upon which representations of flowers, of birds, or of human figures are painted in water colors, the large bodies of colors being applied by stenciling, while the features of the work which are delicate and ornamental and give character to the article are by hand, are dutiable as paintings and not as manufactures of wood, as manufactures of paper and cotton, nor as manufactures of paper. Affirming the decision of the Circuit Court.—United States v. China & Japan Trading Co. (C. C. A.), (58 Fed. Rep., 690).

(h) Frames containing oil paintings are separately dutiable according to the material of chief value and not with the paintings.—T. D. 12811, G. A. 1407.

(i) The established practice of the Treasury Department has for years been to separately classify paintings and frames.—T. D. 3081; T. D. 3375; T. D. 8006; T. D. 9146; T. D. 12811, G. A. 1407; T. D. 12812, G. A. 1408.

(j) Framed oil paintings with outer frames of wood painted black and also having tablets of wood attached, the value of the pictures, picture frames, outer frames, and tablets, separately specified, are dutiable separately, the pictures as oil paintings and the frames and tablets as manufactures of wood. The outside frames and tablets are not the usual and necessary coverings for oil paintings.—T. D. 14765, G. A. 2487.

(m) The absence of a consular certificate that the figure is the professional production of a statuary or sculptor is not sufficient ground for excluding it from classification under this paragraph.—T. D. 11394, G. A. 677.

(a) Casts or molded figures in the form of busts, statuettes, and groups representing subjects such as "Marguerite," "The Tempest," "Mignon," "Departure for the War," "The Morning," "Louis XV," "The Fisherman," etc., composed of bronze or composition metal, held not to be the professional productions of a statuary or sculptor.—T. D. 12839, G. A. 1435.

(b) Certain bronze statuary cast in molds made from original models in clay held to be the professional productions of a statuary or sculptor.—T. D. 13059, G. A. 1564.

(c) A bronze statue of Augustus Caesar, of metal, cast in a mold and chased and wrought by hand, found to be the professional production of a statuary or sculptor only.—T. D. 13069, G. A. 1574.

(d) A plain bronze sarcophagus resting upon a plain bronze pedestal, the two measuring about 10 feet. Leaning against the pedestal is the bronze figure of a woman. The pedestal is the pedestal of the sarcophagus and not of the woman statue. Held, that the statue is dutiable as the professional production of a statuary or sculptor.—T. D. 13863, G. A. 2016.

(e) Marble, stone, alabaster, or metal are the only materials of which statuary can be made so as to bring it within the descriptive terms of this paragraph.—T. D. 16653, G. A. 3298.

(g) Certain bronze statuettes held not to be statuary.—T. D. 11222, G. A. 581.

(h) Plaster statues of "Our Lady of Lourdes" held not to be dutiable under this paragraph.—T. D. 11224, G. A. 583.

(i) Barbedienne bronzes are not the productions of a statuary or sculptor.—T. D. 11552, G. A. 727.

(j) A marble statue of Psyche with wings detached and provided with pins for fastening them to the statue held not to be statuary. Statuary cut from a solid block is never sawed into parts for convenience of transportation.—T. D. 12453, G. A. 1191.

(k) One pair of bronze, ormolu and iron firedogs or andirons held not to belong to the class of articles known as statuary.—T. D. 12824, G. A. 1420.

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(n) The professional productions of a statuary or sculptor include all the artistic work of a professional statuary or sculptor produced in the exercise of his profession, whether the creations of the artist or copies of the creations of others.—Viti v. Tutton (14 Fed. Rep., 241).

(o) Such importations are dutiable at 10 per cent and not at 50 per cent as manufactures of marble not otherwise provided for.—Id.

(p) Marble statues executed by professional sculptors in the studio and under the direction of another professional sculptor, whether from models just made by a professional sculptor or from antique models whose author is unknown, are "professional productions of a statuary or sculptor."—Tutton v. Viti (108 U. S., 312).

(a) A imported certain pictures painted by hand on porcelain. When they are framed or in any manner set, the porcelain, which, being manufactured only as a ground upon which to obtain a good surface to paint and not for any independent use, is obscured from view, constitutes of itself an article of china ware and forms no material part of their value. Held, that they are subject to a duty of 10 per cent as paintings not otherwise provided for and not as china, porcelain, and Parian ware gilded, ornamented, or decorated in any manner.—Arthur v. Jacoby (103 U. S., 677).

1897 455. Peat moss, one dollar per ton.

1894 558. Moss, * * * not otherwise specially provided for in this act. (Free.)

1890 653. Moss, * * * not otherwise specially provided for in this act. (Free.)

1883 744. Moss, sea-weeds, * * * used for beds and mattresses. (Free.)

(b) This paragraph is not confined to peat moss for bedding horses, but covers peat-moss fiber for mattresses, which latter is not free under paragraph 566 as crude fibrous vegetable substances.—T. D. 21544, G. A. 4534.

1897 456. Pencils of paper or wood filled with lead or other material, and pencils of lead, forty-five cents per gross and twenty-five per centum ad valorem; slate pencils, covered with wood, thirty-five per centum ad valorem; all other slate pencils, three cents per one hundred.

1894 357. Pencils of wood filled with lead or other material, and slate pencils covered with wood, fifty per centum ad valorem; all other slate pencils, thirty per centum ad valorem.

1890 466. Pencils of lead, fifty cents per gross and thirty per centum ad valorem; slate pencils, four cents per gross.

1883 473. Pencils of wood filled with lead or other material and pencils of lead, fifty cents per gross and thirty per centum ad valorem; * * * .
131. * * * slate pencils, * * * thirty per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 456, ACT OF 1897.

(c) Memorandum books with a small lead pencil held in a loop attached to the cover are dutiable separately.—T. D. 24783, G. A. 5475.

(d) Lead pencils made of wood and filled with lead, which are the same length, though slightly smaller in diameter than the ordinary lead pencil, and upon one end of which is fitted a diminutive crooked handle resembling the handle of a cane and upon the other end a metal cap which protects the point, are properly dutiable as lead pencils under this paragraph.—T. D. 26245, G. A. 6006.

(e) Automatic pencils in the form of a gun, made of metal and wood, provided with a movable lead which is made to protrude from the barrel by pressing the trigger, are neither toys nor pencils of wood, but are dutiable under paragraph 193 as articles in part of metal.—T. D. 26306, G. A. 6020.

(f) Colored pencils held dutiable as pencils of wood and not as crayons.—T. D. 12947, G. A. 1498.

(g) Copying pencils of wood and metal are not dutiable as pencils of wood filled with lead or other materials.—T. D. 15024, G. A. 2601.

(a) Crayon pencils are dutiable as pencils of wood and not as crayons.—T. D. 15229, G. A. 2722.

(b) Watch-charm lead pencils in the form of pipes are dutiable as pencils and not as jewelry.—T. D. 14640, G. A. 2398.

(c) Wood-covered slate pencils are dutiable as slate pencils and not as pencils of wood.—T. D. 15005, G. A. 2582; T. D. 17951, G. A. 3826.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(d) Ink extractors consisting of a chemical compound incased in wood and resembling pencils, were assessed as pencils and claimed to be dutiable as a chemical compound. Held not to be pencils, but protest overruled.—T. D. 10791, G. A. 344.

(e) Pencils of wood from 4 to 7 inches in length, filled with material of various colors and known in trade and commerce as colored pencils and often as school crayons, are dutiable as pencils and not as crayons of all kinds. In re Blumenthal (C. C.), (49 Fed. Rep., 226).

1897 457. Pencil leads not in wood, ten per centum ad valorem.

1894 358. Pencil leads not in wood, ten per centum ad valorem.

1890 467. Pencil-leads not in wood, ten per centum ad valorem.

1883 473. * * * pencil-leads, not in wood, ten per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(f) Small red cylindrical sticks, a mixture of clay and grease with a lake consisting of oxide of lead with rosin red, designed to be inclosed in wood and used as pencils, are dutiable as pencil leads and not as crayons.—T. D. 14735, G. A. 2457.

1897 458. Photographic dry plates or films, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

1894 358½. Photographic dry plates or films, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

1897 459. Pipes and smokers' articles: Common tobacco pipes and pipe bowls made wholly of clay, valued at not more than forty cents per gross, fifteen cents per gross; other tobacco pipes and pipe bowls of clay, fifty cents per gross and twenty-five per centum ad valorem; other pipes and pipe bowls of whatever material composed and all smokers' articles whatsoever, not specially provided for in this Act, including cigarette books, cigarette book covers, pouches for smoking or chewing tobacco, and cigarette paper in all forms, sixty per centum ad valorem.

1894 359. Pipes, pipe bowls, of all materials, and all smokers' articles whatsoever, not specially provided for in this Act, including cigarette books, cigarette-book covers, pouches for smoking or chewing tobacco, and cigarette paper in all forms, fifty per centum ad valorem; all common tobacco pipes and pipe bowls made wholly of clay, valued at not more than fifty cents per gross, ten per centum ad valorem.

1890 468. Pipes, pipe-bowls, of all materials, and all smokers' articles whatsoever, not specially provided for in this act including cigarette books, cigarette-book covers, pouches for smoking or chewing tobacco, and cigarette paper in all forms, seventy per centum ad valorem; all common tobacco pipes of clay, fifteen cents per gross.

1883 476. Pipes, pipe-bowls, and all smokers' articles whatsoever, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, seventy per centum ad valorem; all common pipes of clay, thirty-five per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 459, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Flexible pocket cigar cases made of surface-coated paper, in two pieces, one telescoping into the other, ornamented with fancy pictures, are dutiable as smokers' articles at 60 per cent and not as fancy boxes.—T. D. 20762, G. A. 4369.

(b) Tobacco pipes and pipe bowls made in chief value of clay are dutiable as "pipes and pipe bowls of clay" and not as "pipes and pipe bowls of whatever material composed." The words "made of clay" in this paragraph mean "made wholly or in chief value of clay."—In re Wise (93 Fed. Rep., 443) followed; T. D. 23473, G. A. 5065.

(c) Clay pipes the bowls and stems for which are imported under the same invoice, separately packed, and upon the same steamer are dutiable as pipes. Where such pipes are composed in chief value of clay they are dutiable at 50 cents per gross and 25 per cent ad valorem. The provision in this paragraph for "all other pipes" covers only pipes which are not wholly or in chief value of clay.—T. D. 24205, G. A. 5273.

(d) Pipe bowls and pipestems that are packed and imported together, made to fit together, and never used separately, but are always together, are to be taken as entireties. Clay pipe bowls with bamboo stems, imported upon the same invoice and shipped together, but described and priced separately, the invoice prices showing the stems to be of greater value than the pipe bowls, are dutiable under the third clause of this paragraph as "other pipes and pipe bowls of whatever material composed."—T. D. 26966, G. A. 6251.

(f) Tables and stands on which are fixed certain accessories for smokers' use, smokers' sets, and ornamental miniature automobiles carrying cigar rack, match stand, cigar cutter, etc., are dutiable as smokers' articles. The doctrine of ejusdem generis can not be applied to so broad a provision as that contained in this paragraph for "all smokers' articles whatsoever," so as to limit it to articles which may be carried about the person, or which are capable of being used for smoking, of and by themselves.—Steinhardt v. United States (126 Fed. Rep., 443; T. D. 25138), affirming T. D. 24137, G. A. 5251.

(h) Fancy metal trays with a receptacle for holding matches, another for receiving ashes, and a cigar rest are dutiable as smokers' articles. In this case a sample tray said to be representative of the importation, but differing radically from the official sample retained by the appraising officer, was offered by the importer's witness, who, however, had not seen the goods when they were imported and whose identification of the sample was unsatisfactory. It was held that such testimony was insufficient to warrant a disturbance of the collector's decision.—T. D. 26096, G. A. 5949.

(i) Smokers' articles made of pyroxylin are more specifically provided for herein than under the provision in paragraph 17 for finished or partly finished articles of pyroxylin.—United States v. Knauth (150 Fed. Rep., 610; T. D. 27769).

(j) Clay pipes slightly glazed or burnished, some plain and others elaborately ornamented with figures of animals, human faces, leaves, etc., known as French clay pipes, are dutiable at 70 per cent and not at 15 per cent as common clay pipes.—T. D. 12421, G. A. 1159; T. D. 13893, G. A. 2046.

(a) Pipes, the bowl made of common clay and painted red, with a wooden stem and bone mouthpiece colored black, are dutiable as smokers' articles and not as common clay pipes.—T. D. 14320, G. A. 2249.

(c) Cigar cases made of leather, used exclusively by smokers, are smokers' articles.—T. D. 12550, G. A. 1234.

(d) Cigar cutters of metal, intended to be worn upon a watch chain, are smokers' articles.—T. D. 12809, G. A. 1405.

(e) Watch charms with cigar-cutter attachments assessed as smokers' articles and claimed to be dutiable as jewelry. Protest overruled.—T. D. 15010, G. A. 2587.

(f) Cases or coverings for pipes, composed of wood, leather, and silk (leather chief value), are smokers' articles.—T. D. 12131, G. A. 993.

(g) Pipe cases, cigar holders, and cigarette holders, in the manufacture of which leather is the material of chief value, are dutiable as smokers' articles and not as manufactures of leather nor as nonenumerated manufactured articles.—T. D. 14926, G. A. 2555.

(h) Leather tobacco pouches dutiable as smokers' articles and not as manufactures of leather.—T. D. 13815, G. A. 2009.

(j) Match magazines are not smokers' articles.—T. D. 11830, G. A. 821.

(k) A cigar cabinet 10½ inches high and 10 inches wide, made of oak or ash varnished, is not a smokers' article.—T. D. 12132, G. A. 994.

(m) Clay tobacco pipes known as "church wardens" are dutiable as common clay pipes.—T. D. 14241, G. A. 2205.

(n) Cigarette paper in sheets is dutiable as cigarette paper.—T. D. 10905, G. A. 400.

(o) Certain paper in sheets about 20 by 25 inches held dutiable as cigarette paper and not as tissue paper.—T. D. 14646, G. A. 2404.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(p) French glazed pipes, being uncolored clay tobacco pipes, the outer surface of the bowls and a portion of the stems of which have been glazed, are pipes not specially provided for and not common clay pipes.—T. D. 10767, G. A. 320.

(q) Leather cigar cases held to be smokers' articles.—T. D. 11851, G. A. 842.

(r) Small lamps such as are mainly used for lighting pipes and cigars and are usually carried in stock by those who deal in pipes and other articles of that sort are "smokers' articles" within the meaning of this paragraph.—Wedemeyer v. Lancaster (31 Fed. Rep., 446).

(s) Cigarette paper of suitable size and quality to be used in making cigarettes, and pasteboard covers therefor of corresponding size, imported separately and entered together with the intention to combine them with paste into cigarette books for the use of smokers, are subject to a duty of 70 per cent ad valorem as "smokers' articles" and not to a duty of 15 per cent ad valorem as manufactures of paper.—Isaacs v. Jonas (148 U. S., 648).

(t) Cigarette paper made of a quality and cut into a size fit for wrapping cigarettes, and which in the condition and form in which it is imported can be used by smokers in making their own cigarettes, is subject to a duty of 70 per cent as smokers' articles and not to a duty of 15 per cent as manufactures of paper.—U. S. v. Isaacs (148 U. S., 654).

1897 460. Plows, tooth and disk harrows, harvesters, reapers, agricultural drills, and planters, mowers, horserakes, cultivators, threshing machines and cotton gins, twenty per centum ad valorem.

1894 591. Plows, tooth and disk harrows, harvesters, reapers, agricultural drills, and planters, mowers, horserakes, cultivators, threshing machines and cotton gins: (Free) Provided, That all articles mentioned in this paragraph if imported from a country which lays an import duty on like articles imported from the United States, shall be subject to the duties existing prior to the passage of this Act.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 460, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Steam-plow machinery consisting of engines and tackle for operating plows are not dutiable as plows but as manufactures of metal. It would seem that the plows thus operated are classifiable as plows.—T. D. 23818, G. A. 5165.

(b) Parts of plows are not entitled to entry as plows.—T. D. 24153, G. A. 5255.

1897 461. Plush, black, known commercially as hatters' plush, composed of silk, or of silk and cotton, such as is used exclusively for making men's hats, ten per centum ad valorem.

1894 593. Plush, black, known commercially as hatters' plush, composed of silk, or of silk and cotton, and used exclusively for making men's hats. (Free.)

1890 469. Plush, black, known commercially as hatters' plush, composed of silk, or of silk and cotton, and used exclusively for making men's hats, ten per centum ad valorem.

1883 451. Hatters' plush, composed of silk or of silk and cotton, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 461, ACT OF 1897.

(c) Black plush known commercially as hatter's plush, composed of silk or of silk and cotton, such as is used exclusively for making men's hats, held dutiable under this paragraph.—T. D. 25381, G. A. 5708.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(d) To be entitled to free entry under this paragraph it must be shown that the plush is used exclusively in making hats.—T. D. 16577, G. A. 3273.

(e) Black silk hatters' plush is free and not dutiable as plush.—T. D. 17279, G. A. 3541.

1897 462. Umbrellas, parasols, and sun shades covered with material other than paper, fifty per centum ad valorem. Sticks for umbrellas, parasols, or sun shades, and walking canes, finished or unfinished, forty per centum ad valorem.

1894 360. Umbrellas, parasols, and sunshades, covered with material composed wholly or in part of silk, wool, worsted, the hair of the camel, goat, alpaca, or other animals, or other material than paper, forty-five per centum ad valorem.

361. Sticks for; umbrellas, parasols, and sunshades, if plain or carved, finished or unfinished, thirty per centum ad valorem.

1890 470. Umbrellas, parasols, and sun shades, covered with silk or alpaca, fifty-five per centum ad valorem; if covered with other material, forty-five per centum ad valorem.
471. Umbrellas, parasols, and sunshades, sticks for, if plain, finished or unfinished, thirty-five per centum ad valorem; if carved, fifty per centum ad valorem.

1883 491. * * * Umbrellas, parasols, and shades, when covered with silk or alpaca, fifty per centum ad valorem; all other umbrellas, forty per centum ad valorem.
492. Umbrellas, parasols, and sunshades, * * * and sticks for, finished or unfinished, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, thirty per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 462, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Umbrella sticks of wood with celluloid handles (celluloid chief value) are dutiable as umbrella sticks and not under paragraph 17 as articles of collodion.—T. D. 23089; G. A. 4934; United States v. Borgfeldt (105 Fed. Rep., 1005), affirming 124 id., 304, and T. D. 18527, G. A. 3983, followed.

(b) Sticks about 36 inches in length which have been steamed and crooked at one end suitable to be made up into walking sticks or canes are dutiable as walking canes unfinished.—T. D. 24734, G. A. 5449.

(c) Umbrella handles are not dutiable as sticks for umbrellas.—T. D. 24995, G. A. 5580.

(d) Bamboo fishing rods, consisting of an outer section in the form of a walking cane containing two smaller sections, the whole, when drawn out in the manner of a telescope, forming a fishing rod found not to be walking canes and held dutiable as manufactures of wood.—T. D. 25969, G. A. 5895.

(e) Embroidered parasols are dutiable under the proviso to paragraph 339 as embroidered articles, the rate therein levied being higher than that imposed by this paragraph.—T. D. 27634, G. A. 6450.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(f) Umbrella sticks composed of wood and metal (wood chief value).—T. D. 17332, G. A. 3552.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(g) Umbrellas or sunshades covered with paper assessed at 45 per cent. Protest overruled in the absence of any proof.—T. D. 11829, G. A. 820; reversed (66 Fed. Rep., 733; 71 Fed. Rep., 864).

(h) Umbrellas covered with gloria cloth (silk chief value) are dutiable as umbrellas covered with silk.—T. D. 13807, G. A. 2001.

(i) This paragraph does not apply to parasol sticks with decorated china heads.—T. D. 11704, G. A. 809.

(j) Certain umbrella and parasol sticks erroneously assessed as umbrellas and parasols. Held, to be dutiable according to component material of chief value.—T. D. 13321, G. A. 1701.

1897 463. Waste, not specifically provided for in this Act, ten per centum ad valorem.

1894 362. Waste, not specially provided for in this Act, ten per centum ad valorem.

1890 472. Waste, not specially provided for in this act, ten per centum ad valorem.

1883 493. Waste, all not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, ten per centum ad valorem.

(a) Small scraps with the fur on cut from carroted coney or rabbit skins are dutiable as waste.—T. D. 20447, G. A. 4318.

(b) Old gunny cloth or bagging made of jute is dutiable as waste not specially provided for and not under paragraph 344 as bagging for cotton, gunny cloth, etc.—T. D. 20960, G. A. 4406.

(c) Rubber dust, produced by the grinding and sawing of hard rubber articles and fit only for remanufacture is dutiable as waste and not as a manufacture of india rubber.—T. D. 22602, G. A. 4806.

(d) Old gunny cloth or cotton bagging formerly used for covering cotton bales, in ragged, dirty, and partly rotten pieces, used chiefly for making manila paper, is dutiable as waste and not free under paragraph 632 as paper stock. T. D. 20960, G. A. 4406, sustained.—Train v. United States (107 Fed. Rep., 261).

(e) Short ramie fibers resembling raw cotton or flax waste, produced and accumulated in the process of combing ramie or China grass, are dutiable as waste under this paragraph.—T. D. 23347, G. A. 5017.

(f) Scraps of tin, the offal produced in cutting up sheet tin, is dutiable as waste.—T. D. 23518, G. A. 5076.

(g) Waste bagging of jute, used chiefly as paper stock but also in large quantities for various other manufacturing purposes, is dutiable as waste and is not free of duty under paragraph 632 as being "fit only to be converted into paper."—Train v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 1020); Swan v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 243), followed; T. D. 23520, G. A. 5078.

(h) Jute thread waste in the gray, imported to be used as paper stock, but identical in character with waste that is fit for use for other purposes than paper making and is so used to a large extent, is dutiable as waste not specially provided for and is not free as waste "fit only to be converted into paper." Where its fitness only for a certain use is the test of the classification of an article for duty, the common or predominant use of the article will not govern its classification. Where the use of an article determines its classification, new uses to which the article becomes adapted in the progress of manufacture and in the development of new industries may operate to change the classification which has previously prevailed.—Train v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 1020); Swan v. United States (113 Fed Rep., 243), followed; T. D. 23637, G. A. 5115.

(i) Printers' old rollers worn-out by use, composed chiefly of gelatin and used to some extent in the manufacture of glue, are not free of duty as glue stock but are dutiable as waste.—T. D. 24055, G. A. 5230.

(j) The substance which is scraped from the leaden walls which line the chambers of furnaces in which sulphuric acid is made is not dutiable as lead dross but is dutiable as waste.—T. D. 24244, G. A. 5283.

(k) Sponge waste, consisting of the clippings from merchantable sponges, which is used chiefly in the manufacture of paper but to a substantial and appreciable extent for other purposes, is dutiable as waste and not as sponges nor free of duty as waste fit only to be converted into paper.—T. D. 24249, G. A. 5288.

(m) Fragments of bagging found to be fit only to be converted into paper stock are not dutiable as waste.—T. D. 24664, G. A. 5418.

(a) Scrap tin, the offal produced in the manufacture of tin cans and other articles out of plates and sheets of iron and steel coated with tin, suitable only for retinning and remelting, is dutiable as waste not specially provided for under this paragraph. T. D. 24759, G. A. 5463 distinguished.—T. D. 24801, G. A. 5487.

(b) Certain spinners' waste held not dutiable as waste, but free as paper stock.—T. D. 25358, G. A. 5700.

(c) Linen thread waste is not dutiable as waste, but is free under paragraph 632.—T. D. 25422, G. A. 5719.

(d) Clippings from the seams of knit cotton garments, cut off in the process of manufacture, are not dutiable as waste but are free of duty either under paragraph 537 as cotton waste or under paragraph 632 as paper stock.—T. D. 25433, G. A. 5730.

(e) Jute card waste which is used for other purposes than the manufacture of paper is not free of duty under paragraph 632 as paper stock, but is dutiable under this paragraph.—T. D. 25745, G. A. 5837.

(f) Linen thread waste not dutiable under this paragraph, but is free of duty under paragraph 632.—T. D. 25778, G. A. 5853.

(g) Thread waste composed of cotton and jute, the jute being from 15 to 25 per cent in quantity and being of much less value than the cotton, and the entire mixture being known in trade as cotton waste, is free of duty under paragraph 537 and is not dutiable under this paragraph.—T. D. 25859, G. A. 5869.

(h) Flax card waste is dutiable under this provision.—T. D. 26415, G. A. 6056; reversed by consent, T. D. 28330.

(i) Fur which drops from heated rabbit skins is not dutiable as waste, but is free as undressed furs.—T. D. 26955, G. A. 6246.

(j) Certain pieces of old jute bagging, removed from cotton bales, which are torn, ragged, and dirty, held to be free as rags under paragraph 648 and not dutiable as waste.—Train-Smith Company v. United States (140 Fed. Rep., 113; T. D. 26484), reversing T. D. 24172, G. A. 5265, followed; T. D. 28031, G. A. 6562.

(k) Spent ginger held to be free as ginger root unground and not dutiable as waste.—Cruikshank v. United States (T. D. 26341, suit 3436), reversing without opinion T. D. 24717, G. A. 5439.

(l) So-called lard cracklings, refuse of pork packing establishments, held not to be waste, but free as substances used for manure.—Shallus v. United States (129 Fed. Rep., 845; T. D. 25041), followed; T. D. 24802, G. A. 5488, overruled; T. D. 25800, G. A. 5855.

(m) Hog-hair waste used only in the manufacture of fertilizer is not dutiable as waste, but is free as substance used for manure.—Shallus v. United States (129 Fed. Rep., 845; T. D. 25041) followed; T. D. 25085, G. A. 5604.

(n) Flax noils produced in the combing of flax are dutiable as waste and not as tow of flax.—Ritchie v. United States (141 Fed. Rep., 664; T. D. 26461), reversing T. D. 24963, G. A. 5560, followed; T. D. 27997, G. A. 6558.

(o) Thread waste which is a mixture of cotton and jute threads in about equal proportion is dutiable as waste not specially provided for and not free as cotton waste in the absence of evidence showing that the article is commercially known as cotton waste.—T. D. 27457, G. A. 6394.

(a) Clippings of photographic paper, coated with nitrate of silver, held dutiable as waste.—T. D. 27849, G. A. 6522.

(b) Hard wood sawdust commonly used for dyeing and tanning purposes is not dutiable as waste, but is free under paragraph 482.—T. D. 27866, G. A. 6526.

(c) Mill buttings, the imperfect ends of deals, are free of duty as pulp wood and are not dutiable as waste.—T. D. 28070, G. A. 6573.

(d) So-called hares' combings, loose or dead hair removed in cleaning skins and used as an adulterant in the manufacture of cheap hats but requiring further treatment for that use, held dutiable as waste and not as furs prepared for hatters' use.—United States v. Hatters' Fur Exchange (153 Fed. Rep., 595; T. D. 27971), reversing Abstract 11309 (T. D. 27363), followed; T. D. 28102, G. A. 6577.

(e) Large pieces of secondhand bagging suitable for patching or baling cotton, known as "selected sides" and what is known as "original gunny," consisting of pieces of old cotton bagging unassorted and indiscriminately mixed, some of which is suitable for patching cotton, are dutiable as waste and are not free either as rags or as paper stock.—T. D. 28202, G. A. 6603.

(f) Refuse of cork bark coarsely ground, the principal object of grinding appearing to be for convenience in transportation, is dutiable as waste and not as manufactures of cork nor as unmanufactured cork wood.—Nairn Linoleum Company et al. v. United States (142 Fed. Rep., 214; T. D. 25917), reversing without opinion T. D. 25334, G. A. 5692.

(g) Selected pieces of jute bagging of a high grade and measurable dimensions specially culled from jute bagging waste, put up in bales and imported for the specific purpose of covering or patching bales of cotton, held to be dutiable as waste and not as bagging for cotton. T. D. 27586, G. A. 6431, reversed.—Davies v. United States (T. D. 28238).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(h) Marble waste dutiable as waste not specially provided for and not free as crude mineral.—T. D. 16324, G. A. 3153.

(i) Combings or pluckings from the hare or coney skin, left over in the process of preparing the skin for hatters' use, invoiced as fur waste, is dutiable as waste and is not free as hair.—T. D. 17155, G. A. 3472.

(j) Ivory pieces and hollows in the rough are dutiable as waste and are not free as ivory sawed or cut into logs.—T. D. 18219, G. A. 3929.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(k) Refuse accumulated in the process of preparing rabbits fur for hatters' use is dutiable as fur waste and not fur for hatters' use.—T. D. 12233, G. A. 1047.

(l) Refuse flax threads or waste from the manufacture of linen used to mix with cotton and sell for packing or for cleaning engines is dutiable as waste and not free as paper stock—T. D. 12454, G. A. 1192.

(m) Small clippings from muskrat and nutria skins held to be waste.—T. D. 12672, G. A. 1321.

(n) Scraps accumulated in the manufacture of mackintosh clothing the scraps composed of india rubber, the clippings or waste being known as rubber scraps because the rubber is the only residue of value, is dutiable as waste, although when the material is in the piece wool is chief value.—T. D. 13215, G. A. 1636, reversed (65 Fed. Rep., 495).

(b) Small irregular-shaped pieces of beaver and otter skins with dressed fur thereon held to be waste.—T. D. 13240, G. A. 1661.

(c) Ramie or China grass noils, short fibers resembling raw cotton, accumulated in the process of combing grass, held dutiable as waste.—T. D. 13348, G. A. 1728.

(e) Filtering masse is not dutiable as waste.—T. D. 15412, G. A. 2806.

(f) Scraps of worn-out gutta percha belting held dutiable as waste and not as a manufacture of india rubber nor free as crude gutta percha nor as india rubber crude.—T. D. 15465, G. A. 2814.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(g) Old rubber shoes are not waste.—T. D. 10406, G. A. 97.

(h) Old rubber shoes are dutiable as waste.—T. D. 11421, G. A. 704.

(i) Clippings from dressed hair skins cut off in the process of manufacturing coney plates are dutiable as waste and not as fur on the skins nor free as fur skins not dressed.—T. D. 10540, G. A. 190.

(j) "Fur waste," "hare's combings," "hare's waste," "hare's dogs," and "coney's dogs" are dutiable as waste and not as "hatters' fur."—Wimpfheimer v. Erhardt (C. C.), (59 Fed. Rep., 451).

(k) Rubber boots and shoes worn out by use and fit only for manufacture are dutiable either as rags or as waste and not as articles of rubber nor free as india rubber crude.—In re Salomon (C. C.), (47 Fed. Rep., 711).

FREE LIST.

Sec. 2. That on and after the passage of this Act, unless otherwise
1897 specially provided for in this Act, the following articles when imported shall be exempt from duty:

SEC. 2. On and after the first day of August, eighteen hundred and 1894 ninety-four, unless otherwise provided for in this Act, the following articles, when imported, shall be exempt from duty:

SEC. 2. On and after the sixth day of October, eighteen hundred 1890 and ninety, unless otherwise specially provided for in this act, the following articles when imported shall be exempt from duty:

1883 SEC. 2503. The following articles when imported shall be exempt from duty:

DECISIONS UNDER VARIOUS ACTS.

(l) Where, in section 19 of the act of March 2, 1861 (12 Stat., 178), Peruvian bark is subjected to a duty, and in section 23 it is exempt, as the two provisions are repugnant the last one must prevail, as speaking the final and latest intent of the lawmakers.—Powers v. Barney (5 Blatchf., 202; 19 Fed. Cas., 1234).

(m) Where an article is specified in the free list without terms of limitation such article is exempt, irrespective of the condition in which it may be imported, if retaining its commercial designation.—T. D. 21857, G. A. 4613.

(a) Where an article is enumerated in both the free and dutiable list and the conflict is irreconcilable the provision last in order must prevail as the last expression of legislative intent.—T. D. 21902, G. A. 4626.

(b) Sulphate of magnesia or Epsom salts, which were dutiable under paragraph 24, act of 1894, and free under paragraph 542, held to be free as the ambiguity must be resolved in favor of the importer.—United States v. Merck (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 639).

(c) The similitude clause in section 7, tariff act of 1897, can not be applied to merchandise resembling articles on the free list.—T. D. 13358, G. A. 1738; T. D. 23633, G. A. 5111.

464. Acids: Arsenic or arsenious, benzoic, carbolic, fluoric, hydrochloric or muriatic, nitric, oxalic, phosphoric, phthalic, picric or nitropicric, prussic, silicic, and valerianic.

363. Acids used for medicinal, chemical, or manufacturing purposes, not specially provided for in this act.

1894

473. Acids, used for medicinal, chemical, or manufacturing purposes, not especially provided for in this Act.

1890

594. Acids used for medicinal, chemical, or manufacturing purposes, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 464, ACT OF 1897.

(d) Anthranilic acid of commerce is at the present time produced almost entirely as a commercial article from acetyl-orthotoluidine and orthonitrotoluene, both of which are derivatives of toluol or toluene, from coal tar. It is not free under this paragraph as benzoic acid, but is a more advanced product. It was assessed at 25 per cent as a coal-tar product.—T. D. 22563, G. A. 4788.

(e) So-called phthalic acid or anhydride, a product of coal tar used in making the phthalieu series of dyes, is free as phthalic acid.—T. D. 22664, G. A. 4824.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(f) Crude carbolic acid used for manufacturing purposes, the first product of the distillation of coal tar, containing in addition to carbolic acid many combinations of basic oils and bitumens, although not chemically an acid used for manufacturing purposes, is free as an acid and not dutiable as a preparation of coal tar or an oil.—Schoellkopf, Hartford & Maclagan v. United States (C. C.), (94 Fed. Rep., 640).

(g) A coal-tar preparation, not a color or dye, from which crystal carbolic acid is made by "refining" and which is employed in the manufacture of disinfectants and some kinds of soap, is free as an acid and not dutiable as a preparation of coal tar.—Appeal of Schultz (94 Fed. Rep., 820) reversing T. D. 17346, G. A. 3566.

(i) In the classification of sulphotoluic acid, which is both an acid and a preparation of coal tar, but not a color or dye, the presence in paragraph 19, act of 1890, and this paragraph of the words "not specially provided for," neutralizes their effect in each, and the article is free.—Matheson & Co. v. United States (71 Fed. Rep., 394), reversing 65 id., 422, and T. D. 13879, G. A. 2032.

(j) Stearine is not an acid used for manufacturing purposes.—T. D. 13818, G. A. 2012.

(k) Phthalic acid and tetrachlorphtalic acid, anhydrides, though not acids chemically, perform the functions of an acid, are known as acids commercially and are free as acids.—Heller et al. v. United States (124 Fed. Rep., 299).

1897 465. Aconite.

1894 364. Aconite.

1890 474. Aconite.

1883 497. Aconite.

1897 466. Acorns, raw, dried, or undried, but unground.

1894 365. Acorns, raw, dried or undried, but unground.

1890 475. Acorns, raw, dried or undried, but unground.

1883 290. Acorns, * * * raw * * * two cents per pound.

1897 467. Agates, unmanufactured.

1894 366. Agates, unmanufactured.

1890 476. Agates, unmanufactured.

1883 596. Agates, unmanufactured.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(a) Pieces of agate and onyx adapted for use as cabinet specimens are free of duty as agates unmanufactured.—T. D. 23432, G. A. 5053.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(b) Pieces of agate invoiced as cabinet stones, unmounted, rectangular in shape and faced and polished, designed for use as mineralogical specimens, are free as agates, unmanufactured.—T. D. 18872, G. A. 4069; affirmed United States v. Hahn (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 755).

1897 468. Albumen, not specially provided for.

1894 367. Albumen.

1890 477. Albumen.

1883 496. Albumen, in any form or condition. * * *

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 468, ACT OF 1897.

(c) Soson, a fine yellowish powder, containing over 98 per cent of albumen on a dry basis, held to be free of duty under the provision for "albumen not specially provided for" in this paragraph.—T. D. 23855, G. A. 5174.

(d) Certain milk albumen, known in common speech as an albumen, although not so in the technical language of chemists, held to be free under this paragraph.—Merchants' Despatch Transportation Company v. United States (121 Fed. Rep., 443), reversing T. D. 20614, G. A. 4340, followed; T. D. 24565, G. A. 5377.

(e) Casein held to be free of duty under either this paragraph as albumen or paragraph 594 as lactarene under the decisions in Merchants' Despatch Transportation Company v. United States (121 Fed. Rep., 443) and Ducas v. United States (143 Fed. Rep., 362; T. D. 27031).—T. D. 27645, G. A. 6453; affirmed T. D. 28577.

1897 469. Alizarin, natural or artificial, and dyes derived from alizarin or from anthracin.

1894 368. Alizarin, and alizarin colors or dyes, natural or artificial.

1890 478. Alizarine, natural or artificial, and dyes commercially known as Alizarine yellow, Alizarine orange, Alizarine green, Alizarine blue.

1883 595. Alizarine, natural or artificial.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 469, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Certain "alizarin green" and "alizarin green S paste" derived from alizarin are free and not dutiable under paragraph 15 as coal-tar dyes or colors.—T. D. 20728, G. A. 4360.

(b) The provisions of this paragraph are descriptive and not subject to the rule of commercial designation. They are limited to alizarin and dyes derived therefrom or from anthracin. The words "derived from" are to be interpreted according to their ordinary or commonly accepted meaning, namely "made or prepared from," "produced from," or "obtained from."—T. D. 20728, G. A. 4360.

(c) The term "artificial alizarin" as used in the tariff acts has acquired a definite meaning, by which it is limited to such dyestuffs as are derived from anthracin and colors known as alizarin blacks and browns, which are not so derived, although they respond fully to the alizarin tests, are not free under this paragraph but are dutiable under paragraph 15 as coal-tar dyes or colors.—Farbenfabricken of Elberfield Co. v. United States (C. C.), (99 Fed. Rep., 553). Same v. Same (id., 554).

(d) The term "artificial alizarin" has acquired a definite fixed meaning by which it is limited to such dyestuffs as are derived from anthracine; and colors known as "blacks" and "browns" and "coeralein" which are not so derived, although they respond to all the alizarin tests, are dutiable as coal-tar colors or dyes (paragraph 15) and are not free (paragraph 469). Affirming 99 Fed. Rep., 553, 554, 719.—Farbenfabricken of Elberfeld & Co. v. United States and Pickardt v. United States (C. C. A.), (102 Fed. Rep., 603). (See also T. D. 22663, G. A. 4823.)

(e) The term "derived from" has its ordinary meaning of "produced from" and relates to the physical substance from which such product is obtained and not to its chemical relationship.—Farbenfabricken of Elberfeld & Co. v. U. S. (C. C. A.), (102 Fed. Rep., 603).

(f) Certain dyes shown to have been derived from alizarin or from anthracin held to be free of duty.—T. D. 23314, G. A. 5001.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(g) The term alizarin colors and alizarin lakes are practically synonymous when applied to dry colors or pigments. Alizarin colors or lakes are free.—T. D. 17056, G. A. 3437.

(h) Alzarin violet, known as alizarin cyanine R, is free as an alizarin color or dye and not dutiable as a coal-tar product. Reversing the Board.—Klipstein v. United States (94 Fed. Rep., 356).

(i) The class of alizarin colors known as lakes are free under this paragraph and not dutiable as "lakes not specially provided for" under paragraph 48.—Keppelmann v. United States (116 Fed. Rep., 777), followed; T. D. 24018, G. A. 5215.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(j) Alizarin blue C W R R and C W R B are free as alizarin blue and not dutiable as a coal-tar color.—T. D. 21376, G. A. 4482.

(k) Alizarin blue of a new form not known at the time of the passage of this act is nevertheless dutiable as such and not as a coal-tar color.—Sehlbach v. United States (84 Fed. Rep., 157), affirmed; United States v. Sehlbach (C. C. A.), (90 Fed. Rep., 798).

(a) The article imported since 1891 and commercially known as "alizarine black," but more particularly known as alizarine black 4 B, to distinguish it from the article theretofore and still imported and known as "alizarine black," both being products of coal tar and dyes having similar properties, but somewhat different in chemical composition, are free and not dutiable as a coal tar color or dye not specially provided for.—Matheson & Co. v. United States (C. C.), (90 Fed. Rep., 275).

(b) The substance which responds to the alizarine tests and which is commercially known and dealt in as alizarine or alizarine yellow is free and is not dutiable as coal-tar colors.—Selbach v. United States (C. C.), (78 Fed. Rep., 803).

1897 470. Amber, and amberoid unmanufactured, or crude gum.

1894 369. Amber, and amberoid unmanufactured, or crude gum.

1890 479. Amber, unmanufactured, or crude gum.

1883 640. Amber * * * gum.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 470, ACT OF 1897.

(c) Pieces of amber varying in length from about 1½ to 6 inches, not further manufactured than cut into pieces and sawed and smoothed on one side for the purpose of testing their quality and which are intended to be used for the manufacture of cigar holders and mouthpieces for pipes, are free of duty as amber unmanufactured under this paragraph and not dutiable as manufactures of amber under paragraph 448.—United States v. Hahn (91 Fed. Rep., 775), affirming In re Hahn T. D. 18872, G. A. 4069; In re Hahn T. D. 23432, G. A. 5053, followed; T. D. 23957, G. A. 5198.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(d) Pieces of amber fused by heat and pressed together in larger forms known as "ambroid" is amber unmanufactured.—T. D. 12967, G. A. 1518.

1897 471. Ambergris.

1894 370. Ambergris.

1890 480. Ambergris.

1883 498. Ambergris.

1897 472. Aniline salts.

1894 372. Aniline salts.

1890 481. Aniline salts.

1883 605. Aniline salts or black salts and black tares.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(e) Fluorate of aniline is free as aniline salt and not dutiable as a coal tar preparation not a color or dye.—T. D. 15129, G. A. 2655.

473. [As amended by the Act of March 3, 1903, 32 Stat., 1023.] Any animal imported by a citizen of the United States specially for breeding purposes shall be admitted free, whether intended to be so used by the importer himself or for sale for such purpose: Provided, That no such animal shall be admitted free unless pure bred of a recognized breed, and duly registered in the books of record established for that breed: And provided further, That certificate of such record and of the pedigree of such animal shall be produced and submitted to the customs officer, duly authenticated by the proper custodian of such book of record, together with the affidavit of the owner, agent, or importer that such animal is the identical animal described in said certificate of record and pedigree: And provided further, That the Secretary of Agri-1897 culture shall determine and certify to the Secretary of the Treasury what are recognized breeds and pure-bred animals under the provisions of this paragraph. The Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe such aditional regulations as may be required for the strict enforcement of this provision. Cattle, horses, sheep, or other domestic animals straying across the boundary line into any foreign country, or driven across such boundary line by the owner for temporary pasturage purposes only, together with their offspring, may be brought back to the United States within six months free of duty, under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: And provided further, That the provisions of this Act shall apply to all such animals as have been imported and are in quarantine, or otherwise in the custody of customs or other officers of the United States, at the date of the passage of this Act.

373. Any animal imported specially for breeding purposes shall be admitted free: Provided, That no such animal shall be admitted free unless pure bred of a recognized breed, and duly registered in the book of record established for that breed, and the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe such additional regulations as may be required for the 1894 strict enforcement of this provision. Cattle, horses, sheep or other domestic animals which have strayed across the boundary line into any foreign country or have been or may be driven across such boundary line by the owner for pasturage purposes, together with their increase, may be brought back to the United States free of duty under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

482. Any animal imported specially for breeding purposes shall be admitted free: Provided, That no such animal shall be admitted free unless pure breed of a recognized breed, and duly registered in the book of record established for that breed: And provided further, That certificate of such record and of the pedigree of such animal shall be produced and sub-
1890 mitted to the customs officer, duly authenticated by the proper custodian of such book of record, together with the affidavit of the owner, agent, or importer, that such animal is the identical animal described in said certificate of record and pedigree. The Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe such additional regulations as may be required for the strict enforcement of this provision.

642. Animals specially imported for breeding purposes shall be ad-
1883 mitted free upon proof thereof satisfactory to the Secretary of the Treasury, and under such regulations as he may prescribe; * * *

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 473, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Cattle driven across the boundary line from Texas into Mexico by the owner for the purpose of temporary pasturage in order to be entitled to free entry must be brought back to the United States within six months from the date of exportation. The regulations of the Secretary made for the enforcement of this paragraph must be substantially complied with.—T. D. 19984, G. A. 4249.

(b) The regulations of the Secretary (T. D. 21298) promulgated for carrying into effect this paragraph are valid and legal regulations.—T. D. 21859, G. A. 4615, affirmed.—Borden v. United States (132 Fed. Rep., 205; T. D. 25390).

(c) Proof in accordance with such regulations is essential to establish pedigree and must be filed with the collector prior to liquidation of the entry.—Ibid.

(d) On an importation of dogs. Held, that in order to entitle an animal to free entry the certificate of record and pedigree must be filed with the customs officer not later than six months from the time of entry, (Art. 541 and 543, Reg. 1899) and must show that both grandsires and both granddams of the animal imported are registered.—T. D. 22636, G. A. 4815.

(a) Horses of the character and description of those which are entitled to free entry under this paragraph should be admitted free notwithstanding that the importer at the time of importation intended them for sale.—In re Page (128 Fed. Rep., 317; T. D. 25140), reversing T. D. 24112, G. A. 5247.

(b) The word "animal" as used in this paragraph is restricted in its application to quadrupeds such as horses, cattle, sheep, swine, cats, etc., and would not include fowl.—T. D. 25132, G. A. 5619.

(c) The Department Regulations (T. D. 21298) governing the importation of animals for breeding purposes, requiring that the certificate of the pedigree of an animal shall show that its sire and dam and grandsires and granddams were all recorded in a book of record established for the same breed, contemplate that the grandparents shall be fully registered. A collateral reference to the grandparents in the registry of the parents is not sufficient.—T. D. 25985, G. A. 5898.

(d) Where imported animals of the description named in this paragraph have been purchased by a partnership and on their credit one of said partners may be properly designated on the invoice as the consignee and owner of the merchandise.—T. D. 28595, G. A. 6689.

(e) While paragraph 473, tariff act of 1897, requires that animals of the kind there described shall be imported only by a citizen of the United States in order to be free of duty, it is immaterial to whom they may be ultimately sold after being imported or that they may have been intended for use by one not a citizen of this country.—Ibid.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(f) A fair construction of the paragraph indicates that it was the intention to permit cattle to be driven across the boundary for temporary pasturage and brought back accompanied by their young. It was not the intention to allow cattle, the product of foreign farms and ranches, to be imported free because the stock is descended from animals which had been exported.—T. D. 16005, G. A. 3029.

(g) Free entry of range cattle from Mexico denied.—T. D. 16005, G. A. 3029.

(h) The importation in 1895 of the remote descendants of cattle exported in 1883 is not the return of cattle driven across the boundary line for grazing purposes together with their increase.—T. D. 16524, G. A. 3242.

(i) French-Canadian cattle bred in the vicinity of Compton are not recognized by the Department as pure bred of a recognized breed. Animals registered in the French Canadian Cattle Herd Book are not entitled to free entry under existing laws and regulations.—T. D. 16996, G. A. 3424.

(j) The owners and lessees of land in foreign countries who there engage in breeding and raising cattle are not entitled to free entry for cattle driven or transported from the United States on the ground that they were driven across the boundary line for pasturage purposes or that the cattle imported are the descendants of such cattle.—18 Fed. Rep., 399; T. D. 18401, G. A. 3958.

(k) Mare with foal of an American stallion driven to Canada where colt was born (in 1890). Colt kept there and trained, etc., until 1894 when it was imported into the United States and assessed under paragraph 189. Claimed to be free under this paragraph or under paragraph 387. Held, that it is not contemplated by law that the increase of an animal driven out of the country and kept there for purposes other than pasturage can be kept there for years and reared and trained and then be admitted free as the increase of animals driven across for pasturage.—T. D. 15858, G. A. 2958.

(b) Two rams imported on which duty was assessed under paragraph 189 and claimed to be free as pure-bred Shropshire sheep, duly registered. The certificate was issued by the American Shropshire Registry Association, of Lafayette, Ind., and does not give pedigree beyond the sire nor show that the sire was duly registered as required by regulations (synopsis 1558[illegible]). Protest overruled.—T. D. 17395, G. A. 3586.

(c) This paragraph does not apply to the increase of animals transported by railroad far into the interior of a foreign country for the stocking of a ranch.—United States v. Cloete (81 Fed. Rep., 399).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(d) Lions and leopards claimed to be free as imported specially for breeding purposes. Held, that it seems clear from the character of the proofs required that wild animals do not come within the terms of this paragraph.—T. D. 12429, G. A. 1167.

(e) The smooth fox-terrier dog is a recognized breed of dogs.—T. D. 13562, G. A. 1834.

(f) Smooth fox-terrier dog imported and assessed under paragraph 251. No certificate of registry produced at the time the dog was in custody. At the time of the filing of the protest certificate produced from the Kennel Club Stud Book, London, England, but no affidavit of identity furnished and no opportunity given to compare the animal with the certificate. Free entry refused.—T. D. 13562, G. A. 1834.

(g) Horses registered in the Clydesdale Stud Book, of Canada, are entitled to free entry.—T. D. 12016, G. A. 929.

(i) Canadian Clydesdales refused free entry as the requirements of this paragraph and the regulations made thereunder are not met by the evidence.—T. D. 13862, G. A. 2015.

(j) A certificate of registry in Wallace's American Trotting Registry held not sufficient to admit two mares as pure breed.—T. D. 11192, G. A. 551.

(k) Ten jacks and ten jennets held not entitled to free entry no certificate of registry being furnished.—T. D. 10893, G. A. 388.

(m) Free entry refused because the importer failed to prove that the horses were "pure bred of a recognized breed" and failed to produce a certificate of pedigree.—T. D. 10940, G. A. 435.

(n) Mare purchased at Wolf Island, Canada, and imported, the invoice being authenticated August 29, 1890, and accompanied by an unsigned certificate that she was for breeding purposes but no evidence of registry was furnished. The importer being notified to make entry stated that he was not satisfied with his purchase and would return the mare, which he did. In January, 1891, the mare was again brought in, having crossed the river on ice. On peremptory demand consumption entry was made on January 28, 1891. Held, that the mare was dutiable under the act of 1890 and is not free.—T. D. 11028, G. A. 471.

(a) Shetland ponies refused free admission because no record of their pedigree was ever kept and no certificate was or can be furnished, although from the evidence it is shown that the animals are pure bred of a recognized breed and were imported for breeding purposes.—T. D. 11054, G. A. 497.

(b) The certificate of record and pedigree was not received by the importer until after the case was submitted to the Board of Appraisers. Held, that the status of the animals, whether dutiable or free, is required to be determined upon the conditions existing and made to appear to the collector at the date of entry, and the Board reviews the case upon the facts as they actually existed at the time of the entry and determines whether the collector erred in his action.—T. D. 11998, G. A. 911.

(c) The certificates as to breed of certain Yorkshire coach stallions were by accident not signed by the secretary of the association when delivered to the importer and were unsigned at the time of entry. The certificates were afterwards signed and furnished to the collector after the case had been forwarded to the Board. Held, that free entry is granted upon the existence of certain conditions and none can be dispensed with and that the importer has failed to comply with the law.—T. D. 12447, G. A. 1185.

(d) Free entry refused to a mare not registered in any book at the time of her entry but afterwards registered and it was held that even if the animal had been registered when imported the certificate not showing the registry of ancestors is insufficient.—T. D. 13600, G. A. 1872.

(e) As to animals for breeding purposes imported prior to the date when the regulations prescribed in circular of date of January 22, 1890.—T. D. 13605, G. A. 1877.

(f) Certain animals refused free entry on certificates purporting to be from the American Stud Book, which are not authenticated by the proper custodian and which do not show the pedigree sufficiently.—T. D. 13606, G. A. 1878.

(g) The owner did not at the time the matter was before the customs officers produce the proof required by the second provision of the statute. The horse could not be free without that proof. The assessment of duty was, therefore, correct when made. This court, sitting on appeal, is not a customs officer to whom the evidence must, by the express provision of the statute, be submitted; and can only decide whether the proper proof was produced before the customs officers. It was not and the decision of the Board was correct.—Beck v. United States (C. C.), (84 Fed. Rep., 150).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(h) Twenty stallions and two mares imported by a citizen of Troy, Ohio, under a contract with the National Shire and Hackney Horse Company, of England, held not to be free.—T. D. 10337, G. A. 58.

(i) A lion and an elephant imported for presentation to the Zoological Gardens at Augusta, Ga., for breeding purposes, held not free because article 386, Regulation 1884, were not complied with.—T. D. 10870, G. A. 365.

(j) It is a sufficient compliance with this provision that it was the bona fide intention of the importer at and before he made the importation to import the animals for breeding purposes.—United States v. One Hundred and Ninety-six Mares (29 Fed. Rep., 139).

(k) In a proceeding to forfeit eleven stallions and a jack the informations charged that certain Canadians were engaged in importing animals for sale; that they were not engaged in breeding or raising animals; and that they caused certain citizens of Indiana to make their affidavit to the collector of customs that they were the owners of the animals, and had imported them expressly for breeding purposes, when in fact the animals were the property of the Canadians who imported them for sale and profit. Held, that the fact that the animals were fit for breeding purposes did not entitle the importers to exemption from customs duties, if the animals were in fact imported for sale and that the information sufficiently charged an offense against the customs laws.—United States v. Eleven Horses (30 Fed. Rep., 916).

(a) Animals specially imported from beyond seas for breeding purposes are not subject to duty.—Morrill v. Jones (106 U. S., 466).

(b) Animals alive specially imported for breeding purposes from beyond seas shall be admitted free. The Secretary prescribed that the collector must be satisfied that the animals are of superior stock adapted to improving the breed in the United States. He had no power to make such a regulation.—Morrill v. Jones (106 U. S., 466).

(c) The Secretary of the Treasury has no authority to prescribe a regulation requiring that before admitting animals free, under R. S. 2505, the collector shall be satisfied that they are of superior stock adapted to improving the breed in the United States.—Morrill v. Jones (106 U. S., 466).

474. Animals brought into the United States temporarily for a period not exceeding six months, for the purpose of exhibition or competition for prizes offered by any agricultural or racing association; but a bond shall be given in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; also teams of animals, including their harness
1897 and tackle and the wagons or other vehicles actually owned by persons emigrating from foreign countries to the United States with their families, and in actual use for the purpose of such emigration under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and wild animals intended for exhibition in zoological collections for scientific and educational purposes, and not for sale or profit.

374. Animals brought into the United States temporarily for a period not exceeding six months, for the purpose of exhibition or competition for prizes offered by any agricultural or racing association; but a bond shall be given in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; also, teams of animals, including their harness and tackle
1894 and the wagons or other vehicles actually owned by persons emigrating from foreign countries to the United States with their families, and in actual use for the purpose of such emigration under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and wild animals intended for exhibition in zoological collections for scientific and educational purposes, and not for sale or profit.

483. Animals brought into the United States temporarily for a period not exceeding six months, for the purpose of exhibition or competition for prizes offered by any agricultural or racing association; but a bond shall be given in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; also, teams of animals, including their harness and tackle and 1890 the wagons or other vehicles actually owned by persons emigrating from foreign countries to the United States with their families, and in actual use for the purpose of such emigration under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and wild animals intended for exhibition in zoological collections for scientific and educational purposes, and not for sale or profit.

641. Animals, brought into the United States temporarily, and for a period not exceeding six months, for the purpose of exhibition or competition for prizes offered by any agricultural or racing association; but a bond shall be first given in accordance with the regulations.

1883 | 642. * * * and teams of animals, including their harness and tackle and the vehicles or wagons actually owned by persons emigrating from foreign countries to the United States with their families, and in actual use for the purpose of such emigration, shall also be admitted free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 474, ACT OF 1897.

(a) A beaver imported for advertising purposes, as an aid in the sale of so-called beaver oil and not exhibited except privately, is not free under this provision.—T. D. 25270, G. A. 5674.

(b) Fancy poultry held to be "animals" within the meaning of this paragraph.—T. D. 27611, G. A. 6441.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(c) Wild animals imported by Austin Corbin to form a part of a zoological collection at his park in New Hampshire for educational purposes held free.—T. D 16576, G. A. 3272.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(d) Five persons arrived at Pembina by railway from Manitoba, having with them in a car ten horses and their harness, with a few trunks containing wearing apparel. They represented themselves as emigrants, each claiming two horses. The horses and harness were purchased a few weeks before their arrival and were not accompanied by wagons or other vehicles. Held, not to be free.—T. D. 12956, G. A. 1507.

(e) Free entry of horses brought in by Colin Dow, but the property of Peter Dow who did not accompany the importation, refused.—T. D. 13599, G. A. 1871.

(f) An elephant, zebras, and other wild animals for the zoological garden at Glen Island are not free. The Glen Island resort is an enterprise for pecuniary profit.—T. D. 14704, G. A. 2426.

1897 475. Annatto, roucou, rocoa, or orleans, and all extracts of.

1894 375. Annatto, roucou, rocoa, or orleans, and all extracts of.

1890 484. Annatto, roucou, rocoa, or orleans, and all extracts of.

1883 499. Annatto, roucou, rocoa, or orleans, and all extracts of.

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(g) Rocoa and annatto being articles derived from the seed of a vegetable, rocoa being the product of the seed in a crushed state, and annatto being an article made from the seed and mixed with other substances, and the articles being known in commerce by distinct names, and devoted to different uses, except that annatto, though chiefly used for culinary purposes, is occasionally employed in dyeing, while that is the only use to which rocoa is put. Held, that rocoa is not dutiable as annatto because it had acquired in commerce the name of rocoa, and was bought and sold in trade under that name alone, before this act was passed.—Schneider v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 115; 21 Fed. Cas., 715).

(h) Rocoa is not free as being a berry or vegetable "used principally in dyeing or composing dyes." This exemption applies to berries or vegetables in their native state, and not after they are transmuted, by manufacture, into a substance which takes a different denomination in commerce.—Schneider v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 115; 21 Fed. Cas., 715).

(a) Rocoa is a nonenumerated article, and is dutiable at 20 per cent under this section.—Schneider v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 115; 21 Fed. Cas., 715).

1897 476. Antimony ore, crude sulphite of.

1894 376. Antimony ore, crude sulphite of.

1890 485. Antimony ore, crude sulphite of.

1883 600. Antimony ore, crude sulphide of.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 476, ACT OF 1897.

(b) The product of antimony ore produced by removing the gangue or slag by heat being the crudest form of sulphide of antimony known to commerce, is free.—McKesson v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 996), followed; T. D. 23691, G. A. 5127.

(c) Ground sulphide of antimony held to be free under this provision.—Hillyer v. United States (decided May 8, 1903, without opinion, not reported), reversing T. D. 23816, G. A. 5163, followed; T. D. 24718, G. A. 5440.

1897 477. Apatite.

1894 377. Apatite.

1890 486. Apatite.

1883 597. Apatite.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 477, ACT OF 1897.

(d) Ground apatite is free. The process of grinding does not operate to take it out of the free list.—T. D. 21857, G. A. 4613.

1897 478. Arrowroot in its natural state and not manufactured.

1894 381. Arrowroot, raw or unmanufactured.

1890 488. Arrowroot, raw or unmanufactured.

1883 644. Arrowroot.

(e) Starch manufactured from the root of the plant "Maranta Arundinacea," commercially known as arrowroot, is free as such.—T. D. 11090, G. A. 533.

(f) Arrowroot starch made from arrowroot tubers is dutiable under the provision for starch and not free as arrowoot in its natual state.—Leaycraft v. United States (130 Fed. Rep., 106; T. D. 25221), affirming 124 id., 999.

(g) The starch extracted from the tubers or roots of the arrowroot plant, and which is commercially known as arrowroot, but is chemically a starch, and fit for use as such, is dutiable under the provision for "starch, including all preparations, from whatever substance produced, fit for use as starch," and is not free as arrowroot in its natural state.—Middleton v. United States (151 Fed. Rep., 16; T. D. 27749), affirming T. D. 26825 and T. D. 26234, G. A. 5995.

1897 479. Arsenic and sulphide of, or orpiment.

1894 382. Arsenic and sulphide of, or orpiment.

1890 489. Arsenic and sulphide of, or orpiment.

1894 384. Art educational stops, composed of glass and metal, and valued at not more than six cents per gross.

1890 491. Art educational stops, composed of glass and metal and valued at not more than six cents per gross.

1883 [Not enumerated.]

1897 482. Articles in a crude state used in dyeing or tanning not specially provided for in this Act.

1894 386. Articles in a crude state used in dyeing or tanning not specially provided for in this Act.

1890 492. Articles in a crude state used in dyeing or tanning not specially provided for in this Act.

1883 509. Dyeing or tanning: Articles in a crude state used in dyeing or tanning, not especially enumerated or provided for in this act.
689. Dyeing or tanning articles, in a crude state, used in dyeing or tanning, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 482, ACT OF 1897.

(a) An article may be crude for the purposes of classification, by reason of the use to which it is to be applied, where it is crude in the sense that it is unrefined, although it may be the result of some manufacture. Held, accordingly, that zinc dust, commonly known as indigo auxiliary, an article crude in the sense that it is unrefined, although it may be the result of some process of manufacture, unintentional or otherwise, and which is chiefly used in dyeing, is free, and is not dutiable as a manufacture of metal nor as zinc in blocks or pigs.—T. D. 22415, G. A. 4744.

(b) Lentiscum, pulverized by grinding, held to be in a crude state and free under this provision.—Leber v. United States (135 Fed. Rep., 243; T. D. 25786), in effect overruling T. D. 22949, G. A. 4904.

(c) Zinc dust, or indigo auxiliary, is free as "articles in a crude state used in dyeing * * * not specially provided for." Though crude as a metal it is not crude as a mineral; hence it is not dutiable under paragraph 183 as a metallic mineral substance in a crude state.—United States v. Klipstein (113 Fed. Rep., 1021), affirming 123 id., 996, and T. D. 22415, G. A. 4744, followed; T. D. 23698, G. A. 5131.

(d) Sawdust produced from a very hard wood and commonly used for dyeing and tanning purposes is free as an article in a crude state used in dyeing or tanning.—T. D. 27866, G. A. 6526.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(e) Dried "egg yolk" used chiefly for tanning is free and not dutiable under section 3 as a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 17857, G. A. 3791.

(f) Alizarin blue S. is free as a color or dye, and is not dutiable under paragraph 14 as a coal tar color or dye.—T. D. 17924, G. A. 3799.

(g) Zinc dust, which is partially oxidized atoms of zinc, unrefined, and is ordinarily obtained as a by-product in the refining of zinc, and used in dyeing, is free as an article in a crude state used in dyeing, and is not dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article nor as assimilated to zinc.—Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. v. United States (C. C.), (94 Fed Rep., 822); United States v. Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. (C. C.), (99 Fed Rep., 552).

(a) Zinc dust, or indigo auxiliary, is free as "articles in a crude state used in dyeing * * * not specially provided for." Though crude as a metal it is not crude as a mineral; hence it is not dutiable under paragraph 183, act of July 24, 1897, as a metallic mineral substance in a crude state.—United States v. Klipstein (113 Fed. Rep., 1021), followed; T. D. 23698, G. A. 5131.

(b) Napthaline sulphonic acid is not free though used as an acid for tanning.—T. D. 12224, G. A. 1038.

483. Articles the growth, produce, and manufacture of the United States, when returned after having been exported, without having been advanced in value or improved in condition by any process of manufacture or other means; casks, barrels, carboys, bags, and other vessels of American manufacture exported filled with American products, or exported empty and returned filled with foreign products, including shooks and staves when returned as barrels or boxes; also quicksilver flasks or bottles, of either domestic or foreign manufacture, which shall have been actually exported from the United States; but proof of the identity of such articles shall be made, under general regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the exemption of bags from duty shall apply only to such domestic bags as may be imported by the exporter thereof, and if any such articles are subject to internal 1897 tax at the time of exportation, such tax shall be proved to have been paid before exportation and not refunded: Provided, That this paragraph shall not apply to any article upon which an allowance of drawback has been made, the reimportation of which is hereby prohibited except upon payment of duties equal to the drawbacks allowed; or to any article manufactured in bonded warehouse and exported under any provision of law: And provided further, That when manufactured tobacco which has been exported without payment of internal-revenue tax shall be reimported it shall be retained in the custody of the collector of customs until internal-revenue stamps in payment of the legal duties shall be placed thereon.

387. Articles the growth, produce, and manufacture of the United States, when returned after having been exported, without having been advanced in value or improved in condition by any process of manufacture or other means; casks, barrels, carboys, bags, and other vessels of American manufacture exported filled with American products, or exported empty and returned filled with foreign products, including shooks when returned as barrels or boxes; also quicksilver flasks or bottles, of either domestic or foreign manufacture, which shall have been actually exported from the United States; but proof of the identity of such articles shall be made, under general regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the exemption of bags from duty 1894 shall apply only to such domestic bags as may be imported by the exporter thereof, and if any such articles are subject to internal tax at the time of exportation such tax shall be proved to have been paid before exportation and not refunded: Provided, That this paragraph shall not apply to any article upon which an allowance of drawback has been made, the reimportation of which is hereby prohibited except upon payment of duties equal to the drawbacks allowed; or to any article manufactured in bonded warehouse and exported under any provision of law: And provided further, That when manufactured tobacco which has been exported without payment of internal-revenue tax shall be reimported it shall be retained in the custody of the collector of customs until internal-revenue stamps in payment of the legal duties shall be placed thereon.

493. Articles the growth, produce, and manufacture of the United States, when returned after having been exported, without having been advanced in value or improved in condition by any process of manufacture or other means; casks, barrels, carboys, bags, and other vessels of American manufacture exported filled with American products, or exported empty and returned filled with foreign products, including shooks when returned as barrels or boxes; also quicksilver flasks or bottles of either domestic or foreign manufacture, which shall have been actually exported from the United States; but proof of the identity of such articles shall be made, under general regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; and if any such articles are subject to in-1890 ternal tax at the time of exportation such tax shall be proved to have been paid before exportation and not refunded: Provided, That this paragraph shall not apply to any article upon which an allowance of drawback has been made, the re-importation of which is hereby prohibited except upon payment of duties equal to the drawbacks allowed; or to any article manufactured in bonded-warehouse and exported under any provision of law: And provided further, That when manufactured tobacco which has been exported without payment of internal-revenue tax shall be re-imported it shall be retained in the custody of the collector of customs until internal-revenue stamps in payment of the legal duties shall be placed thereon.

649. Articles the growth, produce, and manufacture of the United States, when returned in the same condition as exported. Casks, barrels, carboys, bags, and other vessels of American manufacture, exported filled with American products, or exported empty and returned filled with foreign products, including shooks when returned as barrels or boxes; but proof of the identity of such articles shall be made under regulations
1883 to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; and if any of such articles are subject to internal tax at the time of exportation, such tax shall be proved to have been paid before exportation and not refunded.

648. Barrels of American manufacture, exported filled with domestic petroleum, and returned empty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, and without requiring the filing of a declaration at time of export of intent to return the same empty.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 483, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Blank checks of domestic manufacture sent abroad to have necessary revenue stamps printed thereon by the British Government not advanced in value thereby are free.—T. D. 19772, G. A. 4220.

(b) In an invoice of reimported grain bags of American manufacture a mistake in naming the vessel may be corrected by filing a new invoice, and the duties may then be remitted.—United States v. Brewer (C. C.), (84 Fed. Rep., 147).

(c) Proofs of identity must be filed at the port of arrival. Where a combined entry for warehouse and transportation was made under article 612 (1892) at St. Albans, Vt., the entry being liquidated by the deputy collector at that port, and a protest being filed there in due time, claiming the goods to be free as "articles of the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States," the proofs prescribed by the Secretary must be presented to the liquidating officer at such original port; and they come too late if not filed until the goods reached the port of destination which in this case was Baltimore, Md.—T. D. 20957, G. A. 4403.

(d) It seems that where it is impossible to comply with the regulations of the Secretary, as to proof of identity of American articles exported and returned, the rule in United States v. Dominici (78 Fed. Rep., 334) would not apply.—T. D. 21476, G. A. 4515.

(e) Treasury regulation—Mixed American and foreign bags—Proof of identity.—A regulation of the Treasury Department (T. D. 18425), promulgated October 2, 1897, to take effect April 1, 1898, requiring importers to pack separately bags of foreign and bags of domestic origin, in order that their character may be readily determined upon examination, is reasonable, and a valid exercise of the power conferred on the Secretary of the Treasury by paragraph 483 of the tariff act of July 24, 1897; and no other mode of proving identity will suffice. Held, accordingly, that where the two kinds of merchandise are imported indiscriminately mixed, the collector is justified in assessing duty upon the entire shipment at the rate applicable to the dutiable goods, although the importers acted in good faith, and satisfactorily prove the proportion of domestic bags contained in the importation.—United States v. Ranlett (172 U. S., 133), distinguished; United States v. Dominici (C. C. A.), (78 Fed. Rep., 334); United States v. Brewer (C. C. A.), (92 Fed. Rep., 341); and ib. (92 Fed. Rep., 343), followed; T. D. 21585, G. A. 4545.

(a) The power to make such a regulation, and to promulgate it, necessarily carries with it the authority to fix the date when it shall take effect.

(b) It seems that where the consignors are the agents of the consignees the act of the former in willfully commingling free and dutiable goods, if committed within the scope of the agents' employment or authority, is imputable to the consignees, as principals, and, if such act be presumptively fraudulent, they are liable therefor.—Ibid.

(c) Sec. 7, act of February 8, 1875 (18 Stat., 307, 308), exempting foreign made grain bags was repealed by the act of 1883.—United States v. Ranlett & Stone (172 U. S., 133, 140).

(d) Where bags are imported, part of which are returned American bags and part foreign, if the appraiser decides that the goods are not as described, but are such, in fact, as fall within a different classification, his judgment must stand unless reversed on reappraisement or by the Board of General Appraisers on protest.—United States v. Ranlett & Stone (172 U. S., 133, 141).

(e) In the light of the rulings of the Treasury Department, and the special circumstances of the case, we are not disposed to hold, that, if the proportion of dutiable bags sufficiently appeared or might reasonably have been ascertained, the Circuit Court could not have adjudged a recovery in that proportion or directed a reliquidation.—United States v. Ranlett & Stone (172 U. S., 133, 147).

(f) Where merchandise liable in large part to duty is entered as exempt, the collector has the right to assume that the mingling was intentional and with design to evade the revenue laws; and hence where the confusion of goods is accidental or not fraudulent in fact, and forfeiture is not incurred, it yet devolves on the importer to show what part of the whole he contends should not be taxed.—United States v. Ranlett & Stone (172 U. S., 133, 146).

(g) In view of the testimony, and considering that the statute was not strictly pursued in the examination (though we perceive no reason to doubt the faithfulness of the officials in the discharge of their duties) and the difficulties in the way of determining the make of the bags, disclosed by the evidence, and bearing in mind that the taxation of so many of the bags as were of American manufacture operated as a penalty in spite of the confession that no fraud on the revenue was intended, we think it unnecessary to remand the cause for another hearing, and that the ends of justice will be best subserved by directing a decree for the refunding of one-fourth of the duties.—United States v. Ranlett & Stone (172 U. S., 133, 147).

(h) In the case of alleged American bags returned after exportation, the production of the documentary evidence required by the Customs Regulations.

if uncorroborated, will not be sufficient to entitle them to free entry if the appraiser upon sufficient grounds reports that they are of foreign make.—T. D. 23324, G. A. 5011.

(a) The first proviso of this paragraph has the effect of excepting the articles mentioned therein from the general requirements of the paragraph; consequently, American made bags of foreign material which were exported filled with American merchandise and on which drawback was allowed under the provisions of section 30, tariff act of 1897, are, when reimported, subject only to duty equal to the amount of drawback paid. Being exempted from the general requirements of this paragraph their identity need not be proved in the manner prescribed by Article 483, Customs Regulations of 1899, but according to the ordinary rules of evidence; and they need not be reimported by the exporter thereof but by any person.—T. D. 23340, G. A. 5015.

(b) A due and substantial compliance with the regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury under the authority conferred by this paragraph is a condition precedent to the importer's right to the recovery of duties paid. Articles 335 to 337, Treasury regulations of 1892, governing proof of identity of returned American goods, were not applicable to importations made under either the tariff act of 1894 or that of 1897. The regulations for such cases as arose prior to November 13, 1899, are to be found in T. D. 16794. Gillespie v. United States (114 Fed. Rep., 1022), followed. The word entry as used in the Treasury regulations concerning the proof of identity required in the case of returned American goods does not refer to the filing of the document called the entry with the entry clerk of the custom-house, but to the entire transaction by which the importer obtains the entrance of his goods into the body of the merchandise of the United States. Where bond is given by an importer for the production of the documents required for proof of returned American goods, or where the giving of such bond is waived by the collector, the importer is entitled to the benefit of such proof if produced within the time allowed; it is error for the collector to treat the goods as of foreign origin.—T. D. 23557, G. A. 5089.

(c) Jute burlap bags exported from the United States with allowance of drawback and afterwards reimported are subject to duty equal to the amount of the drawback, even though they are the usual and necessary coverings of articles subject to a specific rate of duty. Schallenberger v. United States (72 Fed. Rep., 491). This, notwithstanding that when reimported they are filled with other goods and are the usual and necessary coverings of such goods.—T. D. 23853, G. A. 5172.

(d) Photographic films of American manufacture taken abroad and exposed in a camera and then returned without being developed, the price at which they were appraised and passed correct on their return being the same as their value when exported, are free as articles of American manufacture not "advanced in value" or "improved in condition." These last words are to be taken in a commercial and not in a sentimental sense.—T. D. 24012, G. A. 5209.

(e) Where one drives a horse over the highway from the United States into Canada, and subsequently the horse is reimported, it is not necessary for the importer to furnish a certificate of exportation of the horse in accordance with article 484 of the general Treasury regulations of 1899. The provisions of the Treasury regulations are adapted only to the regular and usual course of business, and do not apply to cases where it is not in the power of the importer to comply with their requirements.—T. D. 24035, G. A. 5219.

(f) Where proof of the identity of American goods reimported is offered to the collector prior to the liquidation of the entry, and acceptance refused by him without valid reason, the proof must be given the same effect as if the collector had actually received it when tendered.—T. D. 24265, G. A. 5293.

(a) The rule contained in this paragraph as to proving the identity of returned American goods does not apply to the merchandise covered by paragraph 205.—T. D. 24458, G. A. 5345.

(b) Barley sent to Copenhagen and there converted into barley malt, has undergone a chemical change which renders it a different commodity and is not free of duty under this paragraph, which applies only when the article imported is the identical article exported.—T. D. 25971, G. A. 5897.

(c) Merchandise exported from the United States to Canada in the form of hoop or band steel, and returned to the United States as scrap steel, is free of duty as articles of the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States, under the provisions of this paragraph, without the production of a clearance certificate from this country, on satisfactory proof of the identity of the articles, it being impracticable or impossible to produce such certificate from the nature of the importation. Where the importer has made application for allowance of drawback on any portion of such importation, no refund of duties will be allowed under the provisions of said paragraph.—T. D. 26865, G. A. 6212.

(d) Sugar manufactured in the United States which was exported with the benefit of drawback may be reimported upon payment of duty equal to the drawback allowed.—T. D. 27241, G. A. 6324.

(e) Where bottles containing tabasco sauce were exported from this country to Great Britain and while abroad had attached to such bottles caps and labels and fixtures which materially advanced such articles in value, upon reimportation into this country such merchandise was not free of duty under this paragraph.—T. D. 27576, G. A. 6426.

(f) Where an importer had fully complied with the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury relative to establishing the identity of certain shooks claimed to be of American origin and there was no report from the appraising officer affirmatively stating that the shooks were of foreign origin but only a statement by him that he could not identify the material of the cases as the growth or manufacture of the United States, it was held that the importer had made out a prima facie case for free entry and his claim therefor was sustained.—T. D. 28633, G. A. 6696.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(g) Glass carboys containing muriatic acid, and iron drums imported as coverings or containers for sulphuric acid, being of American manufacture, are free.—T. D. 17074, G. A. 3455.

(h) Claim that bags have undergone processes of repair, amounting to manufacture, and sufficient to thoroughly Americanize them, is overruled.—T. D. 17927, G. A. 3802.

(i) An importation of merchandise made in the name of a mere agent, as consignee, is in legal effect an importation made by the principal and owner of the goods; hence domestic bags of the kind described in this paragraph, and properly identified, are free, if originally exported by the owners, and imported by them in the name of their authorized agent as consignee.—T. D. 18725, G. A. 4038.

(j) Orange boxes made of shooks which were entirely of American manufacture are free and not dutiable under paragraph 216 at 15 per cent.—T. D. 16009, G. A. 3033; reversing T. D. 15674, G. A. 2855.

(b) The neglect of the appraiser to make proper verification of the boxes does not deprive the importer of his rights.—T. D. 16475, G. A. 3228.

(c) Beer exported in bottles (which with the beer were of American manufacture). It was imported spoiled and reported to be of no commercial value, but there was no abandonment by the importer. Held not free.—T. D. 16291, G. A. 3120.

(d) A steam dredge built in the United States in 1882, exported to Canada in 1885, repaired in 1889 at a cost of $2,000, and returned to the United States in 1894, is free.—T. D. 15672, G. A. 2853.

(e) The movements of the watches made in Switzerland and cased in the United States the cases being marked with the name of a domestic jeweler. The watches held not to be the product and manufacture of the United States.—T. D. 16352, G. A. 3181.

(f) Cattle exported from the United States to Mexico from 1887 to 1891 and the cattle and increase imported in 1895. Assessed under paragraph 189 as live animals. Free entry claimed for the cattle originally exported as products the growth of the United States, and under paragraph 373 for the increase. Held, that this paragraph can not apply to cattle which are exported as young and immature animals, unfit for the market and are returned long afterwards as animals fully matured, suitable for market, and that the animals claimed to be free under paragraph 373 are not the increase of cattle which have been driven across the boundary for grazing purposes.—T. D. 16830, G. A. 3349.

(g) Cattle driven or transported to foreign countries are not exempt on being returned, after having been advanced in value or condition.—T. D. 18401, G. A. 3958.

(h) Proofs of identity can be made only as prescribed by Customs Regulations (T. D. 16794, and articles 331–336 of 1892).—T. D. 17850, G. A. 3784.

(i) Proofs of identity must be presented to the collector before entry and liquidation.—T. D. 17918, G. A. 3793.

(j) Regulations for making proof of the identity of articles of American manufacture, must have been prescribed after the passage of this act, and prior to the importation. Those prescribed before its passage are not applicable. In the absence of such regulations proof may be made by any competent evidence.—Bartram v. United States (77 Fed. Rep., 604), followed; T. D. 18529, G. A. 3985.

(k) The regulations provided for this paragraph must be prescribed after the passage of this act, and those in force before its passage are not applicable. Accordingly, until such regulations are made, there are none to be complied with to entitle merchandise of American manufacture to free entry.—Bartram v. United States (C. C.), (77 Fed. Rep., 604).

(l) This paragraph does not apply to cattle which are exported as young and immature animals and returned long after fully matured and suitable for market. Reversing the Circuit Court.—United States v. Cloete (C. C. A.), (81 Fed. Rep., 399).

(m) Woolen cloths know as Italians, dutiable under paragraph 283 (1894), were imported in wooden cases of American manufacture. Excluding cases the goods were worth less than 50 cents per pound, but including cases they were worth more than 50 cents per pound. Held, that the provision of this paragraph constitutes an exception to section 19, act of June 10, 1890, which provides that the cost of the coverings shall be included in dutiable value.—T. D. 22462, G. A. 4757.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(a) Free entry for a boat, desk, and barrel refused the importer not having complied with the regulations governing the free entry of articles of American production.—T. D. 14753, G. A. 2475.

(b) Barrels refused free admission because regulations not complied with.—T. D. 11064, G. A. 507.

(c) The collector having reported that the regulations were not complied with the claim for free admission of barrels containing limes and oranges is overruled.—T. D. 11343, G. A. 626; T. D. 11881, G. A. 872.

(d) The circular letter of the Secretary of October 20, 1890, continuing in force articles 381–383 of the Treasury regulations of 1884, prescribed the regulations under which proofs should be made of the identity of American articles reimported. Such regulations apply to boxes imported filled with fruit, which have been exported in the form of shooks, and proof of the identity of such boxes with the shooks exported, furnished in any other form than that prescribed, will not entitle the boxes to free entry. 72 Fed. Rep., 46 reversed.—United States v. Dominici (C. C. A.), (78 Fed. Rep., 334).

(e) Bags of foreign manufacture made of burlaps were imported filled with sugar. They were greatly injured being cut, full of holes, and useless as bags and entirely unmerchantable. They were washed, steamed, mended, and sorted, so as to render them suitable for use as grain bags at an expense of 150 per cent on their value in the condition imported, and were exported filled with filled with American grain. Held, that the repairing at a cost of about 1 cent per bag is not sufficient to constitute an American manufacture, and that the steaming, drying, sorting, etc., is not a process of manufacture.—T. D. 13368, G. A. 1748.

(f) Bags composed of jute, imported filled with coffee and sugar, without paying duty. The bags were repaired, steamed, dried, sorted, and exported filled with American grain. Held, that the repairing at a cost of about 1 cent per bag is not sufficient to constitute an American manufacture, and that the steaming, drying, sorting, etc., is not a process of manufacture.—T. D. 13368, G. A. 1748.

(g) Two bales agreed upon as representative bales examined and found to contain 1,613 bags of foreign manufacture and 387 of American manufacture and the collector authorized to classify all the bales according to this proportion.—T. D. 14726, G. A. 2448.

(h) Importers should separate and designate bags claimed to be free and furnish the evidence required by law and regulations.—T. D. 15033, G. A. 2610,

(i) Free entry of returned flour bags refused because the brands on the bags did not agree with the brands on the exported bags.—T. D. 15036, G. A. 2613.

(j) Certain grain bags held not to be free.—T. D. 15070, G. A. 2623.

(k) Grain bags of American manufacture returned and free entry asked under this paragraph. The importer could not produce certificate from the collector of the port from which the bags were exported because such certificate had already been given to another importer. Held, that the certificate is a necessary part of the proof of identification and the Board can not grant relief.—T. D. 15334, G. A. 2768.

(a) Bags of burlaps imported and duty paid under paragraph 364 and exported and drawback allowed. Afterwards reimported filled with canary seed, which is free under paragraph 560. Held to be dutiable at 1⅛ cents per pound, the amount of the drawback.—T. D. 15389, G. A. 2783.

(b) Bags of foreign origin shipped to this country filled with sugar were, after repairs not exceeding 20 per cent of their value, exported filled with American grain. Held, not free as of American production.—T. D. 16015, G. A. 3039.

(d) Where bags of American manufacture, on being exported to be returned, were marked for identification as required by article 336 of the Treasury regulations, but on their attempted reimportation an examination of sample packages disclosed but 8 per cent having the same marks, they are not free under this paragraph, on other proof that they were of American manufacture.—Ibid.

(e) It is the duty of an importer to make affirmative proof of a state of facts relieving his merchandise from duty to which it would otherwise be subject, and to segregate from the same class of goods such portions as are claimed to be free. He can not require the officers to separate free from dutiable goods indiscriminately mingled, and in such case duty should be assessed on all.—Ibid.

(f) The original consular certificate described 20,000 bags as shipped by the Glaucus, whereas 7,880 were by the Glaucus and 12,120 by the Cara. The collector admitted the 7,880 and assessed duty on the 12,220. It being shown that the statement in the certificate was caused by a clerical error the collector's action was reversed and the bags admitted free.—T. D. 16536, G. A. 3254.

(g) The proviso that "this paragraph shall not apply to any article upon which an allowance of drawback has been made, the reimportation of which is hereby prohibited except upon payment of duties equal to the drawbacks allowed," applies to bags of jute burlap upon which drawbacks were allowed, notwithstanding that they are reimported filled with nondutiable merchandise, such as canary seed.—In re Schallenberger (C. C.), (72 Fed. Rep., 491).

(h) Butterine subject to an internal-revenue tax of 2 cents a pound (24 Stat., 840) was exported without payment of the tax, and was reimported without being changed. Duty assessed of 2 cents a pound, the importer also affixing internal-revenue stamps to the amount of 2 cents a pound. He claims that the customs duty ought not to have been assessed. Held, that the duty was properly assessed and that the remedy of the importer is an application to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue on Form 38, United States Internal Revenue.—T. D. 14562, G. A. 2354.

(j) The top, bottom, and sides of boxes were manufactured in America, exported, and returned as boxes filled with oranges and lemons, the end and middle pieces of the boxes being of foreign manufacture. Held, that the term "box shook" means all the parts of a box ready to be put together, and less than the whole number of parts does not constitute a shook, that neither the boxes nor the parts which are of American manufacture nor the entire box are free, but that they are dutiable under paragraph 301 at 30 per cent.—T. D. 11987, G. A. 900; T. D. 11988, G. A. 901.

(a) Free entry of certain barrels, boxes, shooks, and baskets refused because the importer has not furnished proof of American manufacture as required by article 382, Customs Regulations, 1884, and Department Circular No. 98, October 20, 1890.—T. D. 12836, G. A. 1432.

(c) Free entry of orange and lemon boxes refused because the importer failed to make proof of identity as required by Article 332, regulations 1892, Circular No. 20, February 5, 1894.—T. D. 15850, G. A. 2950.

(d) The decision of the Circuit Court reversed without opinion.—United States v. Mercadante (C. C. A.), (72 Fed. Rep., 46).

(e) Proofs of American manufacture must be first presented to the collector.—T. D. 12836, G. A. 1432.

(f) American photographic plates taken to Japan exposed in a photographic camera, and returned to be developed, have been advanced in value or improved in condition and are not free.—T. D. 14457, G. A. 2303.

(g) Upon the reimportation of exported American manufactures, the mere failure to state, in the certificate presented on the entry, that the goods had not been advanced in value, or improved in condition since they left this country, as required by the former Treasury regulations, did not justify the collector in requiring the payment of duties, if the fact that they had not been advanced in value or improved in condition otherwise appeared. The regulation requiring the statement in the certificate was unreasonable, as appears from the fact that it was omitted from the amended regulations, on the ground that it was impossible for foreign customs officials to state such facts from their own knowledge.—Hensel v. United States (C. C.), (72 Fed. Rep., 52).

(h) Failure to file the certificate required on the reimportation of exported American machines, immediately upon the entry of the goods, does not deprive the importer of the right to reenter them free, if such certificate is filed in a short time.—Hensel v. United States (C. C.), (72 Fed. Rep., 52).

(i) American wine and whisky exported to Canada and returned without having been withdrawn from the warehouse in Canada. By mistake the merchandise was invoiced by the forwarding agent at Victoria, B. C., as California wine. Held, free.—T. D. 13376, G. A. 1756.

(j) The Secretary is legally empowered to establish such a regulation as Article 332 (1892).—T. D. 14689, G. A. 2411.

(k) Free entry of whisky refused because proof of identity is not established according to article 377, Customs Regulations.—T. D. 13573, G. A. 1845.

The certificate in this case was as follows:

PORT OF HAMILTON, BURMUDA, June 11, 1891.

I, James Tucker, receiver-general, do hereby certify that the goods purporting to be described below, imported into this country from New York, were landed at this port, duly entered at the custom-house at this port on the 7th day of August, 1888, ex steamship Trinidad, value declared to be £250 and have been in charge of the custom-house since arrival, and were returned to New York per steamship Orinoco, Halliburton, master, on the 11th day of June, 1891.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal of office this 11th day of June, 1891.

J. TUCKER, Chief Revenue Officer.

The certificate duly verified by the United States consul, Held, not to be a sufficient compliance with article 332 (1892) to admit whisky under this paragraph.—T. D. 14689, G. A. 2411.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(a) Free entry for iron drums containing ammonia as articles of American manufacture refused because the regulations (T. D. 6235) were not complied with.—T. D. 10412, G. A. 103.

(b) Free entry for bagging for American cotton as an American manufacture refused because the proof required by article 382 (1884) is not furnished.—T. D. 10494, G. A. 144.

(c) A dredge built in the United States at a cost of $8,000, exported to Canada, where it was used for several years, repaired at a cost of $2,765 and returned to the United States, held not to have been returned in the same condition as exported.—T. D. 10894, G. A. 389.

(d) Outside boxes containing gelatine were assessed with their contents and claimed to be free as articles of American manufacture. Held, that the boxes are not entitled to free entry because of the manifest failure of the importer to comply with the requirements of the law and regulations.—T. D. 10933, G. A. 428.

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(f) Grain bags, manufactured in this country from imported materials, were exported full of California wheat. The exporter demanded and received the drawback due him on account of the duty which had been collected upon the imported materials out of which the bags were made. Upon the return of the grain bags held that they were entitled to free entry. The power of the Secretary to prescribe rules and regulations does not authorize him to impose a duty not provided for in repayment of the drawback.—Balfour v. Sullivan (19 Fed. Rep., 578).

(g) A dredge boat which was exported from the United States was again returned, but, before her return, was extensively repaired. The repairs consisted in part in putting in a new dipper and crane, substituting new and much heavier anchors and a more powerful anchor hoist and also in raising her deck to enable her to carry the additional weight. This involved an expenditure amounting to 40 per cent of her value after the work was done. Held, that the dredge could not be considered as "returned in the same condition as exported" and that she was therefore subject to duty, notwithstanding that some of the work was done by American labor, and that part of the material used was American material.—United States v. Dunbar (C. C. A.) (67 Fed. Rep., 783).

(h) Where the usual oath was offered to be made by the importer that the article was the growth and manufacture of this country, and was waived by the deputy collector, as being unnecessary and useless, the duty being claimed on another ground, held that it was only where the collector conceded that the article was entitled to entry duty free, so as to leave only the fact of the American character of the article to be established, that the oath could be material or required by the collector.—Knight v. Schell (19 How. Pr., 168; 14 Fed. Cas., 777).

(i) Held also that the collector is estopped to set up the omission to make the oath as a defense where it has been waived by his deputy.—Id.

(a) Barrels manufactured in this country and sent to Cuba and there filled with molasses and brought back are not liable to duty. The fact of their being filled with molasses does not destroy their character of "growth or manufacture of this country" nor that they are not "in the same condition;" they are barrels still, whether filled with well water or molasses. Overruled (24 How., 526).—Knight v. Schell (19 How, Pr., 168; 14 Fed. Cas., 777).

(b) Barrels sent empty from the United States and returned to their owners filled with molasses do not return in the same condition in which they were exported within the meaning of section 47 of the act of March 2, 1799, and section 9, act of August 30, 1842 (5 Stat., 560), July 30, 1846 (9 Stat., 49), and their value should therefore be assessed in the computation of duties on imported molasses.—Knight v. Schell (24 How., 526).

(c) The inference is against a party claiming that imported goods are American products entitled to entry free of duty.—Kidd v. Swartwout (10 Hunt, Mer. Mag., 81; 14 Fed. Cas., 457).

1897 484. Asbestos, unmanufactured.

1894 388. Asbestos, unmanufactured.

1890 494. Asbestos, unmanufactured.

1894 395. Baryta, carbonate of, or witherite, * * * .

1890 500. Baryta, carbonate of, or witherite.

1883 603. Baryta, carbonate or witherite.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 489, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Ground carbonate of baryta or witherite is free.—T. D. 19947, G. A. 4243.

(b) This provision is not limited to the particular kind of carbonate of baryta known as witherite, but includes all carbonates of baryta, whether known by the name of witherite or not.—Gabriel v. United States (121 Fed. Rep., 208), reversing T. D. 23364, G. A. 5026, followed; T. D. 24331, G. A. 5314.

1897 490. Beeswax.

1894 397. Beeswax.

1890 502. Beeswax.

1883 2. Beeswax, twenty per centum ad valorem.

1897 491. Binding twine: All binding twine manufactured from New Zealand hemp, istle or Tampico fiber, sisal grass, or sunn, or a mixture of any two or more of them, of single ply and measuring not exceeding six hundred feet to the pound: Provided, That articles mentioned in this paragraph if imported from a country which lays an import duty on like articles imported from the United States, shall be subject to a duty of one-half of one cent per pound.

1894 399. All binding twine manufactured in whole or in part from New Zealand hemp, istle or Tampico fiber, sisal grass, or sunn, or single ply and measuring not exceeding six hundred feet to the pound, and manila twine not exceeding six hundred and fifty feet to the pound.

1890 362. * * * all binding twine manufactured in whole or in part from istle or Tampico fiber, manila, sisal grass, or sunn, seven-tenths of one cent per pound; * * *

1897 492. Bells, broken, and bell metal broken and fit only to be remanufactured.

1894 398. Bells, broken, and bell metal broken and fit only to be remanufactured.

1890 503. Bells, broken, and bell metal broken and fit only to be remanufactured.

1883 651. Bells, broken, and bell metal broken and fit only to be remanufactured.

1897 493. Birds, stuffed, not suitable for millinery ornaments.

1894 [No corresponding provision.]

1890 499. Barks, cinchona or other, from which quinine may be extracted.

1890 504. Birds, stuffed, not suitable for millinery ornaments, * * * .

1883 652. Birds, stuffed.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 493, ACT OF 1897.

(c) Birds which have been stuffed with cotton or tow but not wired but so prepared as to preserve their natural shape and appearance and imported in the interest of science are free of duty under this provision.—T. D. 28049, G. A. 6572.

(a) Stuffed ducklings and chicks used as Easter ornaments and in trimming candy boxes are free of duty under this provision.—Morimura v. United States (141 Fed. Rep., 383; T. D. 25872), reversing T. D. 25234, G. A. 5655, followed; T. D. 26064, G. A. 5930.

1897 494. Birds and land and water fowls.

1894 401. Birds and land and water fowls.

1890 505. Birds and land and water fowls.

1883 653. Birds, and land and water fowls.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 494, ACT OF 1897.

(b) Wild geese are free as "birds and land and water fowls" and are not dutiable as poultry.—T. D. 23505, G. A. 5074.

(c) Domestic geese are poultry.—T. D. 23616, G. A. 5103.

(d) Swans are not dutiable as poultry under paragraph 278 but are free as "birds and land and water fowls."—T. D. 23767, G. A. 5154.

(f) This paragraph is not restricted in its operation to live birds, and dead wild pigeons are free thereunder.—T. D. 25360, G. A. 5702.

(g) Live geese raised on Canadian farms and collected therefrom for importation to the United States are dutiable as poultry. The fact that an undetermined number of the importation may be hybrids resulting from the mingling of the wild Canadian goose with the domestic goose and having some characteristics of the wild species deemed not sufficient to entitle the importation to free entry under this paragraph.—T. D. 28345, G. A. 6646.

(h) Guinea fowls and turkeys claimed to have been imported from Italy but not proved to be found there in a wild state are dutiable as poultry and not free as birds and land and water fowls.—T. D. 28652, G. A. 6701.

(i) Peacocks, not being ordinary barnyard fowls, are free under this provision.—Ibid.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(j) Wild ducks, dressed, are free. This paragraph makes no limitation as to the condition of water fowls.—T. D. 10917, G. A. 412.

(k) Dead game birds are free.—T. D. 13678, G. A. 1916.

1897 495. Bismuth.

1894 402. Bismuth.

1890 506. Bismuth.

1883 654. Bismuth.

(l) Subnitrate of bismuth is not free.—T. D. 11227, G. A. 586.

1897 496. Bladders, and all integuments and intestines of animals and fish sounds, crude, dried or salted for preservation only, and unmanufactured, not specially provided for in this Act.

1894 403. Bladders, and all integuments of animals, and fish sounds or bladders, crude, salted for preservation, and unmanufactured, not specially provided for in this act.

(g) Books containing sample leaves of various kinds of paper, the advertisements being in German, English, Spanish, and French, are not free.—T. D. 14639, G. A. 2397.

(h) Music for German operas and oratorios, the words exclusively in German, are free.—T. D. 11340, G. A. 623.

(i) Hymn books with the preface, the title of each hymn and the tune printed in English and the remainder in Chinese, are not free.—T. D. 12578, G. A. 1262.

(j) Sheets of music are not books or pamphlets and, though printed wholly in language other than English, are not free.—T. D. 12582, G. A. 1266.

(k) Printed music, the printed texts including the words of the songs, instructions, etc., in words other than English, are free.—T. D. 12804, G. A. 1400.

(l) Instruments of music containing no printed texts other than the marks of expression to indicate to the performer the manner of performing the composition are not books printed in language other than English.—T. D. 12807, G. A. 1403.

(m) Certain books of music with songs in German text held to be free; others in which the text was merely incidental held dutiable.—T. D. 13323, G. A. 1703.

(n) Certain sheet music with song in German text held not to be free as books or pamphlets.—T. D. 13797, G. A. 1991.

503. Books, maps, music, photographs, etchings, lithographic prints, and charts, specially imported, not more than two copies in any one invoice, in good faith, for the use or by order of any society or institution incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use or by order of any college, academy, school, or seminary of learning in the United States, or any State or public library, and not for sale, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

413. Books, maps, music, lithographic prints, and charts, specially imported, not more than two copies in any one invoice, in good faith, for the use of any society incorporated or established for educational, philosophical, literary, or religious purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use or by order of any college, academy, school, or seminary of learning in the United States, or any State or public library, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

515. Books, maps, lithographic prints, and charts, specially imported, not more than two copies in any one invoice, in good faith, for the use of any society incorporated or established for educational, philosophical,
1890 literary, or religious purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use or by order of any college, academy, school, or seminary of learning in the United States, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

660. Books, maps, and charts specially imported, not more than two copies in any one invoice, in good faith, for the use of any society incor-
1883 porated or established for philosophical, literary, or religious purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use or by order of any college, academy, school, or seminary of learning in the United States.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 503, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Heliographic prints are free as photographs when imported for societies.—T. D. 19899, G. A. 4229.

(b) A law library belonging to a library association and designed for the use of its members is not a public library nor is the association one established solely for educational or literary purposes.—T. D. 21903, G. A. 4627.

(c) A law library owned by the Plymouth County Law Library Association, in Plymouth County, Mass., a corporation organized under chapter 40, Statutes of Massachusetts and amendments, by virtue of which said library is supported out of the public funds and opened to the use of every inhabitant of the county, is a public library, and law books specially imported for such library, not more than two copies of each book being included in one invoice, are free.—T. D. 22079, G. A. 4673.

(d) Public use, what constitutes.—The essential feature of a public use is that it is not confined to privileged individuals but is open to the indefinite public. If the use is of such a nature as concerns the public and the right to its enjoyment is open to the public upon equal terms the use will be public whether compensation be exacted or not.—T. D. 22585, G. A. 4795.

(e) Public law library. A law library owned by the Law Association of Philadelphia, a corporation organized pursuant to the laws of Pennsylvania, which, by virtue of the character of incorporation and the by-laws established thereunder, is open to the use of judges of the courts, resident and nonresident members of the bar, other public officials, law students, and by special permission to private citizens, said library being supported in part out of the public funds and in part by the subscriptions and dues of its members, is a public library within the meaning of this paragraph.—Id.

(g) It seems that corporations of this character which are supported in part by public taxes hold the books purchased by them as trustees and not otherwise, and that the county has such an interest in the library as to be able to restrain a sale of such books. Chester County Law Library v. Chester County, Chester County Reports (Pa.), 181.—Id.

(h) The Association of the Bar of the City of New York is not a public library within the meaning of this paragraph and books imported for it are not free.—T. D. 22662, G. A. 4822.

(i) County law library associations organized and maintained under Revised Laws of Maine, chapter 55, which provides for the organization of such associations and that their libraries shall be kept in rooms in the court-houses provided by the counties, and shall be open to all the people of such counties, and to the support of which certain fees and fines are devoted, are State institutions and the library of each is a State library within the meaning of this paragraph.—Little v. United States (C. C.) (104 Fed. Rep., 540).

(a) The Rittenhouse Club of Philadelphia held not to be entitled to import books free of duty under this paragraph, not being a society or institution established "solely" for the purposes therein specified.—United States v. Vandiver (122 Fed. Rep., 740).

(b) The Society of the Sons of the Revolution is an institution entitled to the privileges of this paragraph, allowing free entry of books, etc., for a "society or institution incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts," etc. Statutes of the same general character as this paragraph are to be construed liberally, being designed for the promotion of an important public object.—T. D. 23718, G. A. 5134.

(c) The privilege of free entry of books, maps, etc., is expressly extended by the language of this paragraph to private schools and academies and is not confined to incorporated institutions.—T. D. 23906, G. A. 5185.

(d) A law library association which extends privileges only to certain classes of people, and the terms of whose constitution necessarily limits the membership, is not a public library within the meaning of this paragraph, and law books imported for such library are properly dutiable under paragraph 403 as books not specially provided for. The use of a public library must not be confined to privileged individuals, but must be open to the enjoyment of the indefinite public, in order to give the library a public character. Whether compensation is exacted or not is immaterial so long as all the public are on equal terms.—T. D. 26899, G. A. 6225.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(c) Branches of public libraries in separate sections of the same city, with distinct collections of books and catalogues, held to be separate libraries.—T. D. 18797, G. A. 4064.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(f) Bound copies of oratorios, operas, and instrumental music, imported for the Brooklyn Library, are free as books.—T. D. 12229, G. A. 1043.

504. Books, libraries, usual and reasonable furniture, and similar household effects of persons or families from foreign countries, all the foregoing if actually used abroad by them not less than one year, and not intended for any other person or persons, nor for sale.

414. Books, libraries, usual furniture, and similar household effects of persons or families from foreign countries, if actually used abroad by them not less than one year, and not intended for any other person or persons, nor for sale.

1894

516. Books, or libraries, or parts of libraries, and other household effects of persons or families from foreign countries, if actually used abroad by them not less than one year, and not intended for any other person or persons, nor for sale.

1890

662. Books, household effects, or libraries, or parts of libraries, in use, of persons or families from foreign countries, if used abroad by them not less than one year, and not intended for any other person or persons, nor for sale.

1883

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 504, ACT OF 1897.

(g) An old violin in actual use by the owner abroad for over two years is free as a "household effect," but not under paragraph 697, as a "personal effect," similar to "wearing apparel, articles of personal adornment, etc."—T. D. 19529, G. A. 4192.

(a) A sucking colt of a mare that is one of a team of horses entitled to free entry under this provision should also be admitted free of duty.—T. D. 25196, G. A. 5642.

(b) Automobiles are properly classed as household effects.—T. D. 27967, G. A. 6557.

(c) If an automobile has been used abroad for several different periods aggregating a year the condition in respect to the operation of the use abroad is satisfied.—Ibid.

(d) Repairs to an automobile made simply for the purpose of keeping the machine in proper condition for ordinary use, amounting to less than 5 per cent of the cost of the machine and not substantially affecting the identity of the article, are to be admitted free of duty under this paragraph.—Ibid.

(e) Automobiles may properly be classed as household effects, and it is not required that their use abroad for not less than one year shall be continuous. If it has been for several periods aggregating a year the conditions of the law are satisfied.—Hillhouse v. United States (152 Fed. Rep., 163; T. D. 27831).

(f) In respect to an automobile used abroad more than one year which had been subjected to extensive repairs shortly before importation, it was held that so much of the machine as was a new manufacture which had not been used abroad for a year was dutiable, but the rest, including the cost of overhauling, oiling, cleaning, readjusting, and regulating, was free of duty as household effects used abroad more than one year. T. D. 25768, G. A. 5849, affirmed in 142 Fed. Rep., 303 (T. D. 27003), reversed.—Hillhouse v. United States (152 Fed. Rep., 163; T. D. 27831).

(g) A single article may for purposes of classification under a tariff law be constructively separated into parts and subjected to different classifications.—Hillhouse v. United States (152 Fed. Rep., 163; T. D. 27831).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(h) The fact that books were not used abroad by the owner and importer for a period of at least one year excludes them from exemption under this paragraph. It avails nothing how long they may have been used by any other person.—T. D. 16481, G. A. 3234.

(i) Horses and carriages, harness and saddlery, are free as household effects.—T. D. 16730, G. A. 3318.

(j) Horses and dogs owned by the importer for more than a year prior to their importation, the horses used for pleasure driving, and the horses and dogs being part of his household establishment and not being intended for any other person or for sale, are free and not dutiable as animals.—T. D. 17168, G. A. 3485.

(k) A piano purchased and used abroad seven months is not free as household effects.—T. D. 16347, G. A. 3176.

(l) Household effects are things which attach to, or directly belong to, the economy of the family, which relate to family life, to the home and domestic management, and are to articles which belong to or are associated with public affairs or matters of a business nature, or connected with the professional avocation or other gainful pursuit.—T. D. 12001, G. A. 914.

(b) Cooking utensils and other household effects belonging to a person dying abroad may be brought in free by his widow and children, the possession of the husband inuring to the benefit of his wife and children. If not free as household effects, then they are free as personal effects.—T. D. 13369, G. A. 1749.

(e) Horses used by Sandow in his exhibitions are not free as household effects.—T. D. 14850, G. A. 2533.

(f) Family carriage horses used as such abroad are free as household effects.—Sandow v. United States (C. C.), (84 Fed. Rep., 146.)

(g) Silver knives, forks, and spoons, owned by the family of the importer more than a century and presented to him by his father seven years ago, but left with the father, and not used by the owner since his ownership, are not free as household effects.—T. D. 15240, G. A. 2733.

(h) Pianos are household effects.—T. D. 14690, G. A. 2412.

(i) Photographic and lithographic pictures, and other articles made of marble, held not to be household effects actually used abroad not less than one year.—T. D. 16428, G. A. 3217.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(j) Carriage and harness held not to be free, there being no evidence of use abroad.—T. D. 11021, G. A. 464.

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(k) A carriage in use abroad for a year, by its owner, who brought it to this country for his own use here, and not for another person nor for sale, is household effects and free.—Arthur v. Morgan (112 U. S., 495.)

1897 505. Brass, old brass, clippings from brass or Dutch metal, all the foregoing fit only for remanufacture.

1883 187. Brass, in bars or pigs, old brass, and clippings from brass or Dutch metal, one and one-half cent per pound.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 505, ACT OF 1897.

(m) Brass skimmings, a variety of scrap brass, fit only for remanufacture, is free of duty.—T. D. 23873, G. A. 5180.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(a) Certain merchandise found to be old brass, dutiable as such, and not as composition metal.—T. D. 17848, G. A. 3782.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(b) Red brass, a composition metal of a light reddish tint, held to be brass in bars or pigs.—T. D. 10865, G. A. 360.

(c) Pigs or bars of metal, the metal an alloy of zinc, manganese, and copper, zinc predominating in quantity and value, are not brass.—T. D. 12982, G. A. 1533.

1897 506. Brazil paste.

1894 416. Brazil paste.

1890 517. Brazil paste.

1883 522. Brazil paste.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 506, ACT OF 1897.

(d) Brazil paste is an unknown commodity, and Brazilian cement, so-called, is not free under this paragraph.—T. D. 27714, G. A. 6477.

1897 507. Brazilian pebble, unwrought or unmanufactured.

1894 418. Brazilian pebble, unwrought or unmanufactured

1890 519. Brazilian pebble, unwrought or unmanufactured.

1883 665. Brazil pebbles for spectacles, and pebbles for spectacles rough.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 507, ACT OF 1897.

(e) Unground and unpolished disks or slabs of Brazilian or Scotch pebble, sawed out of the native block, with the edges chipped or rough, are exempt from duty under this paragraph, as "Brazilian pebble, unwrought or unmanufactured," and are not dutiable as "lenses of glass or pebble, ground and polished," etc., under paragraph 109.—T. D. 23956, G. A. 5197.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(f) Spectacle lenses made from Brazil or Scotch pebbles, imported with rough or unfinished edges, and commercially known as pebbles for spectacles, rough, are free and not dutiable as a manufacture of glass or of which glass is the component material of chief value, not otherwise specially enumerated or provided for.—Young v. Spalding (24 Fed. Rep., 22).

1897 508. Breccia, in block or slabs.

1894 419. Breccia, in block and slabs.

1890 520. Breccia, in block or slabs.

1883 663. Breccia, in block or slabs.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 508, ACT OF 1897.

(g) A species of limestone or marble, crystallized, micaceous in appearance, and composed of broken fragmentary material of a violent or bluish gray color, the cemented fragments of limestone being of an angular character, sometimes called "brèche violette" is free as breccia, and not subject to classification under paragraph 114 as marble, or paragraph 614 as crude mineral.—T. D. 22075, G. A. 4669.

1897 509. Bristles, crude, not sorted, bunched, or prepared.

1894 420. Bristles, crude, not sorted, bunched, or prepared.

1890 426. Bristles, ten cents per pound.

1897 511. Bullion, gold or silver.

1894 423. Bullion, gold or silver.

1890 522. Bullion, gold or silver.

1883 666. Bullion, gold and silver.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(d) A bar of silver about 4½ by 1½ by 1½ inches, held to be bullion.—T. D. 12000, G. A. 913.

1897 512. Burgundy pitch.

1894 424. Burgundy pitch.

1890 523. Burgundy pitch.

1883 667. Burgundy pitch.

1897 513. Cadmium.

1894 427. Cadmium.

1890 525. Cadmium.

1883 607. Cadmium.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 513, ACT OF 1897.

(e) Cadmium sulphide produced by passing sulphureted hydrogen gas through a solution of sulphide is not free under the provision for cadmium but is dutiable as a pigment under paragraph 58.—T. D. 28402, G. A. 6659.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(f) Cadmium yellow is not free as cadmium.—T. D. 13944, G. A. 2049.

1897 514. Calamine.

1894 428. Calamine.

1890 526. Calamine.

1883 608. Calamine.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 514, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Zinc ores known as carbonate of zinc and silicate of zinc are free of duty as calamine.—T. D. 26355, G. A. 6036.

(b) Calamine includes both the carbonates and the silicates of zinc.—T. D. 27891, G. A. 6540.

1897 515. Camphor, crude.

1894 429. Camphor, crude.

1890 527. Camphor, crude.

1883 523. Camphor, crude.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 515, ACT OF 1897.

(c) Certain camphor shown to have been subjected to a new process, which resulted in making it slightly purer than the ordinary crude camphor, the difference between the two being a little over one-third of 1 per cent in nonvolatile residue, was held to be free as crude camphor, said difference being too trifling to justify the classification of one article as crude and the other as refined.—T. D. 24101, G. A. 5243.

(d) A chemical compound, the product of synthetic camphor which is essentially identical with crude camphor derived from the gum of the camphor tree, held to be free of duty as camphor.—T. D. 26995, G. A. 6263.

(e) Synthetic camphor which responds to some of the tests of refined camphor but yet is not entirely fit for the uses of refined camphor held to be free of duty as crude camphor.—United States v. Schering (Fed. Rep., ; T. D. 28576), affirming T. D. 26995, G. A. 6263.

1897 516. Castor or castoreum.

1894 430. Castor or castoreum.

1890 528. Castor or castoreum.

1883 670. Castor or castoreum.

1897 517. Cat gut, whip gut, or worm gut, unmanufactured.

1894 431. Catgut, whipgut, or wormgut, unmanufactured, or not further manufactured than in strings or cords.

1890 529. Catgut, whip-gut, or worm-gut, unmanufactured, or not further manufactured than in strings or cords.

1883 672. Catgut or whip-gut, unmanufactured.
714. Gut, and worm gut, manufactured or unmanufactured.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 517, ACT OF 1897.

(f) Worm gut in the form of strands and catgut strings or cords, designed to be made into articles of fishing tackle or prepared for surgical use by sterilization, etc., being the crudest forms of commercial worm gut and catgut, are exempt from duty as catgut or worm gut unmanufactured, under this paragraph, and are not dutiable as manufactures of catgut or worm gut, at 25 per centum ad valorem, under paragraph 448.—Davies v. United States (115 Fed. Rep., 232), followed; T. D. 23699, G. A. 5132.

(g) Strings made from the sinews of cattle and used in the manufacture of tennis rackets, but which are not commercially or popularly known as catgut or whip gut, are not entitled to free entry under this paragraph, exempting "cat gut, whip gut, or worm gut, unmanufactured."—Davies v. United States (115 Fed. Rep., 232); T. D. 23699, G. A. 5132, distinguished; T. D. 23995, G. A. 5207.

(a) Tennis gut, a manufactured article which is used to make strings for tennis rackets, found to be commercially known as catgut, and being in the crudest form in which catgut is dealt in in the trade, held to be free of duty as catgut unmanufactured and not dutiable as a manufacture of catgut by similitude thereto nor as an unenumerated manufactured article. T. D. 23995, G. A. 5207, overruled.—T. D. 25940, G. A. 5887.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(b) Gut strings for musical instruments are free aud not dutiable as parts of musical instruments.—T. D. 15518, G. A. 2828.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(c) Catgut strings for musical instruments are free.—T. D. 10758, G. A. 311; T. D. 10938, G. A. 433.

(d) Leaders for fishiug lines made from the silk worm's gut is gut not further manufactured than iuto strings or cords.—T. D. 11208, G. A. 567.

1897 518. Cerium.

1894 432. Cerium.

1890 530. Cerium.

1890 609. Cerium.

1897 519. Chalk, crude, not ground, precipitated, or otherwise manufactured.

1894 433. Chalk, unmanufactured.

1883 531. Chalk, unmanufactured.

1883 611. Chalk and cliff-stone, unmanufactured.

1897 520. Chromate of iron or chromic ore.

1894 438. Chromate of iron or chromic ore.

1890 132. Chromate of iron, or chromic ore, fifteen per centum ad valorem.

1883 214. Chromate of iron, or chromic ore, fifteen per centum ad valorem.

1897 521. Civet, crude.

1894 437. Civet, crude.

1883 507. Civit, crude.

1897 522. Clay: Common blue clay in casks suitable for the manufacture of crucibles.

1894 439. Clay—Common blue clay in casks suitable for the manufacture of crucibles.

1890 535. Clay—Common blue clay in casks suitable for the manufacture of crucibles.

1883 [Not enumerated.]

1897 523. Coal, anthracite, not specially provided for in this Act, and coal stores of American vessels, but none shall be unloaded.

1894 441. Coal, anthracite, and coal stores of American vessels, but none shall be unloaded.

1890 536. Coal, anthracite.
537. Coal stores of American vessels; but none shall be unloaded.

1883 673. Coal, anthracite.
674. Coal stores of American vessels, but none shall be unloaded.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 523, ACT OF 1897.

(a) The transshipment of coal from a vessel lying in port to a barge and thence to another vessel is an "unloading" of such coal sufficient to exclude it from the provisions of this paragraph and render it dutiable.—T. D. 21324, G. A. 4464.

(b) Anthracite coal that contains less than 92 per cent of fixed carbon held not free under this paragraph.—T. D. 24392, G. A. 5330.

(c) An importation is complete when the goods are brought within the limits of a port of entry with the intention of unlading them and the right of the Government to duties then attaches. It is not essential to that right that the goods should be actually unloaded. Coal was imported on a steamship and entered at the custom-house, but a portion of it was purchased by the owners of the ship and retained in the vessel's bunkers as part of her coal stores for the return voyage, and was never unladen. Held, that it was nevertheless dutiable; that the sale being made after the importation was complete could not operate to defeat the Government's right to duties. Held, also, that it was not free under this paragraph, as "coal stores," nor under section 2798 of the Revised Statutes, relieving masters of steam vessels from the obligation of unloading their coal and paying duty upon it.—T. D. 24497, G. A. 5355.

(d) Anthracite coal testing below 92 per cent fixed carbon is not dutiable under this provision. Coal which had been brought within the limits of the port of entry prior to January 15, 1903, was not entitled to the rebate of duty provided by the act of Congress approved on that day.—T. D. 24624, G. A. 5407.

(e) Where the cargo of an American steamer consisted of coal, which was also property of the owners of the vessel, who, before the arrival of the vessel in port, set aside a portion of the coal as the coal stores of the steamer, and such coal was not unloaded, held that such coal was free of duty as the coal stores of an American vessel under this paragraph, notwithstanding the fact that the importers made an entry of the entire lot of coal at the custom-house.—T. D. 24497, G. A. 5355, distinguished; T. D. 24705, G. A. 5435.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(f) Semianthracite coal held to be free and not dutiable as bituminous coal. T. D. 10234, G. A. 12, reversed.—T. D. 15857, G. A. 2957.

(g) Certain coal from Swansea, Wales, held to be anthracite.—T. D. 12251, G. A. 1065.

524. Coal tar, crude, pitch of coal tar, and products of coal tar known as dead or creosote oil, benzol, toluol, naphthalin, xylol, phenol, cresol, 1897 toluidine, xylidin, cumidin, binitrotoluol, binitrobenzol, benzidin, tolidin, dianisidin, naphtol, naphtylamin, diphenylamin, benzaldehyde, benzyl chloride, resorcin, nitro-benzol, and nitro-toluol; all the foregoing not medicinal and not colors or dyes.

1894 443. Coal tar, crude, and all preparations except medicinal coal-tar preparations and products of coal tar, not colors or dyes, not specially provided for in this Act.
647. * * * Pitch of coal tar.

1890 19. All preparations of coal-tar, not colors or dyes, not specially provided for in this act, twenty per centum ad valorem.
538. Coal-tar, crude.
731. * * * Pitch of coal-tar.

1883 80. Coal-tar, crude, ten per centum ad valorem.
81. Coal-tar, products of, such as * * * benzole, dead oil, and pitch, twenty per centum ad valorem.
83. All preparations of coal-tar, not colors or dye, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, twenty per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 524, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Free benzidin base, a product of coal tar, not diazotized or azotized, and which is intended for use in the production of substantive azo dyes, is free as benzidin.—T. D. 22110, G. A. 4683.

(b) Cinnamic acid can be made from benzaldehyde which is produced from bitter almonds, and also from indigo and gum benzoin. For economic and commercial reasons it has, however, within recent years, been produced synthetically, almost wholly, if not entirely, as a commercial article, from the hydrocarbon toluol or toluene derived from coal tar. It differs essentially from the benzaldehyde of commerce, being a more advanced and expensive product, and consequently is not free as benzaldehyde. It was assessed as an acid not specially provided for.—T. D. 22563, G. A. 4788.

(f) Trinitrotoluol is not free under this paragraph.—T. D. 26786, G. A. 6171.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(g) Naphtylamine is a chemical compound and a coal-tar preparation, not a color or dye.—T. D. 13566, G. A. 1838.

1883 678. Coins, gold, silver, and copper.

DECISION UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(a) A copper Swedish half dollar held free and not dutiable as a manufacture of metal.—T. D. 15217, G. A. 2710.

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(b) Chinese coin, known in China as copper cash, composed of copper and lead and copper and nickel and used in China as money by count, is not free as "coins, gold, silver, and copper," unless it is imported to be used as a part of the currency of this country or is at the time of its importation a part of the currency of this country.—Crocker v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 378; 18 How. Pr., 85; 6 Fed. Cas., 835).

(c) Chinese coin, known in China as copper cash, composed of copper and lead and copper and nickel, used in China as money by count, if not imported to be used as a part of the currency of this country, is dutiable as "copper when old and fit only to be remanufactured."—Crocker v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 378; 18 How. Pr., 85; 6 Fed. Cas., 835).

1894 454. Copper in plates, bars, ingots, or pigs, and other forms, not manufactured, not specially provided for in this act.

1890 194. Copper in plates, bars, ingots, Chili or other pigs, and in other forms, not manufactured, not specially provided for in this act one and one-fourth cents per pound.

1883 186. * * * copper in plates, bars, ingots, Chili or other pigs, and in other forms not manufactured or enumerated in this act, four cents per pound; * * *.
681. Copper, when imported for the United States Mint.

546. Copper, old, taken from the bottom of American vessels compelled by marine disaster to repair in foreign ports.

680. Copper, old, taken from the bottom of American vessels compelled by marine disaster to repair in foreign ports.

(b) Old scraps of metal consisting of the shells of exploded cartridges and the scrap metal from which the same were originally cut, composed of copper and nickel with traces of lead, but containing no zinc, copper being the component material of chief value therein, are free of duty as composition metal of which copper is the component material of chief value, and are not dutiable as argentine, albata, or German silver, under paragraph 174. These terms are frequently used synonymously and indicate a metal which always contains a substantial percentage of zinc.—T. D. 23469, G. A. 5061.

(c) Old cannon not free under this paragraph but dutiable as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 24549, G. A. 5369.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(d) Composition metal of which copper is the component material of chief value, in sheets which require to be reworked before the metal is available for use, is free and not dutiable as a manufacture of metal.—Grempler v. United States (107 Fed. Rep., 687).

(e) Sheets of composition metal of which copper is the component material of chief value are free and not dutiable as manufactures of metal.—Benedix v. United States (99 Fed. Rep., 258).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(f) A bright yellow metal made into very thin sheets or foil, held to be (1) a composition metal of which copper is chief value, (2) to have been carried by processes of manufacture beyond the metals known as composition metals and not dutiable as such but as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 12934, G. A. 1485.

(g) Wear and tear incident to time and traffic is not a marine disaster.—T. D. 14523, G. A. 2334.

(h) Sheathing metal taken from an American vessel in making repairs rendered necessary by usual wear and tear incident to time and traffic is not free.—Id.

1897 534. Copper, regulus of, and black or coarse copper, and copper cement.

1894 453. Copper, regulus of, and black or coarse copper, and copper cement.

1890 193. Regulus of copper and black or coarse copper, and copper cement, one cent per pound on each pound of fine copper contained therein.

1883 186. Copper * * * regulus of and black or coarse copper, and copper cement, three and one-half cents on each pound of fine copper contained therein; * * *.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 534, ACT OF 1897.

(i) Copper matte is included within the term "copper, regulus of," and as such is entitled to free entry.—Spencer v. Smelting Company (124 Fed. Rep., 1002), affirming T. D. 20326, G. A. 4308, followed; T. D. 23656, G. A. 5119.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(a) Copper matte containing 12.8 per cent of lead is free (paragraph 453, act of 1894) and not dutiable at three-fourths of 1 cent per pound under paragraph 165 (1894) on the lead contained therein. Copper matte and copper regulus are synonymous terms.—T. D. 16966, G. A. 3394.

1894 457. Cork wood or cork bark, unmanufactured.

1890 548. Cork wood or cork bark, unmanufactured.

1883 683. Cork wood or cork bark, unmanufactured.

DECISION UNDER PARAGRAPH 536, ACT OF 1897.

(b) Refuse of cork bark coarsely ground, the principle object of grinding appearing to be for convenience in transportation, is dutiable as waste and not as manufactures of cork nor as unmanufactured cork wood.—Nairn Linoleum Company et al. v. United States (142 Fed. Rep., 214; T. D. 25917), reversing without opinion T. D. 25334, G. A. 5692.

DECISION UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(c) Cork shavings are free.—T. D. 12994, G. A. 1545.

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(d) Manufactured cork means such fabric produced from the raw material or the rough cork as is adapted to use and suitable for sale in the market as such and unmanufactured cork is cork in such a condition as not to be adapted to such use and sale. Cork squares or quarters fall within the latter class and are free.—King v. Smith (4 Chi. Leg. News, 281; 7 Amer. Law Rev., 178; 14 Fed. Cas., 551).

1897 537. Cotton and cotton waste or flocks.

1894 458. Cotton, and cotton waste or flocks.

1890 549. Cotton, and cotton waste or flocks.

1883 { 684. Cotton.
754. * * * cotton waste, whether for paper-stock or other purposes.

(e) Clippings from the seams of knit cotton garments, cut off in the process of manufacture, are free of duty as cotton waste.—T. D. 25433, G. A. 5730.

(f) Thread waste, composed of cotton and jute, the jute being from 15 to 25 per cent in quantity and being of much less value than the cotton, and the entire mixture being known in trade as cotton waste, is free of duty under this paragraph and is not dutiable under paragraph 463.—T. D. 25859, G. A. 5869.

(g) Waste cotton yarn, which has been put through a machine so as to press the waste into the form of sheets similar to cotton batting, the sheets being then wrapped around a roller for the sake of easy transportation and which is known in trade as cotton waste, is free of duty under this paragraph as cotton waste, and is not dutiable either as a manufacture of cotton under paragraph 322 or as a nonenumerated manufactured article under section 6. The loose pressing of the waste and wrapping it around a roller for the sake of easy transportation is not a process of manufacture.—T. D. 25988, G. A. 5901.

(a) An importation produced from cotton or cotton waste, which has been treated mechanically for removing the dirt, seeds, and extraneous matter, and afterwards put through a process of boiling with alkalies, sometimes under pressure and sometimes not, though usually under pressure, and after that treated with bleaching chemicals, usually chloride of lime, for the purpose of further cleaning and then treated alternately with acid and pure water baths for the same purposes, then dried and put up into bales for shipment, is not a manufacture of cotton but is free of duty as cotton.—T. D. 27289, G. A. 6339.

(b) Cotton waste consisting of skeins and warp ends, sometimes white and sometimes colored, which has gone through a machine process to remove the lumps and knots, and which is known in trade as cotton thread waste and is chiefly used by railroads and factories for wiping machinery, on account of its absorbent qualities, comes within the definition of the phrase "cotton waste" and is free of duty. The term "cotton waste" covers all waste material left over in the manufacture of cotton goods in cotton mills.—T. D. 27453, G. A. 6390.

(c) Thread waste, which is a mixture of cotton and jute threads in about equal proportion, is dutiable as waste not specially provided for and not free as cotton waste, in the absence of evidence showing that the article is commercially known as cotton waste.—T. D. 27457, G. A. 6394.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(d) Filtering masse is not free as cotton waste or flocks.—T. D. 15412, G. A. 2806.

1890 554. Cutch.
1883 531. Cutch.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 542, ACT OF 1897.

(a) The article known as cutch and dealt in as such for the past ten years, although not the product of the acacia catechu tree, is free. An article well known to commerce prior to the adoption of the tariff act by a name used in the act is classified thereunder, irrespective of the source from which it is derived or the process of its production.—Schoellkopf v. United States (71 Fed. Rep., 694) and T. D. 20925, G. A. 4398, followed; T. D. 22936, G. A. 4902.

1890 557. Diamonds and other precious stones, rough or uncut, including glaziers' and engravers' diamonds not set, and diamond dust or bort, * * *.

1883 { 687. Diamonds, rough or uncut, including glaziers' diamonds.
688. Diamond dust or bort.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 545, ACT OF 1897.

(b) Rubies or sapphires rough or uncut, of small size and inferior quality, chiefly used in making jewels for watches or clocks, are free under this paragraph and not dutiable under paragraph 191 as jewels for use in the manufacture of watches.—T. D. 21323, G. A. 4463.

(c) Small brown diamonds weighing about one-sixteenth of a carat with one surface cut and polished, intended for use as bearings in electrical instruments of precision, found to have been commercially known and dealt in prior to the time of the passage of the tariff act of 1897 as bort and held to be entitled to free entry accordingly.—T. D. 28071, G. A. 6574.

(d) Diamonds of the description known as bort, drilled and designed for use in wire drawing, are not dutiable as precious stones cut but are free of duty under the provision for bort.—United States v. American Express Company (140 Fed. Rep., 967; T. D. 26490), affirming T. D. 25565, G. A. 5783, and United States v. Fifteen Drilled Diamonds (127 Fed. Rep., 753; T. D. 25046), followed; T. D. 26630, G. A. 6120.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(e) It is apparent that it was not the intention of Congress to put one of the most valuable of precious stones on the free list, while all others were made dutiable. The word "diamonds" was plainly designed as a heading, for convenient reference, and the semicolon following should be read as though a colon. Diamonds are dutiable under paragraph 338 (1894).—Keck v. United States (172 U. S., 434).

(a) Diamonds cut but not set are free and not dutiable as precious stones.—T. D. 15820, G. A. 2920; reversed, United States v. Frankel (C. C.), (68 Fed. Rep., 186), (C. C. A.), (79 Fed. Rep., 995).

(b) Uncut sapphires intended to be used in the manufacture of watches or clocks are free and not dutiable as precious stones.—T. D. 17179, G. A. 3496.

(c) Imitation diamond dust, a mixture of silica and lime, is not free.—T. D. 17632, G. A. 3680.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(d) Garnet pallet slabs, commercially known as jewels not suitable for use in the manufacture of watches but to be used in the manufacture of clocks, are not free.—T. D. 13364, G. A. 1744.

(e) Garnet and sapphire pallet slabs, known as jewels for use in the manufacture of watches, are free and not dutiable as precious stones cut but not set.—T. D. 14710, G. A. 2432.

1894 470. Drugs, such as barks, beans, berries, balsams, buds, bulbs, bulbous roots, excrescences, fruits, flowers, dried fibers, dried insects, grains, gums and gum resin, herbs, leaves, lichens, mosses, nuts, roots and stems, spices, vegetables, seeds aromatic, seeds of morbid growth, weeds, and woods used expressly for dyeing; any of the foregoing drugs which are not edible, and which have not been advanced in value or condition by refining or grinding, or by other process of manufacture, and not specially provided for in this act.

1890 560. Drugs, such as barks, beans, berries, balsams, buds, bulbs, and bulbous roots, excrescences such as nutgalls, fruits, flowers, dried fibers, and dried insects, grains, gums, and gum resin, herbs,. leaves, lichens, mosses, nuts, roots, and stems, spices, vegetables, seeds aromatic, and seeds of morbid growth, weeds, and woods used expressly for dyeing; any of the foregoing which are not edible and are in a crude state, and not advanced in value or condition by refining or grinding, or by other process of manufacture, and not specially provided for in this act.

1883 636. Drugs, barks, beans, berries, balsams, buds, bulbs, and bulbous roots and excrescences, such as nutgalls, fruits, flowers, dried fibers; grains, gums and gum resin; herbs, leaves, lichens, mosses, nuts, roots, and stems; spices, vegetables, seeds aromatic, and seeds of morbid growth; weeds, woods used expressly for dyeing, and dried insects—any of the foregoing, of which are not edible and are in a crude state, and not advanced in value or condition by refining or grinding, or by other process of manufacture, and not specially enumerated or provided for in this act.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 548, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Vanilla beans are free as nonedible drugs not advanced in value or condition —T. D. 19454, G. A. 4171.

(b) Peeled colocynths, sliced belladonna root, siftings from Spanish flies, scraped or cleaned orris root, and split rhubarb root are held to be crude nonedible drugs and free.—T. D. 19455, G. A. 4172.

(c) Belladonna, digitalis, and hyoscyamus leaves, selected and put in bottles, are free as crude drugs, the selection of the leaves not being an advancing process.—T. D. 19584, G. A. 4205.

(d) Crude dried laurel, marjoram, and thyme leaves are free and not dutiable as spices.—T. D. 20208, G. A. 4292.

(e) Papaw milk, invoiced as papaw juice, papaw milk, papaya milk, succus papaya, or liquid papaya milk, is free as a crude nonedible drug, and is not dutiable under paragraph 68 as a medicinal preparation.—T. D. 21347, G. A. 4474; T. D. 22451, G. A. 4755; T. D. 17639, G. A. 3687; United States v. Godwin (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 753).

(f) Peach or apricot kernels are free and not dutiable under paragraph 269 as almonds.—T. D. 21567, G. A. 4540.

(g) Spruce gum cleaned by hand of bark, sticks, and moss is free as a crude drug and not dutiable under paragraph 20 as gum advanced in value or condition.—T. D. 21714, G. A. 4585.

(h) Dog grass, which has been cut into lengths of about two-fifths of an inch is a drug not advanced in value or condition.—T. D. 23142, G. A. 4952.

(i) Sandalwood, the root of the sandalwood tree, used for the purpose of producing sandalwood oil, is free as a drug, crude and not edible, and is not dutiable under paragraph 198.—T. D. 12314, G. A. 1086, distinguished; T. D. 22755, G. A. 4845.

(j) Guarana, which is prepared from the seeds of Paullinia sorbilis, by pounding the kernels in a mortar, after being softened by soaking in water and then shaping the resultant mass into sausage-like rolls, which are dried in the sun, and which is not used as a medicine without being first prepared as a powder, extract, or elixir, is free as a crude drug, and not dutiable under paragraph 68 as a medicinal preparation—T. D. 22782, G. A. 4859; Cowl v. United States (124 Fed. Rep., 475).

(k) A composition used exclusively to make caffeine consisting of about 90 per cent tea sweepings, with slack lime and asafetida, the tea leaves not being ground or powdered, and being in fact diminished in value by the additions, is free as a crude drug and not dutiable under paragraph 20 as a drug advanced in value or condition nor under section 6 as a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 19494, G. A. 4188, reversed; United States v. Hensel; Hensel v. United States (107 Fed. Rep., 260), followed; T. D. 22766, G. A. 4856.

1883 749. * * * American fisheries, and all other articles the produce of such fisheries.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 555, ACT OF 1897.

(e) Fish caught in a bay on Lake Ontario, in Canadian waters, by citizens of Canada, notwithstanding such citizens were employed by a corporation of New York, are not free.—Lake Ontario Fish Co. v. United States (99 Fed. Rep., 551), affirming in principle T. D. 18606, G. A. 4004, and T. D. 18608, G. A. 4006.

(f) Fish caught in Canadian waters by Canadian citizens in the employ of an American corporation are not "fish caught by citizens of the United States" within the meaning of this paragraph.—T. D. 23196, G. A. 4972.

(c) An American vessel cleared for Juliet, Marshall Island, on a fishing voyage, on which the vessel caught a quantity of beches de mer, which were carried into the port of San Francisco, when free entry was refused because the collector was not furnished with a certificate from two respectable merchants (art. 370) as to the truth of the statements in the manifest. Held, that the regulation applies only to the fish brought into the United States from foreign places in a vessel other than the one by which the fish were taken and that the fish are free.—T. D. 11604, G. A. 774.

(d) Fish imported by a firm in a vessel owned by the firm and with nets owned by the firm, one member of which is an American citizen and the other a citizen of Canada, are not free.—T. D. 11680, G. A. 785.

(f) Angora goatskins raw, with the hair on, of superior quality, suitable for use as fur, are free.—T. D. 22831, G. A. 4872.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(g) Plucked rabbit or coney skins, carroted, are free and not dutiable as dressed furs on the skin.—T. D. 18222, G. A. 3932.

(h) Tiger skins raw and only prepared with a solution of lime to keep out moths or worms are free and not dutiable as dressed furs.—T. D. 19158, G. A. 4115.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(a) Turkish Angora goatskins raw, with the wool on, are free and not dutiable as wool class 2.—T. D. 15699, G. A. 2880.

(b) Raw Angora goatskins with the hair on, being for all commercial purposes undressed fur skins, it being unprofitable to separate the hair from the skin and to use the hair as wool, are free and are not dutiable as wool on the skin. Paragraph 605 (1890), which provides for the free entry of the skins without the wool, does not imply that with the wool on they are dutiable.—United States v. Bennett (C. C. A.), (66 Fed. Rep., 299).

(c) Chinese sable skins are free.—T. D. 13686, G. A. 1924.

(d) Plucked coney skins, fur skins from which the long coarse hairs have been pulled or separated from the fur, are free and not dutiable as furs dressed on the skins.—T. D. 10901, G. A. 396.

(e) Since the tariff act of 1846 substantially the same language has been used with respect to dressed and undressed skins in all the acts down to and including the act of 1890, and under a uniform current of Treasury decisions beginning with October 15, 1868, pulled coney skins have been classified as undressed skins. These rulings by the Executive Department should have great weight, because it may be fairly presumed that the importation has been made upon the faith of the decisions and classification heretofore made.—United States v. Wotten (C. C.), (50 Fed. Rep., 693).

(f) Pulled or plucked coney skins—that is, such as have had the hair removed from them—are free and are not dutiable as dressed furs on the skin.—United States v. Wotten (C. C.), (50 Fed. Rep., 693); affirmed, Same v. Same (C. C. A.), (53 Fed. Rep., 344).

(g) The actual character of the skins when imported and not the use to which they are subsequently to be put determines their classification.—United States v. Wotten (C. C. A.), (53 Fed. Rep., 344).

1894 496. Glass plates or disks, rough-cut or unwrought, for use in the manufacture of optical instruments, spectacles, and eyeglasses, and suitable only for such use: Provided, however, That such disks exceeding eight inches in diameter may be polished sufficiently to enable the character of the glass to be determined.

1890 591. Glass plates or disks, rough-cut or unwrought, for use in the manufacture of optical instruments, spectacles, and eye-glasses, and suitable only for such use: Provided, however, That such disks exceeding eight inches in diameter may be polished sufficiently to enable the character of the glass to be determined.

1883 708. Glass-plate or disks, unwrought for use in the manufacture of optical instruments.

(a) All pieces of glass, of whatever form, used in the manufacture of refracting bodies for optical instruments, while in an unwrought condition, are designated commercially as "discs." Glass blanks molded or pressed into the form of prisms or into circular shapes with surfaces approximating those of the finished lens, but which have not been further advanced and are intended to be ground into prisms and lenses for optical instruments, are free of duty under this paragraph and are not dutiable at 45 per cent ad valorem, as manufactures of glass, under paragraph 112. Such prism blanks which do not exceed 8 inches in any outside dimension, when polished on one or more sides to enable the character of the glass to be determined, are excluded from this paragraph by implication of the proviso thereto.—T. D. 24150, G. A. 5252.

(b) Unpolished rough-cut or unwrought coquille glasses, pieces of plain white or colored glasses measuring about 1¾ inches in the dimension of greatest length, and used in the manufacture of spectacles and eyeglasses designed to protect the eyes from glare or dust, are not dutiable under the provisions of paragraph 109. Such merchandise being rough cut or unwrought and suitable only for use in the manufacture of spectacles and eyeglasses is entitled to free entry under the provisions of this paragraph.—T. D. 25252, G. A. 5662.

(c) Unwrought glass plates for optical instruments, less than 8 inches in dimensions, with edges ground and polished, are free of duty under this paragraph.—Hensel v. United States (139 Fed. Rep., 95; T. D. 26193), reversing abstract 2728 (T. D. 25538), followed; T. D. 26336, G. A. 6028.

(d) Pieces of unpolished cylinder glass about 8½ by 11 inches in size, suitable for other uses than the manufacture of optical instruments, are not free under this provision.—T. D. 26479, G. A. 6071.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(e) Plates and disks of glass not exceeding 8 inches in diameter, ground and polished, designed for use in the manufacture of optical instruments, are free.—T. D. 13294, G. A. 1674.

(f) Glass plates or disks of uncolored and colored unpolished cylinder glass, cut into rectangular, oval, or round outlines, the extreme dimensions being 1¾ inches, are free as unwrought disks, etc., and not dutiable as unpolished cylinder glass.—T. D. 14644, G. A. 2402.

(g) Rough-cut pieces of cylinder or window glass for making spectacle lenses are free and not dutiable as unpolished cylinder glass and window glass.—T. D. 15072, G. A. 2625.

1897 566. Grasses and fibers: Istle or Tampico fiber, jute, jute butts, manila, sisal grass, sunn, and all other textile grasses or fibrous vegetable substances, not dressed or manufactured in any manner, and not specially provided for in this act.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 566, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Stems of wheat unbleached, for funeral decorations, are free as grasses or fibrous vegetable substances not dressed or manufactured.—T. D. 19255, G. A. 4132.

(b) Jute subjected to process of breaking, retting, and scutching is manufactured jute and not free. This jute was assessed under paragraph 327 at $20 per ton, but the Board does not pass upon the correctness of the assessment.—T. D. 21596, G. A. 4556.

(c) Jute fiber separated from the stalks and inner bark of the plant and not subjected to manufacture is the ordinary and common jute of commerce, is free and not dutiable under paragraph 327 at $20 per ton.—T. D. 22359, G. A. 4723.

(d) Natural grass sun bleached, used for emblems, is free.—United States v. Richard (C. C.), (99 Fed. Rep., 262).

(e) Stems or heads of wheat or straw intended for funeral decorations and which have been sun bleached, but not dressed or manufactured in any manner, are free as textile grasses or fibrous vegetable substances undressed or unmanufactured and are not dutiable under paragraph 251 as natural flowers for decorative purposes nor paragraph 425 as ornamental grains.—T. D. 22265, G. A. 4712.

(f) So-called "Gallingale rush" from China, each stem being split open and dried, but not further advanced, is free under the provision herein for textile grasses or fibrous vegetable substances.—T. D. 24330, G. A. 5313.

(g) So-called New Zealand hemp held to be free under this provision.—T. D. 24845, G. A. 5511.

(h) Vegetable fibers assorted, dressed, cut into uniform lengths and bunched, being intended for the use of brush makers, are not free under this paragraph, but are dutiable as unenumerated manufactured articles.—T. D. 24860, G. A. 5520.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(i) Bast is free as a fibrous vegetable substance unmanufactured or undressed and is not free under paragraph 558 (1894) as a vegetable substance nor dutiable as an unenumerated unmanufactured article.—T. D. 16337, G. A. 3166.

(j) Canadian scutched flax is free and not dutiable as flax hackled.—T. D. 16829, G. A. 3348.

(k) Sun-bleached wheat straw or grass is free.—T. D. 17150, G. A. 3467.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

1894 498. Gold-beaters' molds and gold-beaters' skins.

1890 598. Gold-beaters' molds and gold-beaters' skins.

1883 710. Gold-beaters' molds and gold-beaters' skins.

1897 568. Grease, and oils (excepting fish oils), such as are commonly used in soap making or in wire drawing, or for stuffing or dressing leather, and which are fit only for such uses, and not specially provided for in this act.

1894 499. Grease and oils, including cod oil, such as are commonly used in soap making or in wire drawing, or for stuffing or dressing leather, and which are fit only for such uses, not specially provided for in this act.

1890 599. Grease, and oils, such as are commonly used in soap making or in wire drawing, or for stuffing or dressing leather and which are fit only for such uses, not specially provided for in this act.

1883 712. Grease, for use as soap stock only, not specially enumerated or provided for.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 568, ACT OF 1897.

(b) Substances obtained by washing the solid residue left after the distillation of wool grease, known as "hard yellow grease" and as "white grease," which are of a yellow color and have the consistency of a hard cake, are so differentiated from wool grease by the treatment received as to make them different substances, and being expressly used in the stuffing and dressing of leather they are free and not dutiable under paragraph 279, as wool grease.—United States v. Leonard (C. C.), (100 Fed. Rep., 288).

(c) Sod oil, a grease fit only for dressing or stuffing leather, bought and sold as sod oil and not being in fact nor commercially known as fish oil (though sometimes made from certain kinds of fish oils), is free.—United States v. Wells (77 Fed. Rep., 411) followed; T. D. 19585, G. A. 4206.

(d) Cod oil being a fish oil, and for the further reason that it is fit for other uses than those specified in this paragraph, is not free, but is dutiable under paragraph 42.—T. D. 23720, G. A. 5136.

(e) So-called yellow hard grease, which is in truth and substance wool grease, though not known commercially as such, is dutiable as wool grease and is not free under this paragraph.—T. D. 24807, G. A. 5491.

(f) Bone grease, produced from bone, which is unfiltered and unpressed, held not to be dutiable as a grease fit only for stuffing or dressing leather.—T. D. 25550, G. A. 5777.

(g) So-called olein, consisting of oleic acid, is fit for other uses than soap making and is dutiable as an acid not specially provided for.—Hill v. United States (151 Fed. Rep., 475; T. D. 27747), affirming 143 id., 361; T. D. 27030, and T. D. 25648, G. A. 5807, followed; T. D. 27781, G. A. 6499.

(h) To bring merchandise within the terms of this provision it must be shown not only that it is fit for one of the purposes therein mentioned, but that it is such grease or oils as are commonly used therefor. Evidence of such by one firm is not sufficient to establish the fact of common use.—T. D. 25410, G. A. 5718, affirmed without opinion in Isaacs v. United States (suit 3627, T. D. 27773).

(a) Niger seed oil found to be an oil commonly used in soap making and fit only for such use.—United States v. Colby (153 Fed. Rep., 883; T. D. 28078), affirming T. D. 27498 and reversing T. D. 26109, G. A. 5954.

(b) To be excluded from the provisions of this paragraph it is not enough that an oil can be used for other purposes than soap making; it must also be fit for such other purposes.—Ibid.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(c) Cod oil is free and not dutiable as fish oil.—T. D. 15522, G. A. 2832.

(d) Chinese vegetable tallow assessed as expressed oil and claimed to be free under paragraphs 499, 558, 568, or 645 (1894). Held to be free.—T. D. 17177, G. A. 3494.

(e) Japanese herring oil is free and not dutiable as herring oil.—T. D. 18008, G. A. 3852.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(f) Sod oil is free.—T. D. 11236, G. A. 595.

(g) Sperm oil double refined is not free.—T. D. 11326, G. A. 609.

(h) Certain wool grease held to be degras and not free.—T. D. 11561, G. A. 736.

(i) Degras or brown wool grease is not free.—T. D. 13757, G. A. 1951.

(j) Grease and oils commonly used in soap making and wire drawing or for the dressing and stuffing of leather, and which are fit only for such uses, are free, though they might be scientifically classed under some of the duty schedules. Accordingly, Japanese fish oil, fit only for such uses, is free and not dutiable as whale and other fish oils.—United States v. Wells (C. C. A.), (77 Fed. Rep., 411).

(k) A dark-brown grease of an inferior quality held to be free.—T. D. 13439, G. A. 1776.

(l) Crude olein is free as grease or oil commonly used for soap making and not as an acid nor dutiable as a chemical compound.—T. D. 15040, G. A. 2617.

1897 569. Guano, manures, and all substances used only for manure.

1894 500. Guano, manures, and all substances expressly used for manure.

1890 600. Guano, manures, and all substances expressly used for manure.

1883 505. Guano, manures, and all substances expressly used for manure.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 569, ACT OF 1897.

(m) Hog-hair waste, used solely as an ingredient in the manufacture of manures, is free under this paragraph, which applies as well to substances that have no other use than forming when mixed with other things manure as to articles which are ready for use as manure in their condition as imported.—Shallus v. United States (129 Fed. Rep., 845; T. D. 25041) followed; T. D. 25085, G. A. 5604.

(n) Lard cracklings, waste of pork-packing establishments, held to be free as substances used only for manure and not dutiable as waste.—Shallus v. United States (129 Fed. Rep., 845; T. D. 25041) followed; T. D. 24802, G. A. 5488, overruled; T. D. 25800, G. A. 5855.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(a) Apatite, sometimes called phosphate rock, ground to a fine powder is free as a substance expressly used for manure and is not free as phosphate nor dutiable as a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 16097, G. A. 3061.

(b) Nitragin is a substance expressly used for manure and is free. It is not free as an acid nor dutiable as a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 18152, G. A. 3909.

(c) Bags made of jute, being the ordinary covering for a fertilizer known as meat meal, are free and not dutiable as manufactures of jute.—T. D. 16831, G. A. 3350.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(d) Gray sulphate of ammonia manufactured from the ammoniacal liquors of gas works is free as a substance expressly used for manure and is not dutiable as sulphate of ammonia.—T. D. 14408, G. A. 2292; reversed, T. D. 15132, G. A. 2658; Marine v. Bartal (60 Fed. Rep., 601).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(e) All imported substances, whether expressly provided for eo nomine or covered by any general language descriptive of their origin or qualities, which subserve the purpose of enriching the soil and thus increasing the crops to be raised upon it, are free.—Heller v. Magone (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 908).

(f) An article, though in fact "sulphate of potash" and at and prior to this act generally bought and sold in trade and commerce of this country as "sulphate of potash," is in cases of importations which are actually used in the manufacture of fertilizers free.—Heller v. Magone (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 908).

(g) Sulphate of potash, the only common use of which, either by itself or in combination with other materials, is as a manure or in the manufacture of manure, is free as expressly used for manure and is not dutiable as sulphate of potash. This was a manure salt made in Saxony from "kainit."—Magone v. Heller (150 U. S., 70).

(h) Whether an importation of sulphate of potash is to be used expressly for manure or not determines whether it is free or subject to duty.—Schultz v. Cadwalader (C. C.), (43 Fed. Rep., 290).

(i) All imported substances, whether expressly provided for eo nomine or covered by any language descriptive of their origin or qualities, which subserve the purpose of enriching the soil are free.—Id.

(j) In relation to each other paragraph 70 (1883) is general and this paragraph is specific as differentiating from the larger class of articles denominated "sulphate of potash," the smaller portion "expressly used for manure."—Id.

(k) Bow hair, consisting of horsehair cleaned, assorted, cut into equal lengths, with waxed knots upon one end, and intended to be used in the construction of violin bows, is free.—T. D. 11562, G. A. 737.

(m) Certain hogs' hair or pigs' hair held free and not dutiable as bristles.—T. D. 12852, G. A. 1448.

(n) Certain human hair found to be raw; uncleaned, and not drawn, and to be free.—T. D. 14252, G. A. 2216.

(o) Rabbit fur, commercially known as hatters' fur, but which has not been prepared for hatters' use, is not animal hair.—T. D. 13313, G. A. 1693.

(a) Old squirrel boas unfit for use in the condition in which imported held not free as hair.—T. D. 13697, G. A. 1935.

DECISION UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(b) Goat hair is free under this paragraph, if it is: (1) either common goat hair, known as such in trade and salable only as such; or (2) if not being common goat hair it is not combing hair, that is, long hair, like alpaca hair of long fiber, which can be combed out, and which is capable of being used for combing purposes.—Dobson v. Cooper (D. C.), (46 Fed. Rep., 184); reversed (157 U. S., 148).

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(c) Goat hair uncleaned and unmanufactured is exempt from duty notwithstanding the provision of section 4, act of June 30, 1864.—Fifty One Bales of Goat Hair (2 Ben., 479; 9 Fed. Cas., 44).

1894 511. Horns, and parts of, unmanufactured, including horn strips and tips.

1890 611. Horns and parts of, unmanufactured, including horn strips and tips.

1883 513. Horns and parts of horns, unmanufactured, and horn strips and tips.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 577, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Polished horn strips ready and completed for use as bones or stays for ladies' dresses are free.—T. D. 19484, G. A. 4178.

(b) Sliced deerhorn intended to be used in the compounding of a medicinal preparation is free under this paragraph.—T. D. 24936, G. A. 5550.

(c) Elk and moose horns attached to the skull, from which the scalp and flesh have been removed, are free under this paragraph.—T. D. 25231, G. A. 5652.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(d) Parts of deerhorns and deerhorn tips, stained, are free.—T. D. 12439, G. A. 1177.

(e) Horn strips for knife handles are free.—T. D. 12802, G. A. 1398.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(f) Polished horn strips ready and completed for use as bones or stays for ladies' corsets or dresses are free and are not manufactures of horn.—Borgfeldt v. Erhardt (C. C.), (41 Fed. Rep., 102).

(g) The commercial designation is the first and most important designation to be ascertained in settling the meaning of the tariff laws. These articles are universally known in trade as "horn strips."—Id.

1890 612. Ice.

1883 723. Ice.

1897 579. India rubber, crude, and milk of, and old scrap or refuse India rubber which has been worn out by use and is fit only for remanufacture.

1894 513. India rubber, crude, and milk of, and old scrap or refuse India rubber, which has been worn out by use and is fit only for remanufacture.

1890 613. India rubber, crude, and milk of, and old scrap or refuse India rubber, which has been worn out by use and is fit only for remanufacture.

1883 724. India rubber, crude, and milk of.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 579, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Scrap or refuse india rubber worn out by use, assorted and ground for convenience in transportation or remanufacturing, is free under this paragraph.—T. D. 28360, G. A. 6652.

DECISION UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(d) Recovered gutta-percha is not free as crude india rubber.—T. D. 15006, G. A. 2583.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(e) Old india-rubber shoes, invoiced as "rubber scrap" and entered as "scrap-rubber," were free under the similitude clause as being substantially crude rubber, they having lost their commercial value as articles composed of india rubber, or india-rubber fabrics, or india-rubber shoes, and were not dutiable as articles composed of india rubber. Affirming 43 Fed. Rep., 288.—Cadwalader v. Jessup & Moore (149 U. S., 350).

(f) Articles composed of india rubber within the meaning of this act are articles prepared or manufactured from india rubber of which the preparation or manufacture constitute some portion of their commercial value. If the commercial value of old rubber shoes is due solely to the rubber they contain and not to the preparation or manufacture which they had undergone, they are free and not dutiable as articles composed of india rubber.—Jessup & Moore Paper Co. v. Cadwalader (C. C.), (43 Fed. Rep., 288).

1894 514. Indigo, * * *.

1890 614. Indigo.

1883 537. Indigo and artificial indigo.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 580, ACT OF 1897.

(g) Indigo derived synthetically from coal-tar products, imported in casks in the form of powder suspended in water, is free and not dutiable under paragraph 58 as a color.—T. D. 20925, G. A. 4398.

(h) Powdered indigo being specially provided for under this paragraph is free and not dutiable under paragraph 24 as a drug.—T. D. 23256, G. A. 4986.

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(i) The act of July 14, 1832, section 2, clause 24 (4 Stat., 583), levies a duty of 15 per cent on indigo. The act of March 2, 1833, section 5 (4 Stat., 629), declares that it shall be free after June 30, 1842. The act of 1841, section 1 (5 Stat., 463), leaves a duty of 20 per cent on all articles imported after September 30, 1841, which were then free or chargeable with a duty of less than 2^ per cent, except on certain enumerated articles among which is indigo "which shall pay, respectively, the same rate of duties imposed upon them under existing laws." Held, that the act of 1841 did not lay a permanent duty of 15 per cent on indigo but left the duty where it stood under the act of 1833, and to expire after June 30, 1842, and no duty is due under the act of 1842, section 25.—United States v. Wigglesworth (2 Story, 369; 28 Fed. Cas., 595).

1897 584. Ivory tusks in their natural state or cut vertically across the grain only, with the back left intact, and vegetable ivory in its natural state.

1894 519. Ivory, sawed or cut into logs, but not otherwise manufactured, and vegetable ivory.

1890 618. Ivory and vegetable ivory, not sawed, cut, or otherwise manufactured.

1883 726. Ivory, and vegetable ivory, unmanufactured.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(a) Cross sections 2 by 2½ inches long, sawed from the solid portions of ivory tusks, with the outer covering or bark left on, and generally known in trade as "billiard ball blocks" and "logs," are free and not dutiable as manufactures of ivory.—Arbib v. United States (86 Fed. Rep., 121), reversing T. D. 18616, G. A. 4014.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(b) Billiard ball blocks are not free.—T. D. 11870, G. A. 861.

(c) Ivory sawed into pieces of different lengths, the different parts being adapted to different uses, and the sawing done for the purpose of selection, is not free.—T. D. 12549, G. A. 1233.

(d) An importer of ivory called the attention of the Ways and Means Committee to the fact that a certain provision relating to cut ivory, in a tariff bill then in preparation, would make a tusk once sawed dutiable, but the bill was not changed in this respect. Held, that it should be presumed that Congress intended to make ivory, once sawed, subject to duty.—In re Gerdau (C. C.), (54 Fed. Rep., 143).

(e) The provisions of this paragraph do not apply to elephants' tusks sawed into pieces of various lengths, when such sawing requires skill and judgment and is done, not for convenience of transportation, but to separate the ivory into different grades adapted to different uses.—Id.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(a) A silver medal, issued in 1892 to commemorate the fourth centennial anniversary of the discovery of America, is not free, but dutiable as a manufacture of metal.—T. D. 16656, G. A. 3301.

(b) A copper medal, bearing on one side a bust and the name "Jean Varin," on the other "Born at Liege in 1604. Died in 1672. Gallery metallic of Great Frenchmen," is not a trophy and not free.—T. D. 18153, G. A. 3910.

(c) A gold medal, presented by pupils and graduates of a school to their principal as an honorary distinction for his services as an educator, and agreed to be accepted prior to importation, and specially imported for that purpose, is free.—T. D. 18602, G. A. 4000.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(d) Religious emblems are not free as medals.—T. D. 10934, G. A. 429.

(f) A gold horseshoe scarf pin set with diamonds and having in the center a picture of the Prince of Wales, presented by the Prince to Doctor Carver, "The Great American Marksman," is not free as a medal or trophy.—T. D. 14160, G. A. 2159.

(g) Medals made of copper, washed with silver, to be distributed as prizes or awards of merit to Catholic school children, are free.—T. D. 13497, G. A. 1799; Reversed, T. D. 15813, G. A. 2913.

(h) Medals made of copper, washed with silver, commonly used for distribution as prizes to school children, but which have not been awarded as trophies or prizes, are not free.—United States v. McSorley (C. C. A), (65 Fed. Rep., 492).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(i) Medals of copper, manufactured in London by order of the National Greyhound Club to satisfy awards made at bench shows, are free as trophies.—T. D. 13759, G. A. 1953.

1883 741. Meerschaum, crude or raw.

1897 614. Minerals, crude, or not advanced in value or condition by refining or grinding, or by other process of manufacture, not specially provided for in this act.

556. Minerals, crude, or not advanced in value or condition by refining 1894 or grinding, or by other process of manufacture, not specially provided for in this act.

651. Minerals, crude, or not advanced in value or condition by refining 1890 or grinding, or by other process of manufacture, not specially provided for in this act.

638. Crude minerals, not advanced in value or condition by refining or 1883 grinding, or by other process of manufacture, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 614, ACT OF 1897.

(b) Natural gas is free as a crude mineral, and is not dutiable as crude bitumen nor as a nonenumerated raw or unmanufactured article.—T. D. 14143, G. A. 2142; T. D. 20757, G. A. 4364; In re Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. (C. C.), (73 Fed. Rep., 191); United States v. Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. (C. C. A.), (78 Fed. Rep., 110); Same v. Same (172 U. S., 339).

(c) The rule is familiar that in the interpretation of the laws relating to the revenues the words are to be taken in their commonly received and popular sense, or according to their commercial designation if that differs from the ordinary understanding of the word.—United States v. Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. (172 U. S., 339, 341).

(d) Natural gas would fairly come under the head of a crude mineral (paragraph 651, act 1890) if there were no more limited classification in the act, but the classification of crude bitumen (paragraph 496, 1890) is more limited, and we are of opinion that, upon the evidence, natural gas is properly thus described.—United States v. Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. (172 U. S., 339, 341).

(e) Water from Lourdes is not a mineral water, but is free as a crude mineral.—T. D. 23933, G. A. 5192.

(f) Tungsten ore found not to contain particles of metal and held to be free as a crude mineral.—Hempstead v. United States (122 Fed. Rep., 538), reversing 115 Fed. Rep., 256; and T. D. 23091, G. A. 4936, followed.

(g) Caen stone in small fragments, the sweepings of a stone or marble yard, is free under this provision.—T. D. 24988, G. A. 5573.

(h) Gravel brought into a port of the United States as ballast, though entered as a merchantable commodity, is entitled to free entry under this paragraph.—T. D. 25627, G. A. 5797.

(i) Zinc ore in which the metal is not present in a native state, which has been broken into small pieces and freed from rock, is free as minerals crude or not advanced in value or condition by refining or grinding or by other process of manufacture.—T. D. 27891, G. A. 6540.

(j) "Terrazo" or "granito," the waste from marble quarries, crushed in a machine and sifted or sorted into various sizes, is held to be free of duty as crude mineral.—T. D. 28289, G. A. 6631.

(k) Vanadium ore, which in its imported condition is just as it was taken from the earth, found to be a mineral substance in which metal is not present in the metallic state and hence not dutiable as a metallic mineral substance, but free of duty as a crude mineral.—Hempstead v. Thomas (122 Fed. Rep., 538), followed; T. D. 28467, G. A. 6673.

(l) So-called whetstone blocks, nearly rectangular in shape and weighing approximately from 80 to 110 pounds, which after being quarried have been roughly dressed for the purpose of removing the projections, and which are shown by the evidence to be used in their imported condition by calico printers for sharpening instruments and grinding the edges of rollers, are free of duty under this paragraph.—Johnson v. United States (152 Fed. Rep., 656; T. D. 27834).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(a) French or tailor's chalk (talc) is not crude mineral and is not free. This importation was assessed as chalk, but the Board does not say whether it was correctly assessed, only overruling the protest.—T. D. 17478, G. A. 3617.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(b) Ground talc is a crude mineral.—T. D. 10784, G. A. 337.

(c) Smithsonite or Adamonite, mined in Greece, held to be crude mineral containing a metallic substance and free.—T. D. 13352, G. A. 1732.

(d) Certain irregular pieces of stone, designed to be broken up and used in the manufacture of paving stones or concrete pavements, held free as crude minerals and not dutiable as waste nor as a nonenumerated article nor free as lithographic stones.—T. D. 13788, G. A. 1982.

(e) Cornish stone is free as a crude mineral substance and not as flint stone nor dutiable as china clay.—T. D. 14459, G. A. 2305.

1897 615. Mineral salts obtained by evaporation from mineral waters, when accompanied by a duly authenticated certificate and satisfactory proof, showing that they are in no way artificially prepared, and are only the product of a designated mineral spring.

1894 555. [Mineral waters, all not artificial,] and mineral salts of the same, obtained by evaporation, when accompanied by duly authenticated certificate, showing that they are in no way artificially prepared, and are the product of a designated mineral spring; * * *.

(g) Failure to file at time of entry the certificate required by this paragraph, covering mineral salts obtained from a designated mineral spring, does not deprive the importer of the right to have his goods passed free, provided he furnishes the necessary certificate to the collector before the liquidation of the entry. "Entry" held to mean the entire transaction by which the importer obtains the entrance of his goods into the body of the merchandise of the United States and not the mere filing of the document called the entry with the entry clerk of the custom-house.—T. D. 23850, G. A. 5169.

1897 616. Models of inventions and of other improvements in the arts, including patterns for machinery, but no article shall be deemed a model or pattern which can be fitted for use otherwise.

1894 557. Models of inventions and of other improvements in the arts, including patterns for machinery, but no article shall be deemed a model or pattern which can be fitted for use otherwise.

1890 652. Models of inventions and of other improvements in the arts, including patterns for machinery, but no article shall be deemed a model or pattern which can be fitted for use otherwise.

1883 743. Models of inventions and other improvements in the arts; but no article or articles shall be deemed a model or improvements which can be fitted for use.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 616, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Wood carvings, imported to be used as patterns for purposes of reproduction, but fit for use otherwise, are not free. The fact that such articles are destroyed by their use as patterns is immaterial, inasmuch as goods must be classified in the condition imported.—T. D. 22724, G. A. 4838.

(b) To entitle an article to free entry as a model or pattern, it must be shown to be a model of invention or other improvement in the arts, or a pattern of machinery, and that it can not be used otherwise than as a pattern or model.—Id.

(c) The model of a yacht held not to be free as a model of invention.—T. D. 24072, G. A. 5234.

(d) Various metal articles showing the construction and assemblage of the blades of a steam turbine and comprising but a small proportion of the parts required for a complete turbine, some of which would have to be taken apart before they could be used, which could not be done without injury, and all of which are constructed according to English gauge, rendering impracticable their use in an American factory otherwise than as patterns designed to convey the inventor's idea to the machinists, are free of duty under this paragraph.—T. D. 26874, G. A. 6217.

(e) Molders' pattern made of wood, used to form the mold in the sand into which molten metal is poured in the production of castings for machinery, are free of duty as patterns for machinery.—United States v. Hoe (147 Fed. Rep., 201; T. D. 27194), affirming 141 id., 488; T. D. 26485, and reversing T. D. 25942, G. A. 5889, followed; T. D. 27798, G. A. 6510.

(f) Exact models of steamships on a scale of 75 to 1, valued at about $1,000 each, showing the details of the vessels and intended for exhibition in the offices of the steamship companies, held to be free as models of improvements in the arts.—Boas v. United States (128 Fed. Rep., 470; T. D. 25024).

DECISION UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(g) Dress patterns are not models of inventions.—T. D. 18085, G. A. 3887.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(h) Fire-alarm telegraphing machines, full-sized operating machines fitted for practical use, are not free though intended for exhibition and to be returned.—T. D. 12304, G. A. 1076.

(i) Plaster-of-Paris casts imported by furniture makers, being designs representing pieces of work such as "headpiece of an armchair," "picture frame," "head of bacchanalians," to be placed in the hands of workmen as guides in carving, are not free under this or paragraph 677 (1890).—T. D. 12427, G. A. 1165.

(j) A ticket-numbering machine suitable for use otherwise than as a model held not free.—T. D. 14298, G. A. 2227.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(k) This paragraph is applicable to such miniature models and the like as are intended to illustrate the articles which they are claimed to represent and which are not in themselves intended and fitted for use as models or patterns in designing and making new articles suitable for practical use.—T. D. 12373, G. A. 1145.

(a) Patterns or models of cornices, friezes, and other wall or ceiling decorations or ornaments, composed of plaster or earthy substances, designed and fitted for use in making decorations or ornaments, are not free.—T. D. 12373, G. A. 1145.

1894 558. Moss, seaweeds, and vegetable substances, crude or unmanufactured, not otherwise specially provided for in this act.

1890 653. Moss, seaweeds, and vegetable substances, crude or unmanufactured, not otherwise specially provided for in this act.

1883 744. Moss, seaweeds, and all other vegetable substances used for beds and mattresses.
777. Seaweed, not otherwise provided for.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 617, ACT OF 1897.

(b) Pine cones are free as a crude vegetable substance and are not dutiable under paragraph 272 as nuts.—T. D. 20038, G. A. 4260.

(c) Pea hulls which have been subjected to a process of cutting are free of duty as "vegetable substances, crude or unmanufactured," and are not dutiable as uneumerated manufactured articles.—In re McCrea (G. A. 3864), affirmed by the Circuit Court for the Northern District of New York, followed; T. D. 23431, G. A. 5052.

(d) Cuttings of holly with the leaves and berries attached are free as vegetable substances, crude or unmanufactured, and are not dutiable under paragraph 252 as "stocks, cuttings, and seedlings."—T. D. 23665, G. A. 5122.

(e) Seaweed dried in the sun, though imported for edible purposes, is free as seaweeds crude or unmanufactured.—T. D. 24151, G. A. 5253.

(f) So-called sea moss or sea grass used in the manufacture of mattresses and for upholstery purposes, etc., is free under this paragraph and not dutiable under paragraph 81.—In re Myers (123 Fed. Rep., 952); T. D. 24788, G. A. 5480.

(g) Stalks of the garden angelica of Europe (Archangelica officinalis) imported in brine for preservation during transportation, intended to be candied and used as comfits or sweetmeats and not for culinary purposes like ordinary vegetables, are not dutiable as vegetables in their natural state, but are free as crude vegetable substances.—T. D. 24917, G. A. 5547.

(h) Vegetables used by the Chinese for edible purposes are not free of duty under this paragraph.—T. D. 27019, G. A. 6266.

(i) Loofah, consisting of the pith of a gourd in a crude condition, having been subjected to no other process than the removing of the skin or rind, is free as a crude vegetable substance unmanufactured.— T. D. 24962, G. A. 5559.

(j) An edible fungus grown upon the bark of dead trees in China, which is to some extent a cultivated product and is cooked and eaten by the Chinese after the manner of cabbage and other greens, is dutiable as a vegetable and is not free under the provision for vegetable substances, crude or unmanufactured.—T. D. 26812, G. A. 6184; affirmed without opinion in Quong Yuen Shing & Company et al. v. United States (suits 4143/4, T. D. 27666).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(k) Copra is free as a crude vegetable substance and not dutiable as prepared or desiccated copra nor as a nonenumerated unmanufactured article.—T. D. 15417, G. A. 2811.

(a) Oat chaff is free as a crude vegetable substance and is not dutiable as a nonennmerated article. (These were ground oat hulls.)—T. D. 16228, G. A. 3107.

(b) Pea hulls are free as crude vegetable substances and are not dutiable as waste.—T. D. 18020, G. A. 3864.

(c) Lily-of-the-valley roots are not ejusdem generis with the articles herein enumerated.—McAllister v. United States (147 Fed. Rep., 773; T. D. 27037).

(d) Sugar cane is free as a vegetable substance not manufactured.—T. D. 18406, G. A. 3963.

(e) In construing provisions such as this paragraph the principle "noscitur a sociis" is to be applied, so as to confine the concluding general words to vegetable substances of the same kind with those specifically enumerated. Ingersoll v. Magone (53 Fed. Rep., 1008), distinguished.—Dodge v. United States (C. C. A.), (84 Fed. Rep., 449).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(f) Copra, the dried meat of the cocoanut, is free as an unmanufactured vegetable substance and not as a drug, as dried fruit, as cocoanut, nor dutiable as a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 13820, G. A. 2014.

(g) Cotton-seed hulls are free as crude vegetable substances.—T. D. 14705, G. A. 2427.

(i) Dried immortelle flowers in a natural state are free.—T. D. 13375, G. A. 1755.

(j) Cut flowers (Bermuda lilies green or in their natural condition) are free as cut flowers and not as drugs nor as plants, nor dutiable as nonenumerated articles.—T. D. 14759, G. A. 2481.

(k) Dyed grasses, natural, are free.—T. D. 13375, G. A. 1755.

(l) Loofah is free as a crude vegetable substance and not as a vegetable substance, nor is it dutiable as a nonenumerated article. It was claimed to be free under paragraph 597 (1890) and not under paragraph 653 (1890), so the protest was overruled.—T. D. 15411, G. A. 2805.

(m) Mustard dross, the hull or refuse after the seed has been pressed, pounded, and sifted, is free and not dutiable as waste.—T. D. 14739, G. A. 2461.

(o) Tonka-bean crystals are free.—T. D. 14836, G. A. 2519.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 626, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Olive oil, fit only for manufacturing purposes, although packed in second-hand petroleum tins, is free.—T. D. 19902, G. A. 4232.

(b) Olive oil for manufacturing or mechanical purposes and fit only for such use, whether in casks or tins, and valued at not more than 60 cents per gallon, is free and not dutiable under paragraph 40. Its use as an article of food by a small class of persons is not sufficient to take it out of the provisions of this paragraph on the ground that it is fit for food.—T. D. 21288, G. A. 4459.

(c) Certain concentrated essences of flowers in which petroleum was used as a solvent held free as enfleurage grease and not dutiable as a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 21424, G. A. 4499.

(d) Peanut oil is free as nut oil and not dutiable under paragraph 3 as an expressed oil.—T. D. 21475, G. A. 4514.

(e) A preparation made by cooking sesame seed from which the oil has not been extracted, and intended to be made into sweetmeat, but not yet finished, was assessed as sweetmeats and claimed to be free as sesame oil. Held not to be sweetmeats or sesame oil, but a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 22435, G. A. 4748.

(f) An article called "albolene," a mechanical combination of ceresia and petroleum (ceresia chief value), is not a petroleum product.—Ropes v. United States (123 Fed. Rep., 990).

(a) "Enfleuraged pomade, concentrated, not suitable for toilet use," is free of duty under this paragraph and not dutiable as an essential oil under paragraph 3.—T. D. 23965, G. A. 5200.

(c) Olive oil containing a large percentage of free fatty acid, having an acrid taste, a strong, offensive, and rancid odor, unsafe for human consumption, and not imported or adapted for food consumption, is entitled to free entry under this paragraph as olive oil for manufacturing or mechanical purposes and "fit only for such use." The fact that such oil is used for frying or salads by a class of foreigners presumably ignorant of its deleterious qualities and injurious effects does not show that it is fit for use as a food.—Oil Seeds Pressing Company v. United States (120 Fed. Rep., 1022), affirming 114 Fed. Rep., 793, and reversing T. D. 21613, G. A. 4557, followed; T. D. 24685, G. A. 5427.

(d) Oil made from the fruit of the Chinese oil tree, so called, different species of which are known to scientists as aleurites cordata, Jatropha curcas, etc., is nut oil.—Hills v. United States (127 Fed. Rep., 970; T. D. 24871), in effect overruling T. D. 19907, G. A. 4237, followed; T. D. 24787, G. A. 5479.

(e) Oil of cassia, so known commercially, though produced by a chemical process from other materials than cassia buds, is free of duty under the provision for oil of cassia. When an article is shown to have a certain commercial designation, a tariff provision for merchandise of that name covers it, although said article may be the result of a chemical process in which different materials or ingredients are substituted for the substance from which the article was in former times made, provided, however, that the resultant of the process is a product that differs from the original article in no respect save origin and composition.—T. D. 24905, G. A. 5535.

(f) Ammonlum ichthyol-sulfonate held to be the article provided for in this paragraph under the name of ichthyol.—T. D. 25376, G. A. 5703.

(g) Artificial oil of rose, a synthetic chemical product possessing substantially the same properties as the natural oil of rose, held to be free of duty under the provision herein for ottar of roses.—T. D. 25438, G. A. 5732.

(h) An article consisting of sesame and peanut oils in combination not free under this paragraph, but is dutiable as expressed oil under paragraph 3.—T. D. 25646, G. A. 5805.

(i) A lubricating oil consisting chiefly of resin oil partly saponified is not free under this paragraph.—T. D. 25769, G. A. 5850.

(j) The provision herein for enfleurage grease does not include such a product if impregnated with odors derived from odor-bearing bodies other than flowers, and an article derived from orris root in whole or in part by distillation is dutiable as an essential oil and is not free as enfleurage grease.—T. D. 26181, G. A. 5972.

(k) Where a country assesses a specific duty upon the gross weight of petroleum and the products of petroleum exported from the United States to that country, the proper application of the provisions of this paragraph requires that in assessing the same rate of duty upon like merchandise coming from that country to this it also be assessed upon the gross weight.—T. D. 26602, G. A. 6105.

(a) Lithyol, although similar in use to ichthyol, is not free as ichthyol, but is dutiable as a medicinal preparation.—T. D. 27323, G. A. 6355.

(c) Where an importer, by protest, challenges the correctness of the rate or amount of duty levied by the collector upon a product of petroleum, which rate or amount is controlled, under the proviso to this paragraph, by the duty imposed by the country of production upon a like commodity exported thereto from the United States, the burden of proving in what country said commodity was produced is upon the importer.—T. D. 27872, G. A. 6532.

(d) Paraffin liquid and paraffin molle, articles made in part from petroleum but not in chief value thereof, are not petroleum products within the meaning of this paragraph (Ropes v. United States, 123 Fed. Rep., 990), and hence are not chargeable with countervailing duty, but being commercially known as paraffin are entitled to free entry under paragraph 633.—T. D. 24546, G. A. 5366, and T. D. 24967, G. A. 5564.

(e) Paraffin was not mentioned by name in the tariff of the Dutch East Indies, but said tariff imposed a duty of 6 per cent on all nonenumerated articles. It was held that paraffin from Java was chargeable with a countervailing duty equal to said rate.—T. D. 24665, G. A. 5419.

(f) The similitude clause does not apply to merchandise which was chargeable with duty at countervailing rates, and it was error for the collector to assess duty on paraffin at the rate imposed by the tariff of the Dutch East Indies on paraffin candles.—Ibid.

(g) The proviso in this paragraph imposing a countervailing duty on petroleum and its products applies to every product of petroleum which may be enumerated in the tariff act. Paraffin is within the scope of this provision notwithstanding its specific enumeration in the free list.—United States v. Schoellkopf (146 Fed. Rep., 56; T. D. 27025), reversing 129 id., 58; T. D. 26119.

(h) It is no doubt the general rule that a proviso to a particular section does not apply to other sections and that it is to be construed to the immediately preceding parts of the clause to which it is attached. But such a rule is not controlling, especially in such composite structures as tariff and appropriation acts. The true rule seems to be that "while the position of a proviso in a statute has a great and sometimes a controlling influence upon the extent of its application, yet the inference from its position can not overrule its plain general intent."—United States v. Schoellkopf (146 Fed. Rep., 56; T. D. 27025).

(i) In the administration of the customs laws the importer is entitled to the benefit of whatever doubt may exist in determining the correct classification of a commodity. This, however, is such a doubt as arises out of the evidence in the case of the application of the law and not one which, like in the administration of the criminal law, may arise out of the lack of evidence. Where on any proposition there is no evidence submitted there can be no such doubt as should be resolved in favor of the importer, for in that case the presumption is in favor of the correctness of the collector's action.—T. D. 25237, G. A. 5658.

(j) The countervailing duty provided in this paragraph is governed by the duty which would be imposed by the foreign country on the day the Government's custody over imported merchandise ceases, and the importer is entitled to possession of the same, and not at the date of the arrival of the goods at the port of entry. Hence a cargo of benzine, the product of petroleum, originating in the Dutch East Indies, which arrived at the port of Philadelphia February 1, 1904, and the entry of which was not liquidated nor a permit of delivery issued until April 6 of the same year, between which dates the Dutch East Indies modified its tariff law, was subject to a countervailing duty equal to the rate of duty imposed by the Dutch East Indies on the latter date.—T. D. 25860, G. A. 5870.

(a) Crude petroleum when imported is subject to a duty equal to the duty imposed by the country of origin upon petroleum exported thereto from the United States. Products from petroleum when imported are subject to a duty equal to that imposed by the country of production of such products upon similar products exported thereto from the United States regardless of the country of origin of the crude petroleum from which they are made.—United States v. Downing (146 Fed. Rep., 56; T. D. 27025) reversing 135 id., 250; T. D. 25899, and T. D. 24778, G. A. 5470, and in effect overruling T. D. 22763, G. A. 4853, followed; T. D. 27507, G. A. 6405.

(b) Ground sesame seed or sesame pulp from which oil has not been extracted found to be commercially known as sesame oil and held to be free of duty under the provision in this paragraph, irrespective of the fact that there is another and more refined product which is known and dealt in under the same name.—United States v. Zaloom (144 Fed. Rep., 1022; T. D. 27195), affirming 140 id., 31; T. D. 26486, and reversing T. D. 26031, G A. 5919.

(c) Merchandise described as "floressence valley lily," invoiced at 500 francs per kilogram, and merchandise described as "valley lily enfleuraged pomade," invoiced at 16 francs per kilogram, which are obtained by the combination of odors procured from various flowers and the admixture of essential oils, are classifiable the former as a combination of essential oils and the latter as enfleurage grease.—United States v. Ungerer (T. D. 28210), reversing in part T. D. 26886, G. A. 6219.

(d) This paragraph will not be construed to admit free "all fish and other products of American fisheries," in view of the specific provisions of paragraphs 258 to 261.—Lake Ontario Fish Co. v. United States (C. C.), (99 Fed. Rep., 551).

(e) Fish taken at the Bay of Islands, Newfoundland, by an American vessel, under a license from the Canadian Government, with the assistance of men, boats, and gear hired for the purpose, are entitled to free entry under this paragraph as the "product of an American fishery."—T. D. 24738, G. A. 5453.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(f) Certain odorous pastes containing the highly concentrated perfumes of various flowers, used only in the manufacture of pomades and perfumery, held free as enfleurage grease and not dutiable as essential oil nor free under paragraph 470, 588, or 668 (1894).—T. D. 17412, G. A. 3603.

(g) Juniper oil includes not only that derived from juniper berries, but that from juniper wood also, and is free and not dutiable as an essential oil.—T. D. 17947, G. A. 3822.

(h) Carvol, which is the trade name for caraway oil and is produced from caraway seed, is free and not dutiable as an essential oil.—T. D. 18144, G. A. 3901.

(i) Liquid paraffin from Russia is dutiable under this proviso and is not exempt as paraffin.—T. D. 17746, G. A. 3732.

(a) Crude petroleum from Peru is dutiable under this paragraph, Peru being a country which imposes a duty on petroleum, and is not free as crude bitumen, nor as crude petroleum, nor as assimilating to articles provided for in these two paragraphs, nor as a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 17401, G. A. 3592.

(b) A concentrated essence produced by the enfleurage process, in which a variety of petroleum was used as the original solvent, is free as enfleurage grease and not dutiable as essential oil.—United States v. Dodge & Olcott (C. C.), (94 Fed. Rep., 481).

(c) Fish caught on a scow in foreign waters held not to be the product of American fisheries.—T. D. 15679, G. A. 2860.

(d) Vessel cleared for Newfoundland, entered at Fortunes Bay and paid duties. Sailed thence to Sound Island, etc., where under existing laws and treaties American vessels have no right to take fish. The master furnished seines and boats and engaged local fishermen to take herring at a certain price per barrel. The local fishermen were no part of the crew and were paid for the fish in money and merchandise. Held, that the fish are salted herring, dutiable under paragraph 210 (1894), and are not the product of American fisheries.—T. D. 16721, G. A. 3309.

(e) The Ocean Trading Company, composed of citizens of the United States, fitted out an American vessel registered at New York and sailing under the American flag. The crew, citizens of the United States, were engaged in fishing for sea turtles in the waters of Central America and canning them on board the vessel. Held, that said vessel constituted an American fishery and the merchandise is free.—T. D. 17257, G. A. 3519.

(f) Turtle meat from turtles caught in Central American waters by an American crew on an American vessel, owned by a corporation consisting of American citizens, the meat being canned on the vessel, is free as products of American fisheries.—Downing v. United States (124 Fed. Rep., 107).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(g) Citral, being a highly concentrated form of oil of lemon, from which nearly all the terpene elements have been extracted, imported in glass bottles, is free and is not dutiable as an essential oil.—In re Fritzsche (56 Fed. Rep., 819), affirming T. D. 12137, G. A. 999.

(h) Cocoanut butter or cocoanut oil is free as nut oil and not dutiable as cocoa butter.—T. D. 14602, G. A. 2360; reversed, T. D. 15332, G. A. 2766.

(i) Certain semisolid bodies about the consistence of butter, invoiced as essence concrete de jasmine and essence concrete de cassia, held not to be oil of jasmine and oil of cassia.—T. D. 12818, G. A. 1414.

(j) An essential oil held to be oil of mace and not oil of nutmeg.—T. D. 11852, G. A. 843.

(l) Orthotoluidin, a chemical compound, a coal-tar preparation and commercially known as aniline oil, is free as such oil and not dutiable as a preparation of coal-tar.—T. D. 15395, G. A. 2789.

(m) Certain olive oil from Messina held to be for manufacturing purposes and unfit for eating.—T. D. 11206, G. A. 565.

(n) Olive oil fit for manufacturing and mechanical purposes, imported for and commonly used for such purposes and rarely used for eating or salad purposes, and then by a small class mainly Italians, held to be free.—T. D. 13545, G. A. 1817.

(a) An odoriferous essential oil, perfumed with the essence of roses, held not to be ottar of roses.—T. D. 13557, G. A. 1829.

DECISION UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(c) Oil of petit grain, distilled from the leaves, twigs, and immature fruit of the orange tree, is free and not dutiable as an essential oil.—Dodge v. Hedden (C. C.), (42 Fed. Rep., 446).

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(d) Where whales are caught and oil is manufactured by the crew of an American vessel, the oil is not the product of "foreign fishing" within the purview of the revenue laws of the United States, though it has since been owned and brought into port by persons in the foreign service.—United States v. Burdett (2 Sumn., 336; 24 Fed. Cas., 1300).

1897 627. Orange and lemon peel, not preserved, candied, or dried.

1894 570. Orange and lemon peel, not preserved, candied, or otherwise prepared.

1890 664. Orange and lemon peel, not preserved, candied, or otherwise prepared.

1883 751. Orange and lemon peel, not preserved, candied, or otherwise prepared.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 627, ACT OF 1897.

(e) Pliable pieces of orange peel, not preserved, candied, or dried, held to be free.—T. D. 19422, G. A. 4161.

(f) Orange peel which becomes dry through exposure to the atmosphere is free and not dutiable under paragraph 267 as dried orange peel.—T. D. 22020, G. A. 4660.

(g) Orange peel in brine held not to be orange peel preserved, the brine being regarded as a mere covering or packing for protection in transportation.—Causse v. United States (150 Fed. Rep., 419; T. D. 27513), reversing T. D. 26368, G. A. 6039.

1897 628. Orchil, or orchil liquid.

1894 571. Orchil, or orchil liquid.

1890 665. Orchil, or orchil liquid.

1883 550. Orchil or orchil liquid.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 628, ACT OF 1897.

(h) A sulphonated coloring matter called orchil extract, produced from orchil or orchil liquid, is not free of duty under this paragraph, but is dutiable under paragraph 58 as a color.—T. D. 26383, G. A. 6048.

(i) Orchil obtained from vegetable sources is free of duty.—T. D. 26665, G. A. 6133.

1897 629. Ores of gold, silver, copper, or nickel, and nickel matte; sweepings of gold and silver.

1894 573. Ores, of gold, silver, and nickel, and nickel matte.
644. Sweepings of silver and gold.
451. Copper imported in the form of ores.

1890 667. Ores, of gold, silver, and nickel, and nickel matte: Provided, That ores of nickel, and nickel matte, containing more than two per centum of copper, shall pay a duty of one-half of one cent per pound on the copper contained therein.
729. Sweepings of silver and gold.
191. Copper imported in the form of ores, one-half of one cent per pound on each pound of fine copper contained therein.

1883 752. Ores, of gold and silver.
798. Sweepings of silver and gold.
186. Copper, imported in the form of ores, two and one-half cents on each pound of fine copper contained therein; * * *.
191. Nickel, in ore, matte, or other crude form not ready for consumption in the arts, fifteen cents per pound on the nickel contained therein.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 629, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Concentrated copper ore is entitled to entry free of duty under this paragraph. The concentration process through which the article passed does not take it out of the category of copper ore.—T. D. 25804, G. A. 5859.

(b) Clippings of photographic paper coated with nitrate of silver are not free as sweepings of gold and silver.—T. D. 27849, G. A. 6522.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(c) Slag or smelter waste containing 443.55 ounces of silver and 0.371 of an ounce of gold held free as silver ore and not dutiable as waste.—T. D. 12529, G. A. 1213.

1897 630. Osmium.

1894 574. Osmium.

1890 668. Osmium.

1883 623. Osmium.

1897 631. Palladium.

1894 576. Palladium.

1890 669. Palladium.

1883 624. Palladium.

1897 632. Paper stock, crude, of every description, including all grasses, fibers, rags (other than wool), waste, including jute waste, shavings, clippings, old paper, rope ends, waste rope, and waste bagging, including old gunny cloth and old gunny bags, fit only to be converted into paper.

1894 577. Paper stock, crude, of every description, including all grasses, fibers, rags, waste, shavings, clippings, old paper, rope ends, waste rope, waste bagging old or refuse gunny bags or gunny cloth, and poplar or other woods, fit only to be converted into paper.

1890 670. Paper stock, crude, of every description, including all grasses, fibers, rags (other than wool), waste, shavings, clippings, old paper, rope ends, waste rope, waste bagging, old or refuse gunny bags or gunny cloth, and poplar or other woods, fit only to be converted into paper.

1883 754. Paper-stock, crude, of every description, including all grasses, fibers, rags of all kinds, other than wool, waste, shavings, clippings, old paper, rope ends, waste rope, waste bagging, gunny bags, gunny cloth, old or refuse, to be used in making, and fit only to be converted into paper, and unfit for any other manufacture, * * *.
691. Esparto or Spanish grass, and other grasses, and pulp of, for the manufacture of paper.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 632, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Old gunny cloth or bagging is not free as old gunny cloth and gunny bags "fit only to be converted into paper." This phrase means "unfit for any other manufacture." The new use to which old gunny cloth or waste bagging has been put in recent years operates to take it out of the purview of this paragraph.—T. D 20960, G. A. 4406.

(b) Jute waste of an unusually short fiber, which is fit only to be converted into paper stock and is not used for other purposes of manufacture, is free.—T. D. 22097, G. A. 4680.

(c) Waste bagging of jute, used chiefly as paper stock, but also in large quantities for various other manufacturing purposes, is not free under this paragraph. The provision for articles "fit only" for a certain use does not include articles which, though chiefly devoted to that use, are employed to a substantial extent for other purposes.—T. D. 23520, G. A. 5078.

(d) Jute thread waste in the gray, imported to be used as paper stock, but identical in character with waste that is fit for use for other purposes than paper making and is so used to a large extent, is dutiable as waste not specially provided for and is not free as waste "fit only to be converted into paper." Where its fitness only for a certain use is the test of the classification of an article for duty, the common or predominant use of the article will not govern its classification. Where the use of an article determines its classification, new uses to which the article becomes adapted in the progress of manufacture and in the development of new industries may operate to change the classification which has previously prevailed.—Train v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 1020); Swan v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 243) followed; T. D. 23637, G. A. 5115.

(e) Waste cotton rags, shown by the evidence to be used exclusively in the manufacture of paper and practically susceptible of no other use, are free as "rags * * * fit only to be converted into paper."—T. D. 23747, G. A. 5145.

(f) Fragments of heavy bagging, cut off bales of wool, and pieces of burlap bagging such as are ordinarily used for bagging potatoes, wool, etc., fit only to be converted into paper stock, held to be free.—T. D. 24664, G. A. 5418.

(g) A species of flax waste exported from France and Belgium and there known as cordalettes, valued at about $30 per ton, held to be free under this paragraph as waste fit only to be converted into paper.—T. D. 25358, G. A. 5700.

(h) Linen thread waste held to be free of duty as waste fit only to be converted into paper.—T. D. 25422, G. A. 5719.

(i) Clippings from the seams of knit cotton garments, cut off in the process of manufacture, are free of duty as waste fit only to be converted into paper.—T. D. 25433, G. A. 5730.

(j) Jute card waste which is used for other purposes than the manufacture of paper is not free of duty under this paragraph, but is dutiable under paragraph 463 as waste not specially provided for.—T. D. 25745, G. A. 5837.

(k) Linen thread waste is free of duty under this paragraph as waste fit only for conversion into paper.—T. D. 25778, G. A. 5853.

(l) Flax card waste, being used for many purposes besides conversion into paper, is not free under this provision, but is dutiable as waste.—T. D. 26415, G. A. 6056.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(m) Certain tow held to be paper stock.—T. D. 11708, G. A. 813.

(n) Jute waste consisting of refuse yarns, thrown off in the manufacture of jute articles and fit for other uses than in the manufacture of paper stock, is not free.—T. D. 13217, G. A. 1638.

(a) White linen thread waste, dark or cream colored linen thread waste, jute thread waste and jute waste, jute thread waste colored, jute thread waste with a small admixture of colored cotton thread waste, and jute waste consisting of pieces of old burlaps or bagging is free as paper stock and not dutiable as waste.—T. D. 13867, G. A. 2020.

(b) Flax card waste composed of short fine fibers with small bits of woody fiber, the product of the operations of hackling, scutching, or carding flax, a manufacturers' waste known as paper stock, is free as such, though small portions of such paper stock may be used for other purposes.—T. D. 14048, G. A. 2099.

(c) Filtering masse is not free as crude paper stock.—T. D. 15412, G. A. 2806.

(d) So-called paper stock consisting of lumps of dry pulp made from wood or other fibrous material is not free as crude paper stock.—T. D. 16084, G. A. 3048.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(e) Secondhand gunny bags entered as paper stock. The appraiser returned some of the bags as gunny bagging suitable for the uses to which cotton bagging may be applied. Held, that if the bagging was commercially valuable only to be, and could only profitably be, converted into paper, and was of no other commercial value, it was free and not dutiable as bagging, and the purpose for which it was imported or used after importation is irrelevant.—Jessup & Moore Paper Co. v. Cooper (D. C.), (46 Fed. Rep., 186).

(f) The burden of proof to show that the bagging is only fit for paper stock is on the importer.—Id.

1897 633. Paraffin.

1894 578. Paraffine.

1890 671. Paraffine.

1883 625. Paraffine.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 633, ACT OF 1897.

(g) Paraffin liquid and paraffin molle, articles made in part from petroleum but not in chief value thereof, are not petroleum products within the meaning of paragraph 626 (Ropes v. United States, 123 Fed. Rep., 990) and hence are not chargeable with countervailing duty, but being commercially known as paraffin are entitled to free entry under this paragraph.—T. D. 24546, G. A. 5366, and T. D. 24967, G. A. 5564.

(h) The proviso in paragraph 626 imposing a countervailing duty on petroleum and its products applies to every product of petroleum which may be enumerated in the tariff act. Paraffin is within the scope of this provision notwithstanding its specific enumeration in the free list.—United States v. Schoellkopf (146 Fed. Rep., 56; T. D. 27025), reversing 129 id., 58; T. D. 26119.

(i) Paraffin liquid and paraffin molle, a mixure of ceresia or ceresin and petroleum, found not to be in chief value of petroleum and hence to be free of duty under the provision for paraffin. This article was manufactured in Germany and it was held to be error to determine the component material of chief value on evidence as to the value of one component in Belgium and of the other component in Germany.—United States v. Schoellkopf (146 Fed. Rep., 56; T. D. 27025), reversing T. D. 25237, G. A. 5658.

DECISION UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(a) Liquid and soft paraffin is free and is not dutiable as distilled oil.—T. D. 17345, G. A. 3565.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(b) Soft paraffin, a white, inodorous, tasteless, semisolid substance is free.—T. D. 11884, G. A. 875.

(c) Neutraline is not free as paraffin.—T. D. 13183, G. A. 1604.

(d) The clear oily liquid described in the German pharmacopœia as "Parafinum Liq. Ph. G.," and consisting of a mixture of the higher fluid members of the paraffin series of hydrocarbons, is free and not dutiable as products or preparations known as alkalies * * * distilled oils, etc. Reversing the Circuit Court.—Shoellkopf, Hartford and MacLagan v. United States (C. C. A.), (71 Fed. Rep., 694).

1897 634. Parchment and vellum.

1894 579. Parchment and vellum.

1890 672. Parchment and vellum.

1883 { 755. Parchment.
813. Vellum.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 634, ACT OF 1897.

(e) The provision in this paragraph exempting from duty "parchment and vellum" is not limited to such as is to be used for manuscripts and similar purposes, but includes the qualities used for various other purposes, as for binding books, covering bottle stoppers, etc.—T. D. 24303, G. A. 5303.

(f) Parchment drumheads are not free, but are dutiable as parts of musical instruments.—Lyon v. United States (T. D. 25832), affirming T. D. 24808, G. A. 5492.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(g) A pale-red or brick-dust colored substance, having the appearance and color of parchment, held dutiable as parchment paper.—T. D. 12428, G. A. 1166.

1897 635. Pearl, mother of, and shells, not sawed, cut, polished, or otherwise manufactured, or advanced in value from the natural state.

1894 { 580. Pearl, mother of, not sawed or cut, or otherwise manufactured.
613. Shells of all kinds, not cut, ground, or otherwise manufactured.

1890 { 701. Shells of all kinds, not cut, ground, or otherwise manufactured.
673. Pearl, mother of, not sawed, cut, polished, or otherwise manufactured.

1883 { 756. Pearl, mother of.
780. Shells of every description, not manufactured.
809. Tortoise and other shells, unmanufactured.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 635, ACT OF 1897.

(h) Shells of ostrich eggs are not ejusdem generis with the shells provided for in this paragraph.—T. D. 24054, G. A. 5229.

(i) The shells or skeletons of starfish are free of duty under this paragraph.—T. D. 24104, G. A. 5246.

(j) Shells that are in their natural state, except so far as they may have been advanced in value or condition by being cleansed from offensive and extraneous matter by chemical baths, are free of duty.—Schoenemann v. United States (119 Fed. Rep., 584), reversing 115 Fed. Rep., 842, and T. D. 20210, G. A. 4294, followed; T. D. 24720, G. A. 5442.

(a) Turtle-shells from which the entrails, bones, and flesh have been removed and which have been treated with arsenic, dried, and then polished, are not free as shells in their natural state.—T. D. 24809, G. A. 5493.

(b) Small shells, each crudely pierced with a single hole for stringing purposes, polished by the action of an acid bath in the process of cleansing and not by abrasion, are free of duty as shells in their natural state.—T. D. 26585, G. A. 6096.

DECISION UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(c) Shells known as "green ears" are not free.—T. D. 12851, G. A. 1447.

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(d) Shells cleaned with acid and then ground on an emery wheel, and some of them afterwards etched by acid, and all intended to be sold for ornaments, are free as shells not manufactured and not dutiable as manufactures of shells.—Hartranft v. Wiegmann (121 U. S., 609); Same v. Winters (121 U. S. 616).

1897 636. Personal effects, not merchandise, of citizens of the United States dying in foreign countries.

1894 583. Personal and household effects not merchandise of citizens of the United States dying in foreign countries.

1890 675. Personal and household effects not merchandise of citizens of the United States dying in foreign countries.

1883 757. Personal and household effects, not merchandise, of citizens of the United States dying abroad.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 636, ACT OF 1897.

(e) The term "personal effects," when not qualified or limited in signification by any associated words or clauses, means property or worldly substance of a personal character.—T. D. 22622, G. A. 4813.

(f) As used in this paragraph these words are broad enough in scope to include all articles of personalty "not merchandise," i. e., not imported as objects of trade and commerce, and would embrace household effects.—Id.

(g) Household effects of a citizen of the United States residing and dying in a foreign country, when imported for use in the family of the decedent's son and not intended for sale, are free.—Id.

1897 637. Pewter and britannia metal, old, and fit only to be remanufactured.

1894 584. Pewter and britannia metal, old, and fit only to be remanufactured.

1890 676. Pewter and britannia metal, old, and fit only to be remanufactured.

1883 758. Pewter and britannia metal, old, and fit only to be remanufactured.

1897 638. Philosophical and scientific apparatus, utensils, instruments, and preparations, including bottles and boxes containing the same, specially imported in good faith for the use and by order of any society or institution incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use or by order of any college, academy, school, or seminary of learning in the United States, or any State or public library, and not for sale, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

585. Philosophical and scientific apparatus, utensils, instruments and preparations, including bottles and boxes containing the same; statuary, casts of marble, bronze, alabaster, or plaster of Paris; paintings,
1894 drawings, and etchings, specially imported in good faith for the use of any society or institution incorporated or established for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for encouragement of the fine arts, and not intended for sale. .

677. Philosophical and scientific apparatus, instruments and preparations; statuary, casts of marble, bronze, alabaster, or plaster of Paris;
1890 paintings, drawings, and etchings, specially imported in good faith for the use of any society or institution incorporated or established for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for encouragement of the fine arts, and not intended for sale.

759. Philosophical and scientific apparatus, instruments, and preparations, statuary, casts of marble, bronze, alabaster, or plaster of Paris, paintings, drawings, and etchings, specially imported in good faith for 1883 the use of any society or institution incorporated or established for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or encouragement of the fine arts, and not intended for sale.

475. Philosophical apparatus and instruments, thirty-five per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 638, ACT OF 1897.

(b) A hospital is not an institution established solely for educational purposes.—T. D. 22279, G. A. 4717.

(c) A hospital with incidental educational features, such as the training of nurses and the giving of medical instruction to students, is not an institution solely for educational purposes.—Id.

(d) Surgical instruments imported by the Massachusetts General Hospital, designed solely for the use of the officers and students of that institution, are not free as imported for the use of an institution established solely for educational purposes or for a college, etc.—T. D. 22279, G. A. 4717; reversed (95 Fed. Rep., 973).

(e) Instruments made and used solely for the purpose of demonstrating properties of mathematical angles, surfaces, and lines, and which are not susceptible of any other use, are scientific instruments and free when imported by a college.—T. D. 23006, G. A. 4918.

(f) Congress, by the express provision allowing free entry "subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe," made compliance with such regulations, when prescribed, a condition precedent to the right of free entry.—T. D. 22875, G. A. 4886.

(g) The word "arrival" in article 566, Regulations of 1899, must be construed to mean "entry."—Id.

(h) The rule of principal use is to be followed in determining whether an article is a scientific instrument or not.—Id.

(i) Certain scientific apparatus held to be free for college use.—Eimer v. United States (T. D. 25873).

(j) The regulation made under the authority of this paragraph, requiring that a certificate showing that the articles imported and claimed to be free of duty were duly delivered to and are to be retained by the institution for which they were imported must be filed with the collector within ninety days after entry and before liquidation, is reasonable and lawful and compliance with it is a condition precedent to the right of free entry. The offering in evidence before the General Appraisers of such certificate more than a year after liquidation does not entitle the articles to free entry.—Eimer v. United States (146 Fed. Rep., 144; T. D. 27089).

(a) Certain museum or preparation jars, reagent bottles, and surgical scissors held to be entitled to free entry.—Hempstead v. United States (122 Fed. Rep., 752) affirmed without opinion in 129 id., 1007; T. D. 25607.

(b) An anatomical model of a man, consisting of about 100 pieces and displaying almost all the points of gross anatomy, intended for the use of the Medical School of Maine, is entitled to free entry under this paragraph as a philosophical or scientific apparatus or instrument.—T. D. 23403, G. A. 5040.

(c) A hospital with incidental educational features, such as the training of nurses and the instruction of medical students, is not an "institution incorporated or established solely for * * * educational * * * purposes," nor a "college, academy, school, or seminary of learning," within the meaning of this paragraph; and surgical instruments or other articles imported by such a hospital for its use are not entitled to admission free of duty under this paragraph.—Massachusetts General Hospital v. United States (112 Fed. Rep., 670) followed; T. D. 23693, G. A. 5129.

(e) When an institution which requests free entry of goods under this paragraph is found to be of the character of those which are entitled to the benefit of this paragraph, the statute should receive a liberal construction. The introduction into the law of the word "utensil," being a word of common rather than technical use, must be held to add to and qualify the meaning of the words "apparatus" and "instruments" theretofore used to broaden and extend the exemption and increase the number of articles entitled to free entry. If the articles embraced in the importation are imported in good faith by or for the use of one of the institutions named in the law and not for sale, and are intended to be used in philosophical or scientific investigation, research, demonstration, or instruction, and they serve a useful purpose and are necessary and especially appropriate in such investigation, research, demonstration, or instruction, they are entitled to free entry.—T. D. 24902, G. A. 5532.

(f) Compliance with the Treasury Regulations made and approved is a condition precedent to the free entry of articles under this paragraph.—T. D. 24909, G. A. 5539.

(g) An institution incorporated to teach practical and theoretical brewing and carry on the business of analytical and manufacturing chemists, the primary object of which is the educational one; that maintains a corps of professors, receives, teaches, and graduates pupils, giving them diplomas, and has within its curriculum various branches of the sciences, held to be a school within the meaning of this paragraph and entitled to the right of free importation accorded thereby.—T. D. 26009, G. A. 5910.

(h) Philosophical and scientific apparatus, utensils, instruments, and preparations imported by order of the board of education of the city of New York for use in the public schools of said city are imported for the use of schools and should be admitted free of duty under the provisions of this paragraph.—T. D. 26834, G. A. 6192.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(a) Microscopes, magic lanterns, opera glasses, spyglasses, thread counters, glass lenses, Grenet batteries, Ruhmkorff bobines, marine hourglasses, objectives, condensers, thermometers, hanometers, pedometers, barometers, compasses, electric rings, mathematical instruments, spectroscopes, and other articles, some of which are philosophical or scientific instruments, not imported for the use of any society or institution incorporated or established for religious purposes, etc., are not free, but are dutiable according to specific designation or material, etc. T. D. 12438, G. A. 1176, affirmed.—T. D. 17433, G. A. 3607.

(b) Casts of bronze imported for barter or sale are not free.—T. D. 16214, G. A. 3093.

(c) An ambulance for hospital use is not free.—T. D. 16355, G. A. 3184.

(d) Antitoxine imported by the city of Chicago for free distribution by the health department to certain hospitals is not free, but dutiable as a medicinal preparation. A municipal corporation is not a society or institution of the kind described in this paragraph.—T. D. 16230, G. A. 3109.

(e) The Minnesota State board of health is an educational or scientific institution entitled to free entry of scientific apparatus.—T. D. 18156, G. A. 3913.

(f) To entitle the importer to the benefit of this paragraph, the affidavit required by the regulations must be filed before the arrival of the articles, showing that they were imported by order of such institution and not for sale or distribution; otherwise the collector is justified in exacting duty. Sustaining the Board.—Eimer v. United States (C. C.), (87 Fed. Rep., 202).

(g) Surgical instruments, specially designed and adapted for use in surgery (imported for the use of the Massachusetts General Hospital in its clinics and training school for nurses), are surgical instruments, free and not dutiable as manufactures of metal.—In re Massachusetts General Hospital (C. C.), (95 Fed. Rep., 973).

(h) This paragraph is entitled to a liberal construction, the exemption having in view the highest interest of the public and being one which has been made, in some terms, in every act. The addition in the later acts of the word "scientific" to the word "philosophical" must be held to have broadened the exemption. Surgical instruments designed and adapted for use in practical surgery are scientific instruments and within the exemption, when specially imported in good faith by a general hospital maintained, among other things, for educational purposes, for use in its clinics and training school for nurses. Affirming 95 Fed. Rep., 973.—United States v. Massachusetts General Hospital (C. C. A.), (100 Fed. Rep., 932).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(i) Absolute alcohol containing from 98 to 99 per cent of pure alcohol, imported in good faith for the use of certain colleges established for educational, scientific, or literary purposes, the importers being paid for their services by making an extra charge over prime cost, is free.—T. D. 12719, G. A. 1368.

(j) Absolute alcohol imported for the use of the University of Pennsylvania is free as a scientific preparation.—T. D. 14381, G. A. 2265.

(k) So-called "absolute alcohol," manufactured in Germany, showing 198 degrees of proof, being equivalent to 99.5 per cent of anhydrous alcohol, imported on the order and for the laboratory use of certain colleges, and sold by the importers at an advance on the cost price of about 20 per cent, is free, as a scientific preparation imported for the use of institutions incorporated for educational or scientific purposes, and is not dutiable as alcohol. T. D. 12719, G. A. 1368; T. D. 14381, G. A. 2265; affirmed.—In re Kny (C. C.), (57 Fed. Rep., 190).

(c) Drawing compasses for public schools are not scientific instruments.—T. D. 15237, G. A. 2730.

(d) Bleached cotton cloth for a hospital is not a philosophical or scientific preparation.—T. D. 11050, G. A. 493.

(e) Clay crucibles are not philosophical or scientific apparatus, instruments, or preparations.—T. D. 15148, G. A. 2674.

(f) A dynamo machine for the use of an incorporated educational institution, designed partly for use in giving educational instruction, but also used for mechanical use, furnishing electric light, is not free as a philosophical or scientific apparatus or instrument.—T. D. 13784, G. A. 1978.

(g) Electric storage batteries are not free as philosophical or scientific apparatus.—T. D. 15464, G. A. 2813.

(h) Small disks of white filtering paper imported for use in the laboratory of a college are not free.—T. D. 12324, G. A. 1096.

(i) Prepared filtering paper used exclusively in chemical research, imported for the use of Lehigh University, is free as a scientific preparation.—T. D. 14743, G. A. 2465.

(j) Chemical laboratory hydrometers, maximum and minimum thermometers, and Kipp's apparatus imported for incorporated educational institutions are free as philosophical or scientific apparatus or instruments.—T. D. 14857, G. A. 2540.

(k) A model ice machine, designed to illustrate to students in the college lecture room the philosophical principles in the manufacture of ice, imported in good faith for the use of the Alabama Agricultural College is free as a philosophical or scientific apparatus.—T. D. 14725, G. A. 2447.

(l) Celluloid labels for plants for the Missouri Botanical Gardens are not philosophical instruments or apparatus.—T. D. 11045, G. A. 488.

(m) Oculists' lenses for the use of the Maine Eye and Ear Infirmary, an incorporated institution for the treatment of poor persons, are not free.—T. D. 13777, G. A. 1971.

(n) Magic lantern slides imported for St. Thomas Church are free as philosophical instruments.—T. D. 15313, G. A. 2747.

(o) Olive oil machines imported by the University of California are not free as philosophical instruments.—T. D. 13428, G. A. 1765.

(q) A pantograph is not a scientific instrument.—T. D. 13429, G. A. 1766.

(r) Analytical scales used in analyzing water, detecting poisons, and other work requiring delicate weighing, not used and not fit for commercial use, are free as scientific instruments.—T. D. 17929, G. A. 3804.

(s) A scale balance and weights, for use in the laboratory of Yale College, is free as a scientific apparatus.—T. D. 14174, G. A. 2173.

(a) India-rubber sheeting for operating tables in hospitals, being india-rubber fabrics such as are generally used for sheetings, table covers, piano covers, etc., are not free as scientific apparatus or instruments.—T. D. 12631, G. A. 1280.

(b) Slides for photographic lanterns are not philosophical apparatus or instruments. They may be parts thereof, but this paragraph makes no provision for parts of philosophical apparatus or instruments.—T. D. 12634, G. A. 1283.

(c) Telescopes, compasses, objectives, spyglasses, galvanometers, and Coddington lenses, made of metal and glass, claimed to be free as philosophical instruments, but it was not shown that they were imported for the use of a religious, philosophical, educational, etc., society. Protest overruled.—T. D. 12438, G. A. 1176.

(d) Glazed tiles to be used for covering the tables in the chemical laboratory of a college are not philosophical or scientific apparatus or instruments.—T. D. 12574, G. A. 1258.

(e) Zander's mechanico therapeutic apparatus imported by the Mechanico Therapeutic Institute Company, of St. Louis, held not free. If the importers constitute a corporation it does not appear that it was established for philosophical or scientific purposes.—T. D. 13756, G. A. 1950.

(f) Philosophical instruments for a private academy, a business institution conducted for the purpose of pecuniary reward, are not free.—T. D. 14163, G. A. 2162.

(g) Mechanical instruments, implements, etc., designed for the use of physicians and surgeons in the practice of their profession are not philosophical or scientific apparatus or instruments.—T. D. 14637, G. A. 2395.

(h) A microscope imported by a physician or surgeon who swears that it is for use in his laboratory, of which he is the instructor (being evidently a laboratory for clinical purposes), is to be regarded as imported for the use of an "institution" within the meaning of this paragraph. But a microscope imported by one who swears that he is to be an instructor of a class of histology at Greenville, S. C., is not to be so regarded in the absence of evidence to show that such a class is in existence.—United States v. Hensel (C. C.), (72 Fed. Rep., 41).

(i) Microscopes and a movable object table held to be "philosophical and scientific apparatus" within the meaning of this paragraph. Contra, however, as to a microscope case imported without a microscope.—United States v. Hensel (C. C.), (72 Fed. Rep., 41).

(j) The term "scientific instruments" is intended to refer to the intrinsic character of the thing imported and not necessarily to the nature of the use for which it is primarily designed, or in which it is principally employed, and to apply to an instrument which is something more than a mere mechanical tool and which embodies some scientific conception. The mere fact that imported articles are designed for use by physicians and surgeons is not sufficient to bring them within the category of scientific instruments. Among the articles in controversy were some ordinary metal tubes, a wire mask covered with flannel, and some glass spools for holding wound catgut. They were classified as manufactures of glass and metal. Reversing the Circuit Court.—United States v. Presbyterian Hospital (C. C. A.), (71 Fed. Rep., 866).

(k) Bottles containing philosophical preparations are dutiable under paragraph 104 (1890).—T. D. 13165, G. A. 1586.

(b) A valuable painting and frame purchased for presentation to a religious institution, the painting arriving in January, 1890, and being admitted free under paragraph 759 (1883), but the frame by accident not arriving until November, 1890. Frame held to be free.—T. D. 12103, G. A. 965.

(c) Paintings on enameled copper plate or sheets, representing the stations of the Cross, imported for the use of a church, are free.—T. D. 14229, G. A. 2193.

(d) Painted glass windows specially imported in good faith for the use of a society or institution incorporated or established for religious purposes, and not intended for sale, are free and not dutiable as painted window glass or painted glass windows. Reversing T. D. 10902, G. A. 397.—In re Perry (C. C.), (47 Fed. Rep., 110).

(e) A painted bronze cross and two bronze tablets, cast in molds, imported in good faith for St. Francis de Sales Industrial School, are not free as casts nor as works of art.—T. D. 13324, G. A. 1704.

(f) The College of Physicians and Surgeons, which is known as the "Medical School of Columbia College," is an institution for whose use philosophical and scientific apparatus may be entered free.—United States v. Hensel (C. C.), (72 Fed. Rep., 41).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(g) Ammeters and voltmeters, the predominant use of which is in connection with electrical plants, are not philosophical instruments.—T. D. 12347, G. A. 1119.

(h) Surveying aneroids, Abney levels, and clinometers, used by professional engineers, are not philosophical instruments.—T. D. 12346, G. A. 1118.

(i) Certain cheap barometers, telescopes, magic lanterns, mathematical instruments, reading glasses, and compasses held not to be philosophical instruments.—T. D. 10325, G. A. 46.

(j) Telescopes and barometers are philosophical instruments.—T. D. 11407, G. A. 690; T. D. 12346, G. A. 1118.

(l) Magnetic compasses, small microscopes, and photographic pictures held not to be philosophical instruments.—T. D. 11697, G. A. 802.

(m) Dissecting microscopes, Ruhmkorff coils, and trial lenses are philosophical instruments.—T. D. 12335, G. A. 1107.

(n) Micropreparations, prepared slides (glass chief value), are philosophical apparatus.—T. D. 12346, G. A. 1118.

(o) Telescopes with object glasses are philosophical instruments.—T. D. 11697, G. A. 802.

(p) Anemometers, hygrometers, Ruhmkorff coils, barometers, stereopticons, galvanometers, Geissler tubes, Grenat batteries, and radiometers are dutiable as philosophical apparatus and instruments and not as manufactures of metal.—Manasse v. Spaulding (24 Fed. Rep., 86).

(q) Where descriptive words are commercial terms, they are to be construed in the sense in which they are used in commerce; and if at the time of the passage of this act there was a class of articles defined and well known in the branch of commerce to which they belonged as philosophical instruments, all articles within that class are dutiable under the trade name.—Fox v. Cadwalader (C. C.), (42 Fed. Rep., 209).

(a) If the designation "philosophical apparatus and instruments" is not a trade term, then it is to be construed according to the meaning ordinarily given to the words in common speech, and in that sense it includes not merely such instruments as are used in purely scientific investigation or instruction, but all instruments designed to illustrate or utilize certain laws of natural philosophy and which require for their design or their manufacture or their use some special knowledge of those laws.—Id.

(b) Dynamos, dynamometers, ammeters, voltmeters, milliamperes, amperemeters, surveying aneroids, clinical thermometers are dutiable as philosophical apparatus and not as manufactures of metal.—Fox v. Cadwalader (C. C.), (42 Fed. Rep., 209).

(c) Philosophical apparatus and instruments as referred to in this paragraph are such as are more commonly used for the purpose of making observations and discoveries in nature and experiments for discovering and exhibiting natural forces, and the conditions under which they can be called into activity, while implements for mechanical or professional use in the arts are such as are more usually employed in trades and professions for performing the operations incidental thereto.—Robertson v. Oelschlaeger (137 U. S., 436).

(d) Duties assessed and collected on articles as manufactures not specially provided for. Suit brought to recover on the ground that they should have been assessed as philosophical apparatus. Verdict and judgment that the following were philosophical apparatus: Large compound microscope and prepared slides for same, astronomical telescope and tripod, single-barreled telescope or marine glass, double-barreled field glass, small telescope on tripod, reflecting mirror used in old telescope, stereopticon or magic lantern and slides prepared for same, Grenet batteries, indicative Ruhmkorff coil, galvanometer, Geissler tubes, anemometer, hygrometer, maximum and minimum thermometer, laboratory thermometer, barometer, hydrometer for general purposes, and radiometer. The following were decided not to be philosophical apparatus, etc.: Small microscope for examining textile fabrics, jeweler's magnifying glass, opera glasses, magnifying glass with handle, plano-convex lens unmounted, ophthalmoscope, combination of magnifying glass and stereoscope, oculist's outfit, dentist's speculum, pocket battery for physician, thermometer and hydrometer, clinical thermometer, pocket thermometer, alcoholometer, urinometer, and spectacle lenses.—Id.

(e) The following held not to be philosophical apparatus or instruments:

(j) A piano for a college is not free as a philosophical instrument.—T. D. 10334, G. A. 55.

(k) The fact that ordinary india-rubber tubing is intended for use of a college in connection with philosophical or scientific apparatus or instruments does not make it free.—T. D. 10683, G. A. 267.

1897 639. Phosphates, crude.

1894 586. Phosphates, crude or native.

1890 678. Phosphates, crude or native.

1883 626. Phosphates, crude or native, for fertilizing purposes.

1897 640. Plants, trees, shrubs, roots, seed-cane, and seeds, imported by the Department of Agriculture or the United States Botanic Garden.

1894 385. Articles imported by the United States.

1890 679. Plants, trees, shrubs, roots, seed-cane, and seeds, all of the foregoing imported by the Department of Agriculture or the United States Botanic Garden.

1883 761. Plants, trees, shrubs, roots, seed-cane, and seeds imported by the Department of Agriculture or the United States Botanical Garden.

1897 641. Platina, in ingots, bars, sheets, and wire.

1894 589. Platina, in ingots, bars, sheets, and wire.

1890 681. Platina, in ingots, bars, sheets, and wire.

1883 762. Platina, unmanufactured.

1897 642. Platinum, unmanufactured, and vases, retorts, and other apparatus, vessels, and parts thereof composed of platinum, for chemical uses.

1894 590. Platinum, unmanufactured, and vases, retorts, and other apparatus, vessels, and parts thereof composed of platinum, adapted for chemical uses.

1890 682. Platinum, unmanufactured, and vases, retorts, and other apparatus, vessels, and parts thereof composed of platinum, for chemical uses.

1883 763. Platinum, unmanufactured, and vases, retorts, and other apparatus, vessels, and parts thereof, for chemical uses.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 642, ACT OF 1897.

(l) Platina sponge is free as crude platinum.—T. D. 15729, G. A. 2910.

(m) Platinum pointed tweezers used for taking up or manipulating articles in acids are free as apparatus for chemical use.—T. D. 13687, G. A. 1925.

(n) Small scraps chipped from wire and sheets of platinum, though in the nature of waste, are specially provided for in this paragraph and are thereby taken out of the provisions of paragraph 463 for waste.—T. D. 23246, G. A. 4980.

1897 643. Plumbago.

1894 592. Plumbago.

1883 764. Plumbago.

1897 644. Potash, crude, or "black salts;" carbonate of potash, crude or refined; hydrate of, or caustic potash, not including refined in sticks or rolls; nitrate of potash or saltpeter, crude; sulphate of potash, crude or refined, and muriate of potash.

1894 595. Potash, crude, carbonate of, or "black salts." Caustic potash, or hydrate of, including refined in sticks or rolls. Nitrate of potash, or saltpeter, crude. Sulphate of potash, crude or refined. * * * Muriate of potash.

1890 685. Potash, crude, carbonate of, or "black salts." Caustic potash, or hydrate of, not including refined in sticks or rolls. Nitrate of potash, or saltpeter, crude. Sulphate of potash, crude or refined. * * * Muriate of potash.

63. Crude, carbonate of, or fused, and caustic potash, twenty per centum ad valorem.
68. Nitrate of, or saltpeter, crude, one cent per pound.
70. Sulphate of, twenty per centum ad valorem.
627. Potash, muriate of.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(a) This paragraph includes crude potash, carbonate of potash, and black salts, and carbonate of potash, from which impurities have been removed by leeching (refined carbonate of potash) is free and not dutiable as a chemical compound or salt.—T. D. 17430, G. A. 3604; T. D. 19067, G. A. 4087; United States v. Giese (C. C.), (78 Fed. Rep., 805), (C. C. A.), (83 Fed. Rep., 692).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(b) Bisulphate of potash is not free.—T. D. 11053, G. A. 496.

(c) Carbonate of potash which has been somewhat advanced toward the condition of pearl ash held to be crude carbonate of potash.—T. D. 12565, G. A. 1249.

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(d) Saltpeter which was known in commerce as crude saltpeter at the time of the passage of the act of 1832 is free, although the customs officers may be of opinion that it is partially manufactured.—Farnham v. Bancroft (3 Haz. Reg. U. S., 6; 8 Fed. Cas., 1054).

1897 645. Professional books, implements, instruments, and tools of trade, occupation, or employment, in the actual possession at the time, of persons emigrating to the United States; but this exemption shall not be construed to include machinery or other articles imported for use in any manufacturing establishment, or for any other person or persons, or for sale, nor shall it be construed to include theatrical scenery, properties, and apparel; but such articles brought by proprietors or managers of theatrical exhibitions arriving from abroad, for temporary use by them in such exhibitions, and not for any other person, and not for sale, and which have been used by them abroad, shall be admitted free of duty under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; but bonds shall be given for the payment to the United States of such duties as may be imposed by law upon any and all such articles as shall not be exported within six months after such importation: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may in his discretion extend such period for a further term of six months in case application shall be made therefor.

596. Professional books, implements, instruments, and tools of trade, occupation, or employment, in the actual possession at the time of persons arriving in the United States; but this exemption shall not be construed to include machinery or other articles imported for use in any manufacturing establishment, or for any other person or persons, or for sale, nor shall it be construed to include theatrical scenery, properties, and apparel, but such articles brought by proprietors or managers of theatrical exhibitions arriving from abroad for temporary 1894 use by them in such exhibitions and not for any other person and not for sale and which have been used by them abroad shall be admitted free of duty under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; but bonds shall be given for the payment to the United States of such duties as may be imposed by law upon any and all such articles as shall not be exported within six months after such importation: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may in his discretion extend such period for a further term of six months in case application shall be made therefore.

686. Professional books, implements, instruments, and tools of trade, occupation, or employment, in the actual possession at the time of per-1890 sons arriving in the United States; but this exemption shall not be construed to include machinery or other articles imported for use in any manufacturing establishment, or for any other person or persons, or for sale.

815. * * * Professional books, implements, instruments, and tools of trade, occupation, or employment of persons arriving in the United 1883 States. But this exemption shall not be construed to include machinery or other articles imported for use in any manufacturing establishment or for sale.

661. Books, professional, of persons arriving in the United States.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 645, ACT OF 1897.

(a) An American citizen who removes to Europe and remains there five years, retaining, however, his citizenship in the United States, is not, when returning to this country, an "emigrant," within the meaning of this paragraph. A microscope brought by an American physician, for five years a resident of Europe, is not free.—T. D. 20610, G. A. 4336.

(b) Drawings executed by an architect and used in his business as such are "implements" or "tools of trade."—T. D. 22558, G. A. 4783.

(c) Such drawings when left behind by an emigrant to this country, though inadvertently, and brought over in a different vessel following the one in which he came, although in his trunk with his personal effects, are not "in the actual possession at the time" of the person emigrating.—Id.

(d) An animal trainer who imports performing bears for exhibition in this country, but who comes for only a temporary residence, is not an "emigrant" and can not obtain the benefits of this paragraph. United States v. Magnon (71 Fed. Rep., 293) distinguished.—T. D. 25215, G. A. 5649.

(e) To be entitled to free entry under this paragraph tools of trade must arrive in this country on the same vessel as the person owning them and claiming the privilege. The word "emigrating" herein, construed to be intended for "immigrating."—T. D. 26337, G. A. 6029.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(f) Astronomical apparatus consising of an astronomical transit instrument, tripod and equatorial stand, telescope, eyepieces, and similar articles, in the actual possession of a student of astronomy coming to this country to complete his course, are free. The collector refused free admission to the apparatus because of a doubt that a student who was not earning a livelihood in a profession could be said to have an occupation or employment.—T. D. 15829, G. A. 2929.

(a) To be entitled to exemption under this paragraph the books must have arrived from abroad in the actual possession or custody of the applicant and on the same vessel with him.—T. D. 16481, G. A. 3234.

(b) Certain live animals, wearing apparel and like paraphernalia, for circus or theatrical performances, held not to be free, under this or paragraph 669 (1890).—T. D. 17081, G. A. 3462.

(c) Articles admitted free of duty for temporary use do not become subject to any duty until the importer within or at the end of the period allowed by law has elected not to export them; and are then subject to the rate of duty in force at that time and not to that in force when they were imported.—Russell v. United States (C. C.), 78 Fed. Rep., 808; reversed 84 Fed. Rep., 878.

(d) Theatrical costumes admitted free under bond for temporary use are subject, if not reexported at the end of the bonded period, to the duties prevailing at the time of the importation though a new law imposing different rates has gone into effect in the meantime. 78 Fed. Rep., 808 reversed.—United States v. Russell (C. C. A.), (84 Fed. Rep., 878).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(e) A fishing boat and net which arrived in the possession of a fisherman are free as tools of trade.—T. D. 13990, G. A. 2095.

(f) Sculptors' modeling clay is free as tools of trade.—T. D. 14175, G. A. 2174.

(g) A new microscope in possession of a physician and a citizen of the United States is free as a tool of trade. The fact that an instrument is new does not exclude it from classification as a tool of trade.—T. D. 14719, G. A. 2441.

(h) Old tools of trade shipped by freight on the day of the departure of a person from England, which did not arrive in the United States until one month after the arrival of the owner, although the bill of lading therefor was in actual possession of the owner at the time of his arrival, are free as tools of trade.—T. D. 13785, G. A. 1979.

(i) Theatrical scenery used by Sara Bernhardt held free as implements or instruments of trade.—T. D. 13796, G. A. 1990.

(j) Theatrical costumes not arriving with the owner are not free.—T. D. 15993, G. A. 3017.

(k) Theatrical scenery, paraphernalia, and costumes imported by Wilson Barrett held free although Mr. Barrett arrived at New York and the goods were shipped for convenience direct from Liverpool to Philadelphia where his performances were to begin.—T. D. 14049, G. A. 2100.

(l) Waffle irons are free as tools of trade.—T. D. 14548, G. A. 2340.

(m) A glove manufacturer imported four machines used in the manufacture of gloves in Germany, intending to transplant his business to the United States and to manufacture gloves in the same way. All the machines are free as tools of trade and are not dutiable as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 13770, G. A. 1964, reversed.—In re Lindner (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 723).

(n) Trained snakes brought into this country by a snake charmer purely for use in exhibitions and not for sale are free as instruments of trade and are not dutiable as live animals not classified.—United States v. Magnon (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 151). Same v. Same (C. C. A.), (71 Fed. Rep., 293).

(a) Theatrical costumes imported by one of two joint owners for their joint use in the production of theatrical burlesque are not dutiable upon the ground that they were imported for another person as well as for the one arriving with them.—Henderson v. United States (C. C. A.), (66 Fed. Rep., 53).

(b) A bicycle is not a tool of trade.—T. D. 12629, G. A. 1278.

(c) A carpenter's chest, brace, and bit, sewing machine and towels imported by Wilson Barrett, an actor and theatrical manager, held not free as tools of trade.—T. D. 14049, G. A. 2100.

(d) Law books bought by an American lawyer while abroad but not used by him while abroad and not brought by him on his return are not free.—T. D. 10916, G. A. 411.

(e) The vocation of teaching a Sunday school or bible class is not a "profession" within the commonly understood meaning of this work. Hence books used by a Sunday school teacher would hardly be classed as professional books, especially where they had never been used abroad prior to importation.—T. D. 15585, G. A. 2845.

(f) Horses, elephants, hippopotami, kangaroos, monkeys, hyenas, tigers, leopards, and other animals belonging to a circus, held not free as tools of trade.—T. D. 13763, G. A. 1957.

(g) Horses used by Sandow as weights or dumb-bells in exhibitions of feats of strength are not free as tools of trade.—T. D. 14850, G. A. 2533.

(h) The oath for free entry of a turner's workbench claims that it is the tool of trade of Kernisch, while the protest claims that it is the property of Becker. The workbench did not arrive on the same steamer with Kernisch. Protest overruled.—T. D. 12199, G. A. 1013.

(i) Six rifles, one organ, and a lot of painted images, comprising the outfit of a shooting gallery, held not to be tools of trade.—T. D. 12583, G. A. 1267.

(j) Certain theatrical effects imported by Kiralfy for Barnum & Bailey held not free.—T. D. 13811, G. A. 2005.

(k) A tricycle held not to be free as personal effects the invoice showing that it was purchased less than one year prior to entry.—T. D. 11971, G. A. 884.

(l) Articles that do not arrive at the same time or upon the same vessel with the importer are not in his "actual possession" within the meaning of this paragraph. The merchandise in this case was theatrical costumes sent by freight steamer and arriving about the 15th of October, the owner having arrived about the 15th of July.—Rosenfeld v. United States (C. C. A.), (66 Fed. Rep., 303).

(m) Articles properly classifiable as implements of occupation which arrived some time after the owner by a different ship, because the ship in which he came refused to carry them, are not free.—Sandow v. United States (C. C.), (84 Fed. Rep., 146).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(n) Statues are not tools of trade of an architect.—T. D. 10405, G. A. 96.

1897 646. Pulu.

1894 597. Pulu.

1890 687. Pulu.

1883 766. Pulu.

1897 647. Quinia, sulphate of, and all alkaloids or salts of cinchona bark.

1894 601. Quinia, sulphate of, and all alkaloids or salts of cinchona bark.

1890 690. Quinia, sulphate of, and all alkaloids or salts of cinchona bark.

1883 629. Quinia, sulphate of, salts of, and cinchonidia.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 647, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Euquinine is not an alkaloid or salt of cinchona bark but a medicinal preparation in the preparation of which alcohol is used.—T. D. 26050, G. A. 5924.

1897 648. Rags, not otherwise specially provided for in this Act.

1894 602. Rags, not otherwise specially provided for in this Act.

1890 691. Rags, not otherwise specially provided for in this act.

1883 481. Rags, of whatever material composed, and not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act, ten per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 648, ACT OF 1897.

(b) Waste bagging of jute 44 inches in width is not rags.—T. D. 23520, G. A. 5078.

(c) Coarse pieces of old jute bagging, removed from cotton bales, which are torn, ragged and dirty, and are not of such a character as to be capable of use for patching purposes or otherwise than as paper stock, are not dutiable as waste but are free as rags.—Train-Smith Company v. United States (140 Fed. Rep., 113; T. D. 26484), reversing T. D. 24172, G. A. 5265, followed; T. D. 28031, G. A. 6562.

(d) Small fragments of waste bagging which are usually full of holes and irregular in size and present the appearance of being ragged and torn, sometimes known as scrap gunny, and shown to be unfit practically for patching or baling cotton, are free of duty as rags.—T. D. 28202, G. A. 6603.

(e) The word "rags" has no established and uniform commercial designation but would seem to cover any old torn pieces, small or large, of any woven fabric which has subserved one purpose and comes into the market as second-hand material and which is unfit for patching cotton.—Ibid.

1897 649. Regalia and gems, statuary, and specimens or casts of sculpture, where specially imported in good faith for the use and by order of any society incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use and by order of any college, academy, school, or seminary of learning in the United States, or any State or public library, and not for sale; but the term "regalia" as herein used shall be held to embrace only such insignia of rank or office or emblems as may be worn upon the person or borne in the hand during public exercises of the society or institution, and shall not include articles of furniture or fixtures, or of regular wearing apparel, nor personal property of individuals.

1894 603. Regalia and gems, statues, statuary, and specimens or casts of sculpture where specially imported in good faith for the use of any society incorporated or established solely for educational, philosophical, literary, or religious purposes, or for the encouragement of fine arts, or for the use or by order of any college, academy, school, seminary of learning, or public library in the United States; but the term "regalia" as herein used shall be held to embrace only such insignia of rank or office or emblems, as may be worn upon the person or borne in the hand during public exercises of the society or institution, and shall not include articles of furniture or fixtures, or of regular wearing apparel, nor personal property of individuals.

692. Regalia and gems, statues, statuary and specimens of sculpture where specially imported in good faith for the use of any society incorporated or established solely for educational, philosophical, literary, or religious purposes, or for the encouragement of fine arts, or for the use or by order of any college, academy, school, seminary of learning, or 1890 public library in the United States; but the term "regalia" as herein used shall be held to embrace only such insignia of rank or office or emblems, as may be worn upon the person or borne in the hand during public exercises of the society or institution, and shall not include articles of furniture or fixtures, or of regular wearing-apparel, nor personal property of individuals.

771. Regalia and gems, statues, statuary, and specimens of sculpture, where specially imported in good faith for the use of any society incor-
1883 porated or established for philosophical, literary, or religious purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use or by order of any college, academy, school, seminary of learning, or public library in the United States.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 649, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Church statuary, so called, comprising figures representing the Savior, the apostles, and other religious subjects, made variously of plaster of Paris, cement, and other composition of either earthy or mineral substances, cast in molds and variously decorated, are not free but dutiable according to component material. Excluded from free list by paragraph 454. Assessed under paragraph 450.—T. D. 19310, G. A. 4137, overruled in effect by T. D. 25295, G. A. 5681.

(b) Silk belt or sash worn in church services is free.—T. D. 21026, G. A. 4414.

(c) Statuary comprising single figures, groups, "in the round," or insulated, also groups of figures and other objects in relief known as "Statues of the Cross," molded of earthy or mineral substances, known as "carton pierre," "carton romain," "stone composition," and terra cotta, painted and decorated and known as "Church statuary," is dutiable according to component material, whether for sale or for the use of religious or educational institutions, and is not exempt as specimens or casts of sculpture.—T. D. 21543, G. A. 4533, reversed. (See T. D. 25295, G. A. 5681.)

(d) A "reliquary cross" consisting of a metal cross, with receptacle at the intersection, carried in the hand in public processions of the Catholic Church and especially imported in good faith for the use and upon the order of such church and not for sale, is entitled to free entry.—T. D. 22508, G. A. 4774.

(e) Regalia imported by associations established for charitable purposes is not free.—T. D. 23143, G. A. 4953.

(f) In order that regalia may be entitled to free entry under this paragraph it is necessary that they be imported not only "for the use" of a society of the kind named in the statute but also "by order" of such society.—T. D. 23856, G. A. 5175.

(g) So-called church statuary consisting of molded figures and groups representing religious subjects, which are composed principally of plastic mineral substances, and are colored or otherwise ornamented or decorated, held to be "casts of sculpture" within the meaning of this paragraph. The articles having been imported for the use and by order of churches or other religious or educational institutions, are entitled to free entry under this paragraph, rather than dutiable under various paragraphs in the tariff providing for articles, wares, or manufactures of their component materials.—Benziger v. United States (192 U. S., 38; T. D. 24977) followed; T. D. 25295, G. A. 5681.

(a) A statue composed of zinc cast in a mold held to be a "cast of sculpture" within the meaning of this paragraph and free of duty thereunder when imported for the use and by order of a church. An orphan asylum, whose main purpose is to afford a home for its inmates, even though it possess religious or educational features and maintain a chapel and class rooms, is not a society established "solely" for religious or educational purposes within the meaning of this paragraph, and casts of sculpture imported for such an institution are not free under this paragraph.—T. D. 25357, G. A. 5699.

(b) Certain baptismal fonts and pedestals molded from terra cotta and ornamented in some instances quite elaborately, with sculptural detail, each of the baptismal fonts being surmounted by a group of statuary, held to be free of duty as casts of sculpture under this paragraph upon proof that they were imported for the use and by order of religious institutions.—T. D. 26481, G. A. 6073.

(c) Embroidered silk flags of various nations imported for the use and by order of the United Society of Christian Endeavor held to be free of duty as regalia under the provisions of this paragraph.—T. D. 27018, G. A. 6265.

(d) Compliance with the regulations made by the Secretary of the Treasury is not a condition precedent to the right of free entry under this paragraph.—Ibid.

(e) The provision for "specimens of sculpture" herein is not restricted to articles imported for educational use and a sculptured marble baptismal font of Romanesque design imported for the use and by order of a religious institution is free of duty as a specimen of sculpture.—T. D. 27253, G. A. 6328.

(f) Statuary carved from wood imported for the use and by order of a church is free under this paragraph as specimens of sculpture.—T. D. 27491, G. A. 6401.

(g) The oaths necessary to establish the right to free entry of certain church regalia were not before the collector at the time of making entry as required by article 562, Customs Regulations, 1899; but they were before him at the time of liquidation. It was held that this was sufficient to entitle the articles to free admission under this paragraph and that the Secretary of the Treasury is not empowered to abridge the right of free entry of the articles enumerated herein.—Siegman v. United States (141 Fed. Rep., 491; T. D. 26402).

(h) The omission from the free list of a provision for "casts of plaster of paris" which had appeared in earlier tariffs is immaterial as regards molded plaster statuary for churches, inasmuch as the provision for "casts of sculpture" herein is broad enough to cover such goods.—Benziger v. United States (192 U. S., 38; T. D. 24977).

(i) This provision of the statute should be liberally construed in favor of the importer and if there were any fair doubt as to the true construction of the provision in question the courts should resolve the doubt in his favor.—Ibid.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(j) Articles for charitable use are not free for that reason.—T. D. 16998, G. A. 3426.

(k) Two gilded iron lamps (valued at 700 lire) designed for use upon a church altar held not to be works of art. These lamps were assessed as manufactures of metal and were claimed to be free under paragraphs 603, 686, or 688 (1894).—T. D. 18624, G. A. 4022.

(a) Altar for church of marble elaborately carved or sculptured and highly decorative is not entitled to classification as a "specimen or cast of sculpture." This altar was assessed for duty under paragraph 105 and was claimed to be free under paragraphs 686 or 688 (1894).—T. D. 18624, G. A. 4022.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(b) Certain candelabra too large to be borne in hand during public exercises held not free as regalia nor as works of art.—T. D. 13362, G. A. 1742.

(c) Brass candelabra intended to stand in a church altar and not to be carried in hand are not free as regalia.—T. D. 12097, G. A. 959.

1883 [Not enumerated. Dutiable according to composition.]

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 657, ACT OF 1897.

(d) Sheep dip, so called, made from cresol or cresylic acid, dead oil of coal tar, caustic soda, oleate of potash, and other substances combined with water, is not free, being extensively used as a disinfectant, deodorizer, and antiseptic and also as a medicinal preparation in healing or curing wounds, sores, diseases of the human and animal bodies, and for other purposes. This sheep dip was assessed under paragraph 3.—T. D. 19228, G. A. 4124.

(e) A dry yellow powder imported in cases of 85 pounds each, valued at 30 shillings sterling per case, and composed of sulphur, arsenic, and soda, and intended and expressly and exclusively used as sheep dip, and not susceptible of use for other purposes, is free.—T. D. 22575, G. A. 4790.

(f) A dark-brown fluid with a tarry odor, imported in drums of 5 gallons each, and composed of potash and fatty anhydrides, and tar acids of dead oil—or potash soap and creosote oil—which, being used to some extent in the treatment of sheep for certain diseases, is included in the class of nonpoisonous dips, but is susceptible of use and is used extensively as a disinfectant, antiseptic, and for other medicinal purposes generally; therefore is not exempt.—T. D. 22575, G. A. 4790.

(g) A yellow substance with a pronounced sulphur odor and about the consistency of ordinary butter, which is described in the invoice and on the labels of the package in which it is contained as "Hayward's paste sheep dip" and as "Hayward's sulphur paste dip," which the chemist reports to be composed variously of sulphur phenol acids, arsenious oxide, sodium arsenite, arseniate, arsenious sulphide and sodium chloride, and is expressly intended for use as sheep dip, and is not fit for other commercial purposes, is exempt from duty.—T. D. 23285, G. A. 4996.

(h) Little's sheep dip, so called, the main component of which is a product of coal tar, being recommended as a remedy for internal parasites in horses and for burns, bites, stings, etc., is not free as sheep dip, but is dutiable as a coal-tar product.—T. D. 26800, G. A. 6177.

(i) A compound known as sheep dip held to be dutiable as a coal-tar preparation and not free as sheep dip.—Shallus v. Stone (150 Fed. Rep., 605; T. D. 27825) followed; T. D. 28032, G. A. 6563.

(j) An article known as Cannon's dip, which is advertised as a sheep and cattle wash, insecticide, disinfectant, and remedy for diseases of domestic animals, is not free of duty under this paragraph, for it obviously "can be used for other purposes."—Moody v. Patterson (153 Fed. Rep., 830; T. D. 28058).

(a) This provision does not apply to a compound that is used extensively for other purposes than sheep dipping.—Wyman v. United States (117 Fed. Rep., 202).

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 658, ACT OF 1897.

(b) Certain shotgun barrels in single tubes, from Belgium, held to be free and not dutiable under paragraph 158 at 50 per cent.—T. D. 21404, G. A. 4490.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(c) Shotgun barrels made by the Whitworth process found to have been produced in part by hammering and held to be "forged, rough bored." United States v. Baldwin (125 Fed. Rep., 156; T. D. 25070).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(d) Shotgun barrels manufactured by the Whitworth patent and rough bored are not free.—T. D. 11703, G. A. 808.

(e) Certain single barrels for shotguns held to be rough bored.—T. D. 13329, G. A. 1709.

(f) This paragraph was intended to exempt such forged shotgun barrels as are bored in such manner only as is necessary to determine whether the article is sound and perfect, and which are otherwise in the rough condition in which they come from the forge, without being welded and brazed, polished, or otherwise advanced toward completion.—T. D. 12787, G. A. 1383.

1897 659. Shrimps and other shell fish.

1890 703. Shrimps, and other shell-fish.
296. Cans or packages, made of tin or other metal, containing shell fish admitted free of duty, not exceeding one quart in contents, shall be subject to a duty of eight cents per dozen cans or packages; and when exceeding one quart, shall be subject to an additional duty of four cents per dozen for each additional half quart or fractional part thereof: Provided, That until June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, such cans or packages shall be admitted as now provided by law.

1883 783. Shrimps, or other shell-fish.

(g) Cuttlefish, being a species of mollusk, are free of duty as shellfish.—T. D. 23418, G. A. 5043.

(h) So-called condensed clams, which consist of fresh clams removed from the shell, ground into fine particles, and then sealed in tin cans after a partial evaporation of the moisture, and which are used as a substitute for fresh clams in making broth, chowder, and other culinary articles, are free as "shell fish" under this paragraph and are not dutiable by similitude at the same rate as "fish paste or sauce" under paragraph 241.—T. D. 26387, G. A. 6052.

(i) This provision is not confined to shellfish in a raw or fresh state, but includes also prepared shellfish and curried prawns put up in glass packages, which are free of duty.—T. D. 27791, G. A. 6503.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(a) Smoked or dried oysters in nut oil are free as shellfish.—T. D. 12258, G. A. 1072.

(b) Abalone meat is free as shellfish and not dutiable as prepared meats.—T. D. 10496, G. A. 146.

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(c) Tin cans containing lobsters, imported from Prince Edwards Island and from Halifax, Nova Scotia, are dutiable under section 4, clause 6, of this act. Section 7 of the act of March 3, 1883, has no reference to the special duty imposed on tin cans containing fish.—Russell v. Worthington (23 Fed. Rep., 248).

1897 660. Silk, raw, or as reeled from the cocoon, but not doubled, twisted, or advanced in manufacture in any way.

1894 616. Silk, raw, or as reeled from the cocoon, but not doubled, twisted, nor advanced in manufacture in any way.

1890 704. Silk, raw, or as reeled from the cocoon, but not doubled, twisted, or advanced in manufacture in any way.

1883 784. Silk, raw, or as reeled from the cocoon, but not doubled, twisted, or advanced in manufacture in any way.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 660, ACT OF 1897.

(d) Raw silk which has been reeled from cocoons and then wound on cops or tubes is not free under this provision, but is dutiable under paragraph 384 as raw silk advanced in manufacture.—Klots v. United States (139 Fed. Rep., 606; T. D. 26450), affirming 133 Fed. Rep., 808; T. D. 25790, and reversing T. D. 24702, G. A. 5432.

(e) Raw tussah silk in the condition as reeled from cocoons, which has merely been transferred from the large reels on which it was taken from the cocoons to smaller reels, in order to adapt the skeins thus produced to American spinning machines, is not dutiable under the provisions of paragraph 384 as "silk partially manufactured from cocoons," but is entitled to free entry under the provisions of this paragraph as "silk raw, or as reeled from the cocoon, but not doubled, twisted or advanced in manufacture in any way."—United States v. Stewart (133 Fed. Rep., 811; T. D. 25898), affirming T. D. 25524, G. A. 5767, followed; T. D. 26032, G. A. 5920.

1897 661. Silk cocoons and silk waste.

1894 617. Silk cocoons and silk waste.

1890 705. Silk cocoons and silk-waste.

1883 785. Silk cocoons and silk waste.

DECISION UNDER PARAGRAPH 661, ACT OF 1897.

(f) Silk cocoons and silk waste are free only when they are not manufactured at all. When they are, they come under paragraph 384.—Fawcett v. United States (146 Fed. Rep., 83; T. D. 27189).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(g) The silk waste of commerce made free is (1) of cut or pierced cocoons the unity of the silk fiber of which has been destroyed by the moths, and (2) of small bits or fragments which are pulled or broken off in the process of reeling the threads or fibers from cocoons.—T. D. 17410, G. A. 3601.

1897 662. Silkworm's eggs.

1894 618. Silk worm's eggs.

1890 706. Silk worm's eggs.

1883 786. Silk-worms' eggs.

1897 663. Skeletons and other preparations of anatomy.

1894 619. Skeletons and other preparations of anatomy.

1890 707. Skeletons and other preparations of anatomy.

1883 787. Skeletons, and other preparations of anatomy.

1897 664. Skins of all kinds, raw (except sheepskins with the wool on), and hides not specially provided for in this act.

1894 505. * * * skins, raw or uncured, whether dry, salted, or pickled.

1890 605. * * * Angora goat-skins, raw, without the wool, unmanufactured, asses' skins, raw or unmanufactured, and skins, except sheep-skins with the wool on.

1883 { 709. Goat-skins, raw.
788. Skins, dried, salted or pickled.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 664, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Raw calfskins are free and not dutiable under paragraph 437 as raw cattle hides.—T. D. 18739, G. A. 4052.

(b) Horse hides are free.—T. D. 18871, G. A. 4068.

(c) Long-haired raw calfskins are free under this paragraph and not under paragraph 561 as furs undressed or under paragraph 562 as fur skins of all kinds not dressed in any manner, nor dutiable under paragraph 437 as hides of cattle.—T. D. 18837, G. A. 4065.

(d) The dividing line as to weight between raw calfskins and raw hides of cattle is 25 pounds, and as to dry skins and dry hides 12 pounds. Skins weighing under such amounts are free and not dutiable as hides under paragraph 437.—T. D. 19716, G. A. 4215.

(e) "Shearling sheepskins" imported from Sydney, Australia, from which the wool has been sheared as nearly as practicable or customary with skins of that kind, so as to reduce the length of the wool left on the skins to not more than one-quarter of an inch and to a quantity practically of little or no value commercially, are free and not dutiable under paragraph 360.—T. D. 20244, G. A. 4300.

(f) The Secretary being expressly authorized by paragraph 360 to prescribe rules for ascertaining the quantity and value of wool on such skins, all reasonable rules and regulations not inconsistent with law which are adopted to carry into effect that paragraph are to be regarded as having the force of statutory regulations.—T. D. 13419, 18907, 4069; T. D. 20244, G. A. 4300.

(g) Sheepskins known as "roans," (2) "skivers," "grains," or "splits," split from the grain side of sheepskins; and (3) "fleshes," or "fleshers," split from the flesh side of sheepskins, all having been salted or pickled, constitute a class of merchandise well known in trade and commerce as raw sheepskins.—Coggill v. Lawrence (1 Blatchf., 602; 13 How., 274); T. D. 20884, G. A. 4388.

(h) The process of liming, splitting, etc., including pickling, does not constitute tanning nor such manufacturing as to change the character of the skins so as to remove them from the category of raw skins, the pickling being designed solely for the purpose of preservation and safe transportation.—Id.

(i) Such articles are free and not dutiable under paragraph 438 as "leather not specially provided for," or as "skins for morocco, tanned but unfinished," nor as nonenumerated raw or unmanufactured articles or manufactured.—Id.

(a) The dividing line, ordinarily, as to weight between dried salted skins and dried salted hides is 15 pounds. Generally skins of this particular kind weighing under 15 pounds are bought and sold in commerce as skins and not as hides and are free. Dacca kipskins weighing 13½ pounds each, dry-salted, are free as skins and not dutiable as hides.—T. D. 21977, G. A. 4652.

(b) Angora goatskins, raw, with the hair on, of inferior or bastard breed, not suitable for use as fur, are free as raw skins.—T. D. 22831, G. A. 4872.

(c) Chamois skins dry-salted, untanned, with the hair on, held to be free of duty under this provision.—T. D. 24550, G. A. 5370.

(d) Skins of cattle weighing under 12 pounds are free of duty.—United States v. Helmrath (145 Fed. Rep., 36; T. D. 27117), affirming 135 id., 912; T. D. 25900, followed; T. D. 27294, G. A. 6344.

(e) Singapore buffalo hides found to be similar to the hides passed upon in United States v. Winter (134 Fed. Rep., 841; T. D. 25901), affirming Winter v. United States (T. D. 25184), and held to be free of duty as hides not specially provided for.—T. D. 26240, G. A. 6001.

(f) The expression "hides of cattle" is not shown to have any commercial signification which limits it to so-called straight-back cattle (cows, oxen, steers, and bulls), but rather to describe the species, i. e., domestic animals of the cattle family such as are concededly useful for the purposes which prompted the levying of a duty on hides; and hides of the domesticated East Indian buffalo are dutiable as hides of cattle and not free as hides not specially provided for.—Rossbach v. United States (122 Fed. Rep., 1020), affirming 116 id., 781; T. D. 20276, G. A. 4305, followed; T. D. 27021, G. A. 6268, reversed; United States v. Schmoll (154 Fed. Rep., 734; T. D. 27920), and 157 id., 1005; T. D. 28604.

(g) The growth on cabretta skins is wool, and such skins are excluded from this paragraph.—T. D. 27258, G. A. 6333; Johnson v. U. S. (159 Fed. Rep., 189; T. D. 28538).

(h) The growth upon Mocha sheepskins held not to be wool, and such skins are free of duty under this paragraph.—Goat and Sheepskin Import Company v. United States (206 U. S., 194; T. D. 28190), reversing 141 Fed. Rep., 493 (T. D. 26404); 145 Fed. Rep., 1022 (T. D. 27190) and in effect overruling T. D. 21737, G. A. 4593, and T. D. 27279, G. A. 6337, followed; T. D. 28248, G. A. 6619.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(i) Skins from Cape of Good Hope taken from goats which are a cross between Cape of Good Hope and Angora goats and commercially known as Cape bastard skins, or Cape Angoras, imported with the hair attached, which hair is only used for mixing with mortar and is comparatively valueless, is free and not dutiable under paragraph 384 (1890) as mohair, class 2.—Keen Sutterlee Co. v. United States (C. C.), (107 Fed. Rep., 263).

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(j) The expression "not herein otherwise provided for" in this clause has reference to the provisions of this act and not to some previous act.—Movius v. Arthur (95 U. S., 144).

1897 665. Soda, nitrate of, or cubic nitrate.

1894 621. Soda, nitrate of, or cubic nitrate, * * *.

1890 709. Soda, nitrate of, or cubic nitrate, * * *.

1883 630. Soda, nitrate of, or cubic nitrate.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(a) Nitrate of soda is not free.—T. D. 11558, G. A. 733.

1897 666. Specimens of natural history, botany, and mineralogy, when imported for scientific public collections, and not for sale.

1894 625. Specimens of natural history, botany, and mineralogy, when imported for cabinets or as objects of science, and not for sale.

1890 712. Specimens of natural history, botany, and mineralogy, when imported for cabinets or as objects of scieuce, and not for sale.

1883 793. Specimens of natural history, botany, and mineralogy, when imported for cabinets or as objects of taste or science, and not for sale.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 666, ACT OF 1897.

(b) "Evergreen seedlings," grapevines, are specimens of botany or botanical specimens, and when imported in pursuance of the purpose of conducting such experiments in forestry as may "be deemed most advantageous to the interests of a State and the advancement of the science of forestry generally," by developing them in connection and comparison with others, and with a view of making a collection of this and various similar vines for a scientific and public collection by a public institution such as the Forestry College of Cornell University, are free.—T. D. 22532, G. A. 4779.

(c) Plants for the Missouri Botanical Garden held to be free of duty under this paragraph.—T. D. 27635, G. A. 6451.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(d) Stags heads mounted, not for sale, but to be placed in a room wtih other specimens of natural history, are free.—T. D. 11864, G. A. 855.

(e) Specimens of natural history on microscopic slides held free and not dutiable as manufactures of glass.—T. D. 15310, G. A. 2744.

1897 667. Spices: Cassia, cassia vera, and cassia buds; cinnamon and chips of; cloves and clove stems; mace; nutmegs; pepper, black or white, and pimento; all the foregoing when unground; ginger root, unground and not preserved or candied.

1894

536. Ginger-root, unground.
546. Mace.
551. Nutmegs.
584. Pepper, unground, of all kinds.
585. Pimento, ungrounnd.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 667, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Pepper shells are free as pepper unground and not dutiable as ground pepper nor as spices.—T. D. 14716, G. A. 2438; T. D. 19900, G. A. 4230; T. D. 20846, G. A. 4382; U. S. v. Leggett (124 Fed. Rep., 1015).

(b) Decorticated white pepper is free and not dutiable as spices.—T. D. 21080, G. A. 4427.

(c) Sweet red peppers put up in liquid in tins, which are commercially known as pimentos, are not entitled to free entry under the provision herein for "pepper, black or white, and pimento" unground. The operation of this provision restricted to articles that are susceptible of being ground.—T. D. 28427, G. A. 6667.

(d) So-called spent ginger, a by-product the result of the distillation of ginger root, in the form of caked particles, the form being due partly to cracking and partly to disintegration, is free as ginger root unground.—German v. United States (137 Fed. Rep., 817; T. D. 25994); and Cruikshank v. United States (T. D. 26341, suit 3436), reversing without opinion. T. D. 24717, G. A. 5439.

(e) Ginger root cleaned, cut, and imported in casks in brine is free as ginger root unground, not preserved or candied.—T. D. 27799, G. A. 6511.

(f) Grinding is the process of reducing to fine particles or powder by crushing or friction, and the process by which this result is attained is not important. Hence a residuum from the process of decorticating the pepper berry, in the form of a fine powder, used without further grinding as an adulterant for ground pepper, is not free as pepper unground, but is dutiable under the provision for spices not specially provided for.—Frame v. United States (149 Fed. Rep., 1022; T. D. 27804), affirming 143 id., 692; T. D. 27004, and T. D. 26374, G. A. 6045.

(g) A by-product produced in the manufacture of essence of ginger root, which results from the cracking of the crude root in a machine and running it through a still, and which consists of the residue of the process pressed into cakes, is not free as ginger root unground. The cracking described is a species of grinding.—German v. United States (128 Fed. Rep., 467; T. D. 25025).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(h) Pepper shells are free as unground pepper.—T. D. 18525, G. A. 3981.

1897 668. Spunk.

1894 635. Spunk.

1890 721 Spunk.

1883 794. Spunk.

1894 636. Spurs and stilts used in the manufacture of earthen, porcelain, and stone ware.

1890 722. Spurs and stilts used in the manufacture of earthen, porcelain, and stone ware.

1883 795. Spurs and stilts used in the manufacture of earthen, stone, or crockery ware.

1897 670. Stamps: Foreign postage or revenue stamps, canceled or uncanceled.

1894 636½. Stamps: Foreign postage or revenue stamps, canceled or uncanceled.

1890 [Not enumerated. Dutiable under paragraph 423, page 564.]
1883 [Not enumerated. Dutiable under paragraph 384, page 564.]

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 670, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Foreign stamped envelopes, the value of the envelope being insignificant as compared with the stamp, are free and not dutiable as envelopes.—T. D. 15966, G. A. 2990.

(b) Foreign stamped postal cards bearing printed matter are dutiable as printed matter and not free as foreign postage or revenue stamps.—T. D. 22506, G. A. 4772.

(c) A collection of foreign postage stamps contained in a stamp album held to be free of duty under this paragraph.—T. D. 25432, G. A. 5729.

1897 671. Stone and sand: Burrstone in blocks, rough or unmanufactured; cliff stone, unmanufactured; rotten stone, tripoli, and sand, crude or manufactured, not otherwise provided for in this act.

1894 638. Stone and sand: Burrstone in blocks, rough or manufactured, or bound up into millstones; cliff stone, unmanufactured; * * * rotten stone, and sand, crude or manufactured.
657. Tripoli.

1890 723. Stone and sand: Burrstone in blocks, rough or manufactured, and not bound up into millstones; cliff stone, unmanufactured, * * * rotten stone, and sand, crude or manufactured.
740. Tripoli.

1883 668. Burrstone, in blocks, rough or unmanufactured, and not bound up in millstones.
611. * * * cliff stone, unmanufactured.
773. Rotten stone.
634. Tripoli.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 671, ACT OF 1897.

(d) White and salmon-tinted infusorial earths dug from the bottom of lakes and known and sold as fossil flour or tripoli are free.—T. D. 19980, G. A. 4245.

(e) Sand colored black by the use of organic coloring matter is free of duty under the provision for "sand, crude or manufactured, not otherwise provided for."—T. D. 23319, G. A. 5006.

(f) An article known as furnace sand, which is produced by grinding silica stone or sandstone and is used in making the bed of a furnace, to protect it from injury by heat, is free of duty under the provision in this paragraph for "sand, crude or manufactured, not otherwise provided for." The expression "sand manufactured" embraces not only sand which is partially manufactured, but also sand produced by a process of manufacture. In re Dana (G. A. 2882) overruled.—T. D. 23521, G. A. 5079.

(g) Burrstone is a cellular variety of quartz from which the best millstones are made, and is differentiated in the tariff from sandstone, freestone, and other like varieties of minerals. Millstones made of sandstone or lava are therefore not burrstones within the meaning of this paragraph or paragraph 116. Stones which have been hewn and otherwise partially manufactured so as to be cut in a circular form, with an eye drilled in the center, designed to be converted into millstones by further manufacture, are not "rough or unmanufactured" blocks within the meaning of this paragraph.—T. D. 23949, G. A. 5194.

(h) Burrstones in a rough-quarried condition, approximating an irregular circular form, with a hole drilled in the center and encircled by an iron band, are free of duty as "burrstones in blocks, rough or unmanufactured."—Cary v. Arthur (T. D. 3048) followed; T. D. 23949, G. A. 5194, modified; T. D. 24325, G. A. 5312.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(a) Salmon-tinted natural earth, colored by the presence of oxide and carbonate of Iron, found to be tripoli and free.—T. D. 16986, G. A. 3414.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(b) A manufacture of pumice stone and sand molded into bricks is free.—T. D. 13611, G. A. 1883.

1897 672. Storax, or styrax.

1894 639. Storax or styrax.

1890 724. Storax, or styrax.

1883 588. Storax, or styrax.

1897 673. Strontia, oxide of, and protoxide of strontian, and strontianite, or mineral carbonate of strontia.

1894 640. Strontia, oxide of, and protoxide of strontian, and strontianite, or mineral carbonate of strontia.

1890 725. Strontia, oxide of, and protoxide of strontian, and strontianite, or mineral carbonate of strontia.

1883 631. Strontia, oxide of, and proto-oxide of strontian, and strontianite, or mineral carbonate of strontia.

1897 674. Sulphur, lac or precipitated, and sulphur or brimstone, crude, in bulk, sulphur ore as pyrites, or sulphuret of iron in its natural state, containing in excess of twenty-five per centum of sulphur, and sulphur not otherwise provided for .

1894 642. Sulphur, lac or precipitated, and sulphur or brimstone, crude, in bulk, sulphur ore, as pyrites, or sulphuret of iron in its natural state, containing in excess of twenty-five per centum of sulphur, and sulphur not otherwise provided for.

1890 727. Sulphur, lac or precipitated, and sulphur or brimstone, crude, in bulk, sulphur ore, as pyrites, or sulphuret of iron in its natural state, containing in excess of twenty-five per centum of sulphur (except on the copper contained therein) and sulphur not otherwise provided for.

133. * * * Sulphur ore, as pyrites, or sulphuret of iron in its natural state, containing not more than three and one-half per centum copper, seventy-five cents per ton: Provided, That ore containing more than two per centum of copper shall pay, in addition thereto, one-half of one cent per pound for the copper contained therein: Provided, also, That sulphur ore as pyrites or sulphuret of iron in its natural state, containing in excess of twenty-five per centum of sulphur, shall be free of duty, except on the copper contained therein, as above provided.

1883 633. Sulphur, lac or precipitated.

632. Sulphur, or brimstone, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act.

144. * * * Sulphur ore, as pyrites, or sulphuret of iron in its natural state, containing not more than three and one-half per centum of copper, seventy-five cents per ton: Provided, That ore containing more than two per centum of copper, shall pay, in addition thereto, two and one-half cents per pound for the copper contained therein.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 674, ACT OF 1897.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(a) Ground sulphur is crude sulphur and free.—T. D. 17756, G. A. 3742.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(b) Recovered sulphur is free.—T. D. 10937, G. A. 432.

675. Sulphuric acid which at the temperature of sixty degrees Fahrenheit does not exceed the specific gravity of one and three hundred and eighty thousandths, for use in manufacturing superphosphate of 1897 lime or artificial manures of any kind, or for any agricultural purposes: Provided, That upon all sulphuric acid imported from any country, whether independent or a dependency, which imposes a duty upon sulphuric acid imported into such country from the United States, there shall be levied and collected a duty of one-fourth of one cent per pound.

643. Sulphuric acid: Provided, That upon sulphuric acid imported from any country, whether independent or a dependency, which imposes 1894 a duty upon sulphuric acid exported from the United States, there shall be levied, and collected the rate of duty existing prior to the passage of this Act.

728. Sulphuric acid which at the temperature of sixty degrees Fahren-
1890 heit does not exceed the specific gravity of one and three hundred and eighty thousandths, for use in manufacturing superphosphate of lime or artificial manures of any kind, or for any agricultural purposes.

1883 594. Acids used for medicinal, chemical, or manufacturing purposes, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act.

1897 676. Tamarinds.

1894 490. Tamarinds.

1890 581. Tamarinds.

1883 799. Tamarinds.

1897 677. Tapioca, cassava or cassady.

1894 646. Tapioca, cassava or cassady.

1890 730. Tapioca, cassava or cassady.

1883 800. Tapioca, cassava, or cassada.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 677, ACT OF 1897.

(c) Tapioca flour or ground cassava is free and not dutiable under paragraph 285 as starch or a preparation fit for use as starch.—T. D. 22021, G. A. 4661.

(d) Tapioca flour is free.—T. D. 22968, G. A. 4907.

(e) Certain thin, friable cakes made from the meal or pulp of the cassava plant, which are the crudest form in which cassava is susceptible of importation, held to be free under this paragraph as cassava.—T. D. 25443, G. A. 5737

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(f) Tapioca flour is not free.—T. D. 11406, G. A. 689; T. D. 12227, G. A. 1041; Wise v. Chew Hing Lung (C. C. A.), (83 Fed. Rep., 162); reversed (176 U. S., 156).

(g) Tapioca flour, commercially known as tapioca and used by calico printers and carpet manufacturers for thickening colors, and which, though chemically a starch, is not adapted to commercial use as starch, is free and not dutiable as a preparation fit for use as starch.—In re Townsend (C. C. A.), (56 Fed. Rep., 222); In re Wise (C. C.), (77 Fed. Rep., 734).

(a) The term "preparation fit for use as starch" means preparations which are actually and not theoretically fit for such use, which can be practically used as such, and not which can be made by manufacture fit for such use.—Id.

(b) Tapioca includes that article in three forms, viz, flake tapioca, pearl tapioca, and tapioca flour. Tapioca flour is free as tapioca and is not dutiable as a preparation fit for use as starch. The designation of an article eo nomine, either for duty or as exempt from duty, must prevail over words of general description which might otherwise include the article specially designated. Sustaining the Board of General Appraisers and the Circuit Court (77 Fed. Rep., 734) and reversing the Circuit Court of Appeals (83 Fed. Rep., 162).—Chew Hing Lung v. Wise (176 U. S., 156).

(c) The commercial designation of an article is the first and most important thing to be ascertained and governs in the construction of a tariff law when that article is mentioned, unless there is something else in the law which restrains the operation of this rule.—Chew Hing Lung v. Wise (176 U. S., 156, 161).

(b) Anthrax or blackleg vaccine is free as vaccine virus and not dutiable under paragraph 68 as a medicinal preparation.—Pasteur v. U. S. (123 Fed. Rep., 846), reversing T. D. 21760, G. A. 4600, followed; T. D. 22726, G. A. 4840.

1897 693. Valonia.

1894 665. Valonia.

1890 748. Valonia.

1883 591. Valonia.

1897 694. Verdigris, or subacetate of copper.

1894 666. Verdigris, or subacetate of copper.

1890 749. Verdigris, or subacetate of copper.

1883 635. * * * verdigris, or subacetate of copper.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 694, ACT OF 1897.

(c) "Verdet raffine," a chemical compound used in hat and wool dyeing as a mordant to logwood, found to be a subacetate of copper.—United States v. Petry (116 Fed. Rep., 929) followed; T. D. 24102, G. A. 5244.

(d) Acetate of copper is not free as subacetate of copper or verdigris.—T. D. 13588, G. A. 1860; T. D. 14549, G. A. 2341; reversed in Ducas v. U. S. (71 Fed. Rep., 954), but sustained by the Circuit Court of Appeals (78 Fed. Rep., 339).

1897 695. Wax, vegetable or mineral.

1894 668. Wax, vegetable or mineral.

1890 751. Wax, vegetable or mineral.

1883 592. Vegetable and mineral wax.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 695, ACT OF 1897.

(e) Chinese vegetable tallow is not free as vegetable wax.—T. D. 24686, G. A. 5428.

(f) Carnauba wax held to be free of duty as a mineral or vegetable wax.—T. D. 28220, G. A. 6609.

(g) The vegetable or animal origin of Chinese wax being in dispute, the benefit of the doubt thus arising should be given to the importer and the wax admitted free.—T. D. 25212, G. A. 5646; affirmed without opinion (T. D. 25869).

1897 696. Wafers, unleavened or not edible.

1894 667. Wafers, unmedicated, and not edible.

1890 750. Wafers, unmedicated.

1883 814. Wafers, unmedicated.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 696, ACT OF 1897.

(h) Wafers in which baking powder or bicarbonate of soda is used are not "wafers, unleavened," but are dutiable as unenumerated manufactured articles.—Leggett v. United States (131 Fed. Rep., 817; T. D. 25471), affirming T. D. 24596, G. A. 5393.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(i) Wafers composed of wheat flour and water, being a white material in thin sheets, varying in size from 3 by 3 to 8 by 11 inches, and comparatively tasteless, held to be unmedicated and free.—T. D. 10892, G. A. 387.

(a) Unmedicated sugar wafers are free and not dutiable as nonenumerated articles.—T. D. 15008, G. A. 2585.

(b) Certain wafers used exclusively as food and not medicated held to be free.—T. D. 15035, G. A. 2612.

(c) Sugar wafers, which are made by biscuit makers of flour, sugar, milk, and eggs, flavored with vanilla, and are used exclusively as articles of food, are free and not dutiable as nonenumerated articles.—In re Duncan (C. C.), (57 Fed. Rep., 197).

697. Wearing apparel, articles of personal adornment, toilet articles, and similar personal effects of persons arriving in the United States; but this exemption shall only include such articles as actually accompany and are in the use of, and as are necessary and appropriate for the wear and use of such persons, for the immediate purposes of the journey and present comfort and convenience, and shall not be held to apply to merchandise or articles intended for other persons or for sale:

1897 Provided, That in case of residents of the United States returning from abroad, all wearing apparel and other personal effects taken by them out of the United States to foreign countries shall be admitted free of duty, without regard to their value, upon their identity being established, under appropriate rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but no more than one hundred dollars in value of articles purchased abroad by such residents of the United States shall be admitted free of duty upon their return.

669. Wearing apparel and other personal effects (not merchandise) of persons arriving in the United States; but this exemption shall not be 1894 held to include articles not actually in use and necessary and appropriate for the use of such persons for the purposes of their journey and present comfort and conveuience, or which are intended for any other person or persons, or for sale.

752. Wearing apparel and other personal effects (not merchandise) of persons arriving in the United States, but this exemption shall not be held to include articles not actually in use and necessary and appropriate for the use of such persons for the purposes of their journey and present comfort and convenience, or which are intended for any other person or persons, or for sale: Provided, however, That all such wearing apparel

1090 and other personal effects as may have been once imported into the United States and subjected to the payment of duty, and which may have been actually used and taken or exported to foreign countries by the persons returning therewith to the United States, shall, if not advanced in value or improved in condition by any means since their exportation from the United States, be entitled to exemption from duty, upon their identity being established, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

815. Wearing apparel, in actual use, and other personal effects (not mer-1883 chandise), * * * of persons arriving in the United States. But this exemption shall not be construed to include machinery or other articles imported for use in any manufacturing establishment, or for sale.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 697, ACT OF 1897.

(d) A bicycle is not a personal effect under this paragraph. The collector assessed duty under paragraph 193 as a manufacture of iron and his action was affirmed.—T. D. 19446, G. A. 4163.

(e) The provision exempting wearing apparel and other personal effects from duty is construed to include such articles as would be included in the term "baggage" according to judicial definition. A pair of field glasses and camera held to be personal effects within the meaning of this paragraph. Personal effects of a resident of the United States left in a foreign country by their owner through accident, and forwarded shortly after his return, are entitled to free entry on arrival.—United States v. One Pearl Necklace (111 Fed. Rep., 164); Arnold v. United States (147 U. S., 494, 496) followed; T. D. 23631, G. A. 5109.

(a) Articles intended for distribution as presents, contained in the baggage of persons arriving in the United States, are not entitled to free entry.—T. D. 23636, G. A. 5114.

(b) Under this paragraph returning residents of the United States have an absolute right to the free entry of articles purchased abroad by them, to the value of $100, which are in the nature of baggage.—T. D. 24036, G. A. 5220.

(c) To the same effect is T. D. 24202, G. A. 5270.

(d) Articles found in the baggage of an arriving passenger, designed as presents to persons not accompanying the passenger, are not free under this paragraph.—T. D. 25131, G. A. 5618.

(e) The failure of a returning American resident to declare on a detailed list all articles purchased by him abroad debars the passenger from the privilege of the $100 exemption allowed by this paragraph. The regulation established by the Secretary of the Treasury to this effect is a valid exercise of the power conferred on him.—United States v. Harts (131 Fed. Rep., 886; T. D. 25608); T. D. 25521, G. A. 5764.

(f) A failure on the part of a passenger, a returning resident of the United States, to comply with the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury requiring a detailed list of articles purchased abroad, the prices of the same, etc., is fatal to a claim for the exemption of $100 provided for by this paragraph.—T. D. 26110, G. A. 5955.

(g) The value of a single article exceeding $100 can not be apportioned between two persons traveling together so as to exempt it from duty under this paragraph.—T. D. 26889, G. A. 6222.

(h) A sealskin coat taken abroad by an American traveler and so altered while abroad as to make it practically a new garment can not be returned by said traveler to the United States free of duty as wearing apparel taken out of the United States under the provisions of this paragraph.—T. D. 27421, G. A. 6381.

(i) A regulation made by the Secretary of the Treasury which provides that "persons who have been abroad two years or more, and who have had during that time a fixed place of abode for one year or more, will be considered as nonresidents within the meaning of this law" is not binding upon this Board or the courts, as this is a question that must be left open to be determined from the evidence in each particular case. No regulation made by the Secretary of the Treasury can add to or take from the provisions of a paragraph of the tariff law nor prescribe the evidence by which the facts required by it to exist shall be proven unless authority to make such regulation is expressly given in the paragraph itself.—T. D. 27863, G. A. 6523.

(j) An American citizen residing in the city of Washington, who had been for four years employed in the service of the United States Government at Manila and temporarily residing there during that period, was held to be entitled, upon returning to the United States, to the free admission of $100 in value of certain goods purchased abroad.—Ibid.

(k) It is the duty of returning residents to enter and declare the value of articles on which exemption from duty is claimed, whether they cost more than $100 or not, and when not so declared they are subject to forfeiture under R. S. 2802.—Dodge v. United States (131 Fed. Rep., 849; T. D. 25609),

(a) A person who incurs the penalties provided in R. S. 2802 through failure to mention to the collector dutiable articles contained in his baggage is not entitled to the exemption of articles of the value of $100 allowed in this paragraph.—Harts v. United States (140 Fed. Rep., 843; T. D. 26827).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(b) Bicycles are not free as personal effects, but dutiable as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 15973, G. A. 2997.

(c) Embroidered Mexican hats brought in by a party of expert riders and ropers on their way to join Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show are free as personal effects.—T. D. 18169, G. A. 3926.

(d) Personal effects not accompanied by the owner are not free.—T. D. 16528, G. A. 3246.

(e) Two watches entrusted by a lady in Europe to a friend to bring to America, and brought by him to be delivered to her in Brooklyn, held dutiable because not accompanied by the owner.—T. D. 16528, G. A. 3246.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(f) A bicycle brought by a passenger for another person is not free as personal effects.—T. D. 12102, G. A. 964.

(g) A bicycle arriving three months after the owner held not personal effects.—T. D. 12629, G. A. 1278.

(h) An unused bicycle is not free as personal effects.—T. D. 15219, G. A. 2712.

(i) Diamond jewelry arriving after the owner is not free as personal effects.—T. D. 15306, G. A. 2740.

(j) Shotguns are not personal effects.—T. D. 13494, G. A. 1796.

(k) Guns are not personal effects.—T. D. 15315, G. A. 2749.

(l) One double-barrel breech-loading shotgun, English make, and one American Winchester rifle, brought as baggage by an Englishman on a hunting expedition for use and not for sale, held free as personal effects.—T. D. 14414, G. A. 2298.

(m) Seven new gold embroidered silk Chinese gowns such as are worn by Chinese people while celebrating the advent of the Chinese new year held not to be free.—T. D. 11075, G. A. 518.

(n) Four jackets, two of fur and two of wool, made to order in June, in use three days, returned to maker and kept until September, when they were forwarded to the owners in London, who had already departed for the United States, where the goods were received by them in November, held not free.—T. D. 12217, G. A. 1031.

(o) Four ladies' dresses valued at $60 each, bought for the personal use of the owner and not for sale, brought with the passenger as a part of her baggage, held to be free, though they may not have been actually worn.—T. D. 12580, G. A. 1264.

(p) Wearing apparel which did not arrive until five months after the owner held not free.—T. D. 12630, G. A. 1279.

(q) Woolen wearing apparel taken from this country by the owner, who has not yet returned, is not free.—T. D. 12630, G. A. 1279.

(r) One handsome evening dress, two handsome ball dresses, and one satin opera cloak held not free.—T. D. 13369, G. A. 1749.

(a) Wedding trousseau held not free.—T. D. 13432, G. A. 1769.

(b) Free entry refused for wearing apparel arriving after owner.—T. D. 13490, G. A. 1792.

(c) Where personal effects (woolen wearing apparel) did not arrive with the owner, but two months later, on account of an error in the shipper and the prevalence of cholera at the port of shipment, held free.—T. D. 14156, G. A. 2155.

(d) Certain photographic and lithographic pictures and articles made of marble held not to be free as personal effects.—T. D. 16428, G. A. 3217.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(e) Bicycles are not free as personal effects.—T. D. 10395, G. A. 86.

(f) Carriage and harness held not to be free as personal effects.—T. D. 11021, G. A. 464.

(g) Goods selected in Paris, cut and fitted to be made into theatrical costumes. The owner arrived in the United States July 20, and costumes imported September 22, 1890. Held not free as wearing apparel or tools of trade or employment, because they do not appear to have been in her possession, and legal ownership is not proved.—T. D. 10559, G. A. 209.

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(h) A citizen of the United States arriving home from a visit to Europe, with his family, in September, 1878, brought with him wearing apparel bought there for his and their use, to be worn here during the season then approaching, "not excessive in quantity for persons of their means, habits, and station in life," and their ordinary outfit for the winter. A part of the articles had not been worn, and duty was exacted on all those articles. Held, that under the provision exempting from duty "wearing apparel in actual use and other personal effects (not merchandise), * * * of persons arriving in the United States," the proper rule to be applied was to exempt from duty such of the articles as fulfilled the following conditions: (1) Wearing apparel owned by the passenger and in a condition to be worn at once without further manufacture; (2) brought with him as a passenger and intended for use or wear of himself or his family who accompanied him as passengers and not for sale, or purchased or imported for other persons, or to be given away; (3) suitable for the season of the year which was immediately approaching at the time of arrival; (4) not exceeding in quantity or quality or value what the passenger was in the habit of ordinarily providing for himself and his family at that time and keeping on hand for his and their reasonable wants in their means and habits in life, even though such articles had not been actually worn.—Astor v. Merritt (111 U. S., 202).

(i) A resident of Michigan went to Windsor, Canada, for the purpose of buying an overcoat for his son who accompanied him. It was bought, put on, and worn on the return to this country. He is not within the provision of this section in regard to "wearing apparel."—Simmon's Case (1 Brown, Adm., 128; 22 Fed. Cas., 154).

1894 671. Whalebone, unmanufactured.

1890 753. Whalebone, unmanufactured.

1883 816. Whalebone, unmanufactured.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 698, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Slivers or strips of whalebone tied into bales or bundles are free as whalebone unmanufactured.—T. D. 25165, G. A. 5626.

1897 699. Wood: Logs and round unmanufactured timber, including pulp-woods, firewood, handle bolts, shingle-bolts, gun-blocks for gun-stocks rough-hewn or sawed or planed on one side, hop-poles, ship-timber and ship-planking; all the foregoing not specially provided for in this Act.

1894 672. Logs, and round unmanufactured timber not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act.
673. Firewood, handle bolts, * * * shingle bolts, hop poles, * * * ship timber, and ship planking; not specially provided for in this Act.
679. * * * gun blocks, * * * rough hewn or sawed only.

1890 754. Woon.—Logs, and round unmanufactured timber not specially enumerated or provided for in this Act.
755. Fire wood, handle bolts, * * * shingle bolts, hop-poles, * * * ship timber, and ship planking, not specially provided for in this Act.
223. * * * gun blocks, * * * rough-hewn or sawed only, twenty per centum ad valorem.

1883 734. Logs, and round, unmanufactured timber, not specially enumerated or provided for in this act, and ship-timber, and ship-planking.
817. Woods, poplar, or other woods, for the manufacture of paper.
698. Fire-wood.
782. Handle-bolts.
781. Shingle-bolts.
222. * * * gun-blocks, * * * rough-hewn or sawed only, twenty per centum ad valorem.
722. Hop-poles.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 699, ACT OF 1897.

(b) Teak timber, used for ship construction and commercially known as ship timber and ship planking, is free although it may be suitable as cabinet wood.—T. D. 22058, G. A. 4666.

(c) Elm logs cut into lengths of 4 feet are free as round unmanufactured timber.—T. D. 22108, G. A. 4681.

(d) Spruce timber, round, unmanufactured, being generally unsuited for use in wharf building or as spars (though used for wharf building in some places), and being chiefly used for other than such purposes, is free and not dutiable under paragraph 194.—T. D. 22122, G. A. 4685.

(e) Sandalwood logs to which nothing has been done beyond removing the bark and sawing into convenient lengths are free as logs of wood.—Lueders v. United States (131 Fed. Rep., 655; T. D. 25366).

(f) Rough cedar logs of such quality and dimension as to be suitable for manufacture into telegraph or telephone poles, unpeeled, and trimmed only so far as necessary to permit of their transportation, are free as "round unmanufactured timber."—T. D. 25407, G. A. 5715.

(g) The mere peeling of the bark from logs 10 to 14 inches in diameter, used in the construction of railway bridges and trestles, is not a manufacture, and logs imported in this condition are free under the provision for logs and round unmanufactured timber in this paragraph.—United States v. Pierce (147 Fed. Rep., 199; T. D. 27414) cited; T. D. 27744, G. A. 6488.

(h) Pieces of wood from 6 inches to 3 feet in length and about 3 inches in thickness, being the damaged or imperfect ends of deals, known as "mill buttings" or "deal ends," and used in the making of pulp for the manufacture of paper, are entitled to free entry as pulp wood.—T. D. 28070, G. A. 6573.

(a) The provision herein for the free entry of logs and round unmanufactured timber does not apply to round logs in a rough condition that are used partly as piles in the construction of wharves and partly, after additional work had been done on them, for poles for electric wires. Such articles are dutiable under paragraphs 194 and 196.—Perfection Pile-Preserving Company v. United States (147 Fed. Rep., 922; T. D. 26776).

(b) Rossed pulp wood, consisting of bulky logs or pieces of wood cut in lengths of 2 to 2½ feet, from which the bark and excrescences have been removed by machinery in what is known as the "rossing" process, are free of duty as pulp woods.—United States v. Pierce (147 Fed. Rep., 199; T. D. 27414), affirming 140 id., 962; T. D. 26820, and T. D. 25166, G. A. 5627, followed; T. D. 27539, G. A. 6409.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(c) Cedar paving posts are free and not dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles.—T. D. 15697, G. A. 2878.

(d) Bowling-ball blocks of lignum-vitæ are free as like blocks and not dutiable as manufactures of wood.—T. D. 16564, G. A. 3260.

(e) Gun blocks planed (similar to those described in G. A. 1015) are not gun blocks rough hewn or sawed only.—T. D. 16820, G. A. 3339.

(f) Brush blocks are free as blocks and not under paragraph 684 (1894) as wood not further manufactured than cut into blocks, nor are they dutiable as manufactures of wood.—T. D. 17826, G. A. 3760.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(g) Wood rollers are not free.—T. D. 11072, G. A. 515.

(h) Kiaki, a Japanese wood slabbed and sawed into pieces from 4 to 10 inches thick, the pieces varying from 7 to 12 feet in length, to be used in building boats, is not free as ship timber.—T. D. 11605, G. A. 780.

(i) Cedar posts 5 inches in diameter and imperfect held to be fence posts.—T. D. 12010, G. A. 923.

(j) Boat knees are not free as ship timber.—T. D. 15308, G. A. 2742.

700. Woods: Cedar, lignum-vitæ, lancewood, ebony, box, granadilla, mahogany, rosewood, satinwood, and all forms of cabinet woods, in the log, rough, or hewn only; briar root or briar wood and similar wood unmanufactured, or not further advanced than cut into blocks suitable for the articles into which they are intended to be converted; bamboo,
1897 rattan, reeds unmanufactured, India malacca joints, and sticks of partridge, hair wood, pimento, orange, myrtle, and other woods not specially provided for in this Act, in the rough, or not further advanced than cut into lengths suitable for sticks for umbrellas, parasols, sunshades, whips, fishing rods, or walking canes.

684. Woods, namely, cedar, lignum-vitæ, lancewood, ebony, box, granadilla, mahogany, rosewood, satinwood, and all forms of cabinet woods, in the log, rough or hewn; bamboo and rattan unmanufactured; briar root or briar wood, and similar wood unmanufactured, or not further manufactured than cut into blocks suitable for the articles into which
1894 they are intended to be converted; bamboo, reeds, and sticks of partridge, hair wood, pimento, orange, myrtle, and other woods, not otherwise specially provided for in this Act, in the rough, or not further manufactured than cut into lengths suitable for sticks for umbrellas, parasols, sunshades, whips, or walking canes; and India malacca joints, not further manufactured than cut into suitable lengths for the manufactures into which they are intended to be converted.

756. Woods, namely, cedar, lignum-vitæ, lancewood, ebony, box, granadilla, mahogany, rosewood, satinwood, and all forms of cabinet woods, in the log, rough or hewn; bamboo and rattan unmanufactured; briar root or briar wood, and similar wood unmanufactured, or not further manufactured than cut into blocks suitable for the articles into which 1890 they are intended to be converted; bamboo, reeds, and sticks of partridge, hair wood, pimento, orange, myrtle, and other woods not otherwise specially provided for in this act, in the rough, or not further manufactured than cut into lengths suitable for sticks for umbrellas, parasols, sunshades, whips, or walking canes; and India malacca joints, not further manufactured than cut into suitable lengths for the manufactures into which they are intended to be converted.

770. Rattans and reeds, unmanufactured.
818. Woods, namely, cedar, lignum-vitæ, lancewood, ebony, box, granadilla, mahogany, rosewood, satinwood, and all cabinet woods, unmanufactured.
646. Bamboo reeds, no further manufactured than cut into suitable lengths for walking sticks or canes, or for sticks for umbrellas, parasols, or sunshades.
1883 647. Bamboo, unmanufactured.
725. India malacca joints, not further manufactured than cut into suitable lengths for the manufactures into which they are intended to be converted.
812. Umbrella sticks, crude, to wit, all partridge, hair wood, pimento, orange, myrtle, and all other sticks and canes in the rough, or no further manufactured than cut into lengths suitable for umbrella, parasol, or sunshade sticks or walking canes.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 700, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Reeds for whips are free and are not dutiable under paragraph 206.—T. D. 19195, G. A. 4116.

(b) Reeds not cut into lengths, but stripped of enamel, so as to transform them from rattan into reed, leaving the inner portion intact, are free. Sustaining T. D. 19195, G. A. 4116.—United States v. Foppes (C. C.), (99 Fed. Rep., 558).

(c) Round reeds made from rattan, of a diameter of not less than 7 millimeters, and whether known as hard or soft reeds, are free.—T. D. 22533, G. A. 4780.

(d) Similar round reeds of a less diameter than 7 millimeters are not suitable for use as sticks for reeds and are not free.—Id.

(e) Logs of cabinet wood sawed for convenience in transportation are free and are not dutiable as sawed lumber.—Williams v. United States (C. C., S. D., N. Y., October 13, 1899, not reported) followed; T. D. 23874, G. A. 5181.

(f) Bamboo splits cut into lengths of 12 inches, for use in making brooms, are free under this paragraph. Splitting bamboo does not constitute a manufacture of bamboo, as it does not change its name, character, or use.—Brauss v. United States (120 Fed. Rep., 1017), reversing T. D. 23530, G. A. 5083, followed; T. D. 24332, G. A. 5315.

(g) Bamboo sticks stained or dyed are free, such staining or dyeing not having made them into a new article having a different name, character, or use.—T. D. 24394, G. A. 5332.

(h) Sticks about 36 inches in length which have been steamed and crooked at one end, having been "further advanced than cut into lengths suitable for sticks for * * * walking canes," are excluded from the provisions of this paragraph.—T. D. 24734, G. A. 5449.

(a) Dyers' sticks made of bamboo, the ends rounded and the joints smoothed, are free as bamboo.—T. D. 26350, G. A. 6031.

(b) Sticks of bamboo cut into lengths of about 4 feet, with ends rounded and joints smoothed, known as dyers' sticks, are free of duty as bamboo.—United States v. Knipscher (152 Fed. Rep., 590; T. D. 27855) followed; T. D. 28047, G. A. 6570.

(c) Walnut sawed longitudinally is not free as cabinet wood in the log, rough or hewn only.—Williams v. United States (126 Fed. Rep., 838; T. D. 25117), affirming T. D. 23920, G. A. 5191.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(d) Mahogany crotches sawn into boards are not free.—T. D. 16822, G. A. 3341.

(e) Smoked sticks of bamboo are free as unmanufactured bamboo and not dutiable as manufactures of wood.—T. D. 17175, G. A. 3492.

(f) Cedar lumber similar to that covered by T. D. 15871, G. A. 2971 is free.—T. D. 16538, G. A. 3256.

(g) Cherry is a cabinet wood. This rough cherry was assessed as a manufacture of lumber.—T. D. 18074, G. A. 3876.

(h) Maple and rock elms are not cabinet woods.—T. D. 16438, G. A. 3227.

(i) Lumber manufactured from the tree botanically known as "Thuja gigantea" and commonly called "red cedar," or "canoe cedar," is not within the exception of "cedar * * * and all other cabinet woods" in this paragraph, but is free and is not dutiable as manufactures of wood.—In re Myers (C. C.), (69 Fed. Rep., 237).

(j) Inch boards and 3-inch plank planed on both sides and tongued and grooved are free under this paragraph as dressed lumber and not dutiable as manufactures of lumber.—Dudley v. United States (C. C.), (74 Fed. Rep., 548).

(k) Boards and planks of uniform length, width, and thickness, planed and matched for splines, are free and are not dutiable as manufactures of wood or articles manufactured in whole or in part not provided for in this act. 74 Fed. Rep., 548, affirmed.—United States v. Dudley (C. C. A.), (79 Fed. Rep., 75).

(l) Sawed boards and planks planed on one side and grooved or tongued are free as dressed lumber and not dutiable under paragraph 181 as manufactures of lumber.—United States v. Dudley (174 U. S. 670).

(m) Sawed lumber is none the less sawed lumber though in its different forms and uses it goes under the names of beams, rafters, joists, clapboards, fence boards, barn boards and the like. In other words, a new manufacture is usually accompanied by a change of name, but a change of name does not always indicate a new manufacture.—United States v. Dudley (174 U. S., 670, 672).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(n) Mahogany logs hewn, sawed longitudinally into pieces, and the pieces bound together by iron bands are free and not dutiable as sawed wood.—T. D. 14242, G. A. 2206.

(o) Sticks of wood with the outer bark removed and the surface polished and cut into lengths suitable for use as canes and umbrella handles free.—T. D. 12632, G. A. 1281.

(p) Certain reeds held to be free.—T. D. 13244, G. A. 1665.

(a) Reeds from rattan, the bark having been removed from the rattan and they cut into lengths suitable for sticks for whips, are free as in the rough.—T. D. 11586, G. A. 761.

(b) Split rattan not free.—T. D. 12981, G. A. 1532.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(c) Rattan from which the outer bark or enamel ("chair cane") has been cut by a first process from raw material, leaving a product known in trade and commerce in the United States as "round reeds," are free and are not dutiable as "rattans and reeds, manufactured."—Foppes v. Magone (C. C.), (40 Fed. Rep., 570).

(d) Cedar logs squared are free and not dutiable under paragraph 218 as timber squared.—T. D. 10402, G. A. 93.

701. Works of art, drawings, engravings, photographic pictures, and philosophical and scientific apparatus brought by professional artists, lecturers, or scientists arriving from abroad for use by them temporarily for exhibition and in illustration, promotion, and encouragement of art, science, or industry in the United States, and not for sale, shall be admitted free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the 1897 Treasury shall prescribe; but bonds shall be given for the payment to the United States of such duties as may be imposed by law upon any and all such articles as shall not be exported within six months after such importation: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, extend such period for a further term of six months in cases where applications therefor shall be made.

687. Works of art, drawings, engravings, photographic pictures, and philosophical and scientific apparatus brought by professional artists, lecturers, or scientists arriving from abroad for use by them temporarily for exhibition and in illustration, promotion, and encouragement of art, science, or industry in the United States, and not for sale, and photographic pictures, imported for exhibition by any association established in good faith and duly authorized under the laws of the United States, or of any State, expressly and solely for the promotion and encourage-
1894 ment of science, art, or industry, and not intended for sale, shall be admitted free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; but bonds shall be given for the payment to the United States of such duties as may be imposed by law upon any and all such articles as shall not be exported within six months after such importation: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, extend such period for a further term of six months in cases where applications therefor shall be made.

758. Works of art, drawings, engravings, photographic pictures, and philosophical and scientific apparatus brought by professional artists, lecturers, or scientists arriving from abroad for use by them temporarily for exhibition and in illustration, promotion, and encouragement of art, science, or industry in the United States, and not for sale, and photographic pictures, paintings, and statuary, imported for exhibition by any association established in good faith and duly authorized under the laws
1890 of the United States, or of any State, expressly and solely for the promotion and encouragement of science, art, or industry, and not intended for sale, shall be admitted free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; but bonds shall be given for the payment to the United States of such duties as may be imposed by law upon any and all of such articles as shall not be exported within six months after such importation: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, extend such period for a further term of six months in cases where applications therefor shall be made.

SEC. 2508. All paintings, statuary, and photographic pictures imported into the United States for exhibition by any association duly authorized under the laws of the United States, or of any State, for the promotion and encouragement of science, art, or industry, and not intended for sale, 1883 shall be admitted free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe. But bonds shall be given for the payment to the United States of such duties as may be imposed by law upon any and all of such articles as shall not be reexported within six months after such importation.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(a) A printing machine imported for exhibition and to sell the patent right held not to be free. It is not a scientific or philosophical apparatus.—T. D. 12579, G. A. 1263.

(b) A company incorporated in this country for the purpose of importing pictures and paintings not for sale, but for purposes of exhibition and their reexportation, and which is in fact established in part as an advertising adjunct of a commercial firm of art dealers and publishers, whose name it adopts, whose place of business it uses gratuitously for its exhibition, and whose employee is its general manager, is not an "association established in good faith * * * expressly and solely for the promotion and encouragement of science, art, or industry," within the meaning of this paragraph.—United States v. Boussod-Valladon Co. (C. C. A.), (71 Fed. Rep., 503), reversing 66 id., 718, and affirming T. D. 11225, G. A. 584.

702. Works of art, collections in illustration of the progress of the arts, sciences, or manufactures, photographs, works in terra cotta, parian, pottery, or porcelain, antiquities and artistic copies thereof in metal or other material, imported in good faith for exhibition at a fixed place by any State or by any society or institution established for the encouragement of the arts, science, or education, or for a municipal corporation, and all like articles imported in good faith by any society or association, or for a municipal corporation for the purpose of erecting a public monu-
1897 ment, and not intended for sale, nor for any other purpose than herein expressed; but bonds shall be given under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, for the payment of lawful duties which may accrue should any of the articles aforesaid be sold, transferred, or used contrary to this provision, and such articles shall be subject, at any time, to examination and inspection by the proper officers of the customs: Provided, That the privileges of this and the preceding section shall not be allowed to associations or corporations engaged in or connected with business of a private or commercial character.

688. Works of art, collections in illustration of the progress of the arts, science, or manufactures, photographs, works in terra cotta, parian, pottery, or porcelain, and artistic copies of antiquities in metal or other material, hereafter imported in good faith for permanent exhibition at a fixed place by any society or institution established for the encouragement of the arts or of science, and all like articles imported in good faith by any society or association for the purpose of erecting a public monu-
1894 ment, and not intended for sale, nor for any other purpose than herein expressed; but bonds shall be given under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, for the payment of lawful duties which may accrue should any of the articles aforesaid be sold, transferred, or used contrary to this provision, and such articles shall be subject, at any time, to examination and inspection by the proper officers of the customs: Provided, That the privileges of this and the preceding section shall not be allowed to associations or corporations engaged in or connected with business of a private or commercial character.

759. Works of art, collections in illustration of the progress of the arts, science, or manufactures, photographs, works in terra-cotta, parian, pottery, or porcelain, and artistic copies of antiquities in metal or other material hereafter imported in good faith for permanent exhibition at a fixed place by any society or institution established for the encouragement of the arts or of science, and all like articles imported in good faith by any society or association for the purpose of erecting a public

1890 monument, and not intended for sale, nor for any other purpose than herein expressed; but bonds shall be given under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, for the payment of lawful duties which may accrue should any of the articles aforesaid be sold, transferred, or used contrary to this provision, and such articles shall be subject, at any time, to examination and inspection by the proper officers of the customs: Provided, That the privileges of this and the preceding section shall not be allowed to associations or corporations engaged in or connected with business of a private or commercial character.

SEC. 2509. All works of art, collections in illustration of the progress of the arts, science, or manufactures, photographs, works in terra-cotta, Parian, pottery, or porcelain, and artistic copies of antiquities in metal or other material, hereafter imported in good faith for permanent exhibition at a fixed place by any society or institution established for the encouragement of the arts or science, and not intended for sale, nor for any other purpose than is hereinbefore expressed, and all such articles, 1883 imported as aforesaid, now in bond, and all like articles imported in good faith by any society or association for the purpose of erecting a public monument, and not for sale, shall be admitted free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe: Provided, That the parties importing articles as aforesaid shall be required to give bonds, with sufficient sureties, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, for the payment of lawful duties which may accrue should any of the articles aforesaid be sold, transferred, or used contrary to the provisions and intent of this act.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 702, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Stained glass windows are not works of art.—T. D. 24214, G. A. 5275.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(b) Japanese antiquities for a private museum are not free.—T. D. 11579, G. A. 754.

(c) Articles of silk wearing apparel, jewelry, swords, court robes, and other articles forming a collection of curiosities and of objects indicating the life of the people of Korea imported for the museum of Leland Stanford University, are free.—T. D. 13875, G. A. 2028.

703. Works of art, the production of American artists residing temporarily abroad, or other works of art, including pictorial paintings on glass, imported expressly for presentation to a national institution, or 1897 to any State or municipal corporation, or incorporated religious society, college, or other public institution, including stained or painted window glass or stained or painted glass windows; but such exemption shall be subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

686. Works of art, the production of American artists residing temporarily abroad, or other works of art, including pictorial paintings on glass, imported expressly for presentation to a national institution, or 1894 to any State or municipal corporation, or incorporated religious society, college, or other public institution, including stained or painted window glass or stained or painted glass windows; but such exemption shall be subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

757. Works of art, the production of American artists residing temporarily abroad, or other works of art, including pictorial paintings on glass, imported expressly for presentation to a national institution, or 1890 to any State or municipal corporation, or incorporated religious society, college, or other public institution, including stained or painted window glass or stained or painted glass windows; but such exemption shall be subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

819. Works of art, painting, statuary, fountains, and other works of art, the production of American artists. But the fact of such production must be verified by the certificate of a consul or minister of the United 1883 States indorsed upon the written declaration of the artist; paintings, statuary, fountains, and other works of art, imported expressly for the presentation to national institutions, or to any State, or to any municipal corporation, or religious corporation or society.

DECISIONS UNDER PARAGRAPH 703, ACT OF 1897.

(a) Domicile consists of residence at a particular place, accompanied by an intention, either positive or presumptive, to remain there permanently or for an indefinite length of time. It embraces not only the fact of residence at a place, but the animus manendi or intent to regard and make it the home.—T. D. 22363, G. A. 4727.

(b) The privilege accorded by this paragraph extends without limitation as to duration of residence abroad, provided that the artists have not renounced or intended to renounce their American citizenship, but avow, in the manner prescribed by the regulations (article 569, Customs Regulations 1899) their intention of returning to the United States at some later period. Held, accordingly, that long periods of residence abroad, in one case twenty-seven years, of American artists are temporary.—T. D. 22363, G. A. 4727.

(c) An American artist may have his paintings admitted free of duty notwithstanding that his residence abroad exceeds five years.—Knoedler v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 999).

(d) Stained glass windows are not works of art.—T. D. 24214, G. A. 5275.

(e) Table or other china ware primarily designed for useful purposes, although painted or decorated by an American artist residing temporarily abroad, is not free of duty under this paragraph.—T. D. 25536, G. A. 5774.

(f) A sanctuary lamp, artistic in design and finish and the work of an artist, held not to be a work of art as defined in United States v. Perry (146 U. S., 71), and though imported expressly for presenting to an incorporated religious society, is not free of duty under this paragraph.—T. D. 25628, G. A. 5798.

(g) So-called "painter" etchings, printed in limited editions of 25 copies each from etched plates, which are the handiwork of an American artist residing temporarily in a foreign country and embody her original conceptions, are exempt from duty under the provision in this paragraph for "works of art, the production of American artists residing temporarily abroad," and are not dutiable as "etchings" under paragraph 403.—T. D. 26282, G. A. 6012.

(h) Children born abroad of citizens of the United States who have not renounced such citizenship are citizens of the United States by virtue of section 1993, Revised Statutes, and the works of an artist born abroad of American parents are entitled to the privileges of this paragraph without limitation as to duration of residence abroad, if such artist has not renounced his citizenship, but avows, in the manner prescribed by the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury, his intention of returning to the United States at some later period.—T. D. 26987, G. A. 6255.

(i) Artistic productions will not be excluded from classification as "works of art" under the tariff laws by reason of the fact that they are copies of other works of art, or are architectural works, or have a utilitarian as well as an ornamental purpose. Certain marble capitals and bases for columns of Corinthian style, which are intended for the decoration of a marble hall of classic design in a private residence, and certain marble feet or supports for benches, made to represent the heads and fronts of lions, and being adaptations in general outline of a work of art exhumed from the ruins of Pompeii, all the articles being the production of a well-known American artist, held to be "works of art" within the meaning of this paragraph.—Ibid.

(a) A marble altar of artistic design and execution, imported for presentation to a church, is entitled to free entry under this paragraph as a work of art.—T. D. 27590, G. A. 6435.

(b) Compliance with the regulations made under the authority of this paragraph is a condition precedent to the right of free entry thereunder.—Ibid.

(c) Carved woodwork intended for the decoration and furnishing of the chancel of a college chapel, consisting of an altar, a pulpit, choir, stalls, organ screens, chancel rail, panelwork, and benches for the choir, which was designed as a whole and in its conception and execution is of a highly artistic character, representing some of the best examples of early Renaissance art, is a "work of art" within the meaning of this paragraph and free thereunder when imported for presentation to the college.—T. D. 27779, G. A. 6497.

(d) Pen-and-ink drawings of an artistic character, showing the design of a building for an art museum, executed by an American architect residing temporarily abroad, are works of art within the meaning of this paragraph.—Young v. Bohn (141 Fed. Rep., 471; T. D. 26392), affirming T. D. 25104, G. A. 5609.

(e) Drawings by Americans residing temporarily in Paris and representing persons and garments or parts of garments, sometimes with landscape background, intended to illustrate modes and fashions in a periodical for women, are not "works of art" in the tariff sense and can not be admitted free under the provision in this paragraph for "works of art, the production of American artists residing temporarily abroad."—T. D. 27913, G. A. 6542.

(f) A marble monument upon which the only free sculpture is a cornice, a bust in bas-relief, and a garland of flowers covering but a slight area of the marble surface, the remaining carving consisting of plain paneling and beveling, is not a "work of art" within the meaning of this paragraph and is properly assessed for duty as a manufacture of marble under paragraph 115, even though imported for presentation to a church.—T. D. 27914, G. A. 6543.

(g) A main altar with two side altars and an altar railing made of white Carrara marble, the whole being valued at $1,800, which were imported for presentation to a church and are carved in the purest Byzantine of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries from original designs made in this country and executed by a professional sculptor abroad, the hand work largely predominating in value throughout, are exempt from duty.—United States v. Ecclesiastical Art Works (142 Fed. Rep., 1038; T. D. 26945), affirming 139 id., 798; T. D. 25877, and T. D. 25256, G. A. 5666.

(h) Children born abroad of citizens of the United States who have not renounced such citizenship are citizens of the United States by virtue of R. S. 1993, and an artist so born of citizens of the United States is an American artist temporarily residing abroad.—T. D. 22363, G. A. 4727.

(i) A wife's political status follows that of her husband. Held, accordingly, that a woman, by birth a citizen of the United States, who has married a Canadian, expatriates herself by the act of marriage; that she can not be considered as residing temporarily abroad, and the privilege accorded by this paragraph can not be extended to paintings produced by her.—T. D. 22364, G. A. 4728.

(a) Ornamental frames containing paintings free under this paragraph are not free as inseparable from the paintings nor under section 19, act of 1890, as usual coverings, but are dutiable as if separately imported, according to the material of chief value.—T. D. 22060, G. A. 4668.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(b) Twelve slabs of white marble set with marble mosaics so as to form a picture of a cross and wreath on each slab, imported by St. Mathews Church, Washington, D. C., and designed to be set in the walls of that church, assessed for duty as manufactures of marble and claimed to be free as a work of art imported for presentation to an incorporated religious society or as a work of art imported for permanent exhibition at a fixed place, etc. Held not free because not imported for presentation to a church, but were purchased directly by the church, and not free under paragraph 688 because not covered by its terms.—T. D. 16301, G. A. 3130.

(c) A pictorial painting on glass (a stained or painted window glass) for a church free as a pictorial painting on glass and not dutiable as stained or painted glass windows.—T. D. 16341, G. A. 3170.

(d) Ornamental hinges for church doors are not works of art, but are dutiable as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 18620, G. A. 4018.

(e) Plaintiff imported a church altar and reredos for presentation to a church. It was originally designed by a leading American artist in this style of church architecture. A French artist of reputation made original designs for the angels and impressed his personality upon the work. Held, that it is a "work of art" and entitled to admission free.—Morris European & American Express Co. v. United States (C. C.), (85 Fed. Rep., 964), reversing T. D. 18625, G. A. 4023.

(f) Silk banners embroidered by hand in designs specially prepared by an artist, made and imported expressly for presentation to an incorporated church society (Trinity Lutheran Church, Reading, Pa.) to be used in connection with its service, and which derived their value from their artistic appearance, and not from the fact that they are embroidered, are "works of art" free and not dutiable as silk embroidery.—In re Hempstead (C. C.), (95 Fed. Rep., 969).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(g) All works of art produced by American artists residing temporarily abroad are free, whatever may be the purpose for which they are imported. It is only the "other works of art" which are qualified by the phrase "imported for presentation to a national institution."—T. D. 13331, G. A. 1711.

(h) "The Page," a piece of bronze statuary cast in a mold made after an original model in plaster, designed and executed by an American artist temporarily residing abroad, is free.—T. D. 13314, G. A. 1694.

(i) Paintings on glass in frames composed of glass, metal, and paper, intended as photograph holders, held free as works of art, the production of an American artist residing abroad, and not dutiable as manufactures of metal nor as paintings.—T. D. 14925, G. A. 2554.

(j) A lecturn composed of brass, reputed to be a replica or copy of an old lectern found in a morass in England, imported for St. Stephen's Reformed Church, Lancaster, Pa., held not free as a work of art.—T. D. 12633, G. A. 1282.

(a) Two chancel standards or brass candelabra for the Cathedral of All Saints, in Albany, held not free.—T. D. 12844, G. A. 1440.

(b) Engravings which rank as works of art may be admitted under this paragraph.—T. D. 11557, G. A. 732.

(c) Marble altars executed by a professional sculptor residing in Italy free as works of art.—T. D. 13425, G. A. 1762.

(d) A stone altar with artistic decorations, consisting of a statue of our Saviour and two groups in bas-relief, the production of a professional sculptor, imported for presentation to the Convent and Chapel of the Sacred Heart, a corporation established for religious purposes, is free.—T. D. 14744, G. A. 2466.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(e) The works of an American artist which, through unavoidable circumstances, did not arrive at the time of the artist, and where the required certificate of the consul was not furnished, held not to be free.—T. D. 10871, G. A. 366.

(f) A marble memorial tablet ready for the inscription is not a work of art.—T. D. 11598, G. A. 773.

[NOTE.—The following are specific provisions of the tariff acts of 1894, 1890, and 1883 which do not appear as such in the tariff act of 1897. The articles affected are therefore governed by general provisions of the last-named act, which do not enumerate them specifically.]

1894 385. Articles imported by the United States. (Free.)

1890 [No corresponding provision.]

1883 645. Articles imported for the use of the United States, provided that the price of the same did not include the duty. (Free.)

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(g) Where property is purchased abroad by the United States, and is shipped to this country to be delivered to the United States on the payment of the purchase money, and is landed under permit and placed in a public store, the legal right of property therein is vested in the United States, subject only to the vendor's lien for the purchase money.—United States v. Lutz (2 Blatchf., 383; 26 Fed. Cas., 1023).

(h) Such property being imported for the United States is not subject to any import duty, and therefore the sale of it by the collector for the nonpayment of duty is void.—Id.

(i) And if such property be in the actual possession of the United States at the time of the sale, and it be taken from that possession by the purchaser at the sale, the United States are entitled to recover its possession by an action of replevin.—Id.

1894 426. Old coins and medals, and other antiquities, but the term "antiquities" as used in this Act shall include only such articles as are suitable for souvenirs or cabinet collections, and which shall have been produced at any period prior to the year seventeen hundred. (Free.)

1890 524. Cabinets of old coins and medals, and other collections of antiquities, but the term "antiquities" as used in this act shall include only such articles as are suitable for souvenirs or cabinet collections, and which shall have been produced at any period prior to the year seventeen hundred. (Free.)

1883 669. Cabinets of coins, medals, and all other collections of antiquities. (Free.)

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1894.

(a) Chinese antiquities of the Kien Lung period (1736 to 1790) not free as antiquities.—T. D. 15948, G. A. 2972.

(b) Chinese antiquities produced prior to the year 1700 free as antiquities.—T. D. 15948, G. A. 2972.

(c) A piece of antique decorated earthenware valued at 600 marks, which came from Stockholm, where it belongs to a recognized collection of antiquities, found to be free as having been produced prior to 1700.—T. D. 16579, G. A. 3275.

(d) The age of antiquities must be proven.—T. D. 18021, G. A. 3865.

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1890.

(e) Five silver candlesticks, three ecclesiastical coverlets, and three pair of bronze candelabra held not to be suitable for souvenirs or cabinet collections.—T. D. 11970, G. A. 883.

(f) Frames for antique paintings, the frames not being antiquities, are not free.—T. D. 12812, G. A. 1408.

(g) A carved ivory cup held not to be free as an antiquity, the importer having submitted no evidence.—T. D. 10959, G. A. 454.

(h) There is nothing which excludes articles of furniture from the provisions of this section because they may be serviceable to some extent for utilitarian purposes, provided their chief value consists in their use for educational purposes or their attraction as illustrations of ancient art in history, or for scholarly and esthetic gratification of taste.—T. D. 14410, G. A. 2294.

(i) Antique furniture including, among other things, 1 chair, 1 table, 6 panels, 4 carved figures of wood, 1 carved chest, 1 wooden screen, and also 1 case of paintings on wood, all produced prior to 1700, suitable for souvenirs or cabinet collections, the furniture valuable chiefly on account of its antiquity, constitute a collection of antiquities.—T. D. 14410, G. A. 2294.

(j) Two old spears or lances produced prior to 1700 held free.—T. D. 14222, G. A. 2186.

(k) Two Japanese bronze lamps weighing about 3,000 pounds held free as antiquities (produced prior to 1700).—T. D. 14232, G. A. 2196.

(l) A painting on canvas representing a mythological subject produced prior to 1700 held not to be free.—T. D. 11970, G. A. 883.

(m) Two Derbent mats or oriental rugs held not to be suitable for souvenirs or cabinet collections.—T. D. 11970, G. A. 883.

(n) Oriental rug, 2 marble figures, earthenware vases, jugs, and metal spears, 2 Gobelin tapestries, 2 antique tapestries, 1 small bronze statuette group, 1 small bronze statuette gladiator, 1 pair of small bronzes on stands, 1 embroidered silk spread, 2 intaglio stones, 3 chasubles silk embroidered, 1 cushion, 1 mantle, 1 piece of tapestry, held not to be suitable for souvenirs or cabinet collections.—T. D. 11970, G. A. 883.

(a) Hard-stone scarabees of agate, onyx, jasper, and sard, an aquamarine seal of blue beryl, and a small sard intaglio produced prior to 1700 and many of them before the Christian era, held free.—T. D. 14218, G. A. 2182.

(b) Bronze statuette of Eros of a period prior to 1700 held to be free.—T. D. 11970, G. A. 883.

(c) An antique Moorish China vase to be added to a collection already on hand, when it is merely restored to its original status as a part of such collection, is free.—T. D. 11969, G. A. 882.

(d) Jade China vase of a period prior to 1700 held to be free.—T. D. 11970, G. A. 883.

(e) Pieces of plain and decorated Chinese porcelain ware, consisting of vases, bearer, jars, etc., of a period prior to 1700 held to be free.—T. D. 11970, G. A. 883.

(f) Two Etruscan vases produced prior to 1700 held to be free.—T. D. 11970, G. A. 883.

(g) A silver urn produced prior to 1700 is not free. The term "collection of antiquities" must be construed literally and is not applicable to a single article.—T. D. 14168, G. A. 2167.

(h) Collections of antiquities intended for sale are free.—T. D. 13300, G. A. 1680.

(i) Two pieces of antique tapestry composed of worsted, produced prior to 1700, held not free.—T. D. 11970, G. A. 883.

(j) One piece of tapestry of Flemish production, composed of wool and silk, produced prior to 1700, held not free.—T. D. 11970, G. A. 883.

(k) Four tapestries produced prior to 1700 free as a collection of antiquities.—T. D. 14161, G. A. 2160.

(l) Four pieces of tapestry, three portraits painted on wood, and two mirror frames, produced prior to 1700, held free as antiquities.—T. D. 14233, G. A. 2197.

(m) A single antique opal produced at a period prior to 1700 is dutiable under this paragraph and is not free under paragraph 524 as a collection of antiquities, notwithstanding it was imported with other articles, whose production prior to 1700 had not been satisfactorily established by evidence.—Tiffany v. United States (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 729).

(n) The "collections of antiquities" include only such collections of antique articles as are commonly recognized to be suitable for "cabinet collections" according to the taste and usage of collectors of antiquarian and artistic curiosities—that is, suitable to be assembled together in boxes, drawers, or like receptacles, or in any small apartment where articles of vertu, coins, and other bric-a-brac are usually deposited for exhibition, study, and gratification of personal taste, or other like purpose.—In re Glaenzer (C. C.), (67 Fed. Rep., 532).

(o) An antique oriental rug owned by a third person, but imported by a dealer in antiquities, together with certain antique tapestries owned by himself, are free under this paragraph.—In re Glaenzer (C. C.), (67 Fed. Rep., 532).

(p) A painting on canvas 9 by 3 feet in dimensions, representing a mythological subject and produced prior to the year 1700, which was imported together with certain antique tapestries by a dealer in antiquities, is dutiable under paragraph 465 as a painting and is not free under paragraph 524 as a part of a collection of antiquities.—In re Glaenzer (C. C.), (67 Fed. Rep., 532).

(a) Antique articles (a piece of tapestry, a painting, and three pictures) purchased in separate places, in the course of a trip to Europe, and imported each by itself, without having been assembled together, are not free under this paragraph as a collection of antiquities. 72 Fed. Rep., 49, affirmed.—Davis v. United States (C. C. A.), 77 Fed. Rep., 172).

(b) A single bronze statuette imported for the purpose of being added to, and becoming a part of a preexisting collection, is dutiable under paragraph 465 as statuary wrought by hand and is not free as a collection of antiquities under paragraph 524.—In re Glaenzer; In re Stern; In re Marquand (C. C. A.), (55 Fed. Rep., 642).

(c) A painting produced before the year 1700 is dutiable under paragraph 465 and is not free under paragraph 524 as part of a collection of antiquities.—United Stated v. Gunther (C. C. A.), (71 Fed. Rep., 499).

(d) Whether or not an article produced at such period is within this provision does not depend upon the fact whether it has belonged to a collection of antiquities or is imported to add to such a collection, but whether it is a part of such a collection when it is brought in.—Id.

(e) Four tapestries of different sizes, each belonging to a period prior to 1700 and purchased for the purpose of being added to a collection of curiosities and bric-a-brac, constitute a "collection of antiquities." 49 Fed. Rep., 730, reversed.—In re Glaenzer; In re Stern; In re Marquand (C. C. A.), (55 Fed. Rep., 642).

(f) Where a known and acknowledged collection of antiquities was purchased abroad and sent to this country, the fact that a single vase of such collection chanced to be sent with a separate invoice and without its companions does not disturb its character as a "collection of antiquities."—In re Glaenzer (C. C. A.), (55 Fed. Rep., 642); In re Stern (id.); In re Marquand (id.)

(g) A collection of antiquities produced prior to the year 1700 is free, irrespective of the intention of the importer to sell the collection or parts thereof after its importation.—Godwin v. United States (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 739).

DECISIONS UNDER THE ACT OF 1883.

(h) A Gothic bench held not free as an antiquity.—T. D. 10261, G. A. 39.

(i) The rule of ejusdem generis does not govern in this case, and a painting though not analogous to cabinets of coins, medals, etc., may be admitted free.—T. D. 10535, G. A. 185.

(j) A single painting by Rubens to be added to a collection is free.—T. D. 10535, G. A. 185.

(k) A rug produced prior to 1700, to be hung on a wall and not for sale, being intended as part of a collection of antiquities and forming a portion of an original purchase of antique tapestries, is free.—T. D. 10646, G. A. 230.

(l) Certain tapestry curtains of silk, manufactured prior to 1700, held free as intended for a collection of antiquities and not dutiable under paragraph 383 as manufactures of silk.—T. D. 10260, G. A. 38.

(m) Three pieces of antique tapestries produced prior to 1700 held free as a collection of antiquities.—T. D. 10345, G A. 66.

(n) Curtains made of lace, the product of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, are not free as collections of antiquities.—Baumgarten v. Magone (C. C.), (41 Fed. Rep., 770)

(a) Rugs the product of the sixteenth century, imported at different times as articles of merchandise, are not free as collections of antiquities.—Baumgarten v. Magone (C. C.), (41 Fed. Rep., 770).

(b) A single article (Jacobus Stainer violin of 1655) does not constitute a collection of antiquities.—T. D. 10488, G. A. 138.

(c) This paragraph does not cover antiquities which do not form a collection.—Baumgarten v. Magone (C. C.), (41 Fed. Rep., 770).

(d) A single oriental rug of the sixteenth century bought in Paris at nearly the same time with one other antique rug and three articles of antique tapestries and four other oriental rugs purchased in Constantinople by the same purchaser for the purpose of being added to a collection of old furniture, bric-a-brac, etc., in the private house of the owuer, although not imported in the same vessel as the other articles, is free and is not dutiable under paragraph 378.—In re Godwin (C. C.), (46 Fed. Rep., 361).

DECISIONS UNDER STATUTES PRIOR TO THE ACT OF 1883.

(f) The item making free "cabinets of coins, etc.," embraces all collections of antiquities within the ordinary meaning of those words. It is not limited to collections of antiquities ejusdem generis with coins and medals. This item, dating back to the tariff of 1846, has ever since continued without change, and must be held to have the same meaning now that it had then.—Sixty-Five Terra Cotta Vases (10 Fed. Rep., 880).

(g) The addition to the free list of "collections of antiquities, especially imported and not for sale," is by this act declared to be designed to extend the free list. It can not therefore by implication be suffered to change the meaning of the item "cabinets of coins, medals, and all other collections of antiquities," nor make collections of antiquities dutiable now when not dutiable before.—Sixty-Five Terra Cotta Vases (10 Fed. Rep., 880).

(h) Though this construction leaves the act of 1870 superfluous, the practice and policy of the Government for at least twenty-four years, admitting "collections of antiquities," should not be reversed except upon some new provision repugnant to the old; and this item is not repugnant.—Sixty-Five Terra Cotta Vases (10 Fed. Rep., 880).

COMPARISON OF SECTIONS.

SEC. 3. That for the purpose of equalizing the trade of the United States with foreign countries, and their colonies, producing and exporting to this country the following articles: Argols, or crude tartar, or wine lees, crude; brandies, or other spirits manufactured or distilled from grain or other materials; champagne and all other sparkling wines; still wines, and vermuth; paintings and statuary; or any of them, the President be, and he is hereby, authorized, as soon as may be after the passage of this Act, and from time to time thereafter, to enter into negotiations with the governments of those countries exporting to the United States the above-mentioned articles, or any of them, with a view to the arrangement of commercial agreements in which reciprocal and equivalent concessions may be secured in favor of the products and manufactures of the United States; and whenever the government of any country, or colony, producing and exporting to the United States the abovementioned articles, or any of them, shall enter into a commercial agreement with the United States, or make concessions in favor of the products, or manufactures thereof, which, in the judgment of the President, shall be reciprocal and equivalent, he shall be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to suspend, during the time of such agreement or concession, by proclamation to that effect, the imposition and collection of the duties mentioned in this Act, on such article or articles so exported to the United States from such country or colony, and thereupon and thereafter the duties levied, collected, and paid upon such article or articles shall be as follows, namely:

Argols, or crude tartar, or wine lees, crude, five per centum ad valorem.

Brandies, or other spirits manufactured or distilled from grain or other materials, one dollar and seventy-five cents per proof gallon.

Champagne and all other sparkling wines, in bottles containing not more than one quart and more than one pint, six dollars per dozen; containing not more than one pint each and more than one-half pint, three dollars per dozen; containing one-half pint each or less, one dollar and fifty cents per dozen; in bottles or other vessels containing more than one quart each, in addition to six dollars per dozen bottles on the quantities in excess of one quart, at the rate of one dollar and ninety cents per gallon.

Still wines, and vermuth, in casks, thirty-five cents per gallon; in 1897 bottles or jugs, per case of one dozen bottles or jugs containing each not more than one quart and more than one pint, or twenty-four bottles or jugs containing each not more than one pint, one dollar and twenty-five cents per case, and any excess beyond these quantities found in such bottles or jugs shall be subject to a duty of four cents per pint or fractional part thereof, but no separate or additional duty shall be assessed upon the bottles or jugs.

Paintings in oil or water colors, pastels, pen and ink drawings, and statuary, fifteen per centum ad valorem.

The President shall have power, and it shall be his duty, whenever he shall be satisfied that any such agreement in this Section mentioned is not being fully executed by the Government with which it shall have been made, to revoke such suspension and notify such Government thereof.

And it is further provided that with a view to secure reciprocal trade with countries producing the following articles, whenever and so often as the President shall be satisfied that the Government of any country, or colony of such Government, producing and exporting directly or indirectly to the United States coffee, tea, and tonquin, tonqua, or tonka beans, and vanilla beans, or any of such articles, imposes duties or other exactions upon the agricultural, manufactured, or other products of the United States, which, in view of the introduction of such coffee, tea, and tonquin, tonqua, or tonka beans, and vanilla beans, into the United States, as in this Act hereinbefore provided for, he may deem to be reciprocally unequal and unreasonable, he shall have the power and it shall be his duty to suspend, by proclamation to that effect, the provisions of this Act relating to the free introduction of such coffee, tea, and tonquin, tonqua, or tonka beans, and vanilla beans, of the products of such country or colony, for such time as he shall deem just; and in such case and during such suspension duties shall be levied, collected, and paid upon coffee, tea, and tonquin, tonqua, or tonka beans, and vanilla beans, the products or exports, direct or indirect, from such designated country, as follows:

On coffee, three cents per pound.

On tea, ten cents per pound.

On tonquin, tonqua, or tonka beans, fifty cents per pound; vanilla beans, two dollars per pound; vanilla beans, commercially known as cuts, one dollar per pound.

SEC. 4. That whenever the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, with a view to secure reciprocal trade with foreign countries, shall, within the period of two years from and after the passage of this Act, enter into commercial treaty or treaties with any other country or countries concerning the admission into any such country or countries of the goods, wares, and merchandise of the United States and their use and disposition therein, deemed to be for the interests of the United States, and in such treaty or treaties, in consideration of the advantages accruing to the United States therefrom, shall provide for the reduction during a specified period, not exceeding five years, of the duties imposed by this Act, to the extent of not more than twenty per centum thereof, upon such goods, wares, or merchandise as may be designated therein of the country or countries with which such 1897 treaty or treaties shall be made as in this section provided for; or shall provide for the transfer during such period from the dutiable list of this Act to the free list thereof of such goods, wares, and merchandise, being the natural products of such foreign country or countries and not of the United States; or shall provide for the retention upon the free list of this Act during a specified period, not exceeding five years, of such goods, wares, and merchandise now included in said free list as may be designated therein; and when any such treaty shall have been duly ratified by the Senate and approved by Congress, and public proclamation made accordingly, then and thereafter the duties which shall be collected by the United States upon any of the designated goods, wares, and merchandise from the foreign country with which such treaty has been made shall, during the period provided for, be the duties specified and provided for in such treaty, and none other.

SEC. 71. That section three of an Act approved October first, eighteen hundred and ninety, entitled "An Act to reduce the revenue and equalize duties on imports, and for other purposes," is hereby repealed; but noth-1894 ing herein contained shall be held to abrogate, or in any way affect such reciprocal commercial arrangements as have been heretofore made and now exist between the United States and foreign countries, except where such arrangements are inconsistent with the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 3. That with a view to secure reciprocal trade with countries producing the following articles, and for this purpose, on and after the first day of January eighteen hundred and ninety-two, whenever, and so often as the President shall be satisfied that the Government of any country producing and exporting sugars, molasses, coffee, tea, and hides, raw and uncured, or any of such articles, imposes duties or other exactions upon the agricultural or other products of the United States, which in view of the free introduction of such sugar, molasses, coffee, tea, and hides into the United States he may deem to be reciprocally unequal and unreasonable, he shall have the power and it shall be his duty to suspend, by proclamation to that effect, the provisions of this act relating to the free introduction of such sugar, molasses, coffee, tea, and hides, the production of such country, for such time as he shall deem just, and in such case and during such suspension duties shall be levied, collected, and paid upon sugar, molasses, coffee, tea, and hides, the product of or exported from such designated country as follows, namely:

All sugars not above number thirteen Dutch standard in color shall pay duty on their polariscopic tests as follows, namely:

All sugars not above number thirteen Dutch standard in color, all tank bottoms, sirups of cane juice or of beet juice, melada, concentrated 1890 melada, concrete and concentrated molasses, testing by the polariscope not above seventy-five dgerees, seven-tenths of one cent per pound; and for every additional degree or fraction of a degree shown by the polariscopic test, two hundredths of one cent per pound additional.

All sugars above number thirteen Dutch standard in color shall be classified by the Dutch standard of color, and pay duty as follows, namely: All sugar above number thirteen and not above number sixteen Dutch standard of color, one and three-eighths cents per pound.

All sugar above number sixteen and not above number twenty Dutch standard of color, one and five-eighths cents per pound.

All sugars above number twenty Dutch standard of color, two cents per pound.

Molasses testing above fifty-six degrees, four cents per gallon.

Sugar drainings and sugar sweepings shall be subject to duty either as molasses or sugar, as the case may be, according to polariscopic test.

On coffee, three cents per pound.

On tea, ten cents per pound.

Hides, raw or uncured, whether dry, salted, or pickled, Angora goatskins, raw, without the wool, unmanufactured, asses' skins, raw or unmanufactured, and skins, except sheep-skins, with the wool on, one and one-half cents per pound.

1883 [No corresponding provision in tariff law.]

(a) Brandy, a product of France (dutiable under paragraph 289), which is imported from Great Britain, is not entitled to the reduced rate of duty provided for in the reciprocal agreement with France.—T. D. 21565, G. A. 4538.

(b) It would seem that a different rule would prevail when goods are exported from France via any port of Great Britain or other country on invoices certified in France.—Id.

(c) The proclamation of the President embraces only such brandies or other spirits as are enumerated in paragraph 289, and can not be construed to include cordials, liqueurs, etc., provided for in paragraph 292.—T. D. 20352, G. A. 4311; reversed, T. D. 22401, G. A. 4736.

(d) Merchandise known in France and in this country as liqueurs, and bought and sold under that name, which includes, besides various cordials, absinthe and kirschwasser, is entitled to the benefit of the reduced rate provided for in the reciprocal agreement.—T. D. 22401, G. A. 4736.

(e) Merchandise produced in France and exported from that country via England, being simply transshipped at Liverpool, held to be a direct importation from France, as it appears that the merchandise was in good faith destined for the United States at the time of original shipment, without any contingency of diversion.—T. D. 22447, G. A. 4751.

(f) Merchandise known in France and this country as liqueurs, including absinthe and kirschwasser (T. D. 22401, G. A. 4736), when products of Switzerland and imported from that country, are entitled to the benefits of the reduced rates provided for in the agreement with France (T. D. 19405) by virtue of the most favored nation clause of the treaty of November 25, 1850, between Switzerland and the United States.—T. D. 22449, G. A. 4753. See T. D. 22494, G. A. 4765, cited below.

(g) The proclamation concerning reciprocal commercial arrangements with France (T. D. 19405) went into effect on and after June 1, 1898, and can not be construed to have any retrospective operation so as to affect the rate of duty on goods imported from France and entered for consumption prior to June 1, 1898, although the entries were liquidated subsequent to that date. Held, accordingly, that paintings in oil or water colors, still wines, and other products or manufactures of France, named in this section and in said proclamation, imported and entered for consumption prior to June 1, 1898, are not entitled to reduced rates.—T. D. 20350, G. A. 4309.

(h) The omission to embrace the colonies of France expressly or by necessary implication in the terms of the agreement and the proclamation of the President of May 30, 1898 (T. D. 19405), construed to confine the benefits thereof to the country of France only, exclusive of her colonies.—T. D. 21564, G. A. 4537.

(i) Brandy or other spirits of the kind embraced in paragraph 289, imported from Martinique, a colony of France, are not entitled to the reduced rates which are accorded to such merchandise produced in and exported from France by the terms of the reciprocal commercial agreement with that country.—Id.

(j) Algeria is a colony of, and not a part of, France within the meaning of the reciprocal commercial agreement (30 Stat., 1774; T. D. 19405), and crude tartar produced there is dutiable under paragraph 6, and not at 5 per cent under said proclamation. When produced in and exported from France it is dutiable at 5 per cent under said proclamation.—T. D. 21941, G. A. 4640; affirmed in U. S. v. Tartar Chemical Company (127 Fed. Rep., 944; T. D. 24947).

(k) By reason of the omission to embrace the colonies of France in the terms of the reciprocal commercial agreement, the reduction of rates provided in said agreement does not apply to merchandise produced in French colonies, even though imported via France.—Ibid.

(a) Absinthe and kirschwasser, known in France and in this country as liqueurs, when produced in Switzerland and imported therefrom since March 24, 1900, are not entitled to the benefits of the reduced rates provided by the reciprocal commercial agreement between France and the United States (30 Stat., 1774), the "most favored nation" clause in the treaty between Switzerland and the United States having been abrogated March 24, 1900, and ceasing thereafter to have any operation or effect.—T. D. 22494, G. A. 4765.

(b) Merchandise remaining in bonded warehouse after June 1, 1898, of the kind described in the reciprocal commercial agreement with France (30 Stat., 1774), is entitled to the benefit of said agreement.—T. D. 22805, G. A. 4865.

(c) A promise in a treaty that the products of one country shall not be subjected to a higher rate of duty than like products from other countries addresses itself to the political and not to the judicial department of the government.—T. D. 23166, G. A. 4956.

(d) Chartreuse imported from France held to be entitled to the benefit of the reduced rate of duty on "brandies or other spirits" provided for in the reciprocal commercial agreement with France.—Nicholas v. United States (122 Fed. Rep., 892).

(e) In regard to the reciprocal commercial agreement between the United States and France, proclaimed May 28, 1898 (30 Stat., 1774; T. D. 19405), which provided for reduced rates of duty on merchandise "the product of the soil or industry of France," it was arranged by the governments of the two countries to settle the question whether Algeria was a part of France within the meaning of the agreement, by an abandonment of the contention on the part of France, that it was so included, together with an acceptance in lieu thereof of an additional agreement extending the benefits of the original agreement to Algeria. Held, that this arrangement is binding on the courts, and that merchandise from Algeria imported into the United States before such arrangement was made is not subject to the reduced rates of duty provided on such merchandise when imported from France proper.—U. S. v. Tartar Chemical Company (127 Fed. Rep., 944; T. D. 24947).

(f) Pontarlier, France, where certain absinthe was invoiced, not being a shipping point for the transportation line, the goods had to be shipped to and a through bill of lading obtained and dated at Basel, Switzerland. The invoice was consulated at Dijon, France. It was held that the absinthe was "produced in and exported from France."—United States v. Luyties (130 Fed. Rep., 333; T. D. 25222).

(g) The right to the reduced duties provided in treaties made by virtue of this section applies only to goods purchased in and exported from the country with which the treaty is made, and it is incumbent upon importers to furnish satisfactory evidence that their goods comply with these conditions.—Migliavacca v. United States (148 Fed. Rep., 142; T. D. 26777).

(h) Under section 3, tariff act of 1897, providing for the negotiation of reciprocal commercial agreements between the United States and other countries, it is necessary that merchandise, in order to be entitled to the benefit of such an agreement, must be both exported from and produced in the country with which the agreement is made. In re Hermann (G. A. 4751) distinguished.—T. D. 23315, G. A. 5002.

(i) Brandy, sold in France to a firm in Habana, shipped from France to Habana, sold by the Habana firm to a Florida company and entered at Tampa, held not to be entitled to the benefit of the reciprocity agreement with France

(T. D. 19405) in the absence of evidence that when the goods left France they were intended to be entered at a United States port, and that the transaction at Habana was merely a transshipment of the merchandise.—T. D. 23473a, G. A. 5065a.

(a) In order that a painting may become entitled to the benefits of the reciprocal commercial agreement with France, it is necessary to show affirmatively that it is the product of France and was exported from that country.—T. D. 24015, G. A. 5212.

(b) The term "statuary" in this section and in any reciprocity agreements with foreign countries made in pursuance thereof has the same meaning as the term "statuary" as used in paragraph 454.—T. D. 24247, G. A. 5286.

(c) An affidavit made by the importer on information and belief which does not show that the affiant has personal knowledge as to the matter is insufficient to rebut the legal presumption that the collector's classification is correct, and to establish that the merchandise in question is entitled to the benefits of a reciprocity agreement.—T. D. 24703, G. A. 5433.

(d) The provision in this section relative to vermuth imported in cases of "one dozen bottles * * * containing each not more than one quart," and providing that "any excess beyond these quantities found in such bottles * * * shall be subject to a duty of four cents per pound or fractional part thereof," contemplates that the additional duty of 4 cents per pound shall be assessed according to the number of bottles containing an excessive quantity and not according to the total excess per case.—T. D. 24858, G. A. 5518.

(e) Italian wine imported from Germany is not entitled to the benefit of the reciprocity agreement with Italy when the same has been first shipped from Italy to Germany and has become mingled with the commerce of the latter country and then exported to the United States.—T. D. 24971, G. A. 5568.

(f) The "favored nation" clause in the treaty between the United States and Great Britain of July 3, 1815, does not entitle British products to the benefits of the rates of duty imposed on like goods imported from countries with which reciprocal agreements have been made under the provisions of this section.—T. D. 25260, G. A. 5670.

(g) Cordials and other spirituous beverages described in paragraph 292, imported from France, are within the provision for "spirits manufactured or distilled from grain or other materials" in this section, and are subject to the reduced rate of duty provided for such spirits in the reciprocal commercial agreement with France (30 Stat., 1774) negotiated under the authority of said section.—T. D. 25425, G. A. 5722.

(h) Cordials and other spirituous beverages, including bitters, are entitled to the reduced rate of duty on "brandies or other spirits manufactured or distilled from grain or other materials" prescribed in the various reciprocal commercial agreements negotiated under the authority given by this statute.—United States v. Wile (130 Fed. Rep., 331; T. D. 25223), affirming 124 id., 1023, followed; T. D. 25442, G. A. 5736.

(i) Still wine from Italy, which forms part of the excess of sea stores of a vessel, is entitled to the reduced rates of duty prescribed by the Italian reciprocity agreement when entered for consumption under article 107, Customs Regulations of 1899.—T. D. 25692, G. A. 5815.

(j) Paintings in mineral colors on china and porcelain fixed by firing are not paintings in oil or water colors as provided for in this section.—T. D. 25761, G. A. 5842.

(a) The reciprocity agreement with France (30 U. S. Stat., 1774; T. D. 19405) does not include champagne among the articles on which a reduced rate of duty is to be levied.—T. D. 25824, G. A. 5864.

(b) To be entitled to the reduced rate of duty provided for in the reciprocity agreement between the United States and France, an oil painting must have been painted in and imported from France. But it is not necessary that such painting should have been painted by a French artist. Paintings by Schreyer found to have been painted in France.—T. D. 25943, G. A. 5890.

(c) Pictures painted by hand on cotton canvas or tapestry in aniline colors are not paintings in oil or water colors. The so-called tabernacle, composed of gilded wood with figures painted upon the doors, is not a painting within the meaning of this provision.—T. D. 26183, G. A. 5974.

(d) Fernet bitters produced in and exported from Italy held to fall within the purview of the reciprocal agreement with Italy.—Mouquin Company v. United States (T. D. 25868) followed; T. D. 26208, G. A. 5983.

(e) "Vino chinato" from Italy is within the Italian reciprocity agreement as a still wine.—T. D. 26237, G. A. 5998.

(f) From after the denunciation by the United States of Articles VIII to XII in the treaty between this country and Switzerland of November 25, 1850, goods imported from Switzerland to the United States are not entitled to the reciprocity rates provided for in the agreements with Italy and other countries, but are subject to duty at the ordinary rates provided for in the act of July 24, 1897.—Luyties v. United States (T. D. 25901), affirming T. D. 22494, G. A. 4765, followed; T. D. 26239, G. A. 6000.

(g) A marble fountain, so called, consisting of a group representing two reclining human figures with a surrounding basin carved in marble in the form of a shell, the figures constituting the most prominent and significant feature of the work, held to be statuary within the meaning of this paragraph and this section. Accessory appliances for throwing streams of water over the group and illuminating it to heighten its effect, but which are not incorporated with it structurally, held to be separate articles for duty purposes.—T. D. 26247, G. A. 6008.

(h) Amer Picon bitters are entitled to the benefit of the reduced rate of duty on spirits provided for under the reciprocity agreement with France.—T. D. 27063, G. A. 6281; Mouquin Company v. United States (T. D. 26868) followed.

(i) The excess of alcohol over 10 per cent contained in fruits preserved in spirits is entitled to the benefit of the reduced rate of duty provided for in the reciprocity agreement with France.—La Manna v. United States (144 Fed. Rep., 683; T. D. 27069), reversing La Manna v. United States (T. D. 25920), followed; T. D. 27256, G. A. 6331.

(j) Agreements made under the authority contained in this section do not affect the operation of the proviso contained in paragraph 296, tariff act of 1897, forbidding any allowance for breakage, leakage, or damage on wines, liquors, cordials, or distilled spirits.—Shaw v. United States (158 Fed. Rep., 648; T. D. 28517).

(k) The word statuary as used in this section and in the reciprocal commercial agreements made by virtue of the authority herein granted has no other meaning than that given to it in paragraph 454, tariff act of 1897, and hence cast bronze statuary being ex vi termini excluded from said paragraph 454 is not entitled to the reduced rates accorded to statuary by this section.—Richard v. United States (151 Fed. Rep., 954; T. D. 27948) affirmed without opinion in 158 id., 1019; T. D. 28601).

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 3, ACT OF 1890.

(a) That Congress can not delegate legislative powers to the President is a principle universally recognized as vital to the integrity and maintenance of the system of government ordained by the Constitution.—Field v. Clark (143 U. S., 649, 692).

(b) The authority conferred upon the President by section 3, act of 1890, to suspend by proclamation the free introduction of sugar, molasses, coffee, tea and hides, when he is satisfied that any country producing such articles imposes duties or other exactions upon agricultural or other products of the United States, which he may deem to be reciprocally unequal and unreasonable, is not open to the objection that it unconstitutionally transfers legislative power to the President; but even if it were it does not follow that other parts of the act imposing duties upon imported articles are inoperative.—Field v. Clark (143 U. S., 649, 680).

(c) This section is constitutional.—T. D. 10553, G. A. 203; T. D. 13766, G. A. 1960.

(d) Coffee and hides exported from Venezuela and Colombia after March 15, 1892, the date of the proclamation of the President (27 Stat., 1010, T. D. 12492), are dutiable. Such articles exported before the proclamation but imported after March 15, 1892, are not dutiable.—T. D. 13766, G. A. 1960.

(e) Coffee, rawhides, goatskins, and deerskins, exported from Colombia or Venezuela subsequent to March 15, 1892, are not free.—T. D. 18796, G. A. 4063.

HAWAIIAN RECIPROCITY TREATY.

(f) Taro flour from the Hawaiian Islands is not free under reciprocity treaty.—T. D. 14237, G. A. 2201.

Sec. 5. That whenever any country, dependency, or colony shall pay or bestow, directly or indirectly, any bounty or grant upon the exportation of any article or merchandise from such country, dependency, or colony, and such article or merchandise is dutiable under the provisions of this Act, then upon the importation of any such article or merchandise into the United States, whether the same shall be imported directly from the country of production or otherwise, and whether such article or merchandise is imported in the same condition as when ex-

1897 ported from the country of production or has been changed in condition by remanufacture or otherwise, there shall be levied and paid, in all such cases, in addition to the duties otherwise imposed by this Act, an additional duty equal to the net amount of such bounty or grant, however the same be paid or bestowed. The net amount of all such bounties or grants shall be from time to time ascertained, determined, and declared by the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall make all needful regulations for the identification of such articles and merchandise and for the assessment and collection of such additional duties.

1890 [No corresponding provision.]

1883 [No corresponding provision.]

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 5, ACT OF 1897.

(g) The Board of General Appraisers may determine if there is an export bounty or not, but if there is such bounty its estimate by the Secretary is conclusive.—T. D. 19256, G. A. 4133; T. D. 21501, G. A. 4524; T. D. 21526, G. A. 4530.

(h) The regulations of the Secretary (T. D. 18373 and 19108), as to prooof of identification, held to be reasonable and authorized by law.—T. D. 21526, G. A. 4530.

(a) Refined beet sugar above No. 16, Dutch Standard, and testing 99.60 degrees, imported directly from the Netherlands, having been exported from Amsterdam, and having received a bounty from the Netherlands, is subject to the countervailing duty.—T. D. 20039, G. A. 4261.

(b) Where Holland gives bounty for the production of sugar to be deducted from the excise thereon, but such excise is remitted on exportation, the duty is a grant on the exportation, and should be added to the regular duty on the importation of sugar from that country. Board sustained, and 99 Fed. Rep., 425, reversed.—United States v. Hills Bros. Co. (C. C. A.), (107 Fed. Rep., 107).

(c) The question whether a country pays or bestows a bounty or grant upon the exportation of an article, within the meaning of section, lies, in its initiative, with the Secretary of the Treasury.—T. D. 22984, G. A. 4912.

(d) Where the question whether a country pays or bestows a bounty or grant upon the exportation of an article involves the construction of the laws of the exporting country it necessarily becomes a judicial one; and the Board of General Appraisers has jurisdiction to determine whether any bounty is actually paid or bestowed. It seems that the decision of the Secretary as to the amount of any such bounty or grant is conclusive and not reviewable by the Board or the courts.—Id.

(e) A bounty may be defined as an advantage or benefit conferred upon, or compensation paid to a person or class of persons, the burden of which is borne, directly or indirectly, by the public treasury. A grant implies the conferring by the sovereign power of some valuable privilege, franchise, or other right of like character, upon a corporation, person, or class of persons. It involves the idea of a favor conferred by Government, but does not necessarily embrace the act of appropriating money out of the public treasury. The privilege of exemption from taxation, as well as the remission or cancellation of a tax already assessed, may properly be considered a grant.—Id.

(f) The Russian Government pays or bestows a bounty or grant upon the exportation of so-called "free sugar," so as to work a benefit or advantage to the exporter in two ways: (a) By remitting or refunding the excise tax due upon the sugar, and (b) by issuing to the exporter a certificate of exportation carrying with it a privilege of exemption from taxation, which certificate is transferable, and has a substantial market value.—Id.

(g) The excise tax imposed by the Netherlands on sugar is remitted on exportation of the sugar. This remission is held to be a bounty and countervailing duty equal to the amount of said bounty should be collected on such sugars.—United States v. Hills (107 Fed. Rep., 107), reversing 99 Fed. Rep., 425, and affirming T. D. 20039, G. A. 4261, followed; T. D. 23325, G. A. 5012.

(h) The date of the departure of vessel from a foreign port is the time of exportation of merchandise which it is transporting, and sugar carried by a vessel that cleared on April 6 and sailed April 7 was held not subject to the provisions of the French bounty law promulgated by the President of France April 7, 1897.—T. D. 24266, G. A. 5294.

(i) The question whether a country pays or bestows a bounty or grant upon the exportation of an article within the meaning of this section lies, in its initiative, with the Secretary of the Treasury. Where such a question involves the construction of the laws of the exporting country, it necessarily becomes a judicial one; and the Board of Classification and the United States courts have jurisdiction to review the Secretary's action and to determine whether any bounty or grant is actually paid or bestowed.—Downs v. United States (187 U. S., 496), affirming 113 Fed. Rep., 144, and T. D. 22984, G. A. 4912, followed; T. D. 24355, G. A. 5322.

(a) The Russian Government pays or bestows a bounty or grant on the exportation of "free sugar," so as to work a benefit or advantage to the exporter, first, by remitting or refunding the excise tax due upon the sugar, and, second, by issuing to the exporter a certificate of exportation, carrying with it a privilege of exemption from taxation, which certificate is transferable and has a substantial market value.—Downs case (supra); T. D. 24355, G. A. 5322.

(b) The countervailing duty provided for in this section should be assessed on the weight of sugar actually imported, without regard to the amount exported on which bounty has been allowed. The change in condition by remanufacture or otherwise, referred to in the section, means such remanufacture or other change as brings a bounty-aided product into a classification different from that into which it originally belonged, so that the merchandise may be followed into any article into which it may have been incorporated and the countervailing duty levied on the importation thereof. Diminution in weight is not such a changed condition as contemplated.—Franklin Sugar Refining Company v. United States (142 Fed. Rep., 376; T. D. 27027), reversing 137 Fed. Rep., 655; T. D. 26318, and T. D. 23503, G. A. 5072, and in effect overruling T. D. 21938, G. A. 4637, followed; T. D. 27864, G. A. 6524.

Sec. 6. That there shall be levied, collected, and paid on the importation of all raw or unmanufactured articles, not enumerated or pro-
1897 vided for in this Act, a duty of ten per centum ad valorem, and on all articles manufactured, in whole or in part, not provided for in this Act, a duty of twenty per centum ad valorem.

SEC. 3. That there shall be levied, collected, and paid on the importation of all raw or unmanufactured articles, not enumerated or pro-
1894 vided for in this Act, a duty of ten per centum ad valorem; and on all articles manufactured, in whole or in part, not provided for in this Act, a duty of twenty per centum ad valorem.

SEC. 4. That there shall be levied, collected, and paid on the importation of all raw or unmanufactured articles, not enumerated or pro-
1890 vided for in this act, a duty of ten per centum ad valorem; and on all articles manufactured, in whole or in part, not provided for in this act, a duty of twenty per centum ad valorem.

SEC. 2513. There shall be levied, collected, and paid on the importation of all raw or unmanufactured articles, not herein enumerated or 1883 provided for, a duty of ten per centum ad valorem; and all articles manufactured, in whole or in part, not herein enumerated or provided for, a duty of twenty per centum ad valorem.

DECISIONS UNDER ALL TARIFF ACTS.

(c) Agate and tiger-eye stones cut in parts and ground into shapes of penholder handles and other articles and known to the trade by the names of agate penholder handles, tiger-eye penholder handles, etc., are dutiable as nonenumerated articles and not under paragraph 95 (1883) as nondutiable crude minerals which have been advanced in value by refining, grinding, or other process, nor under paragraph 480 (1883) as precious stones, nor are they free under paragraph 596 (1883) as agates unmanufactured. 46 Fed. Rep., 519, reversed.—Erhardt v. Hahn (C. C. A.), (55 Fed. Rep., 273).

(e) Hop bitter ale, a beverage which does not contain spirits and which is not malted, is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and not under paragraph 337 (1890) as ale.—T. D. 15840, G. A. 2940.

(f) Actinolite ground is a nonenumerated manufactured article and is not dutiable under paragraph 381 (1894) as a manufacture of asbestos, nor is it free under paragraph 388 as asbestos unmanufactured.—T. D. 16013, G. A. 3037.

(a) Animal charcoal accumulated in the process of extracting prussiate of potash from leather, hoofs, and horns of animals is a nonenumerated article (1890).—T. D. 13359, G. A. 1739.

(b) Ammoniacal gas liquor is dutiable as a manufactured and not as an unmanufactured nonenumerated article.—T. D. 13959, G. A. 2064; T. D. 15712, G. A. 2893; T. D. 17441, G. A. 3615.

(c) Agar-agar (seaweed) which has been put through a process of washing, drying, bleaching, and freezing, cut into lengths, and bound into packages, commercially known as Japanese isinglass, is a nonenumerated manufactured article and is not dutiable under paragraph 6 (1890) as isinglass nor free under paragraph 727 (1890) as seaweed.—T. D. 10923, G. A. 418.

(d) Asphalt mastic is a nonenumerated article and is not free under paragraph 496 (1890) as asphaltum or bitumen crude.—T. D. 13765, G. A. 1959.

(f) Syrian asphaltum is a nonenumerated manufactured article.—T. D. 13764, G. A. 1958.

(g) Asphalt épuré and asphalt dried are nonenumerated manufactured articles and not free under paragraph 390 (1894) as crude asphaltum.—T. D. 17920, G. A. 3795.

(h) A feather bed composed of feathers done up in cotton ticking is a nonenumerated manufactured article. The importer claimed that the feathers were free under paragraph 567 (1890) and the ticking dutiable as a manufacture of cotton. The collector assessed duty under paragraph 443 (1890) as a manufacture of feathers.—T. D. 12431, G. A. 1169.

(i) Stone ballast presented to the consignee of the vessel was assessed as a nonenumerated unmanufactured article on the valuation as returned by the appraiser, and claimed to be free. Held, that there is no provision for the free entry of ballast, that the Board has no authority to disturb the value as returned except in the manner prescribed by section 13, act of 1890, and that a reappraisement should have been asked for.—T. D. 12569, G. A. 1253.

(j) Betel leaves and nuts are nonenumerated articles and are not dutiable under paragraph 288 (1890) as vegetables.—T. D. 10746, G. A. 299.

(k) Billiard chalk is a nonenumerated manufactured article.—T. D. 11333, G. A. 616.

(l) Bituminous limestone advanced in value and condition by grinding is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and is not free as crude asphaltum.—T. D. 13890, G. A. 2043.

(m) Bone tallow, so called, a grease obtained from bones, used for sizing in the manufacture of textile fabrics, is a nonenumerated manufactured article and is not dutiable as rendered oil nor as tallow.—T. D. 12349, G. A. 1121.

(n) Bast matting, a coarse material made from the fibrous part of the bark of the linden tree, is not a manufacture of wood nor of vegetable fiber, but is a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 12959, G. A. 1510.

(o) Bath brick manufactured from a calcareous and silicious earth, used for scouring and polishing purposes only and not suitable for building purposes, are nonenumerated articles and not dutiable under paragraph 94 (1890) as brick.—T. D. 12316, G. A. 1088.

(a) Braids for hats made from the bark of a tree are dutiable as nonenumerated articles and not under paragraph 374 (1890) as manufactures of vegetable fiber or free under paragraph 711 as sparterre.—T. D. 13298, G. A. 1678.

(b) Wheat bran is a nonenumerated article and is not free under paragraph 558 (1894) as a crude vegetable substance.—T. D. 16435, G. A. 3224.

(c) Bahia dressed and African piassava fiber roughly hackled and bundled by the natives and afterwards drawn and dressed in Europe is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not as an unmanufactured article; nor is it free under paragraph 420 as bristles, paragraph 422 as broom corn, paragraph 497 as fiber, paragraph 558 as a vegetable substance, nor paragraph 683 (1894) as an unmanufactured wood.—T. D. 16969, G. A. 3397.

(d) Du Barry's Delicious Revelanta Arabaca Food for invalids and infants is a nonenumerated manufactured article and is not dutiable under paragraph 59 (1894) as a medicinal proprietary preparation. Under the act of 1883 this article was assessed as a proprietary preparation (T. D. 7574; 8635). The act of 1883, however, provided for proprietary preparations which were not medicinal.—T. D. 16987, G. A. 3415.

(e) Bone ash not used exclusively for fertilizing is dutiable as a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 20247, G. A. 4303.

(f) Brandy cherries in bottles, the cherries chief value, are dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles and not under paragraph 218 (1894) as fruits preserved in sugar, paragraph 219 as fruits preserved in their own juices, paragraph 247 as cherry juice. The bottles are dutiable under paragraph 88.—T. D. 15683, G. A. 2864.

(g) Brilliantine is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not under paragraph 16½ (1894) for drugs, or paragraph 354 as a manufacture of gelatin.—T. D. 15846, G. A. 2946.

(h) Bamboo splits stripped or shredded, cut into lengths of about 12 inches, and tied into bundles are dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles and not under paragraph 179 as reeds manufactured from bamboo, nor free under paragraph 684.—T. D. 18167, G. A. 3924.

(i) Bicycle protectors composed of paper cylinders inclosing fulminates (fulminates chief value) are nonenumerated articles and not manufactures of paper.—T. D. 20652, G. A. 4343.

(j) Glucose and grape sugar are dutiable as nonenumerated articles (R. S. 2516) and not under R. S. 2504 as burnt starch or gum substitute.—Weilbacher v. Merritt (37 Fed. Rep., 85).

(k) Small articles, such as cups, button hooks, penholder handles, paper weights, etc., manufactured from agate or onyx are dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles and not as precious stones, either directly or by assimilation. T. D. 18872, G. A. 4069, reversed.—United States v. Hahn (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 755); reversed (100 Fed. Rep., 635).

(l) Carmine or Persian berry extract assessed as a nonenumerated article. The importer claimed that it was dutiable under paragraph 84 (1883), fixing the rate on "logwood or dyewoods, etc.," or under paragraph 94 as bearing a similitude to barks, berries, etc. The classification sustained.—Sykes v. Magone (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 494).

(m) Cement statuettes are nonenumerated manufactured articles and not earthenware.—T. D. 14860, G. A. 2543.

(n) Cocoa fiber dyed and colored and cut into lengths of about 15 inches and put up in small bundles is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not free under paragraph 542 (1890) as crude cocoa fiber, or paragraph 560 as a drug.—T. D. 12568, G. A. 1252.

(a) Cocoanut meat ground is a nonenumerated manufactured article.—T. D. 11849, G. A. 840.

(b) Cord grease, a mixture of animal and mineral oil and graphite, a specially compounded lubricant, is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and not free under paragraph 599 (1890) as grease and oils commonly used for soap making.—T. D. 13976, G. A. 2081.

(c) Cork ventilators for use in men's hats are manufactures of cork, dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles and not under paragraph 434 (1890) as manufactured cork.—T. D. 13603, G. A. 1875.

(d) Chestnut flour is a nonenumerated manufactured article.—T. D. 11547, G. A. 722.

(e) Charcoal fillers for Japanese hand warmers are nonenumerated articles and not free under paragraph 532 as charcoal.—T. D. 15330, G. A. 2764.

(f) Chinese bean sticks are dutiable as nonenumerated articles and not as vegetables.—T. D. 14618, G. A. 2376.

D. 17498, G. A. 3637.

(i) Evergreen trees, small, known as Christmas trees, are dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles and not free under paragraph 617 as crude vegetable substances, paragraph 699 as unmanufactured timber, or paragraph 700 as logs in the rough.—T. D. 21372, G. A. 4478.

(j) Elder extract, no alcohol being used in its preparation, is a nonenumerated manufactured article.—T. D. 14731, G. A. 2453.

(k) Extract of juniper, no alcohol being used in its preparation, is a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 14731, G. A. 2453.

(m) Fishing floats (quill) are nonenumerated articles.—T. D. 16336, G. A. 3165.

(n) Flowers dried are nonenumerated articles manufactured and are not dutiable or free as drugs under paragraph 24 or paragraph 560 (1890).—T. D. 12115, G. A. 977.

(a) Flowers dyed (immortelles) are nonenumerated articles.—T. D. 14058, G. A. 2109.

(b) Fluorspar ground is a nonenumerated manufactured and not an unmanufactured article, nor is it free under paragraph 568 (1890) as assimilated to feldspar, or paragraph 574 as flint, or paragraph 723 as stone.—T. D. 14736, G. A. 2458.

(c) Ferrochrome is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and not as an unmanufactured article, nor at $4 per ton under paragraph 110 (1894), nor under paragraph 438 (1894), nor as a manufacture of metal.—T. D. 16294, G. A. 3123: T. D. 17729, G. A. 3715.

(d) Figures for wedding cakes, made of gum tragacanth and sugar (gum tragacanth chief value), are dutiable as articles not enumerated.—T. D. 18604, G. A. 4002.

(e) Feed chopped consisting of oat hulls and the refuse of an oat mill is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and not under paragraph 231 as oat hulls.—T. D. 21262, G. A. 4454.

(f) Fireworks composed of paper, bamboo, and explosives (the explosives chief value) are nonenumerated manufactured articles.—T. D. 19904, G. A. 4234.

(g) Brilliant star sticks, Bengal sticks, etc., saturated or coated with a highly inflammable material which produces brilliant colored lights, some of them emitting showers of burning lights or stars, are dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles and not under paragraph 423 as matches.—T. D. 20652, G. A. 4343.

(h) Ferrodor dry, or ferric oxide, a dark-gray impalpable powder having a metallic luster, described in the invoice as "dry ferroder" and valued at 18 shillings per hundredweight, equal to $88 per ton, and containing 64.63 per cent metallic iron, equal to 92.04 per cent ferric oxide, 8.46 per cent insoluble residuum, is not dutiable under paragraph 121 at 40 per cent per ton as iron ore, nor under paragraph 183 as a metallic or mineral substance; nor is it free under paragraph 520 as chromate of iron or chromic ore, or paragraph 614 as crude mineral. Having apparently been artificially ground or pulverized and otherwise partly manufactured, it appears to fall under this section as a nonenumerated manufactured article.—T. D. 22057, G. A. 4665.

(i) Glucose and grape sugar are dutiable as nonenumerated articles and not under R. S. 2504, schedule M, as burnt starch or gum substitute.—Weilbacher v. Merritt (37 Fed. Rep., 85).

(j) Natural gas is a nonenumerated manufactured article and is not free under paragraph 496 (1890) as crude bitumen or paragraph 651 (1890) as a crude mineral.—T. D. 11569, G. A. 744.

(k) Gypsum plates for use to transmit light in the polarizing apparatus of petrographical microscopes or other philosophical instruments are nonenumerated manufactured articles.—T. D. 12383, G. A. 1155.

(l) So-called harness grease composed of certain animal and vegetable oils and tannin used for dressing harness is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and is not free as grease for dressing leather.—T. D. 14520, G. A. 2331.

(m) Hay is a raw or unmanufactured article subject to a duty of 10 per cent and not to a duty of 20 per cent under R. S. 2516.—Frazee v. Moffitt (18 Fed. Rep., 584).

(n) Hay pressed in bales is not a manufactured article.—Frazee v. Moffitt (20 Blatchf., 267; 18 Fed. Rep., 584), cited in Hartranft v. Weigman (121 U. S., 609, 615).

(a) Handles for umbrellas, canes, sticks, etc., ornamented, fitted with a metal screw to be introduced into the handle, composed of aventurine or goldstone or imitation thereof, imitation of agate and lapis lazuli, tiger-eye or crocodolite, jaspis (mineral being chief value), are dutiable as nonenumerated articles.—T. D. 13377, G. A. 1757.

(b) Horsehair dyed is a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 13218, G. A. 1639.

(c) Hair rope made of ox or cattle hair is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not under paragraph 283 (1894), the ox or cow not being ejusdem generis with the animals there enumerated and cattle hair being free under paragraph 504 (1894).—T. D. 18306, G. A. 3947.

(d) India-rubber substitute is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not as unmanufactured, nor under paragraph 613 (1890) as india rubber crude.—T. D. 15317, G. A. 2751.

(e) India rubber substitute is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not as manufactured, nor under paragraph 613 (1890) as india rubber crude.—T. D. 15317, G. A. 2751.

(f) India-rubber cement consisting of crude india rubber dissolved in benzine, used in patching shoes, etc., is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and not as a manufacture of india rubber.—T. D. 13769, G. A. 1963.

(g) India fiber, sometimes called Palmyra fiber, selected, dressed, cut into lengths, bunched, and made suitable for use in the manufacture of brushes and brooms, is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not as an unmanufactured article, nor free under paragraph 497 (1894) as a fiber, nor paragraph 558 as a crude vegetable substance.—T. D. 17486, G. A. 3625.

(h) Immortelles dried, prepared, and dyed are dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles and not under paragraph 16½ (1894) as flowers.—T. D. 15990, G. A. 3014.

(i) Juniper extract, no alcohol being used in its preparation, is a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 14731, G. A. 2453.

(j) Kittool, being the fiber of the leaf stocks of the jaggery palm of East India, which has been combed between steel brushes, with a little oil to soften it, and also slightly colored and made straight for bunching by lengths for brushes, is dutiable as a nonenumerated article manufactured and not as an unmanufactured article; nor is it free under paragraph 597 (1890) as a fibrous vegetable substance, nor under paragraph 653 as vegetable substances unmanufactured.—T. D. 13591, G. A. 1863; T. D. 15949, G. A. 2973; Wilkens v. United States (C. C.), (84 Fed. Rep., 152).

(k) Kefir seed or fungi is a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 21260, G. A. 4452.

(l) Lemon or lime juice containing sugar, in glass bottles and known as lemon squash, is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and is not free under paragraph 533 (1894) as lemon juice or lime juice, nor paragraph 555 as lemonade.—T. D. 16849, G. A. 3368.

(m) Lubricating rollers or candles composed of paraffin and stearine (paraffin chief value) are dutiable as a nonenumerated article and are not free under paragraph 578 (1894).—T. D. 18220, G. A. 3930.

(n) Millet seed not in its natural state, but peeled, having the outer hull removed and the germinating power destroyed, used for making soup and also for bird food, is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not as seeds. 78 Fed. Rep., 804, reversed.—T. D. 19094, G. A. 4093; Nordlinger v. Robertson (33 Fed. Rep., 241); United States v. Kauffman (C. C. A.), (84 Fed. Rep., 446).

(a) Marble cut into blocks for convenience of transportation is not manufactured.—United States v. Wilson (1 Hunts Mer. Mag., 167), cited in Hartranft v. Weigmann (121 U. S., 609, 615).

(b) Moss, natural, cleaned, assorted, dyed, and put into packages, is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and not under paragraph 24 as natural moss.—T. D. 12703, G. A. 1352; reversed (53 Fed. Rep., 1016).

(c) Massa blocks consisting of cuttings or waste from block meerschaum, which has been ground and then molded and smoothed into cone or acorn shaped pieces, are dutiable as nonenumerated articles and not as smokers' articles.—T. D. 11341, G. A. 624.

(d) Mexican fiber, drawn, black, is a nonenumerated manufactured article and not an unmanufactured fiber, nor is it free under paragraph 597 as crude fiber.—T. D. 15956, G. A. 2980.

(e) A ground mineral substance consisting of hydrous silicate of lime and magnesia, somewhat resembling French chalk, held to be dutiable as a nonenumerated manufacture and not under paragraph 16 (1894) as chalk.—T. D. 12458, G. A. 1196.

(f) Articles composed of mineral substances must be of definite form.—T. D. 19628, G. A. 4210.

(g) A mineral white, a fine white powder composed of corn starch and dehydrated calcium sulphate, is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and not under paragraph 97 (1894) as plaster of Paris.—T. D. 13945, G. A. 2050.

(h) Microscopical slides invoiced as "Koenig's mounted slides," representing diseased parts of the human flesh, are pathological specimens, dutiable as nonenumerated articles and not under paragraph 108 as glass, nor free under paragraph 707 (1890) as preparations of anatomy.—T. D. 12798, G. A. 1394.

(i) Moss dyed, prepared for florists' use or for ornamental purposes, is a nonenumerated article and is not free under paragraph 558 (1894) as crude moss.—T. D. 16317, G. A. 3146; T. D. 16956, G. A. 3384.

(j) Mantles for Welsbach gas-burners, made of cotton or other vegetable fiber and saturated with various oxides of valuable metals, consisting of salt of thorium and other chemical salts, the chemical salts which by chemical combination have completely lost their identity, are dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles and not as chemical compounds, nor as manufactures of cotton, nor as manufactures of vegetable fiber—T. D. 17917, G. A. 3792.

(k) Molasses testing under 40 degrees and over 20 per cent of moisture is dutiable as a nonenumerated article. The limitation of 40 degrees in paragraph 182½ (1894) excludes it from classification under that paragraph. The limitation in paragraph 557½ of free admission to molasses containing under 20 per cent of moisture precludes it from free admission.—T. D. 16532, G. A. 3250.

(l) Mother-of-pearl flakes or scales, chipped from shells known as earshells, is a nonenumerated unmanufactured article and is not manufactured, nor is it dutiable as a manufacture of shell or free as shells unmanufactured.—T. D. 17162, G. A. 3479.

(m) Mattresses composed of horsehair and cotton (horsehair chief value) are dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles and not under paragraphs 366 and 383 as manufactures of wool.—T. D. 21786, G. A. 4605.

(n) Medicinal leaves, crushed or ground, saturated with alcohol, are dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles and not under paragraph 67 as a medicinal preparation containing alcohol, nor separately, the leaves under paragraph 20 as advanced drugs and the alcohol under paragraph 289.—T. D. 20516, G. A. 4327.

(a) Necklaces composed of paste, with brass clasps not composed of precious metal or imitation thereof, are nonenumerated articles.—T. D. 14943, G. A. 2572.

(b) Ornaments, seals, ash dishes, umbrella handles, paper cutters, and other completed articles, composed of rhodonite, jasper, jade, porphyry, nephrite, and aventurine quartz, respectively, are dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles and not as manufactures of marble.—T. D. 13337, G. A. 1717.

(c) Olive nuts ground assessed as nonenumerated manufactured articles and claimed to be dutiable at 10 per cent without specifying any paragraph. Protest overruled.—T. D. 11199, G. A. 558; reversed (84 Fed. Rep., 148).

(d) Oleo stearin is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and is not free under paragraph 645 as tallow.—T. D. 16534, G. A. 3252.

(e) Oxide of iron which has been used to purify coal gas by abstracting sulphur therefrom is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article.—T. D. 19355, G. A. 4146.

(f) Putz kalk, a soft white substance resembling chalk in appearance, but having an alkaline taste, used as a polishing powder for metals, is a nonenumerated manufactured article.—T. D. 12810, G. A. 1406.

(g) Petroleum residuum, obtained from the distillation of petroleum, is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not under paragraph 19 (1890) as coal-tar preparation, paragraph 76 as a chemical compound, etc., nor free under paragraph 496 (1890) as bitumen, or paragraph 651 as a crude mineral.—T. D. 15394, G. A. 2788.

(h) Petroleum or rock oil (black lubricating oil) is a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 12823, G. A. 1419.

(i) Pearl hardening, an artificial sulphate of lime obtained by precipitated carbonate of lime with dilute sulphuric acid, is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and not under paragraph 97 (1890) as plaster of Paris or gypsum ground.—United States v. Watson (C. C.), (84 Fed. Rep., 160).

(j) Piassava, a vegetable fiber, dressed, cut, and suitable for brush makers' use, is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and not under paragraph 229 (1890) as a manufacture of reed, nor free under paragraph 560 for drugs, etc., nor paragraph 597 as sunn.—T. D. 16088, G. A. 3052.)

(k) Patent fiber artificially colored held to be a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 12209, G. A. 1023.

(l) Palm leaves, painted, and dyed flowers and grasses are nonenumerated articles.—T. D. 14933, G. A. 2562.

(m) Patent bass for brush makers' use, a stiff, coarse, fibrous substance, resembling strips of bamboo, is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not as an unmanufactured article, nor under paragraph 24 (1890) for drugs, nor paragraph 229 as wrought or manufactured rattan or reeds, nor is it free under paragraphs 542, 597, 560, 653, 670, or 756 (1890).—T. D. 16095, G. A. 3059.

D. 18165, G. A. 3922.

(i) Tungsten or wolfram metal and ferrochromium is a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 16527, G. A. 3245.

(j) Toothpick holders, composed of glass and metal, holding a dozen quill toothpicks, were invoiced as entireties. The toothpicks were assessed as nonenumerated manufactured articles and the holders at 45 per cent under paragraph 193 (1897) as manufactures of metal and at 45 per cent under section 19, act of June 10, 1890, as unusual coverings. Held, that the toothpicks were correctly assessed, that the holders are not coverings and are subject to a single duty under paragraph 193 as manufactures of metal and are not subject to the additional duty.—T. D. 21736, G. A. 4592.

(k) Tap cinder is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and not under paragraph 121 as iron ore nor free under paragraph 614 as a crude mineral.—T. D. 21426, G. A. 4501.

(l) Ground talc is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not under paragraph 97 as an earthen or mineral substance.—T. D. 19485, G. A. 4179; United States v. Gabriel (C. C.), (99 Fed. Rep., 716); affirmed in 122 Fed. Rep., 1021.

(m) Violin rosin is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not under paragraph 16½ (1894) as a drug, paragraph 326½ as a musical instrument or part thereof, nor is it free under paragraph 470 as a gum resin.—T. D. 16099, G. A. 3063; T. D. 16304, G. A. 3133.

(n) Violin resin contained in round tin boxes about 1⅜ inches in diameter and 1½ inches in height is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not under paragraph 193 as a manufacture in part of metal, though the boxes are of more value than the resin, such boxes being the usual and ordinary covering of violin resin, and accordingly dutiable at the same rate as their contents.—T. D. 21961, G. A. 4649.

(a) Sugar wafers made of flour, sugar, milk, and egg, flavored with vanilla extract, used exclusively as an article of table food, are dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles and not free under paragraph 750 as wafers unmedicated.—T. D. 12030, G. A. 943; reversed, T. D. 15008, G. A. 2585 (57 Fed. Rep., 197).

(b) Sweetened biscuit known as sugar wafers are dutiable as nonenumerated articles and are not free under paragraph 667 (1894) as wafers, for this latter paragraph provides for only one kind of wafers, namely, those which are unmedicated and not edible.—T. D. 15965, G. A. 2989; T. D. 17055, G. A. 3436; Stemmler v. United States (C. C.), (72 Fed. Rep., 47).

(c) Water-chestnut flour is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and not as starch.—T. D. 15155, G. A. 2681.

(d) Heads and stalks of bearded wheat, pulled before the grain was developed and bleached with the fumes of sulphur or by other artificial means, is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article.—T. D. 13375, G. A. 1755.

(e) Wolfram or tungsten metal and ferrochromium is a nonenumerated article.—T. D. 16527, G. A. 3245.

(f) Ground mineral used to make wolfram metal is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not as an unmanufactured article, nor by similitude under paragraph 110 (1894), or free under paragraph 556 as crude mineral.—T. D. 17849, G. A. 3783.

(g) Yam flour is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article and not under paragraph 261 (1890) at one-fourth of a cent, paragraph 323 as an article fit for use as starch, nor is it free under paragraph 695 as sago flour or paragraph 730 as tapioca.—T. D. 15174, G. A. 2700.

(h) An article may be crude for the purposes of classification by reason of the use to which it is applied, where it is crude in the sense that it is unrefined, although it may be the result of some manufacture.—Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. v. United States (C. C.), (94 Fed. Rep., 822).

(i) The mere fastening together of imported material which was designed and shaped for that specific use abroad does not constitute a manufacture.—The Tide Water Oil Co. v. United States (31 C. Cls. R., 90).

(j) Material is matter intended to be used in the creation of a mechanical structure. Manufacture is a transformation of the material used into a new and different article.—Id.

(k) Ground olive nuts are dutiable as nonenumerated articles and not under paragraph 20 as crude drugs or nuts advanced in value. T. D. 19093, G. A. 4092; T. D. 19983, G. A. 4248, reversed.—T. D. 22783, G. A. 4860; Kessler v. United States (107 Fed. Rep., 264).

(l) So-called brilliant star matches, gold matches, brilliant green matches, and meteor matches are dutiable as unenumerated manufactured articles and not under paragraph 423 as matches. Such articles are made and used only as pyrotechnical playthings and have no practical use whatever. T. D. 20652, G. A. 4343, followed.—T. D. 22874, G. A. 4885.

(m) Polishing powders composed in chief value of earthy or mineral substances, putz pomade, putz extract, ground silenium, ground Cornish or Cornwall stone, ground quartz, silenium in sticks, bath bricks, and modeling clay, are dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles and not under paragraph 97 as articles composed of earthy or mineral substances.—T. D. 23028, G. A. 4921.

(a) A concentrated essence produced by the enfleurage process, in which a variety of petroleum was used as the original solvent, is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and not under paragraph 60, act of 1894, or paragraph 3 of the act of 1897 as essential oil nor as waste. 94 Fed. Rep., 481, affirmed.—United States v. Dodge (C. C. A.), (107 Fed. Rep., 106).

(b) Sago flour is not sago crude (paragraph 652) and, not being a substance fit for use as starch (paragraph 285) under the ruling in Chew Hing Lung v. Wise (176 U. S., 156), is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article. T. D. 21804, G. A. 4606, modified.—T. D. 22968, G. A. 4907.

(c) So-called camphor oil or camphor refuse is dutiable as a nonenumerated unmanufactured article and not under paragraph 3 as an essential or distilled oil.—T. D. 23116, G. A. 4945.

(d) Molasses testing not above 40 degrees is dutiable as a nonenumerated manufactured article.—T. D. 23180, G. A. 4966.

(e) Buenos Ayres sheepskins, imported with the wool on and dried, but not dressed, usually invoiced as sheepskins and known in commerce by that name, are dutiable as nonenumerated articles under the act of July 30, 1846, and not as wool unmanufactured or as rawhides and skins of all kinds, whether dried, salted, or pickled.—Coggill v. Lawrence (1 Blatchf., 602; 6 Fed. Cas., 6).

(f) Although the chief value of the sheepskins is the wool, and a large proportion of those imported are after importation shorn for the wool, yet the well-known commercial designation of the article as a whole must govern, and the Government can not appraise the wool and the pelt separately and charge duty on the former under Schedule C (act of 1846) as wool unmanufactured.—Id.

(g) Straw, twisted, being a stalk of rye straw split into two parts, and those parts twisted together, and being the raw material used in making laces which are manufactured into hats and bonnets, not having been known in commerce in the United States until after the passage of this act, is dutiable as a nonenumerated article and can not be charged with duty under any of the denominations of straw manufactures mentioned in Schedule C, act of 1846.—Rheimer v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 124; 20 Fed. Cas., 630).

(h) An article not enumerated by name does not come under this section (section 6, act of July 30, 1846), provided it so resembles some enumerated article in quality, material, or use as to be governed by section 20 of the act of 1842.—Ross v. Peaslee (2 Curt., 499; 20 Fed. Cas., 1241).

(i) If a nonenumerated manufactured article bears no substantial similitude to an enumerated article, or no substantial resemblance to two or more enumerated articles, chargeable with duty, and is not provided for under any other catch-all clauses, it is dutiable as a nonenumerated article.—Sykes v. Magone (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 494).

(j) An article is "enumerated" so as to be without the provisions of this section not only when the article is mentioned by its specific trade name, but also when it may be fairly included within some generic clause contained in the tariff schedule so as to be distinguished from other articles.—Wolff v. United States (C. C. A.), (71 Fed. Rep., 291).

(k) When an article has been so advanced by separate processes as to be adapted for a special purpose different from the original purpose, and to be sold to a different class of persons, and to be known under special commercial designations, it is no longer included under the original commercial designation.—McLeod v. United States (C. C.), (75 Fed. Rep., 927).

(a) The application of labor to an article either by hand or by mechanism does not make the article necessarily a manufactured article within the meaning of the term as used in the tariff laws. Washing and scouring wool does not make the resulting wool a manufacture of wool. Cleaning and ginning cotton does not make the resulting cotton a manufacture of cotton.—Hartranft v. Weigmann (121 U. S., 615).

(b) It has been held in many cases, as that if "almonds and dried fruits," "canary birds," and at the present term in the case of "thread laces" and of "chocolate," that when an article is intended to be made dutiable by its specific designation it will not be affected by the general words of the same or another statute which would otherwise embrace it. This rule applies both to statutes reducing and to statutes increasing duties. Giving it such application here, we must hold that "artificial flowers" are not entitled to be classified as a manufacture of cotton.—Arthur v. Rheims (96 U. S., 143, 144).

(c) The mere fact of the application of labor to an article, either by hand or by mechanism, does not make it necessarily a "manufactured article" within the meaning of the tariff laws, unless the labor has been carried to such an extent that the article suffers a species of transformation and is changed into a new and different article, having a distinctive name, character, or use.—United States v. Semmer (41 Fed. Rep., 324) followed; Baumgarten v. Magone (C. C.), (50 Fed. Rep., 69).

(d) Cherry sirup held to be a nonenumerated manufactured article.—T. D. 23404, G. A. 5041.

(e) Rice-hull ashes are dutiable as unenumerated unmanufactured articles and not free by similitude to wood ashes.—T. D. 23633, G. A. 5111.

(f) Certain preparations of tallow, used not as an assistant or mordant, but simply for softening cotton cloth, are unenumerated manufactured articles.—DeRonde v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 858) followed; T. D. 23664, G. A. 5121.

(g) Variously shaped articles of hone stone with one smooth surface designed and adapted for use in the series of processes in polishing marble, and not suitable for sharpening edge or sharp tools, are not entitled to free entry as hones or whetstones under paragraph 574, but are properly dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles under the provisions of this section.—T. D. 23986, G. A. 5204.

(h) Shells of ostrich eggs from which the meat has been extracted are nonenumerated unmanufactured articles.—T. D. 24054, G. A. 5229.

(i) Flint stones measuring about 4 inches in length, 3 in width, and 1 in thickness, partially ground and polished and designed to be used to impart a luster to surface-coated papers, are dutiable under this section as unenumerated manufactured articles and are not free of duty as flint, flints, or flint stones unground under paragraph 557.—T. D. 24071, G. A. 5233.

(j) Sulphur and cotton wicks (sulphur chief value), used in purifying liquor casks, are dutiable as unenumerated manufactured articles.—T. D. 24087, G. A. 5241.

(k) Violin rosin fastened into a hollow piece of wood and adhering to the sides thereof (rosin chief value) held to be an unenumerated manufactured article.—T. D. 24103, G. A. 5245.

(a) Certain marine glue pitch composed of vegetable and mineral bitumen and oils and resinous substances held to be dutiable as unenumerated manufactured articles.—T. D. 24117, G. A. 5248.

(b) Strips of woven cattle-hair felt, used for polishing glass, held to be dutiable under this provision.—T. D. 24510, G. A. 5358.

(c) Bean cake, bean stick, and potato cake held dutiable under this provision.—T. D. 24513, G. A. 5361.

(d) Nonmetallic magnesium tips or rods, used for holding incandescent candles in position, are dutiable under this provision.—T. D. 24737, G. A. 5452.

(e) Vegetable fibers assorted, dressed, cut into uniform lengths, and bunched, being intended for the use of brush makers, are dutiable under this section as unenumerated manufactured articles.—T. D. 24860, G. A. 5520.

(f) Ground talc, although sometimes known as French chalk, is not the article provided for by that name in paragraph 13, but is dutiable under this section as an unenumerated manufactured article.—T. D. 24864, G. A. 5521.

The following were held to be unenumerated manufactured articles:

(g) Bean flour.—T. D. 24904, G. A. 5534.

(i) Blanco.—T. D. 25175, G. A. 5636.

(j) So-called Arabic cooling compound, composed chiefly of carbonate of lime and sometimes with a substantial admixture of red oxide of iron.—T. D. 25383, G. A. 5710.

(k) Snowshoes made of wood and rawhide (rawhide chief value).—T. D. 25491, G. A. 5749.

(m) Sealing wax.—T. D. 25595, G. A. 5791.

(n) So-called beacon ale, an unfermented nonalcoholic beverage made from an infusion of hops diluted with water and sweetened.—T. D. 25748, G. A. 5840.

(o) So-called feather bristles manufactured from quills, used with hog bristles in making brushes.—T. D. 25821, G. A. 5861.

(p) Stove polish composed wholly or chiefly of plumbago.—T. D. 25862, G. A. 5872.

(q) Hone stone not yet manufactured into hones or stones.—T. D. 26087, G. A. 5940.

(r) Flint polishing stones, rounded and polished, with the edges beveled.—T. D. 26603, G. A. 6106.

(s) Sour cream.—T. D. 26720, G. A. 6152.

(v) Mizuame.—T. D. 26846, G. A. 6198.

(w) Sichel glue.—T. D. 26854, G. A. 6206.

(x) Extract of Persian berries.—T. D. 27054, G. A. 6272.

(y) Watch pockets, etc., made of seeds strung on cotton thread.—T. D. 27257, G. A. 6332.

(aa) Factis truss pads.—T. D. 27383, G. A. 6375.

(a) Thick soy.—T. D. 27455, G. A. 6392.

(b) Wood charcoal.—T. D. 27610, G. A. 6440.

(c) Semolino.—T. D. 27648, G. A. 6456.

(d) Brazilian cement.—T. D. 27714, G. A. 6477.

(e) Gallilith.—T. D. 27822, G. A. 6514.

(f) Thick soy.—T. D. 27944, G. A. 6550.

(g) Almond meal not ready for use as a toilet article.—T. D. 27965, G. A. 6555.

(h) Chlorophyll.—T. D. 28018, G. A. 6560.

(i) Maraschino water.—Leerberger v. United States (141 Fed. Rep., 1023; T. D. 25871), reversing T. D. 24715, G. A. 5437, followed; T. D. 26052, G. A. 5926.

(j) Wooden pencils filled with soap, for cleaning eyeglasses (soap chief value). United States v. American Express Company (136 Fed. Rep., 594; T. D. 26192), affirming 131 id., 656; T. D. 25365, and T. D. 24881, G. A. 5528.

(k) Bakery products in the form of biscuits, thin wafers, fancy forms, etc., composed of pastry.—United States v. Meadows (154 Fed. Rep., 1004; T. D. 28004), affirming 147 Fed. Rep., 757; T. D. 27448, and T. D. 25731, G. A. 5830, followed; T. D. 28172, G. A. 6591.

(l) Ground gas-retort carbon.—T. D. 28252, G. A. 6623.

(m) Persian berry extract.—United States v. Berlin Aniline Works, and Berlin Aniline Works v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 925; T. D. 28280) followed; T. D. 28372, G. A. 6653.

(n) Soluble grease made from tallow.—T. D. 26592, G. A. 6103.

(o) Japanese sake.—United States v. Nishimiya (137 Fed. Rep., 396; T. D. 26155), affirming 131 Fed. Rep., 650; T. D. 25386, and overruling in effect T. D. 24410, G. A. 5334.

(q) Fruits in spirits (Act of 1894).—T. D. 27276, G. A. 6334.

(r) Persian berry extract.—United States v. Berlin Aniline Works and Berlin Aniline Works v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 925; T. D. 28280) followed; T. D. 28403, G. A. 6660.

(s) Carbon disks used in electrical instruments.—Swedish-American Telephone Company v. United States (T. D. 28582, suit 1671), reversing T. D. 25765, G. A. 5846, followed; T. D. 28510, G. A. 6679.

(t) So-called magnesia rings.—Crawford v. United States, T. D. 28539.

(u) Floral waters.—T. D. 27600, G. A. 6436, affirmed without opinion in Burr v. United States (T. D. 28540).

(v) Stone lanterns.—Vantine v. United States (Fed. Rep., ; T. D. 28543).

(w) Dead hares, undressed, are unenumerated unmannfactured articles.—T. D. 27646, G. A. 6454.

(x) Rhodium is an unenumerated unmanufactured article.—T. D. 28200, G. A. 6601.

Sec. 7. That each and every imported article, not enumerated in this Act, which is similar, either in material, quality, texture, or the use to which it may be applied, to any article enumerated in this Act as chargeable with duty, shall pay the same rate of duty which is levied on the enumerated article which it most resembles in any of the particulars before mentioned; and if any nonenumerated article equally resembles two or more enumerated articles on which different rates of duty are chargeable, there shall be levied on such nonenumerated article the same rate of duty as is chargeable on the article which it resembles paying the highest rate of duty; and on articles not enumerated, manufactured of two or more materials, the duty shall be assessed at the highest rate at which the same would be chargeable if composed wholly of the component material thereof of chief value; and the words "component material of chief value," wherever used in this Act, shall be held to mean that component material which shall exceed in value any other single component material of the article; and the value of each component material shall be determined by the ascertained value of such material in its condition as found in the article. If two or more rates of duty shall be applicable to any imported article, it shall pay duty at the highest of such rates.

SEC. 4. That each and every imported article, not enumerated in this Act, which is similar, either in material, quality, texture, or the use to which it may be applied, to any article enumerated in this Act as chargeable with duty shall pay the same rate of duty which is levied on the enumerated article which it most resembles in any of the particulars before mentioned; and if any nonenumerated article equally resembles two or more enumerated articles on which different rates of duty are chargeable, there shall be levied on such nonenumerated article the same rate of duty as is chargeable on the article which it resembles paying the highest rate of duty; and on articles not enumerated, manufactured of two or more materials, the duty shall be assessed at the highest rate at which the same would be chargeable if composed wholly of the component material thereof of chief value; and the words "component material of chief value," wherever used in this Act, shall be held to mean that component material which shall exceed in value any other single component material of the article; and the value of each component material shall be determined by the ascertained value of such material in its condition as found in the article. If two or more rates of duty shall be applicable to any imported article, it shall pay duty at the highest of such rates.

1894

SEC. 5. That each and every imported article, not enumerated in this Act, which is similar, either in material, quality, texture, or the use to which it may be applied, to any article enumerated in this Act as chargeable with duty shall pay the same rate of duty which is levied on the enumerated article which it most resembles in any of the particulars before mentioned; and if any nonenumerated article equally resembles two or more enumerated articles on which different rates of duty are chargeable there shall be levied on such nonenumerated article the same rate of duty as is chargeable on the article which it resembles paying the highest rate of duty; and on articles not enumerated, manufactured of two or more materials, the duty shall be assessed at the highest rate at which the same would be chargeable if composed wholly of the component material thereof of chief value; and the words "component material of chief value," wherever used in this Act, shall be held to mean that component material which shall exceed in value any other single component material of the article; and the value of each component material shall be determined by the ascertained value of such material in its condition as found in the article. If two or more rates of duty shall be applicable to any imported article it shall pay duty at the highest of such rates.

SEC. 2499. There shall be levied, collected, and paid on each and every nonenumerated article, which bears a similitude, either in material, quality, texture, or the use to which it may be applied, to any article enumerated in this title as chargeable with duty, the same rate of duty which is levied and charged on the enumerated article which it most resembles in any of the particulars before mentioned; and if any nonenumerated article equally resembles two or more enumerated articles on which different rates are chargeable, there shall be levied, collected, and paid on such nonenumerated article the same rate of duty as is chargeable on the article which it resembles paying the highest duty; and on all articles manufactured from two or more materials the duty shall be assessed at the highest rates at which the component material of chief value may be chargeable. If two or more rates of duty should be applicable to any imported article, it shall be classified for duty under the highest of such rates: Provided, That nonenumerated articles similar in material and quality and texture, and the use to which they may be applied, to articles on the free list, and in the manufacture of which no dutiable materials are used, shall be free.

1883

DECISIONS UNDER THE VARIOUS TARIFF ACTS.

(a) In order to obtain the benefit of the similitude clause, the importer must specifically mention it in his protest.—Hahn v. Ehrhardt (78 Fed. Rep., 620), and United States v. Dearberg (143 Fed. Rep., 472; T. D. 27008), reversing 135 Fed. Rep., 245; T. D. 25782. [Circuit Court of Appeals, second circuit.]

(b) In order to obtain the benefit of the similitude clause, the importer need not expressly refer to it in his protest. It is sufficient if he claims the merchandise to be dutiable under the proper paragraph of the tariff law, without expressly pleading this clause.—In re Guggenheim (112 Fed. Rep., 517). [Circuit Court of Appeals, third circuit.]

(c) To bring an article within the purview of the similitude clause it is enough if there exists a substantial similitude in any one of the particulars mentioned—material, quality, texture, or use—and ferrochrome is dutiable by similitude as ferromanganese because they look alike and they are similar in quality and use, notwithstanding the fact that they produce different results and are not applied at the same stage of the process of making steel.—United States v. Roessler (137 Fed. Rep., 770; T. D. 26127).

(d) An unenumerated article which was found to resemble equally two enumerated articles, one of vegetable the other of animal origin, in the particulars of texture, quality, and use, was held to be classifiable by similitude to the former rather than the latter, because it was made from a vegetable product.—Hardt, Von Bernuth & Company v. United States (146 Fed. Rep., 61; T. D. 27028).

(e) The similitude clause does not apply to merchandise resembling articles on the free list.—T. D. 23633, G. A. 5111.

(f) Extract of nutgalls, though containing tannin as a component part, is not "similar in material" to tannin within the meaning of this section.—United States v. Proctor (145 Fed. Rep., 126; T. D. 27115).

(g) A mechanical mixture of borax and boracic acid was held to be dutiable at the same rate as either borax or boracic acid, according to which is the component material of chief value, by virtue of this provision.—Levi v. United States (126 Fed. Rep., 420; T. D. 25050), affirming T. D. 24215, G. A. 5276.

(h) In ascertaining the component material of chief value in an article composed of two or more materials, the respective values of the materials shall be taken in their condition as it is prior to their being put together to make the article. Catheters, made of a cotton cone covered over with a coating of varnish by hand, the value of the labor bestowed in applying the varnish greatly exceeding any other element in the cost of the articles, are dutiable nevertheless as manufactures in chief value of cotton for the reason that as the two materials came to the hands of the manufacturer the cotton exceeded the varnish in value. The amount of labor bestowed on any of the materials during the process of manufacture is not to be considered in ascertaining the relative value of the materials for tariff purposes.—United States v. Johnson (154 Fed.

Rep., 39; T. D. 28007), reversing 146 id., 148; T. D. 27185, and affirming in effect T. D. 26609, G. A. 6112.

(a) In ascertaining the component material of chief value in imported merchandise the value shall be determined by the value of the material in its condition as it is found in the articles; and in respect to woven fabrics having a silk warp and a cotton weft, the operation of warping the silk is held to be preliminary to the process of weaving and not a part thereof. Hence, it was improper to apportion the cost of warping the silk between the silk and cotton in order to determine the chief component. It was a part of the value of the silk threads alone.—United States v. Hoeninghaus (137 Fed. Rep., 478; T. D. 26125), affirming 131 id., 570; T. D. 25364, and reversing G. A. 5335, T. D. 24423.

(b) The provision herein that where two or more rates of duty are applicable to imported merchandise it shall pay duty at the highest of such rates, does not apply in a case in which one of two applicable rates is specific and the other is ad valorem, for, owing to fluctuations in the market, it is not possible to say that one of such rates is at all times higher than the other.—Loggie v. United States (137 Fed. Rep., 813; T. D. 26340).

(c) In determining the material of chief value in articles that are composed of several materials, the value of the various materials should be taken at the time they were put together to form the completed article.—T. D. 24843, G. A. 5509, and T. D. 24856, G. A. 5516.

(d) Sausages in which meat is the component material of chief value, held to be dutiable at the same rate as prepared meat by virtue of this provision.—T. D. 25498, G. A. 5756.

(e) "Hausen's oatmeal-cocoa," a preparation of cocoa and oatmeal, cocoa being the component material of chief value, held to be a nonenumerated article composed of two materials and dutiable by virtue of this section at the rate applicable to its component of chief value, which is prepared of manufactured cocoa, subject to a duty of 50 per cent under paragraph 281.—T. D. 26801, G. A. 6178.

(f) Lactic ferment, in chief value of sugar of milk, held to be dutiable as sugar of milk.—T. D. 26862, G. A. 6209.

(g) A fabric with a cotton yarn weft and a warp of flax jute yarn mixed should be regarded as composed of three components and duty assessed according to the most valuable single component.—T. D. 27155, G. A. 6296.

(h) Drilled pearls, unassorted and unmatched and of various sizes, colors, and qualities, but not set or strung, are dutiable by similitude to pearls in their natural state not strung or set.—Tiffany v. United States (112 Fed. Rep., 672), followed; T. D. 23751, G. A. 5149.

(i) Agar-agar, Japanese isinglass, is dutiable by similitude as isinglass.—T. D. 24053, G. A. 5228.

(j) Chinese bombs, composed of gunpowder and bamboo, are not dutiable by similitude to fire crackers when bamboo is the chief value.—T. D. 24083, G. A. 5237.

(k) Artificial silk braid held dutiable as silk braid by similitude.—T. D. 24323, G. A. 5310.

(l) In order that the similitude clause may apply, it is only necessary that a substantial similarity shall exist in any one of the particulars mentioned in the statute and not in two or more.—Hahn v. United States (121 Fed. Rep., 152), reversing T. D. 23432, G. A. 5053, followed; T. D. 24433, G. A. 5339.

(m) So-called bok ale as beer.—T. D. 25172, G. A. 5633.

(a) So-called beacon ale is not similar to beer.—T. D. 25748, G. A. 5840.

(b) The similitude clause can not be applied so as to bring under such a provision as "manufactures of horn" umbrella handles made of a substance altogether different from horn in material, quality, and texture, simply because there are some umbrella handles made of horn.—T. D. 26733, G. A. 6159.

(c) Where an importer intends to make the contention that his merchandise is dutiable by virtue of the similitude clause, it is necessary that he should state the fact in his protest. A protest claiming an article to be dutiable under the proper paragraph of the tariff act, but which fails to refer to the similitude clause, is insufficient to raise the question whether the article should have been classified under the paragraph cited by virtue of the similitude clause.—United States v. Dearberg (143 Fed. Rep., 472; T. D. 27008), reversing 135 id., 245; T. D. 25782, followed; T. D. 27252, G. A. 6327.

(d) This provision does not apply in a case where it is impracticable to determine the rate applicable to the chief component, as, for instance, in the case of thick soy in which sugar is the most valuable component, but has been so changed in condition by its admixture with other articles as to make impossible the ascertainment of its color and polariscopic test.—T. D. 27455, G. A. 6392.

(e) Feather boas held to be dutiable at the same rate as feathers "dressed, colored, or otherwise advanced in any manner," under paragraph 425, tariff act of 1897.—T. D. 27673, G. A. 6467; affirmed in Legg v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 858; T. D. 28260).

(f) Thick soy held not to be similar to sauce in the statutory particulars.—T. D. 27944, G. A. 6550.

(g) Where the classification of an article depends upon the component material of chief value therein, the value of the different materials should be taken at the time they are assembled ready to be put together, and the cost of the labor applied to any of the materials in the process of putting them together should be disregarded.—T. D. 28045, G. A. 6568.

(h) The cost of the labor incident to putting materials together to make a completed article is not part of the value of such materials.—T. D. 28048, G. A. 6571.

(i) Ramie sliver or rovings held to be dutiable by similitude to cotton sliver or rovings.—T. D. 28176, G. A. 6595.

(j) A finding under this section that a nonenumerated article is similar, either in material, quality, texture, or use, to an article enumerated in the tariff does not place such nonenumerated article in the category of the enumerated article which it resembles for all purposes in the administration of the law, but only for the purpose of making it subject to the same rate of duty.—T. D. 25332, G. A. 5690; affirmed in U. S. v. Gonsalves et al. T. D. 26737.

(k) A mixture of castor and olive oils and oleic acid (castor oil chief value) is held dutiable at the same rate as its chief component.—T. D. 25410, G. A. 5718; affirmed without opinion in Isaacs v. United States (suit 3627, T. D. 27773).

(l) Alizarine assistant manufactured from castor oil, sulphuric acid, and soda, and used as a mordant by calico printers, the principal ingredient being castor oil, is dutiable at 80 cents per gallon under this section, that being the duty on castor oil, and is not dutiable at 25 per cent as a chemical compound nor at 20 per cent as a nonenumerated article.—Lloyd v. McWilliams (31 Fed. Rep., 261).

(a) Old india-rubber shoes, invoiced as "rubber scrap" and entered as "scrap rubber," are exempt from duty under the similitude clause as being substantially crude rubber, they having lost their commercial value as articles composed of india rubber, or india-rubber fabrics, or india-rubber shoes, and they are not dutiable as articles composed of india rubber.—Cadwalader v. Jessup & Moore (149 U. S., 350).

(b) Goods imported in 1881 and being classified as bearing a similitude to manufactures composed wholly or in part of the hair of the alpaca, goat, or other like animals, and duty paid at 50 cents per pound and 35 per cent, the importer protested that the goods were composed of hair and cotton only, and as such should pay a duty of 35 per cent as a nonenumerated article, being the highest rate of duty which any of the component materials pay. In an action to recover, held, that this protest was defective in that it failed to point out or suggest in any way the provision which actually controlled, and in effect only raised the question which of two clauses, under one or the other of which it was assumed the importation came, should govern as being most applicable.—Herrman v. Robertson (152 U S., 521).

(c) This section does not require that the resemblance should be in all of the four particulars mentioned; but the similitude must be a substantial one, importing not merely adaptability to sale as a substitute, but referring rather to the employment of the article or its effect in producing results.—Weilbacher v. Merritt (37 Fed. Rep., 85).

(d) The similitude must be a substantial similitude, not merely an adaptability to sale as a substitute for the latter article, but representing either its employment or its effects in producing a result.—Sykes v. Magone (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 494).

(e) Such also must be the resemblance that a nonenumerated manufactured article must equally bear to two or more enumerated articles on which different rates of duty are chargeable in order to subject the former article to the same rate of duty as is chargeable on one of the latter articles, which it resembles, paying the highest rate.—Id.

(f) This provision applies to manufactured articles composed partly of metal and partly of paper, the latter being the material of chief value.—Hohenstein v. Hedden (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 94).

(g) A nonenumerated article, if found to bear a substantial similitude to an enumerated article, either in material, quality, texture, or use to which it is applied, is made by this section liable to the duty imposed upon the enumerated article.—Arthur v. Fox (108 U. S., 125).

(h) A nonenumerated article composed of cow hair and cotton, an imitation of sealskin and used for manufacturing hats and caps, held dutiable by similitude as articles of goats' hair and cotton.—Id.

(i) To place an article among those designated as enumerated so as to take it out of the operation of the similitude clause, it is not necessary that it should be specifically mentioned.—Arthur v. Butterfield (125 U. S., 70, 76).

(j) When an importer intends to rely upon the similitude clause for the purpose of identifying his merchandise with some enumerated article and means to place his objection upon the ground that the collector has not given due effect to that provision, he should state the fact in his protest, and if he fails to do so his objection is not stated distinctly and specifically. A protest claiming that the articles were dutiable under the provisions imposing a duty on precious stones is insufficient to raise the question whether such articles should have been classified as precious stones by force of the similitude clause.—Hahn v. Erhardt (C. C. A.), (78 Fed. Rep., 620).

(a) This is a similitude in all four of the particulars mentioned.—Lazard v. Magone (C. C.), (40 Fed. Rep., 662).

(b) The similarity required is only a substantial similarity in any one of the four particulars therein named and not as to all of them.—Weilbacher v. Merritt (37 Fed. Rep., 85), followed; T. D. 18872, G. A. 4069.

(c) In determining the question of substantial similarity of any given article to a class of articles specified, it is proper to take into consideration any or all of the articles embraced in the specified class.—Erhardt v. Steinhardt (153 U. S., 177), followed; T. D. 18872, G. A. 4069.

(d) To place an article among those designated as enumerated so that it does not come within the operation of the similitude clause it is not necessary that it should be specifically mentioned.—In re Wise (C. C.), (93 Fed. Rep., 443).

(e) It is not necessary for the collector to expressly invoke the similitnde clause, it being sufficient if his classification is justified under the rules laid down by the courts.—T. D. 20210, G. A. 4294.

(f) To entitle an importer to the benefit of the similitude clause on appeal from the collector, that clause must be claimed in the protest.—T. D. 22161, G. A. 4699.

(g) To constitute similarity in use, the uses of the two need not be identical or interchangeable.—United States v. Dana (C. C. A.), (99 Fed. Rep., 433).

(h) A nonenumerated article is to be classified for duty under the similitude clause, where the required similitude exists, rather than under the general residuary clause.—Hahn v. United States (C. C. A.), (100 Fed. Rep., 635).

(i) The act of 1883 changed R. S. 2499 so as to read, "on all articles manufactured from two or more materials the duty shall be assessed at the highest rates at which the component material of chief value may be chargeable," instead of reading that "on all articles manufactured from two or more materials the duty shall be assessed at the highest rates at which any of its component parts may be chargeable," and that new provision was applicable to this case, although the act of 1883, section 6, also provided that "if two or more rates of duty should be applicable to any imported article it shall be classified for duty under the highest of such rates.—Liebenroth v. Robertson (144 U. S., 35).

(j) This last provision was not properly applicable under R. S. 2499 to an article "manufactured from two or more materials," and it has sufficient scope if applied to articles not manufactured from two or more materials, but still prima facie subject to "two or more rates of duty."—Id.

(k) Photograph albums made of paper with leather metal clasps held to be manufactures of paper and not of leather.—Id.

(l) Similitude is a fact, and when found by the Board of General Appraisers, upon competent evidence, on a proper issue, the finding should not be disturbed. But whether there was any occasion in the particular instance for resorting to the similitude section is a question of law for the court to determine.—United States v. Hahn (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 755).

(m) Whether an article not specifically enumerated bears a similitude in material, quality, texture, or use to one which is enumerated is a question which the jury must determine.—Gamble v. Mason (7 Am. Law Reg., 178; 42 Hunt Mer. Mag., 589; 9 Fed. Cas., 1140).

(a) The question of similitude is one of fact for the jury.—Herrman v. Arthur (127 U. S., 363, 370).

(b) Goods made of calf hair and cotton were imported in November, 1876. The collector assessed duty at 50 cents a pound and 35 per cent, as upon goods made of wool, hair, and cotton. The goods contained no wool. The importer protested that the goods were a manufacture of cow and calf hair and cotton, and liable under the similitude clause to a duty of 35 per cent as partly manufactured of cotton, or else to a duty of 30 per cent as haircloth, etc. In an action to recover the excess duty paid, the defendant sought to support the exaction of the duties under the similitude clause. Held, that this was a proper proceeding under the pleading.—Herman v. Arthur (127 U. S., 363).

(c) The court below having directed a verdict for the defendant, this court reversed the judgment on the ground that the question of similitude was one of fact which should have been submitted to the jury, as it appeared that the goods were of inferior value and material as compared with the goods to which it was claimed they bore a similitude.—Id.

(d) This section applies only in cases where an article was not specially provided for.—Lottimer v. Lawrence (1 Blatchf., 613; 15 Fed. Cas., 928).

(e) This section is still in force (1858) and is embodied in the act of 1857.—Gamble v. Mason (7 Am. Law Reg., 178; 42 Hunt Mer. Mag., 589; 9 Fed. Cas., 1140).

(f) This section is not repealed by the act of 1864.—Cohen v. Phelps (2 Sawy., 530; 19 Int. Rev. Rec., 67; 6 Fed. Cas., 17).

(g) This section being still in force, it affords a rule of construction in determining under which head of articles specifically enumerated in the act of 1864 articles not specifically mentioned by name in said act are to be classed.—Cohen v. Phelps (2 Sawy., 530; 19 Int. Rev. Rec., 67; 6 Fed. Cas., 17).

(h) The effect of this section is not to impose a duty on an article not provided for by the act of 1846 or a different duty from that act, but it simply gives a rule of construction to determine under which schedule of the act of 1846 a given article shall be ranged. This section is not repealed by the act of 1846.—Morlot v. Lawrence (1 Blatchf., 608; 17 Fed. Cas., 770).

(i) Under the provisions of this act it is not contemplated that nonenumerated articles should in every particular bear a similitude to an enumerated article.—Boker v. Redfield (40 Hunt Mer. Mag., 705; 3 Fed. Cas., 808).

(j) Evidence tending to show that a nonenumerated article resembles essential oil in the use to which it is put, as a marketable commodity, more than anything else, falls short of the requisitions of this section.—Murphy v. Arnson (96 U. S., 131).

(k) When we speak of manufactures of wood, of leather, or of iron, we refer to articles that have those substances especially for their component parts and not to articles in which they have lost their form entirely, and have become chemical ingredients of new forms.—Meyer v. Arthur (91 U. S., 570); cited in Murphy v. Arnson (96 U. S., 131, 134).

(l) Nitrobenzole, being a manufacture from benzole and nitric acid and a nonenumerated article, is dutiable under this section.—Murphy v. Arnson (96 U. S., 131).

(m) This section applies only to nonenumerated articles.—Arthur v. Sussfield (96 U. S., 128).

(n) This section was not designed to levy duties but to check fraudulent evasions or prevent doubts in the execution of the tariff laws, and it is not repealed by the tariff act of 1846.—Stuart v. Maxwell (16 How., 150).

(a) Goods made of mixed material are not dutiable under the mixed material clause if they come properly within any other description found in the tariff acts.—Solomon v. Arthur (102 U. S., 208); Fisk v. Arthur (103 U. S., 431).

Sec. 8. That all articles of foreign manufacture, such as are usually or ordinarily marked, stamped, branded, or labeled, and all packages containing such or other imported articles, shall, respectively, be plainly marked, stamped, branded, or labeled in legible English words in a conspicuous place, so as to indicate the country of their origin and the quantity of their contents; and until so marked, stamped, branded, or 1897 labeled they shall not be delivered to the importer. Should any article of imported merchandise be marked, stamped, branded, or labeled so as to indicate a quantity, number, or measurement in excess of the quantity, number, or measurement actually contained in such article, no delivery of the same shall be made to the importer until the mark, stamp, brand, or label, as the case may be, shall be changed so as to conform to the facts of the case.

SEC. 5. That all articles of foreign manufacture, such as are usually or ordinarily marked, stamped, branded, or labeled, and all packages containing such or other imported articles, shall, respectively, be plainly marked, stamped, branded, or labeled in legible English words, so as to indicate the country of their origin and the quantity of their contents;
1894 and until so marked, stamped, branded, or labeled they shall not be delivered to the importer should any article of imported merchandise be marked, stamped, branded, or labeled so as to indicate a quantity, number, or measurement in excess of the quantity, number, or measurement actually contained in such article, no delivery of the same shall be made to the importer until the mark, stamp, brand, or label, as the case may be, shall be changed so as to conform to the facts of the case.

SEC. 6. That on and after the first day of March, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, all articles of foreign manufacture, such as are usually or ordinarily marked, stamped, branded, or labeled, and all packages 1890 containing such or other imported articles, shall, respectively, be plainly marked, stamped, branded, or labeled in legible English words, so as to indicate the country of their origin; and unless so marked, stamped, branded, or labeled they shall not be admitted to entry.

DECISIONS UNDER VARIOUS TARIFF ACTS.

(b) The marking, stamping, etc., of imported merchandise is a duty cast upon the importer, and a regulation (T. D. 20178) exacting compensation for such marking, etc., or supervision of the same by customs officials equal to the salary of the officials for the time so employed, no such charge to be less than one-fourth of a day, is not excessive and is valid.—T. D. 22496, G. A. 4767.

1897 [Sections 9 and 10 relate to internal-revenue matters exclusively.]

Sec. 11. That no article of imported merchandise which shall copy or simulate the name or trade-mark of any domestic manufacture or manufacturer, or which shall bear a name or mark, which is calculated to induce the public to believe that the article is manufactured in the United States, shall be admitted to entry at any custom-house of the United States. And in order to aid the officers of the customs in en-1897 forcing this prohibition, any domestic manufacturer who has adopted trade-marks may require his name and residence and a description of his trade-marks to be recorded in books which shall be kept for that purpose in the Department of the Treasury, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, and may furnish to the Department facsimiles of such trade-marks; and thereupon the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause one or more copies of the same to be transmitted to each collector or other proper officer of the customs.

Sec. 6. That no article of imported merchandise which shall copy or simulate the name or trade-mark of any domestic manufacture or manufacturer shall be admitted to entry at any custom-house of the United States. And in order to aid the officers of the customs in enforcing this prohibition any domestic manufacturer who has adopted trade-marks may require his name and residence and a description of his trade-marks
1894 to be recorded in books which shall be kept for that purpose in the Department of the Treasury under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, and may furnish to the Department facsimiles of such trade-marks; and thereupon the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause one or more copies of the same to be transmitted to each collector or other proper officer of the customs.

Sec. 7. That on and after March first, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, no article of imported merchandise which shall copy or simulate the name or trade-mark of any domestic manufacture or manufacturer, shall be admitted to entry at any custom-house of the United States. And in order to aid the officers of the customs in enforcing this prohibition any domestic manufacturer who has adopted trade-marks may require 1890 his name and residence and a description of his trade-marks to be recorded in books which shall be kept for that purpose in the Department of the Treasury under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, and may furnish to the Department facsimiles of such trade-marks; and therenpon the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause one or more copies of the same to be transmitted to each collector or other proper officer of the customs.

Sec. 12. That all materials of foreign production which may be necessary for the construction of vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership, or for the purpose of being employed in the foreign trade, including the trade between the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States, and all such materials necessary for the building of their machinery, and all articles necessary for their outfit and equipment, may be imported in bond under such regulations as the Secretary of the 1897 Treasury may prescribe; and upon proof that such materials have been used for such purposes no duties shall be paid thereon. But vessels receiving the benefit of this section shall not be allowed to engage in the coastwise trade of the United States more than two months in any one year except upon the payment to the United States of the duties of which a rebate is herein allowed: Provided, That vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership shall not be allowed to engage in the coastwise trade of the United States.

SEC. 7. That all materials of foreign production which may be necessary for the construction of vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership or for the purpose of being employed in the foreign trade including the trade between the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States, and all such materials necessary for the building of their machinery, and all articles necessary for their outfit and equipment, after the passage of this Act, may be imported in bond under such regu-
1894 lations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and upon proof that such materials have been used for such purposes no duties shall be paid thereon. But vessels receiving the benefit of this section shall not be allowed to engage in the coastwise trade of the United States more than two months in any one year except upon the payment to the United States of the duties of which a rebate is herein allowed: Provided, That vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership shall not be allowed to engage in the coastwise trade of the United States.

SEC. 8. That all lumber, timber, hemp, manila, wire rope, and iron and steel rods, bars, spikes, nails, plates, tees, angles, beams, and bolts and copper and composition metal which may be necessary for the construction and equipment of vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership or for the purpose of being employed in the foreign trade, including the trade between the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States, after the passage of this act, may be imported in 1890 bond, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and upon proof that such materials have been used for such purpose no duties shall be paid thereon. But vessels receiving the benefit of this section shall not be allowed to engage in the coastwise trade of the United States more than two months in any one year, except upon the payment to the United States of the duties on which a rebate is herein allowed: Provided, That vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership shall not be allowed to engage in the coastwise trade of the United States.

SEC. 2510. All lumber, timber, hemp, manila, wire rope, and iron and steel rods, bars, spikes, nails, and bolts, and copper and composition metal which may be necessary for the construction and equipment of vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership or for the purpose of being employed in the foreign trade, including the trade between the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States, after the passage of this act, may be imported in bond, under such regulations 1883 as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and upon proof that such materials have been used for such purpose, no duties shall be paid thereon. But vessels receiving the benefit of this section shall not be allowed to engage in the coastwise trade of the United States more than two months in any one year, except upon the payment to the United States of the duties on which a rebate is herein allowed: Provided, That vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership shall not be allowed to engage in the coastwise trade of the United States.

DECISIONS UNDER VARIOUS TARIFF ACTS.

(a) Section 12, act of 1897, must be confined to vessels of the same owner detained in a port of the United States.—T. D. 22450, G. A. 4754.

(b) It is doubtful whether a refrigerating plant can be properly deemed part of the equipment of a vessel when it is not shown to be the property of the owners of the vessel.—Id.

(c) There seems to be no law admitting to free entry articles of ship's equipment imported for a foreign-built vessel sailing under a foreign register.—Id.

(d) Materials admitted free under section 7, act of 1894, and this section for use in the construction or equipment of a vessel employed in the foreign trade do not become dutiable when such vessel makes a coastwise voyage of more than two months' duration after the materials exempted had become worn out or had ceased to be serviceable or useful for the purposes for which they were used.—T. D. 22986, G. A. 4914.

(e) Where it is shown that the life of imported metal sheathing on a vessel and its effectiveness does not continue longer than from two and one-half to three years, duties will not accrue on sheathing which has been in use for more than four years at the time the vessel undertakes a coastwise voyage, notwithstanding the owner has allowed it to remain on the vessel.—In re Spreckles & Bros. Co. (104 Fed. Rep., 879), reversing T. D. 17646, G. A. 3694, followed; T. D. 22986, G. A. 4914.

(f) So-called "light-houses" to be used in the construction and equipment of the ship Shenandoah, being built by Sewell & Co., held not to be free under section 8, act of 1890.—T. D. 10662, G. A. 246.

(g) The Treasury Department in its construction of section 8, act of 1890, and R. S. 2513, of which it is virtually a reenactment, having customarily allowed the cancellation of the duty charged against a vessel whenever it was made to appear that the article against which it was charged had become unserviceable, a shipowner, under such rulings, should be allowed a cancellation of the duty on metal sheathing used on the wooden hull of his vessel, on his application therefor, in contemplation of coastwise voyage, when such sheathing has been in constant use for more than four years, and when it is shown that the life of such metal sheathing and its effectiveness does not continue longer than from two and one-half to three years, notwithstanding he has allowed it to remain on the vessel and accepted the consequent lower rating. Reversing the board.—In re J. D. Spreckels & Bros. Co. (C. C.), (104 Fed. Rep., 879).

(a) Section 10, act of June 6, 1872, does not apply to materials used in the construction of a merchant vessel built in the United States for the Japanese Government and employed by it for service between Japanese ports and not documented as an American vessel. Such materials are not free.—Russell v. United States (15 Blatchf., 26; 21 Fed. Cas., 65).

(b) The term "foreign trade," as used in section 10, act of June 6, 1872 (17 Stat., 230), includes trade between the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States.—United States v. Patten (Holmes, 421; 27 Fed. Cas., 460).

(c) The term "coastwise trade," as used in this section, does not include trade between the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States.—Id.

(d) An American vessel previously engaged exclusively in the foreign trade was repaired at Boston and thence sailed in ballast, via New York, for San Francisco for a cargo for Europe, and thereafter was engaged exclusively in foreign trade. In an action by the United States to recover duties on articles of foreign production withdrawn from the bonded warehouse in Boston under section 10, act of June 6, 1872, and used in repairing, held that the vessel was engaged exclusively in foreign trade and had not, by the voyage to San Francisco, engaged in the coastwise trade within the meaning of those terms as used in said section, and that the articles withdrawn from bond and used in repairing were exempt from duty.—Id.

Sec. 13. That all articles of foreign production needed for the repair of American vessels engaged in foreign trade, including the trade between 1897 Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States, may be withdrawn from bonded warehouses free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

SEC. 8. That all articles of foreign production needed for the repair of American vessels engaged in foreign trade, including the trade between 1894 the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States, may be withdrawn from bonded warehouses free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

SEC. 9. That all articles of foreign production needed for the repair of American vessels engaged in foreign trade, including the trade be-1890 tween the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States, may be withdrawn from bonded warehouses free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

SEC. 2511. All articles of foreign production needed for the repair of 1883 Americal vessels engaged exclusively in foreign trade may be withdrawn from bonded warehouses free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Sec. 14. That the sixteenth section of an Act entitled "An Act to remove certain burdens on the American merchant marine and encourage the American foreign carrying trade, and for other purposes," approved June twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and eighty-four, be amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 16. That all articles of foreign or domestic production needed 1897 and actually withdrawn from bonded warehouses and bonded manufacturing warehouses for supplies (not including equipment) of vessels of the United States engaged in foreign trade, or in trade between the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States, may be so withdrawn from said bonded warehouses, free of duty or of internal-revenue tax, as the case may be, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; but no such articles shall be landed at any port of the United States."

Sec. 15. That all articles manufactured in whole or in part of imported materials, or of materials subject to internal-revenue tax, and intended for exportation without being charged with duty, and without having an internal-revenue stamp affixed thereto, shall, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, in order to be so manufactured and exported, be made and manufactured in bonded warehouses similar to those known and designated in Treasury Regulations as bonded warehouses, class six: Provided, That the manufacturer of such articles shall first give satisfactory bonds for the faithful observance of all the provisions of law and of such regulations as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided further, That the manufacture of distilled spirits from grain, starch, molasses or sugar, including all dilutions or mixtures of them or either of them, shall not be permitted in such manufacturing warehouses.

Whenever goods manufactured in any bonded warehouse established under the provisions of the preceding paragraph shall be exported directly therefrom or shall be duly laden for transportation and immediate exportation under the supervision of the proper officer who shall be duly designated for that purpose, such goods shall be exempt from duty and from the requirements relating to revenue stamps.

Any materials used in the manufacture of such goods, and any packages, coverings, vessels, brands, and labels used in putting up the same may, under the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury, be conveyed without the payment of revenue tax or duty into any bonded manufacturing warehouse, and imported goods may, under the aforesaid regulations, be transferred without the exaction of duty from any bonded warehouses into any bonded manufacturing warehouse; but this privilege shall not be held to apply to implements, machinery, or apparatus to be used in the construction or repair of any bonded manufacturing warehouse or for the prosecution of the business carried on therein.

No articles or materials received into such bonded manufacturing warehouse shall be withdrawn or removed therefrom except for direct shipment and exportation or for transportation and immediate exportation in bond under the supervision of the officer duly designated therefor by the collector of the port, who shall certify to such shipment and exportation, or ladening for transportation, as the case may be, describing the articles by their mark or otherwise, the quantity, the date of exportation, and the name of the vessel. All labor performed and services rendered under these provisions shall be under the supervision of a duly designated officer of the customs and at the expense of the manufacturer.

A careful account shall be kept by the collector of all merchandise delivered by him to any bonded manufacturing warehouse, and a sworn monthly return, verified by the customs officers in charge, shall be made by the manufacturers containing a detailed statement of all imported merchandise used by him in the manufacture of exported articles.

Before commencing business the proprietor of any manufacturing warehouse shall file with the Secretary of the Treasury a list of all the articles intended to be manufactured in such warehouse, and state the formula of manufacture and the names and quantities of the ingredients to be used therein.

Articles manufactured under these provisions may be withdrawn under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe for transportation and delivery into any bonded warehouse at an exterior port for the sole purpose of immediate export therefrom.

The provisions of Revised Statutes thirty-four hundred and thirty-three shall, so far as may be practicable, apply to any bonded manufacturing warehouse established under this Act and to the merchandise conveyed therein.

SEC. 9. That all articles manufactured in whole or in part of imported materials, or of materials subject to internal-revenue tax, and intended for exportation without being charged with duty and without having an internal-revenue stamp affixed thereto shall, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, in order to be so manufactured and exported be made and manufactured in bonded warehouses similar to those known and designated in Treasury Regulations as bonded warehouses, class six: Provided, That the manufacturer of such articles shall first give satisfactory bonds for the faithful observance of all the provisions of law and of such regulations as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided further, That the manufacture of distilled spirits from grain, starch, molasses or sugar, including all dilutions or mixtures of them or either of them, shall not be permitted in such manufacturing warehouses.

Whenever goods manufactured in any bonded warehouse established under the provisions of the preceding paragraph shall be exported directly therefrom or shall be duly laden for transportation and immediate exportation under the supervision of the proper officer who shall be duly designated for that purpose, such goods shall be exempt from duty and from the requirements relating to revenue stamps.

Any materials used in the manufacture of such goods, and any packages, coverings, vessels, brands, and labels used in putting up the same may, under the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury, be conveyed without the payment of revenue tax or duty into any bonded manufacturing warehouse, and imported goods may, under the aforesaid regulations, be transferred without the exaction of duty from any bonded warehouse into any bonded manufacturing warehouse; but this privilege shall not be held to apply to implements, machinery, or apparatus to be used in the construction or repair of any bonded manufacturing warehouse or for the prosecution of the business carried on 1894 therein.

No articles or materials received into such bonded manufacturing warehouse shall be withdrawn or removed therefrom except for direct shipment and exportation or for transportation and immediate exportation in bond under the supervision of the officer duly designated therefor by the collector of the port, who shall certify to such shipment and exportation, or ladening for transportation, as the case may be, describing the articles by their mark or otherwise, the quantity, the date of exportation, and the name of the vessel. All labor performed and services rendered under these provisions shall be under the supervision of a duly designated officer of the customs and at the expense of the manufacturer.

A careful account shall be kept by the collector of all merchandise delivered by him to any bonded manufacturing warehouse, and a sworn monthly return, verified by the customs officers in charge, shall be made by the manufacturers containing a detailed statement of all imported merchandise used by him in the manufacture of exported articles.

Before commencing business the proprietor of any manufacturing warehouse shall file with the Secretary of the Treasury a list of all the articles intended to be manufactured in such warehouse and state the formula of manufacture and the names and quantities of the ingredients to be used therein.

Articles manufactured under these provisions may be withdrawn under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe for transportation and delivery into any bonded warehouse at an exterior port for the sole purpose of immediate export therefrom.

The provisions of Revised Statutes thirty-four hundred and thirty-three shall, so far as may be practicable, apply to any bonded manufacturing warehouse established under this Act and to the merchandise conveyed therein.

SEC. 10. That all medicines, preparations, compositions, perfumery, cosmetics, cordials, and other liquors manufactured wholly or in part of domestic spirits, intended for exportation, as provided by law, in order to be manufactured and sold or removed, without being charged with duty and without having a stamp affixed thereto, shall, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, be made and manufactured in warehouses similarly constructed to those known and designated in Treasury regulations as bonded-warehouses, class two: Provided, That such manufacturer shall first give satisfactory bonds to the collector of internal revenue for the faithful observance of all the provisions of law and the regulations as aforesaid, in amount not less than half of that required by the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury from persons allowed bonded-warehouses. Such goods, when manufactured in such warehouses, may be removed for exportation under the direction of the proper officer having charge thereof, who shall be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury without being charged with duty, and without having a stamp affixed thereto. Any manufacturer of the articles aforesaid, or any of them, having such bonded warehouse as aforesaid, shall be at liberty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, to convey therein any materials to be used in such manufacture which are allowed by the provisions of law to be exported free from tax or duty, as well as the necessary materials, implements, packages, vessels, brands, and labels for the preparation, putting up, and export of the said manufactured articles; and every 1890 article so used shall be exempt from the payment of stamp and excise duty by such manufacturer. Articles and materials so to be used may be transferred from any bonded-warehouse in which the same may be, under such regulation as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, into any bonded-warehouse in which such manufacture may be conducted, and may be used in such manufacture, and when so used shall be exempt from stamp and excise duty; and the receipt of the officer in charge as aforesald shall be received as a voucher for the manufacture of such articles. Any materials imported into the United States may, under such rules as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, and under the direction of the proper officer, be removed in original packages from on ship-board, or from the bonded-warehouse in which the same may be, into the bonded-warehouse in which such manufacture may be carried on, for the purpose of being used in such manufacture, without payment of duties thereon, and may there be used in such manufacture. No article so removed, nor any article manufactured in said bonded-warehouse, shall be taken therefrom except for exportation, under the direction of the proper officer having charge thereof as aforesaid, whose certificate, describing the articles by their mark or otherwise, the quantity, the date of importation, and name of vessel, with such additional particulars as may from time to time be required, shall be received by the collector of customs in cancellation of the bond or return of the amount of foreign import duties. All labor performed and services rendered under these regulations shall be under the supervision of an officer of the customs, and at the expense of the manufacturer.

Sec. 16. That all persons are prohibited from importing into the United States from any foreign country any obscene book, pamphlet, paper, writing, advertisement, circular, print, picture, drawing, or other representation, figure, or image on or of paper or other material, or any cast, instrument, or other article of an immoral nature, or any drug or medicine, or any article whatever for the prevention of conception or for causing unlawful abortion, or any lottery ticket or any advertisement of any lottery. No such articles, whether imported separately or contained in packages with other goods entitled to entry, shall be admitted to entry; and all such articles shall be proceeded against, seized, and forfeited by due course of law. All such prohibited articles and the package in which they are contained in the course of importation shall be detained by the officer of customs, and proceedings taken against the same as hereinafter prescribed, unless it appears to the satisfaction of the collector of customs that the obscene articles contained in the package were inclosed therein without the knowledge or consent of the importer, owner, agent, or consignee: Provided, That the drugs hereinbefore mentioned, when imported in bulk and not put up for any of the purposes hereinbefore specified, are excepted from the operation of this section.

1897 Sec. 17. That whoever, being an officer, agent, or employee of the Government of the United States, shall knowingly aid or abet any person engaged in any violation of any of the provisions of law prohibiting importing, advertising, dealing in, exhibiting, or sending or receiving by mail obscene or indecent publications or representations, or means for preventing conception or procuring abortion, or other articles of indecent or immoral use or tendency, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall for every offense be punishable by a fine of not more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment at hard labor for not more than ten years, or both.

Sec. 18. That any judge of any district or circuit court of the United States, within the proper district, before whom complaint in writing of any violation of the two preceding sections is made, to the satisfaction of such judge, and founded on knowledge or belief, and if upon belief, setting forth the grounds of such belief, and supported by oath or affirmation of the complainant, may issue, conformably to the Constitution, a warrant directed to the marshal or any deputy marshal in the proper district, directing him to search for, seize, and take possession of any such article or thing mentioned in the two preceding sections, and to make due and immediate return thereof to the end that the same may be condemned and destroyed by proceedings, which shall be conducted in the same manner as other proceedings in the case of municipal seizure, and with the same right of appeal or writ of error.

SEC. 10. That all persons are prohibited from importing into the United States from any foreign country any obscene book, pamphlet, paper, writing, advertisement, circualr, print, picture, drawing, or other representation, figure, or image on or of paper or other material, or any cast, instrument, or other article of an immoral nature, or any drug or medicine, or any article whatever for the prevention of conception or for causing unlawful abortion, or any lottery ticket or any advertisement of any lottery. No such articles, whether imported separately or contained in packages with other goods entitled to entry, shall be admitted to entry; and all such articles shall be proceeded against, seized, and forfeited by due course of law. All such prohibited articles and the package in which they are contained in the course of importation shall be detained by the officer of customs, and proceedings taken against the same as hereinafter prescribed, unless it appears to the satisfaction of the collector of customs that the obscene articles contained in the package were inclosed therein without the knowledge or consent of the importer, owner, agent, or consignee: Provided, That the drugs hereinbefore mentioned, when imported in bulk and not put up for any of the purposes hereinbefore specified, are excepted from the operation of this section.

1894 SEC. 11. That whoever, being an officer, agent, or employee of the Government of the United States, shall knowingly aid or abet any person engaged in any violation of any of the provisions of law prohibiting importing, advertising, dealing in, exhibiting, or sending or receiving by mail obscene or indecent publications or representations, or means for preventing conception or procuring abortion, or other articles of indecent or immoral use or tendency, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall for every offense be punishable by a fine of not more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment at hard labor for not more than ten years, or both.

SEC. 12. That any judge of any district or circuit court of the United States, within the proper district, before whom complaint in writing of any violation of the two preceding sections is made, to the satisfaction of such judge, and founded on knowledge or belief, and if upon belief, setting forth the grounds of such belief, and supported by oath or affirmation of the complainant, may issue, conformably to the Constitution, a warrant directed to the marshal or any deputy marshal in the proper district, directing him to search for, seize, and take possession of any such article or thing mentioned in the two preceding sections, and to make due and immediate return thereof to the end that the same may be condemned and destroyed by proceedings, which shall be conducted in the same manner as other proceedings in the case of municipal seizure, and with the same right of appeal or writ of error.

SEC. 11. All persons are prohibited from importing into the United States from any foreign country any obscene book, pamphlet, paper, writing, advertisement, circular, print, picture, drawing, or other representation, figure, or image on or of paper or other material, or any cast, instrument, or other article of an immoral nature, or any drug or medicine, or any article whatever, for the prevention of conception, or for causing unlawful abortion. No such articles, whether imported separately or contained in packages with other goods entitled to entry, shall be admitted to entry; and all such articles shall be proceeded against, seized, and forfeited by due course of law. All such prohibited articles and the package in which they are contained in the course of importation shall be detained by the officer of customs, and proceedings taken against the same as prescribed in the following section, unless it appears to the satisfaction of the collector of customs that the obscene articles contained in the package were inclosed therein without the knowledge or consent of the importer, owner, agent, or consignee: Provided, That the drugs hereinebfore mentioned, when imported in bulk and not put up for any of the purposes hereinbefore specified, are excepted from the operation of this section.

SEC. 12. That whoever, being an officer, agent, or employee of the 1890 Government of the United States, shall knowingly aid or abet any person engaged in any violation of any of the provisions of law prohibiting importing, advertising, dealing in, exhibiting, or sending or receiving by mail obscene or indecent publications or representations, or means for preventing conception or procuring abortion, or other articles of indecent or immoral use or tendency, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall for every offense be punishable by a fine of not more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment at hard labor for not more than ten years, or both.

SEC. 13. That any judge of any district or circuit court of the United States, within the proper district, before whom complaint in writing of any violation of the two preceding sections is made, to the satisfaction of such judge, and founded on knowledge or belief, and if upon belief, setting forth the grounds of such belief, and supported by oath or affirmation of the complainant may issue, conformably to the Constitution, a warrant directed to the marshal or any deputy marshal, in the proper district, directing him to search for, seize, and take possession of any such article or thing mentioned in the two preceding sections, and to make due and immediate return thereof to the end that the same may be condemned and destroyed by proceedings, which shall be conducted in the same manner as other proceedings in the case of municipal seizure, and with the same right of appeal or writ of error.

SEC. 2491. All persons are prohibited from importing into the United States, from any foreign country any obscene book, pamphlet, paper, writing, advertisement, circular, print, picture, drawing, or other representation, figure or image on or of paper or other material, or any cast, instrument, or other article of an immoral nature, or any drug or medicine, or any article whatever, for the prevention of conception, or for causing unlawful abortion. No invoice or package whatever, or any part of one, in which any such articles are contained shall be admitted to entry; and all invoices and packages whereof any such articles shall compose a part are liable to be proceeded against, seized, and forfeited by due course of law. All such prohibited articles in the course of importation shall be detained by the officer of customs, and proceedings taken against the same as prescribed in the following section: Provided, That the drugs hereinbefore mentioned, when imported in bulk and not put up for any of the purposes hereinbefore specified, are excepted from the operation of this section.

SEC. 2492. Whoever, being an officer, agent, or employee of the Government of the United States, shall knowingly aid or abet any person engaged in any violation of any of the provisions of law prohibiting import-1883 ing, advertising, dealing in, exhibiting, or sending or receiving by mail obscene or indecent publications or representations, or means for preventing conception or procuring abortion, or other articles of indecent or immoral use or tendency, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall for every offense be punishable by a fine of not more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment at hard labor for not more than ten years, or both.

SEC. 2493. Any judge of any district or circuit court of the United States, within the proper district, before whom complaint in writing of any violation of the preceding sections is made, to the satisfaction of such judge, and founded on knowledge or belief, and if upon belief, setting forth the grounds of such belief, and supported by oath or affirmation of the complainant, may issue, conformably to the Constitution, a warrant directed to the marshal, or any deputy marshal, in the proper district, directing him to search for, seize, and take possession of any such article or thing hereinbefore mentioned, and to make due and immediate return thereof to the end that the same may be condemned and destroyed by proceedings, which shall be conducted in the same manner as other proceedings in the case of municipal seizure, and with the same right of appeal or writ of error.

Sec. 19. That machinery for repairs may be imported into the United States without the payment of duty, under bond, to be given in double the appraised value thereof, to be withdrawn and exported after said machinery shall have been repaired; and the Secretary of the Treasury 1897 is authorized and directed to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to protect the revenue against fraud and secure the identity and character of all such importations when again withdrawn and exported, restricting and limiting the export and withdrawal to the same port of entry where imported, and also limiting all bonds to a period of time of not more than six months from the date of the importation.

SEC. 13. That machinery for repair may be imported into the United States without payment of duty, under bond, to be given in double the appraised value thereof, to be withdrawn and exported after said machinery shall have been repaired; and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to prescribe such rules and regulations as 1894 may be necessary to protect the revenue against fraud and secure the identity and character of all such importations when again withdrawn and exported, restricting and limiting the export and withdrawal to the same port of entry where imported, and also limiting all bonds to a period of time of not more than six months from the date of the importation.

SEC. 14. That machinery for repair may be imported into the United States without payment of duty, under bond, to be given in double the appraised value thereof, to be withdrawn and exported after said machinery shall have been repaired; and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to prescribe such rules and regulations as 1890 may be necessary to protect the revenue against fraud, and secure the identity and character of all such importations when again withdrawn and exported, restricting and limiting the export and withdrawal to the same port of entry where imported, and also limiting all bonds to a period of time of not more than six months from the date of the importation.

SEC. 2507. Machinery for repair may be imported into the United States without payment of duty, under bond, to be given in double the appraised value thereof, to be withdrawn and exported after said machinery shall have been repaired; and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to prescribe such rules and regulations as may 1883 be necessary to protect the revenue against fraud, and secure the identity and character of all such importations when again withdrawn and exported, restricting and limiting the export and withdrawal to the same port of entry where imported, and also limiting all bonds to a period of time of not more than six months from the date of the importation.

DECISIONS UNDER VARIOUS TARIFF ACTS.

(a) Machinery imported for repairs at Port of Island Pond, Vt., and exported from St. Albans. Not free under this section.—T. D. 16651, G. A. 3296.

(a) Strict compliance with the regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury by virtue of the authority given him by this section is a condition precedent to the enjoyment of the rights and privileges conferred by it.—T. D. 27844, G. A. 6517.

Sec. 20. That the produce of the forests of the State of Maine upon the Saint John River and its tributaries owned by American citizens, and sawed or hewed in the Province of New Brunswick by American 1897 citizens, the same being otherwise unmanufactured in whole or in part, which is now admitted into the ports of the United States free of duty, shall continue to be so admitted, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall from time to time prescribe.

1894 [No corresponding provision.]

SEC. 15. That the produce of the forests of the State of Maine upon the Saint John River and its tributaries, owned by American citizens, and sawed or hewed in the Province of New Brunswick by American 1890 citizens, the same being unmanufactured in whole or in part, which is now admitted into the ports of the United States free of duty, shall continue to be so admitted under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall, from time to time, prescribe.

SEC. 2505. The produce of the forests of the State of Maine upon the Saint John River and its tributaries, owned by American citizens, and sawed or hewed in the Province of New Brunswick by American citizens, 1883 the same being unmanufactured in whole or in part, which is now admitted into the ports of the United States free of duty, shall continue to be so admitted under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall, from time to time, prescribe.

DECISIONS UNDER VARIOUS TARIFF ACTS.

(b) Certain produce of the forests of the State of Maine upon the St. John River and its tributaries, owned by American citizens, which consists of herring-box shooks, being simply pieces of wood sawed longitudinally and transversely to produce sizes suitable for being made up into boxes, are "otherwise unmanufactured in whole or in part" than by sawing, within the meaning of this section, and are free, such articles having been admitted free under previous similar legislation.—T. D. 22590, G. A. 4800.

(c) This section revives R. S. 2508, a substantially similar provision, in full force and effect, and accords free entry to all articles which fell within the scope of its terms when it was in operation. Herring-box shooks of a character within the language of this section are free.—T. D. 22303, G. A. 4718.

(d) Clapboards planed or dressed on one side in New Brunswick are further manufactured than sawed or hewed, and are not "unmanufactured in whole or in part."—T. D. 15012, G. A. 2589.

Sec. 21. That the produce of the forests of the State of Maine upon the St. Croix River and its tributaries owned by American citizens, and sawed or hewed in the Province of New Brunswick by American citizens, 1897 the same being otherwise unmanufactured in whole or in part, shall be admitted into the ports of the United States free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall from time to time prescribe.

1894 [No corresponding provision.]

Sec. 16. That the produce of the forests of the State of Maine upon the St. Croix River and its tributaries owned by American citizens, and sawed in the Province of New Brunswick by American citizens, the same 1890 being unmanufactured in whole or in part, shall be admitted into the ports of the United States free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall, from time to time, prescribe.

Sec. 2506. The produce of the forests of the State of Maine upon the Saint Croix River and its tributaries, owned by American citizens, and sawed in the Province of New Brunswick by American citizens, the same 1883 being unmanufactured in whole or in part, and having paid the same taxes as other American lumber on that river, shall be admitted into the ports of the United States free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall from time to time prescribe.

Sec. 22. That a discriminating duty of ten per centum ad valorem, in addition to the duties imposed by law, shall be levied, collected, and paid on all goods, wares, or merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States, or which being the production or manufacture of any foreign country not contiguous to the United States, shall come 1897 into the United States from such contiguous country; but this discriminating duty shall not apply to goods, wares, or merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States, entitled at the time of such importation by treaty or convention to be entered in the ports of the United States on payment of the same duties as shall then be payable on goods, wares, and merchandise imported in vessels of the United States.

Sec. 14. That a discriminating duty of ten per centum ad valorem, in addition to the duties imposed by law, shall be levied, collected, and paid on all goods, wares, or merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States; but this discriminating duty shall not 1894 apply to goods, wares, and merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States, entitled, by treaty or any Act of Congress, to be entered in the ports of the United States on payment of the same duties as shall then be paid on goods, wares, and merchandise imported in vessels of the United States.

Sec. 17. That a discriminating duty of ten per centum ad valorem, in addition to the duties imposed by law, shall be levied, collected, and paid on all goods, wares, or merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States; but this discriminating duty shall not 1890 apply to goods, wares, and merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States, entitled, by treaty or any Act of Congress, to be entered in the ports of the United States on payment of the same duties as shall then be paid on goods, wares, and merchandise imported in vessels of the United States.

Sec. 2501. A discriminating duty of ten per centum ad valorem, in addition to the duties imposed by law, shall be levied, collected, and paid on all goods, wares, or merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States; but this discriminating duty shall not apply
1883 to goods, wares, and merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States, entitled, by treaty or any Act of Congress, to be entered in the ports of the United States on payment of the same duties as shall then be paid on goods, wares, and merchandise imported in vessels of the United States.

DECISIONS UNDER VARIOUS STATUTES.

(a) Merchandise imported in Mexican vessels has not been relieved from the discriminating duty.—T. D. 16571, G. A. 3267.

(b) Discriminating duty on free goods from Mexico held properly assessed.—T. D. 13507, G. A. 1809.

(c) This section omits the words "or any act of Congress," which had appeared in earlier enactments, but on the day the President approved this act he also approved an act amending R. S. 4228. Accordingly section 4228 is not repealed by this section except to the extent of necessary repugnance, but is in the nature of a proviso to it. This section is one of numerous provisions of similar character which have appeared in the legislation of the United States for more than a century. Although the paramount purpose of such legislation was to foster American commerce, yet an easy evasion of it was possible by first transporting goods into Canada and thence by rail into the United States. Accordingly held that the discriminating duty applies only to (1) goods produced in countries not contiguous to the United States, and directly imported into the United States in vessels not of the United States, and not exempt from such duty by the provisions of R. S. 4228, or by treaty; (2) goods produced in noncontiguous countries, and indirectly imported in foreign vessels (not exempted as aforesaid) by being first landed in Canada or Mexico, and then imported into the United States by rail for the purpose of evading such duty. A circular letter issued to collectors by the Secretary, admitting British vessels and cargoes into our ports on the same terms as to duties and imposts as American vessels (circular issued Oct. 15, 1849), having been acquiesced in for nearly fifty years, must be regarded as tantamount to an Executive proclamation under R. S. 4228.—T. D. 18915, G. A. 4072.

(a) Merchandise shipped from a foreign port into Canada, and remanufactured in Canada into a different commercial article, and imported in its last form, is not subject to the discriminating duty, irrespective of the nationality of the importing vessel.—T. D. 20131, G. A. 4285.

DISCRIMINATING DUTY—GOODS FROM BEYOND THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

[Under act of August 5, 1861 (12 Stat., 292), sec. 3.]

(b) The 10 per cent ad valorem duty imposed by this section is imposed only as an additional duty to duties imposed by this act and can not be imposed on goods not charged with a duty by this act.—Echeverria v. Barney (5 Blatchf., 193; 8 Fed. Cas., 283).

[Under act of July 14, 1862 (12 Stat., 543), sec. 14.]

(c) Under section 14 of this act rice, the growth of a country beyond the Cape of Good Hope, imported into England in an unclean state, and there cleaned, and thence imported into the United States, is liable to a duty of 10 per cent in addition to the duty imposed by section 8 on cleaned rice, when imported directly from the country of its growth.—Williams v. Barney (5 Blatchf., 219; 29 Fed. Cas., 1355).

(d) The cleaning of the rice in England does not change its identity as rice or cause it to cease to be the growth or production of a country beyond the Cape of Good Hope.—Id.

(e) "Silk in the gum not more advanced in manufacture than tram and thrown organzine," when so advanced in England from "silk, raw, or as reeled from the cocoon, not being doubled, twisted, or advanced in manufacture in any way," which has been produced in a country beyond the Cape of Good Hope and thence imported into England, or when so advanced in England from "silk, raw, or as reeled from the cocoon," etc., which has been produced in a country this side of that cape and thence imported into England, is, on being imported from England, liable to a discriminating duty of 10 per cent in addition to the duty imposed by section 2, act of August 5, 1861.—Strange v. Barney (35 Fed. Rep., 196).

(f) The advancing in England to tram, thrown, and organzine of "silk, raw, or as reeled from the cocoon, not being doubled," which has been produced in another country, does not cause it to cease to be the produce of such other country.—Id.

[Under act of June 30, 1864 (13 Stat., 202), sec. 18.]

(g) The act of June 6, 1872 (17 Stat., 230), placing certain articles on the free list, did not have the effect to repeal this section, and goods imported as in this section, although on such free list, are subject to the discriminating duty of 10 per cent.—Gautier v. Arthur (13 Blatchf., 432; 22 Int. Rev. Rec., 256; 10 Fed. Cas., 104); overruled (104 U. S., 345).

(a) Plumbago and citronella, the produce of a country east of the Cape of Good Hope, imported from British possessions west of the Cape of Good Hope, are subject to the discriminating duty of 10 per cent.—Id.; overruled (104 U. S., 345).

[Under act of March 3, 1865 (13 Stat., 491), sec. 6.]

(b) The additional duty is chargeable, though the same goods be free from duty when imported from the place of their production east.—Sturges v. The Collector (12 Wallace, 19).

(c) Section 21, act of July 14, 1870 (16 Stat., 262), did not repeal, as to such articles, this section.—Russell v. Williams (106 U. S., 623).

(d) This provision is a general commercial regulation, made to encourage direct importations from countries east of the Cape of Good Hope, as well as to benefit American shipping, and is applicable without regard to the regular duties imposed for purposes of revenue, and even where the articles are entirely free from duty.—Id.

[Under act of June 6, 1872 (17 Stat., 230), sec. 3.]

(e) Opium, the product of Persia, imported to the United States from a country west of the Cape of Good Hope, is subject to the additional duty imposed by this section.—Powers v. Comly (101 U. S., 789).

[Under act of Aug. 30, 1842, sec. 11.]

(f) The discriminating duty imposed by this section is not abolished by the act of June 30, 1846.—Stalker v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 138; 22 Fed. Cas., 1041).

(g) Such discriminating duty continues even though the general tariff of duties be altered.—Id.

(h) Calcutta, in the British East Indies, is a country beyond the Cape of Good Hope.—Campbell v. Barney (5 Blatchf., 221; 4 Fed. Cas., 1157).

(i) The latter clause of this section "and in addition," etc., does not qualify the general language of the first clause "on all goods" so as to exclude from it the articles previously exempt. It only provides that the duty laid by the first clause shall be in addition to the existing duties imposed on such articles when imported directly from the places of their growth or production; in other words, that such articles as already pay a duty when imported directly from these places shall pay a further duty when imported from places this side of the cape; its object being to increase the duty upon the articles when not imported directly from their places of growth or production. The words "any such articles" do not mean all articles embraced in the first clause, but only such of them as were already subject to duty.—Hadden v. The Collector (5 Wallace, 107).

(j) The section in question does not make a discrimination in favor of the ports of the Pacific, and thus contravene that clause of the Constitution which requires that "all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States." The terms "beyond the Cape of Good Hope" are employed as descriptive of the locality of certain countries, not their relative position with respect to ports of import. They indicate the locality of certain countries with reference to the position of the lawmakers at the National Capital.—Id.

Sec. 23. That no goods, wares, or merchandise, unless in cases provided for by treaty, shall be imported into the United States from any foreign port or place, except in vessels of the United States, or in such foreign vessels as truly and wholly belong to the citizens or subjects of that country of which the goods are the growth, production, or manufacture, or from which such goods, wares, or merchandise can only be, or most usually are, first shipped for transportation. All goods, wares, or merchandise imported contrary to this section, and the vessel wherein the same shall be imported, together with her cargo, tackle, apparel, and 1897 furniture, shall be forfeited to the United States; and such goods, wares, or merchandise, ship, or vessel, and cargo shall be liable to be seized, prosecuted, and condemned in like manner, and under the same regulations, restrictions, and provisions as have been heretofore established for the recovery, collection, distribution, and remission of forfeitures to the United States by the several revenue laws.

Sec. 24. That the preceding section shall not apply to vessels or goods, wares, or merchandise imported in vessels of a foreign nation which does not maintain a similar regulation against vessels of the United States.

SEC. 15. That no goods, wares, or merchandise, unless in cases provided for by treaty, shall be imported into the United States from any foreign port or place, except in vessels of the United States, or in such foreign vessels as truly and wholly belong to the citizens or subjects of that country of which the goods are the growth, production, or manufacture, or from which such goods, wares, or merchandise can only be, or most usually are, first shipped for transportation. All goods, wares, or merchandise imported contrary to this section, and the vessel wherein the 1894 same shall be imported, together with her cargo, tackle, apparel, and furniture, shall be forfeited to the United States; and such goods, wares, or merchandise, ship, or vessel, and cargo shall be liable to be seized, prosecuted, and condemned in like manner, and under the same regulations, restrictions, and provisions as have been heretofore established for the recovery, collection, distribution, and remission of forfeitures to the United States by the several revenue laws.

SEC. 16. That the preceding section shall not apply to vessels or goods, wares, or merchandise imported in vessels of a foreign nation which does not maintain a similar regulation against vessels of the United States.

SEC. 18. That no goods, wares, or merchandise, unless in cases provided for by treaty, shall be imported into the United States from any foreign port or place, except in vessels of the United States, or in such foreign vessels as truly and wholly belong to the citizens or subjects of that country of which the goods are the growth, production, or manufacture, or from which such goods, wares, or merchandise can only be, or most usually are, first shipped for transportation. All goods, wares, or merchandise imported contrary to this section, and the vessel wherein the same shall be imported, together with her cargo, tackle, apparel, and furniture, 1890 shall be forfeited to the United States; and such goods, wares, or merchandise, ship, or vessel, and cargo shall be liable to be seized, prosecuted, and condemned, in like manner, and under the same regulations, restrictions, and provisions as have been heretofore established for the recovery, collection, distribution, and remission of forfeitures to the United States by the several revenue laws.

SEC. 19. That the preceding section shall not apply to vessels or goods, wares, or merchandise imported in vessels of a foreign nation which does not maintain a similar regulation against vessels of the United States.

SEC. 2497. No goods, wares, or merchandise, unless in cases provided for by treaty, shall be imported into the United States from any foreign port or place, except in vessels of the United States, or in such foreign vessels as truly and wholly belong to the citizens or subjects of that country of which the goods are the growth, production, or manufacture; or from which such goods, wares, or merchandise can only be, or most usually are, first shipped for transportation. All goods, wares, or merchandise imported contrary to this section, and the vessel wherein the same shall be imported, together with her cargo, tackle, apparel, and 1883 furniture, shall be forfeited to the United States; and such goods, wares, or merchandise, ship, or vessel, and cargo shall be liable to be seized, prosecuted, and condemned, in like manner, and under the same regulations, restrictions, and provisions as have been heretofore established for the recovery, collection, distribution, and remission of forfeitures to the United States by the several revenue laws.

SEC. 2498. The preceding section shall not apply to vessels, or goods, wares, or merchandise, imported in vessels of a foreign nation which does not maintain a similar regulation against vessels of the United States.

Sec. 25. That the importation of neat cattle and the hides of neat cattle from any foreign country into the United States is prohibited: Provided, That the operation of this section shall be suspended as to any foreign country or countries, or any parts of such country or countries, whenever the Secretary of the Treasury shall officially determine, and give public notice thereof that such importation will not tend to the introduction or spread of contagious or infectious diseases among the cattle of the United States; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and empowered, and it shall be his duty, to make all necessary orders and regulations to carry this section into effect, or to suspend the same as herein provided, and to send copies thereof to the proper officers in the United States, and to such officers or agents of the United States in foreign countries as he shall judge necessary.

Sec. 26. That any person convicted of a wilful violation of any of the provisions of the preceding section shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 17. That the importation of neat cattle and the hides of neat cattle from any foreign country into the United States is prohibited: Provided, That the operation of this section shall be suspended as to any foreign country or countries, or any parts of such country or countries, whenever the Secretary of the Treasury shall officially determine, and give public notice thereof that such importation will not tend to the introduction or spread of contagious or infectious diseases among the cattle of the United States; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and empowered, and it shall be his duty, to make all necessary orders and regulations to carry this section into effect, or to suspend the same as herein provided, and to send copies thereof to the proper officers in the United States, and to such officers or agents of the United States in foreign countries as he shall judge necessary.

SEC. 18. That any person convicted of a wilful violation of any of the provisions of the preceding section shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 20. That the importation of neat cattle and the hides of neat cattle from any foreign country into the United States is prohibited: Provided, That the operation of this section shall be suspended as to any foreign country or countries, or any parts of such country or countries, whenever the Secretary of the Treasury shall officially determine, and give public notice thereof that such importation will not tend to the introduction or spread of contagious or infectious diseases among the cattle of the United States; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and empowered, and it shall be his duty, to make all necessary orders and regulations to carry this section into effect, or to suspend the same as therein provided, and to send copies thereof to the proper officers in the United States, and to such officers or agents of the United States in foreign countries as he shall judge necessary.

SEC. 21. That any person convicted of a wilful violation of any of the provisions of the preceding section shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

SEC. 2494. The importation of neat cattle and the hides of neat cattle from any foreign country into the United States is prohibited: Provided, That the operation of this section shall be suspended as to any foreign country or countries, or any parts of such country or countries, whenever the Secretary of the Treasury shall officially determine, and give public notice thereof, that such importation will not tend to the introduction or spread of contagious or infectious diseases among the cattle of the United States; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and empowered, and it shall be his duty, to make all necessary orders and regulations to carry this law into effect, or to suspend the same as therein provided, and to send copies thereof to the proper officers in the United States, and to such officers or agents of the United States in foreign countries as he shall judge necessary. 1883

SEC. 2495. Any person convicted of a wilful violation of any of the provisions of the preceding section shall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 27. That upon the reimportation of articles once exported, of the growth, product or manufacture of the United States, upon which no internal revenue tax has been assessed or paid, or upon which such tax has been paid and refunded by allowance or drawback, there shall be levied, collected and paid, a duty equal to the tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws upon such articles, except articles manufactured in bonded warehouses and exported pursuant to law, which shall be subject to the same rate of duty as if originally imported. 1897

SEC. 19. That upon the reimportation of articles once exported of the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States, upon which no internal tax has been assessed or paid, or upon which such tax has been paid and refunded by allowance or drawback, there shall be levied, collected, and paid a duty equal to the tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws upon such articles, except articles manufactured in bonded warehouses and exported pursuant to law, which shall be subject to the same rate of duty as if originally imported. 1894

SEC. 22. That upon the reimportation of articles once exported of the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States, upon which no internal tax has been assessed or paid, or upon which such tax has been paid and refunded by allowance or drawback, there shall be levied, collected, and paid a duty equal to the tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws upon such articles, except articles manufactured in bonded warehouses and exported pursuant to law, which shall be subject to the same rate of duty as if originally imported. 1890

SEC. 2500. Upon the reimportation of articles once exported of the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States, upon which no internal tax has been assessed or paid, or upon which such tax has been paid and refunded by allowance or drawback, there shall be levied, collected, and paid a duty equal to the tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws upon such articles. 1883

DECISIONS UNDER VARIOUS TARIFF ACTS.

(a) Whisky, the product or manufacture of the United States, which after being exported from bonded warehouses is reimported into this country, is dutiable on the basis of the number of gallons contained at the time of reimportation and not at the date of exportation.—T. D. 21504, G. A. 4527.

(b) The provision in paragraph 483 (1897) prohibiting the admission free of duty of reimported domestic merchandise which has been "advanced in value or improved in condition" has no application to such as comes under this section.—T. D. 21675, G. A. 4580.

(c) American whisky exported and afterwards imported in May, 1892, and which was in bonded warehouse on August 28, 1894, and was not withdrawn for consumption until July 9, 1895 (over three years after importation), is dutiable under sections 19 and 48, act of 1894.—T. D. 18170, G. A. 3927.

(a) American whisky was exported in barrels, no internal-revenue tax having been paid, was bottled abroad, reimported, and assessed under paragraph 289 (1897) at $2.25 per gallon, and the bottles assessed for duty under paragraph 89. Held, that the whisky is subject only to a duty equal to the tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws, namely, $1.10 per gallon.—Id.

(b) This section has a different field of operation from paragraph 483 (1897), and only this section applies to reimported articles of domestic origin once exported and "upon which no internal-revenue tax has been assessed or paid, or upon which such tax has been paid and refunded by allowance of drawback," excepting only "articles manufactured in bonded warehouses and exported pursuant to law."—Id.

(c) The identity of merchandise of American origin, once exported and reimported under this section, may be proved before the Board of General Appraisers according to the ordinary rules of evidence; and a compliance with the method of proof prescribed under paragraph 483 is not necessary.—Id.

(d) American whisky exported without paying internal-revenue tax and imported prior to August 28, 1894. Withdrawn from warehouse for consumption after August 28, 1894. Held, to be dutiable at $1.10 per gallon.—T. D. 15467, G. A. 2816.

(e) Where a person has removed liquor from a bonded warehouse to Canada without paying the internal-revenue tax, and landed it and permitted it to remain there a month, he is entitled to bring it back to the United States on payment of a duty equal to such tax, notwithstanding that he intended when he sent it to Canada to bring it back.—Kidd v. Flagler (C. C.), (54 Fed. Rep., 367).

(f) Unmanufactured scrap tobacco of American production exported from a bonded warehouse without the payment of any internal-revenue tax is, on reimportation into the United States, subject under section 27, tariff act of 1897, to a duty equal only to the internal-revenue tax imposed on such merchandise. As such tobacco is not manufactured and has not been subjected to an allowance of drawback it is not included either in the exception in said section 27, which relates only to "articles manufactured," or in the provisos of paragraph 483 of said act, which relate only to merchandise upon which an allowance of drawback has been made or which has been manufactured.—T. D. 23443, G. A. 5056.

(g) Whisky of American manufacture exported and then reimported and entered in bond for warehousing while the tariff act of 1890 was in force, and not withdrawn from bond until after the tariff act of 1894 went into operation, is dutiable at a rate equal to the internal-revenue tax imposed by section 19 of the latter act.—Louisville Public Warehouse Company v. United States (92 Fed. Rep., 1020) followed; T. D. 24769, G. A. 5468.

Sec. 28. That whenever any vessel laden with merchandise, in whole or in part subject to duty, has been sunk in any river, harbor, bay, or waters subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, and within its limits, for the period of two years, and is abandoned by the owner 1897 thereof, any person who may raise such vessel shall be permitted to bring any merchandise recovered therefrom into the port nearest to the place where such vessel was so raised free from the payment of any duty thereupon, but under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

SEC. 20. That whenever any vessel laden with merchandise in whole or in part subject to duty has been sunk in any river, harbor, bay, or waters subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, and within its limits, for the period of two years, and is abandoned by the owner 1894 thereof, any person who may raise such vessel shall be permitted to bring any merchandise recovered therefrom into the port nearest to the place where such vessel was so raised free from the payment of any duty thereupon, but under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

SEC. 23. That whenever any vessel laden with merchandise in whole or in part subject to duty has been sunk in any river, harbor, bay, or waters subject to the jurisdiction of the United Sttaes, and within its limits, for the period of two years, and is abandoned by the owner thereof, any person who may raise such vessel shall be permitted to 1890 bring any merchandise recovered therefrom into the port nearest to the place where such vessel was so raised, free from the payment of any duty thereupon, and without being obliged to enter the same at the custom-house; but under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

SEC. 2504. Whenever any vessel laden with merchandise in whole or in part subject to duty has been sunk in any river, harbor, bay, or waters subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, and within its limits, for the period of two years, and is abandoned by the owner thereof, any 1883 person who may raise such vessel shall be permitted to bring any merchandise recovered therefrom into the port nearest to the place where such vessel was so raised, free from the payment of any duty thereupon, and without being obliged to enter the same at the custom-house; but under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Sec. 29. That the works of manufacturers engaged in smelting or refining metals, or both smelting and refining, in the United States may be designated as bonded warehouses under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe: Provided, That such manufacturers shall first give satisfactory bonds to the Secretary of the Treasury. Ores or metals in any crude form requiring smelting or refining to make them readily available in the arts, imported into the United States to be smelted or refined and intended to be exported in a refined but unmanufactured state, shall, under such rules as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, and under the direction of the proper officer, be removed in original packages or in bulk from the vessel or other vehicle on which they have been imported, or from the bonded warehouse in which the same may be, into the bonded warehouse in which such smelting or refining, or both, may be carried on, for the purpose of being smelted or refined, or both, without payment of duties thereon, and may there be smelted or refined, together with other metals of home or foreign production: Provided, That each day a quantity of refined metal equal to ninety per centum of the amount of imported metal smelted or refined that day shall be set aside, and such metal so set 1897 aside shall not be taken from said works except for transportation to another bonded warehouse or for exportation, under the direction of the proper officer having charge thereof as aforesaid, whose certificate, describing the articles by their marks or otherwise, the quantity, the date of importation, and the name of vessel or other vehicle by which it was imported, with such additional particulars as may from time to time be required, shall be received by the collector of customs as sufficient evidence of the exportation of the metal, or it may be removed under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, upon entry and payment of duties, for domestic consumption, and the exportation of the ninety per centum of metals hereinbefore provided for shall entitle the ores and metals imported under the provisions of this section to admission without payment of the duties thereon: Provided further, That in respect to lead ores imported under the provisions of this section the refined metal set aside shall either be reexported or the regular duties paid thereon within six months from the date of the receipt of the ore. All labor performed and services rendered under these regulations shall be under the supervision of an officer of the customs, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and at the expense of the manufacturer.

SEC. 21. That the works of manufacturers engaged in smelting or refining metals, or both smelting and refining, in the United States may be designated as bonded warehouses under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; Provided, That such manufacturers shall first give satisfactory bonds to the Secretary of the Treasury. Ores or metals in any crude form requiring smelting or refining to make them readily available in the arts, imported into the United States to be smelted or refined and intended to be exported in a refined but unmanufactured state, shall, under such rules as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, and under the direction of the proper officer, be removed in original packages or in bulk from the vessel or other vehicle on which they have been imported, or from the bonded warehouse in which the same may be, into the bonded warehouse in which such smelting or refining, or both, may be carried on, for the purpose of being smelted or refined, or both, without payment of duties thereon, and may there be smelted or refined, together with 1894 other metals of home or foreign production: Provided, That each day a quantity of refined metal equal to the amount of imported metal smelted or refined that day shall be set aside, and such metal so set aside shall not be taken from said works except for transportation to another bonded warehouse or for exportation, under the direction of the proper officer having charge thereof as aforesaid, whose certificate, describing the articles by their marks or otherwise, the quantity, the date of importation, and the name of vessel or other vehicle by which it was imported, with such additional particulars as may from time to time be required, shall be received by the collector of customs as sufficient evidence of the exportation of the metal, or it may be removed under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, upon entry and payment of duties, for domestic consumption. All labor performed and services rendered under these regulations shall be under the supervision of an officer of the customs, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and at the expense of the manufacturer.

SEC. 24. That the works of manufacturers engaged in smelting or refining metals in the United States may be designated as bonded warehouses under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe: Provided, That such manufacturers shall first give satisfactory bonds to the Secretary of Treasury. Metals in any crude form requiring smelting or refining to make them readily available in the arts, imported into the United States to be smelted or refined and intended to be exported in a refined but unmanufactured state, shall, under such rules as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe and under the direction of the proper officer, be removed in original packages or in bulk from the vessel or other vehicle on which it has been imported, or from the bonded warehouse in which the same may be into the bonded warehouse in which such smelting and refining may be carried on for the purpose of being smelted and refined, without payment of duties thereon, and may there be smelted and refined, together with 1890 other metals of home or foreign production: Provided, That each day a quantity of refined metal equal to the amount of imported metal refined that day shall be set aside, and such metal so set aside shall not be taken from said works except for exportation, under the direction of the proper officer having charge thereof as aforesaid, whose certificate, describing the articles by their marks or otherwise, the quantity, the date of importation, and the name of vessel or other vehicle by which it was imported, with such additional particulars as may from time to time be required, shall be received by the collector of customs as sufficient evidence of the exportation of the metal, or it may be removed, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, to any other bonded warehouse, or upon entry for, and payment of duties, for domestic consumption. All labor performed and services rendered under these regulations shall be under the supervision of an officer of the customs, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and at the expense of the manufacturer.

DECISION UNDER SECTION 29, ACT OF 1897.

(a) The provision herein that each day a quantity of refined metal equal to 90 per cent of the imported metal smelted or refined that day shall be set aside and exported in order to release the bond required by this section, requires that said 90 per cent shall be of the quantity of imported metal determined by Government assay, or otherwise, to be contained in the crude bullion or ore when imported, prior to such smelting or refining, and not 90 per cent of the "smelted and refined" metal smelted or refined that day. Guggenheim Smelting Company v. United States (126 Fed Rep., 728; T. D. 24888), reversing 121 Fed. Rep., 153, and affirming T. D. 23383, G. A. 5032 followed; T. D. 25133, G. A. 5620.

Sec. 30. That where imported materials on which duties have been paid are used in the manufacture of articles manufactured or produced in the United States, there shall be allowed on the exportation of such articles a drawback equal in amount to the duties paid on the materials used, less one per centum of such duties: Provided, That when the articles exported are made in part from domestic materials the imported materials, or the parts of the articles made from such materials, shall so appear in the completed articles that the quantity or measure thereof may be ascertained: And provided further, That the drawback on any article allowed under existing law shall be continued at the rate herein 1897 provided. That the imported materials used in the manufacture or production of articles entitled to drawback of customs duties when exported shall, in all cases where drawback of duties paid on such materials is claimed, be identified, the quantity of such materials used and the amount of duties paid thereon shall be ascertained, the facts of the manufacture or production of such articles in the United States and their exportation therefrom shall be determined, and the drawback due thereon shall be paid to the manufacturer, producer, or exporter, to the agent of either, or to the person to whom such manufacturer, producer, exporter, or agent shall in writing order such drawback paid, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

SEC. 22. That where imported materials on which duties have been paid are used in the manufacture of articles manufactured or produced in the United States, there shall be allowed on the exportation of such articles a drawback equal in amount to the duties paid on the materials used, less one per centum of such duties; Provided, That when the articles exported are made in part from domestic materials the imported materials, or the parts of the articles made from such materials, shall so appear in the completed articles that the quantity or measure thereof may be ascertained: And provided further, That the drawback on any article allowed under existing law shall be continued at the rate herein
1894 provided. That the imported materials used in the manufacture or production of articles entitled to drawback of customs duties when exported shall, in all cases where drawback of duties paid on such materials is claimed, be identified, the quantity of such materials used and the amount of duties paid thereon shall be ascertained, the facts of the manufacture or production of such articles in the United States and their exportation therefrom shall be determined, and the drawback due thereon shall be paid to the manufacturer, producer, or exporter, to the agent of either or to the person to whom such manufacturer, producer, exporter, or agent shall in writing order such drawback paid, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

SEC. 25. That where imported materials on which duties have been paid, are used in the manufacture of articles manufactured or produced in the United States, there shall be allowed on the exportation of such articles a drawback equal in amount to the duties paid on the materials used, less one per centum of such duties: Provided, That when the articles exported are made in part from domestic materials, the imported materials, or the parts of the articles made from such materials shall so appear in the completed articles that the quantity or measure thereof may be ascertained. And provided further, That the drawback on any article allowed under existing law shall be continued at the rate herein provided. That the imported materials used in the manufacture or production of articles entitled to drawback of customs duties when exported shall in all cases where drawback of duties paid on such materials is 1890 claimed, be identified, the quantity of such materials used and the amount of duties paid thereon shall be ascertained, the facts of the manufacture or production of such articles in the United States and their exportation therefrom shall be determined, and the drawback due thereon shall be paid to the manufacturer, producer, or exporter, to the agent of either or to the person to whom such manufacturer, producer, exporter or agent shall in writing order such drawback paid, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

Par. 328. There shall be allowed on the imported tin-plate used in the manufacture of cans, boxes, packages, and all articles of tin ware exported, either empty or filled with domestic products, a drawback equal to the duty paid on such tin-plate, less one per centum of such duty, which shall be retained for the use of the United States.

DECISIONS UNDER VARIOUS STATUTES.

(a) Bottles and corks in which beer is bottled and exported for sale are not "imported materials used in the manufacture" of such beer within the meaning of the drawback provisions, although the beer be bottled and corked and subsequently heated for its better preservation. The imported material must enter into and form one of the ingredients of the manufactured article. Affirming the decision of the Court of Claims.—Joseph Schlitz Brewing Co. v. United States (181 U. S., 584).

(b) American-made bags exported, on which drawback has been allowed, are, when returned, liable only to a duty equal to the amount of drawback paid. They are exempt from the requirements of paragraph 483, tariff act of 1897, as to proof of identity and reimportation by the exporter only.—T. D. 23340, G. A. 5015.

(c) The act of August 5, 1861 (12 Stat., 292), section 4, having declared that on exportation there shall be allowed a drawback equal to the amount of duty paid on such material, and the Secretary having established by a regulation that as regarded the cake resulting from the manufacture of linseed oil into oil and cake the latter represents at 17 cents per hundred pounds the duty on the imported seed so manufactured into cake, there resulted a contract that, when exported, the Government would refund, repay, pay back, this amount as a drawback to the importer. If this is not so it is because it is impossible to make a contract when the details of its execution or performance are left to officers who refuse to carry them out. The Court of Claims makes the mistake of supposing that the claim is founded upon the regulations of the Secretary. This view can not be sustained. It is the law which gives the right, and the fact that the customs officers refuse to obey these regulations can not defeat a right which the act gives.—Campbell v. United States (107 U. S. 407, 411), reversing 12 C. Cls. R., 470.

(d) The Secretary can not, by an act forbidding the collector to proceed under drawback regulations, defeat the law allowing drawback.—Campbell v. United States (107 U. S., 407, 410).

(e) Description of the manner in which frauds on the revenue are perpetrated, in obtaining from the Government the payment of money on drawbacks, on the exportation of goods which have paid internal-revenue taxes.—Benedict, District Judge, charge to the Grand Jury, May 10, 1869 (6 Blatchf., 555; 30 Fed. Cas., 978).

(f) Of a claim for drawback on exported articles under the act of Auguest 5, 1861, section 4 (12 Stat., 292), which provides that the drawback shall be ascertained under such regulations as shall be prescribed by the Secretary, this court has not jurisdiction, there being no fixed right to any specific sum until the amount of the drawback is ascertained under the regulations prescribed.—Campbell v. United States (12 C. Cls. R., 470); reversed (107 U. S., 407).

(a) The Court of Claims has not jurisdiction in the following cases arising under the revenue laws: 1. Where the right of a party to money is dependent upon the decision or action of an executive officer, and the same has been rendered or taken against the party. 2. Where the right is dependent upon such decision or action and none has been rendered or taken, but the matter is still in fieri in an Executive Department.—Id.

(b) Claimant imported linseed-oil cake and was entitled to drawback under section 4, act of August 5, 1861. The collector, acting under instructions from the Secretary, refused to comply with the law and regulations. Held, that the claimant being entitled to drawback may, when payment is refused, maintain an action therefor in the Court of Claims. 12 C. Cls. R., 470 reversed.—Campbell v. United States (107 U. S., 407).

(c) The Court of Claims has jurisdiction of a case to recover drawback on exported sugar.—Durant v. United States (28 C. Cls. R., 356).

(d) R. S. 3477, relating to the assignment of claims, affects only perfected claims, and does not apply to a claim for drawback on reexported goods made in the name of one to whom the outward bill of lading is indorsed, with authority to act for custom-house purposes, since the regulations of the Treasury provide that the person producing the bill of lading so indorsed shall be deemed the exporter for the purpose of making entry and receiving the drawback or refund.—Kennedy v. United States (C. C.), (79 Fed. Rep., 893); Same v. Same (C. C. A.), (95 Fed. Rep., 127).

(e) The six-year limitation begins to run from the date of exportation, not from the date of the decision of the Treasury Department passing upon the claim.—Kennedy v. United States (C. C.), (79 Fed. Rep., 893).

(f) The Tide Water Oil Company imported from Canada shooks and from Europe steel rods upon which importation duties were paid. The box shooks were manufactured in Canada from boards, first being planed and then cut into required lengths and widths, intended to be substantially correct for making boxes without further labor than nailing shooks together. They were then tied up in bundles of sides, of ends, of bottoms, and of tops of from 15 to 25 in a bundle. The shooks were, at the factory of the company, constructed into boxes or cases by nailing the same together with nails manufactured in the United States out of steel rods imported from Europe, and by trimming when defective in length, to make the boxes without projecting parts. The cost of the labor expended in the United States in the necessary handling, nailing, and trimming was equal to about one-tenth of the value of the boxes. The boxes were filled with cans and exported. For about four years prior to July 1, 1889, the Department allowed drawback. On that date the Secretary changed this ruling and refused to allow drawback. Held, That the company was not entitled to drawback. 31 C. Cls. R., 90 affirmed.—Tide Water Oil Co. v. United States (171 U. S., 210).

(g) The act of June 19, 1886, section 10 (24 Stat., 81), which restricts the right of drawback upon bituminous coal (act of 1883) to vessels of the United States is prospective and does not take away the right to the drawback on coal which had previously been reshipped on vessels not of the United States.—Kennedy v. United States (23 C. Cls. R., 363).

(h) When goods entered in debenture are reexported, have passed through a foreign custom-house, are landed and have gone into the general mass of property, and like that subject to be consumed, and bought and sold by retail, they are no longer, in the sense of the act of March 3, 1845 (5 Stat., 750), the same goods.—United States v. Whidden (3 Ware, 269; 28 Fed. Cas., 535).

(a) Bottles and corks are finished products and not materials upon which drawback can be allowed when exported filled with American beer.—Joseph Schlitz Brewing Co. v. United States (35 C. Cls. R., 110).

(b) No right of drawback arises when bags made of imported material are leased to steamers for the transportation of grain on foreign voyages with the understanding that they are to be brought back. Such bags were neither exported nor imported, but were a part of the furniture of the ship.—Kennedy v. United States (C. C.), (79 Fed. Rep., 893); Same v. Same (C. C. A.), (95 Fed. Rep., 127).

(c) Where the right of a party to recover rests upon a statute and does not require the action of a revenue officer to determine the right or fix the amount, the case is not a revenue case within the intent of Nichols v. United States (7 Wallace, 122). Being founded upon a law of the United States it is within the jurisdiction of this court. This court has jurisdiction of a case to recover drawback on exported sugar.—Durant v. United States (28 C. Cls. R., 356).

(d) In 1875 the sugar known to the trade as "Standard A Coffee White" came within the classification of the Treasury regulations then existing of "refined crystalline sugar," and was entitled to a drawback of 3¼ cents a pound.—Durant v. United States (28 C. Cls. R., 356).

(e) The purpose of this section is not to increase the revenue or encourage export trade, but to foster domestic manufactures.—The Tide Water Oil Co. v. United States (31 C. Cls. R., 90).

(f) Boxes made of shooks manufactured in Canada, planed and of the requisite length and width, so that nothing remains to be done except nail the shooks together and trim the boxes where the shooks are defective in length or width, are not domestic manufactures within this section.—Id.

(g) The intent of this section is that the manufacture be within the United States; that the exported article shall not have been partly manufactured elsewhere.—Id.

(h) Oil cake made from linseed by its separation into linseed oil and oil cake is an article of manufacture, and when made in the United States from imported linseed is entitled, upon exportation, to drawback.—Dean Linseed Oil Co. v. United States (C. C.), (78 Fed. Rep., 467).

(i) The drawback is to be calculated in proportion to the amount of linseed entering into such oil cake by weight, and not in proportion to the respective values of the oil and oil cake made from the linseed.—Id.; reversed (87 Fed. Rep., 453).

(j) It seems that when by the treatment of an imported article a valuable thing is produced, leaving the refuse of no value, no drawback will be allowable upon the exportation of such refuse.—Id.

(k) Where linseed, upon which a duty of 20 cents a bushel has been paid, was manufactured into oil and oil cake, and the oil cake exported, the drawback should be computed in proportion to the value which the exported oil cake bears to the imported linseed. 78 Fed. Rep., 467 reversed.—United States v. Dean Linseed Oil Co. (C. C. A.), (87 Fed. Rep., 453).

(l) Linseed oil cake manufactured from imported linseed is not waste, but a manufactured article and therefore entitled to drawback.—Id.

(m) Imported bottles and corks reexported filled with beer made in this country are not "materials * * * used in the manufacture of articles manufactured in the United States" within the meaning of this section.—Wheeler v. United States (D. C.), (75 Fed Rep., 654).

(a) Imported bottles, corks, and tin foil reexported as cases or coverings for beer made in this country are not "materials * * * used in the manufacture of articles manufactured or produced in the United States" within the meaning of this act.—Beadleston v. United States (D. C.), (104 Fed. Rep., 295).

(b) Additional duties by way of penalty levied under section 8, act of 1846, do not make part of the drawback to be returned on exportation.—Bartlett v. Kane (Taney, 186; 2 Fed. Cas., 971); affirmed (16 How., 263).

(c) Documents from the custom-house to prove the withdrawal of goods from a bonded warehouse and their exportation in a certain vessel are prima facie sufficient to sustain an allegation in the declaration that such things were done with the goods.—McGlinchy v. United States (4 Cliff., 312; 16 Fed. Cas., 118).

(d) Section 84, act of 1799, has not (1830) been repealed.—United States v. Eighty-five Hogsheads of Sugar (2 Paine, 54; 25 Fed. Cas., 991).

(e) Sugar entitled to drawback on exportation must have been refined in the United States.—Id.

(f) What are refined sugars within the meaning of the act, and such as entitle the claimant to the drawback allowed by law upon sugar refined in the United States and exported therefrom, must be gathered from the commercial sense in which the distinguishing qualities and properties of this commodity are known and understood. What is known as "bastars" or "bastard sugar" is not refined sugar.—Id.

(g) A forfeiture may be incurred by entering for drawback under a false denomination sugars not previously imported and subject to duty.—Barlow v. United States (7 Pet., 404).

(h) Where sugars (1830) entered for exportation for the benefit of drawback, after being landed on the vessel are fraudulently relanded on the dock, the marks obliterated and other marks substituted, and then replaced on the vessel in the presence of the customs officials, so as to show on their return a greater number of casks and a larger quantity of sugar than was actually put on board, the transaction is a relanding within the meaning of the drawback bond and constitutes a breach thereof.—United States v. Heckscher (3 Hunt Mer. Mag., 71; 26 Fed. Cas., 251).

(i) The surety on a custom-house bond, conditioned that certain sugars entered for exportation for the benefit of drawback should not be relanded in the United States, is estopped by the recitals of the bond to deny that the quantity therein specified was in fact laden upon the vessel.—Id.

(j) Bond given conditioned that the party should produce the certificates and other proof required by law of the landing of the merchandise at some foreign port, etc. False and fraudulent certificates were produced and the signature and seal of the bond were torn off and destroyed. Held, that the United States might declare on the mutilated bond.—United States v. Spalding (2 Mason, 478; 27 Fed. Cas., 1278).

Sec. 31. That all goods, wares, articles, and merchandise manufactured wholly or in part in any foreign country by convict labor shall not be 1897 entitled to entry at any of the ports of the United States, and the importation thereof is hereby prohibited, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to prescribe such regulations as may be necessary for the enforcement of this provision.

SEC. 24. That all goods, wares, articles, and merchandise manufactured wholly or in part in any foreign country by convict labor shall 1894 not be entitled to entry at any of the ports of the United States, and the importation thereof is hereby prohibited, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to prescribe such regulations as may be necessary for the enforcement of this provision.

SEC. 51. That all goods, wares, articles, and merchandise manufactured wholly or in part in any foreign country by convict labor, shall not be 1890 entitled to entry at any of the ports of the United States, and the importation thereof is hereby prohibited, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to prescribe such regulations as may be necessary for the enforcement of this provision.

1883 [No corresponding provision.]

1897 [Sec. 32 amends secs. 7 and 11, act of June 10, 1890, which see, as amended, pages 918, 939.]

Sec. 33. That on and after the day when this Act shall go into effect all goods, wares, and merchandise previously imported, for which no entry has been made, and all goods, wares, and merchandise previously entered without payment of duty and under bond for warehousing, transportation,
1897 or any other purpose, for which no permit of delivery to the importer or his agent has been issued, shall be subjected to the duties imposed by this Act and to no other duty, upon the entry or the withdrawal thereof: Provided, That when duties are based upon the weight of merchandise deposited in any public or private bonded warehouse, said duties shall be levied upon the weight of such merchandise at the time of its entry.

1894 [No corresponding provision. Section 50, Act of 1890 (post) remained in force.]

SEC. 50. That on and after the day when this Act shall go into effect all goods, wares, and merchandise previously imported, for which no entry has been made, and all goods, wares, and merchandise previously entered without payment of duty and under bond for warehousing, transportation, or any other purpose, for which no permit of delivery to the importer or his agent has been issued, shall be subjected to no other duty upon the entry or the withdrawal thereof than if the same were imported respectively after that day: Provided, That any imported 1890 merchandise deposited in bond in any public or private bonded warehouse having been so deposited prior to the first day of October, eighteen hundred and ninety, may be withdrawn for consumption at any time prior to February first, eighteen hundred and ninety-one, upon the payment of duties at the rates in force prior to the passage of this Act: Provided further, That when duties are based upon the weight of merchandise deposited in any public or private bonded warehouse said duties shall be levied and collected upon the weight of such merchandise at the time of its withdrawal.

SEC. 10. That all imported goods, wares, and merchandise which may be in the public stores or bonded warehouses on the day and year when this Act shall go into effect, except as otherwise provided in this Act, shall be subjected to no other duty upon the entry thereof for consumption than if the same were imported respectively after that day; and all 1883 goods, wares, and merchandise remaining in bonded warehouses on the day and year this Act shall take effect, and upon which the duties shall have been paid, shall be entitled to a refund of the difference between the amount of duties paid and the amount of duties said goods, wares, and merchandise would be subject to if the same were imported respectively after that date.

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 33, ACT OF 1897.

(a) The entry referred to in this section is the entry of the merchandise, not the entry of the vessel.—T. D. 18635, G. A. 4033.

(b) Importations made at an original port of entry and duly entered for consumption prior to 4.06 o'clock p. m. (Washington time), July 24, 1897, are dutiable under the Act of 1894. But where goods arrived prior to said hour, but were not entered, and the duties thereon were not paid until afterwards, or where goods arrived at any original port of entry prior to said hour and were entered under bond for warehousing, transportation, etc., without payment of duties and issue of permit of delivery, they are dutiable under the Act of 1897.—Id.

(a) Merchandise withdrawn from the warehouse after July 24, 1897, is dutiable on the basis of the weight at the time of entry and not at the time of withdrawal. Section 50, Act of 1890, was repealed by section 33, Act of 1897.—T. D. 19715, G. A. 4214.

(b) Furniture which was free under paragraph 426 (1894) as antiquities is not dutiable where imported at 1 o'clock in the afternoon of July 24, 1897. This section has no application to free goods. Reversing board.—Pitt v. United States (C. C.), (99 Fed. Rep., 558).

(c) When importers on and prior to July 24, 1897, made application under R. S. 2859 to enter goods without invoice, but the goods were not finally passed, nor the duties paid, nor permits of delivery granted until after July 24, such goods fall within the provisions of section 33, Act of 1897, and become dutiable under the Act of 1897.—T. D. 22481, G. A. 4762.

(d) The mere filing of the prescribed documents (under R. S. 2859, for importations valued at less than $100) with the collector is not an entry such as would exclude the merchandise from the operation of section 33, Act of 1897, but the term "entry" as here used relates to a transaction of which the filing of such document is but the initial step. The term "entry" means the entire transaction by which the importer obtains the entrance of his goods.—Id.

(e) The informal entry provided by R. S. 2859 is a rule of convenience only and is not intended to contribute to the rights of importers. The simple filing of the application to enter merchandise under its provisions does not vest in the importers, at the time of such filing, even an incipient right or equity such as a court would intervene to protect. Before such entry can be regarded as complete, the collector must be satisfied that the neglect to produce a certified invoice was unintentional and that the importation was made in good faith.—Id.

(f) The tender by an importer of the document prescribed by R. S. 2859, accompanied by a check in payment of duties, does not constitute the entry of merchandise as the term is used in section 33, act of 1897.—T. D. 22618, G. A. 4809.

(g) When importers, on and prior to 4.06 p. m. on July 24, 1897, tendered the collector the informal documentary entry of, and a check in payment of estimated duties on, cargoes of lead imported in bond and which had only arrived at the port that morning, which said goods were on subsequent days officially and duly weighed and assayed and duties liquidated, even had said ducuments been accepted, such goods fall within the provisions of section 33, act of 1897, as goods for which no entry has been made and for which no permit of delivery has been issued and are dutiable under the act of 1897.—T. D. 22618, G. A. 4809.

(h) The rejection by the collector at the port of destination of a tender of entry of immediate transportation goods which had not yet reached said port of destination was justifiable.—Ellison v. United States (142 Fed. Rep., 732; T. D. 27035).

(i) The instrument characterized by the law and known in customs transactions as "permit of delivery" or "permit to deliver" may be, and frequently is, when issued, conditional in effect. These conditions may rest in parol or custom, or be a part of the instrument, or may be such as are prescribed as statutory or administrative conditions or regulations affecting such instruments generally or in the particular case.—T. D. 22618, G. A. 4809.

(a) On July 24, 1897, certain goods were entered at New York for immediate transportation to Philadelphia in bond, but only 6 cases out of the 40 cases in the importation were received by the railroad that day. On the same day the importers tendered a consumption entry for the goods to the collector at Philadelphia, but that officer refused it on the ground that the goods had not reached the latter port. The goods were finally entered July 28, and duties assessed under the tariff act of 1897. It was held that the refusal was proper, as the goods had not yet come under the control of the collector at Philadelphia; that they were precisely within the terms of section 33, and hence dutiable under said act, and that even if the 6 cases which had been delivered to the railroad company in New York might be considered as having been released from the jurisdiction of the collector at New York and having entered that of the collector at Philadelphia, as there was no proof of the identity of such 6 cases, the importation must be treated as a whole and dutiable all alike.—Ellison v. United States (142 Fed. Rep., 732; T. D. 27035), affirming 136 id., 969 (T. D. 26219) and T. D. 24796, G. A. 5482.

(b) Under the provision in this section that the duties imposed under the act should be applied to merchandise imported "on and after the day when this act shall go into effect," the word "day" had no other significance than "date" or "time." It meant previous to the moment rather than the day when the act took effect.—United States v. Lumber Company, and Lumber Company v. United States (142 Fed. Rep., 432; T. D. 26826), reversing 128 id., 306; T. D. 25135, and affirming T. D. 24535, G. A. 5365.

(c) When imported goods have remained in bond beyond three years and are thereupon deemed abandoned to the Government, the rights and liabilities become fixed at once, and the Government is entitled to retain from the proceeds of their sale or to collect upon the bond the amount of duties according to the then existing law, though a different rate of duty goes into effect before a sale.—Buxbaum v. United States (C. C. A.), (80 Fed. Rep., 885).

(d) Lead-bearing ores imported and entered for warehousing at a bonded smelter prior to the passage of the act of 1897, but remaining within the custody of the Government officers at said smelter at the time the act of 1897 took effect, are dutiable under that act. For goods to be dutiable under the act of 1894, they must have been either imported and entered for consumption or withdrawn for consumption and removed from Government custody while the act of 1894 was in effect.—T. D. 20801, G. A. 4373.

(e) The proviso in this section is not restricted to the matter immediately preceding it relating to goods imported prior to the passage of the act, but was intended to be general and includes as well merchandise imported after the passage of the act. Warehoused merchandise dutiable by weight should be assessed according to its weight at the time of entry and not at the time of withdrawal from warehouse.—United States v. Falk (204 U. S., 143; T. D. 27832), reversing Falk v. United States (146 Fed. Rep., 484; T. D. 27036), and affirming 145 Id., 574; T. D. 25976, and abstract 1616 (T. D. 25337), followed; T. D. 27933, G. A. 6545.

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 50, ACT OF 1890.

(f) When duties were liquidated, on the day after the act of 1894 went into effect, upon goods imported or withdrawn while the old law was in force, the rate of duty should be that prescribed by the new law, and not the higher rate imposed by the old; and the right of the Government to such higher rate is not saved by the provision of section 72, that the repeals therein made should not affect "any act done, or any right accrued."—Burr v. United States (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 742); Passavant v. United States (id., 744); McCann v. Same (id).

(a) Goods entered August 23, 1894, and permit to land and deliver goods issued August 23, which permit dispensed with the necessity of removing the goods to the public stores. Goods examined August 29, 1894, and permit indorsed, "Examined, Aug. 29, 1894. C. L. L." During the period between August 23 and August 29, the goods were either actually or constructively in the custody of the customs officers and not under control of the owners on August 28, when the act of 1894 went into effect, and are therefore dutiable under the act of 1894 and not the act of 1890.—T. D. 16404, G. A. 3193.

(b) Cigars imported November 14, 1889, and remained unclaimed until October 27, 1890, when withdrawn and duties paid under the act of 1883. Entry reliquidated and duties assessed under the act of 1890 on January 19, 1891. Held, that the cigars were dutiable under the act of 1890.—T. D. 11584, G. A. 759.

(c) Vessel arrived in port prior to October 6, 1890, but the goods were not entered for consumption until after that date, in the form prescribed by law (R. S. 2785; 2786). Held dutiable under the act of 1890. There is no legal force in the objection that the collector closed the custom-house on Sunday, October 5, 1890, and refused to make entries on that day.—T. D. 13978, G. A. 2083.

(d) Cigars entered at New York for immediate transportation in September, 1890, and arrived at Denver on October 2 and 3, when the surveyor mailed notices of their arrival to the importer who did not receive such notices until October 6, when the new tariff was in force. Held, that the surveyor was not bound to give notice to the importer of the arrival of his goods and that the cigars are dutiable under the act of 1890.—T. D. 11039, G. A. 482.

(e) Jute butts imported and warehoused prior to October 1, 1890, and withdrawn October 6, are free under the act of 1890 and not dutiable under the act of 1883.—T. D. 10413, G. A. 104.

(f) Goods in general order warehouse October 6, 1890, and entered October 7 are dutiable under the act of 1890.—T. D. 10554, G. A. 204.

(g) Entry under R. S. 2785, prepared September 30, 1890, and handed to deputy collector, but not verified until October. Entry was for warehouse only and not for transportation. Held dutiable under the act of 1890.—T. D. 10676, G. A. 260.

(h) Section 50, act of 1890, does not apply to wool which is dutiable under paragraph 386, act of 1890, at an ad valorem rate based upon value in a foreign country.—T. D. 11226, G. A. 585.

(i) Section 50, act of 1890, applies to goods under bond, whether for warehouse, transportation, or any other purpose, and does not apply to goods entered for consumption under R. S. 2785, which is a final entry.—T. D. 11565, G. A. 740.

(j) Section 50, act of 1890, refers to goods declared to be dutiable as of the date when this law went into effect (October 6, 1890). It does not embrace articles upon which duty was levied to take effect on any other day than October 6, as, for instance, tin under paragraphs 143 and 145.—T. D. 12007, G. A. 920.

(k) Tobacco imported May 29, 1890, rewarehoused July 9, and withdrawn October 25, 1890. The dutiable weight is the weight at the time of withdrawal.—T. D. 10507, G. A. 157.

(a) Leaf tobacco imported in December, 1889, and withdrawn October 17, 1890, when duty was paid under the act of 1883. Held, that it is subject to duty on weight at the time of withdrawal.—T. D. 10955, G. A. 450.

(b) Duty is to be assessed on weight of tobacco at the time of withdrawal.—T. D. 11694, G. A. 799.

(c) Where tobacco was entered at New York, warehoused, and withdrawn for transportation in bond to an interior port, not actually rewarehoused at interior port, but constructively rewarehoused and withdrawn for consumption, duty must be assessed on the weight at the port of origiual entry. Section 50, act of 1890, does not refer to goods constructively rewarehoused.—T. D. 11695, G. A. 800; T. D. 12384, G. A. 1156.

(d) Tobacco imported at New York, entered in bond, taken to Boston under transportation entries, rewarehoused by being actually deposited in bonded warehouse at Boston, and afterwards withdrawn for consumption. The dutiable weight is the weight at the time of withdrawal.—T. D. 13055, G. A. 1560.

(e) Tobacco imported and an allowance of 8 per cent made on original liquidation on account of moisture. On final withdrawal, claim made that duty should be assessed on the weight at the time of withdrawal. Held, that the collector was right in refusing to grant the second claim.—T. D. 14383, G. A. 2267.

(f) Goods entered for immediate transportation, without appraisement, before the act of October 1, 1890, went into effect, but entered for consumption after it went into effect, held dutiable under the act of 1890.—T. D. 12260, G. A. 1074.

(g) Section 50, act of 1890, applies to goods under bond, whether for warehouse, transportation, or any other purpose, and does not apply to goods entered for consumption under R. S. 2785, which is a final entry.—T. D. 11565, G. A. 740.

(h) Section 50, act of 1890, applies to wool which is dutiable under paragraph 386, act of 1890, at an ad valorem rate based on value in a foreign country.—T. D. 11226, G. A. 585.

(i) The words "no other duty," in section 50, act of 1890, mean "the same duty."—In re Gardiner (C. C. A.), (53 Fed. Rep., 1013).

(j) Tobacco, dutiable under the act of 1890, imported and remained in warehouse more than three years. On December 11, 1896, permitted to be withdrawn on payment of duty on weight at the time of importation. Importers claimed under section 50, act of 1890, that the duty should be based on the weight at the time the tobacco was delivered to them. Held, that the weight of the tobacco at the time of the importation should be taken as the dutiable weight, where the tobacco remained in the warehouse more than three years and was delivered to the importers upon the payment of duties and charges.—T. D. 18413, G. A. 3970.

(k) Goods imported while the act of 1890 was in force to be exhibited at the California Midwinter Exposition and withdrawn for consumption and sold after the act of 1894 went into effect. Held, that section 2 of the act authorizing the sale of merchandise imported for the purpose of exhibition, providing that all such articles shall be subject to duty, if any, imposed by the revenue laws in force at the date of importation being a special act designed to govern a particular class of merchandise, is not repealed or modified by the more general legislation of the act of 1894.—T. D. 16357, G. A. 3186.

(a) American whisky imported and warehoused May 11, 1889, and withdrawn October 16, 1890, is dutiable on the number of gallons placed in the warehouse and not on the number withdrawn.—T. D. 10466, G. A. 116.

(b) The dutiable gauge of whisky is that at the time it is placed in the warehouse and not at the time of withdrawal. The term "weight" in section 50, act of 1890, can not be construed to mean gauge.—T. D. 10747, G. A. 300.

(c) Section 50 of the act of 1890 declares that any merchandise deposited in bond before the date of the act may be withdrawn for consumption on payment of the duties in force before the act, and that when such duties are based upon the weight of the goods, the weight shall be taken at the time of withdrawal. Held, that while under the internal-revenue laws the proof of spirits is determined by weight, yet the tax is always assessed upon the gallon measurement, whether the spirits are above or below proof, and hence reimported whisky, when withdrawn from bond, may pay according to the number of gallons at the time of importation and not at the time of withdrawal.—Louisville Public Warehouse Co. v. Surveyor of the Port at Louisville (C. C.), (48 Fed. Rep., 372); affirmed, Same v. Collector of Customs (C. C. A.), (49 id. 561).

(d) The closing of the custom-house on Sunday is a reasonable regulation, and an importer has no right to enter goods on that day.—T. D. 10522, G. A. 172; T. D. 11327, G. A. 610; T. D. 13978, G. A. 2083.

(e) Goods entered for immediate transportation September 30, 1890, and entry made at port of final destination October 13. Held to be dutiable under the act of 1890.—T. D. 10939, G. A. 434.

(f) Carpet wool imported and duties paid prior to August 28, 1894. Permit to withdraw given under article 497, Regulation 1892, which permit was presented to the storekeeper prior to August 28, but the goods not actually delivered to the importer, being voluntarily left by him until after that date. Held dutiable under the act of 1890.—T. D. 16649, G. A. 3294.

(g) Decorated earthenware imported and warehoused October 6, 1892, and withdrawn October 14, 1895, more than three years after being in bond. Held dutiable under the act of 1890.—T. D. 18223, G. A. 3933.

(h) Goods remainiug in bonded warehouse more than three years, withdrawn after the act of 1894 went into effect, are dutiable at the rate in force at the time of withdrawal.—T. D. 16090, G. A. 3054; reversed, T. D. 18404, G. A. 3961 (76 Fed. Rep., 742).

(i) Merchandise, other than liquors of American production, entered for warehouse under the act of 1890 and withdrawn for consumption more than three years after, while the act of 1894 is in force, is dutiable under the act of 1890.—T. D. 18404, G. A. 3961.

(j) Section 29 of the act of June 10, 1890, and section 50 of the act of October 1, 1890, repealed R. S. 2970, and the additional duty of 10 per cent on goods remaining in the warehouse more than one year is not authorized.—T. D. 15517, G. A. 2827.

(k) R. S. 2970 is repealed by section 50, act of October 1, 1890, and additional duty can not be levied on goods which had been in bond more than a year before the date when this act went into effect and were withdrawn in January, 1891.—T. D. 10354, G. A. 75; T. D. 10466, G. A. 116; reversed, In re Schmid (C. C.), (54 Fed. Rep., 145).

(l) Goods deposited in bond prior to the date of the act of October 1, 1890, for which no permit of delivery has issued, and withdrawn before February 1, 1891, but after act of 1890 went into effect, are not subject to the additional duty provided by section 2970.—United States v. McGrath (D. C.), (50 Fed. Rep., 404).

(a) Tobacco imported February 13, 1890, transported in bond and deposited in bonded warehouse October 21, 1890, and withdrawn for consumption May 4, 1891. Under R. S. 2970 additional duty of 10 per cent was assessed. Held, that when the act of June 10, 1890, section 20, became operative, the additional duty had not accrued, and that as the tobacco was withdrawn for consumption within three years it is not subject to additional duty or to assessment according to original entry, but is dutiable according to weight at the time of withdrawal.—T. D. 11836, G. A. 827.

DECISIONS UNDER EARLIER STATUTES PERTAINING TO SAME SUBJECT MATTER.

(b) Vessel arrived at the port of Philadelphia June 16, 1812, and an application was immediately made for an entry. On June 26, 1812, the vessel and cargo was seized for a violation of the nonimportation act. On March 20, 1813, the forfeiture was remitted by the Secretary. The goods are not liable to double duty under the act of July 1, 1812.—Perots v. United States (1 Pet. C. C., 256; 19 Fed. Cas., 258).

(c) A person purchased sugars in a foreign port and expressed an intention of shipping them to the United States, and the charter party was for a voyage to a certain foreign port for a cargo, thence to New York or Boston, as ordered. Before the ship sailed from the port at which she was lying a stipulation was added to the charter party, giving the charterers the option of sending the vessel to Falmouth for orders to discharge at one of the several enumerated foreign ports. Before the departure of the ship the purchaser notified the parties through whom the purchase was made that the vessel would not got go to America. The bill of lading and all the papers were made out to send the vessel to Falmouth for orders, and the goods were consigned to Hamburg. When the ship arrived at Falmouth the purchaser ordered her to proceed to Boston, where she arrived January 22, 1862. Held, that the goods were not on August 5, 1861, while the ship was on the voyage to Falmouth, bound to the United States, and the cargo was dutiable under the act of August 5, 1861.—Gossler v. Goodrich (3 Cliff., 71; 10 Fed. Cas., 836).

(d) Section 20 of the act of June 30, 1864, did not have a retroactive effect. Its intention was to equalize the joint resolution of April 29, 1864, as between two classes of persons—those whose goods, owing to a failure to enforce the resolution until a late hour on April 30, 1864, had gone into consumption upon payment of the former rates of duty, and those who on later hours of the same day had been compelled to pay the extra duty of 50 per cent upon similar entries—but it made no provision for those who, although their goods arrived on April 29 or 30, did not on those days enter them for consumption.—Smith v. Draper (5 Blatchf. 238; 2 Int. Rev. Rec., 6; 22 Fed. Cas., 523).

(e) The intention of section 10, act of 1883, is that all goods remaining in bonded warehouses on July 1, 1883, entitled to be withdrawn under R. S. 2971, 2972, should be subject to no higher duties than this act imposes.—Abbott & Co., v. United States (20 Cl. Cls. R., 280).

(f) Emery stone was dutiable at $6 per ton on June 30, 1883. Under the act of 1883 it was free on and after July 1, 1883. Emery stone arrived at the port of New York on June 30, 1883, too late to go into store or bonded warehouse on that day. July 1 being Sunday, the stone was entered on July 2. It was claimed that this importation was free under this act and that for this purpose the deck of the vessel should be considered a bonded warehouse. Held, that the stone was dutiable at $6 per ton.—McAndrew v. Robertson (29 Fed. Rep., 246).

(a) A vessel arrived at a port of the United States from a foreign port on June 30, 1883, and was entered at the custom-house on that day. A custom-house inspector took charge of it and the vessel remained with unbroken hatches until after the following July 1. Held, that the goods on board, being in the custody and under the control of the officers of the customs, were "in a public store" or "bonded warehouse" within the meaning of section 10, act of 1883, and were subject to the duty imposed by the act of 1883.—Hartranft v. Oliver (125 U. S., 525).

(b) Goods imported under the act of 1883 placed in bonded warehouse and remaining there more than three years prior to the act of 1890, could not be withdrawn for consumption upon payment of duties under the act of 1890, nor after the act of 1894 could they be withdrawn at the rates specified thereby; for sections 2970–2973 were not repealed, either expressly or by implication, by the acts of 1890 or 1894, and the right to enforce the payment of the duties and charges prescribed by the act of 1883 was under such circumstances "a right accrued," so as to be within the saving clause of section 54, act of 1890, and the liability of the goods was "a liability under a prior law" within the saving clause of the act of 1894. T. D. 16090, G. A. 3054, reversed.—In re Secretary of the Treasury (C. C.), (71 Fed. Rep., 505).

(c) Steel rails imported and placed under bond, the warehouse entries being liquidated under paragraph 147, act of 1883. They remained in the warehouse over three years and became liable to be regarded as abandoned under R. S. 2971. Sale was postponed by the Secretary at the request of the importers, and in the meantime the tariff acts of 1890 and 1894 were passed. The importer offered to withdraw the rails and pay the duty provided by the act of 1894, claiming that the duty payable on withdrawal had been reduced by the act of 1890 and the act of 1894, and that R. S. 2971 had been repealed. Held, that said section was not repealed or modified by the act of June 10, 1890, section 29, or by the act of October 1, 1890, sections 54 and 55, or by the act of 1894, section 72; that the right to sell the rails for duties, etc., due was "an accrued right" within the saving clause of such acts; and that the goods were liable for the duties provided by the act of 1883, in force at the time of their abandonment. 71 Fed. Rep., 505, affirmed.—Anglo-California Bank v. Secretary of Treasury (C. C. A.), (76 Fed. Rep., 742).

(d) The plaintiff prior to July 14, 1862, made certain importations into the United States and warehoused the same. Upon these importations the duties were ascertained according to the existing act of August 5, 1861, which was in force at the time of the importations. The goods were withdrawn for consumption after August 1, 1862, and after the act of July 14, 1862, took effect, each withdrawal having been made more than three months from the date of importation, but less than three months from the date of the deposit in the warehouse. Held, that the importations were subject to the duties prescribed by this act.—United States v. Benzon (2 Cliff., 512; 24 Fed. Cas., 1112).

(e) Under the act of August 5, 1861, section 5 (12 Stat., 292), the importer could withdraw his goods from the warehouse within three months from the time of depositing them there; but by this section the period was changed to three months from the date of the original importation. Held, that this act in its application to a case of this nature was operative and constitutional.—United States v. Benzon (2 Cliff., 512; 24 Fed. Cas., 1112).

(a) The provisions of the act of 1861, relative to the time in which the importations might be withdrawn from the warehouse, are not to be considered a contract between the importer and the Government, but a regulation of a privilege granted by the Government, which privilege the Government may entirely withhold. Similar changes have frequently been made upon this subject.—Id.

(b) The importation of goods, as between the importer and the Government, is not complete as long as the goods remain in the custody of the officers of the customs; and until they are delivered to the importer, whether on shipboard or in warehouse, they are subject to any duties on imports which Congress may see fit to impose and to new legislation as well in relation to duties as to alteration in warehouse laws.—Id.

(c) Under the act of March 7, 1864 (13 Stat., 16), an additional duty of 40 cents a gallon was imposed on all distilled spirits imported from foreign countries prior to the passage of that act.—Westfall v. Shook (5 Blatchf., 383; 5 Int. Rev. Rec., 54; 29 Fed. Cas., 795).

(d) The fact that such spirits were in a bonded warehouse at the time of the passage of the act does not exempt them from such tax.—Westfall v. Shook (5 Blatchf., 383; 5 Int. Rev. Rec., 54; 29 Fed. Cas., 795).

(e) The Secretary has power to direct the additional duty to be paid to a collector of internal revenue.—Id.

(f) Under section 19, act of June 30, 1864 (13 Stat., 202), all teas in warehouse on July 1, 1864, were subject to a duty of 25 cents per pound when afterwards withdrawn for consumption.—Smith v. Draper (3 Blatchf., 238; 2 Int. Rev. Rec., 6; 22 Fed. Cas., 523).

(g) On December 1, 1866, a warehouse bond was given for the payment of the duties then existing or to be thereafter enacted on certain brandy. The condition of the bond was that the obligors should after the expiration of one year and before the expiration of three years from the date of the bond withdraw the brandy and pay the amount of the penalty of the bond or the true amount, when ascertained, of duties imposed on the brandy and an additional sum equal to 10 per cent of the said duties. From a date prior to December 1, 1869, until January 1, 1871, the duty on brandy was $3 per gallon. By section 21 of the act of July 14, 1870, which went into effect January 1, 1871, the duty was reduced to $2 per gallon. After January 1, 1871, the brandy was sold at auction by the United States for the nonpayment of duties and a suit was brought on the bond to recover the amount of duties due beyond the proceeds of the sale. Held, that the proper rate of duty was the rate imposed at the expiration of three years from the date of the bond, namely, December 1, 1869, which was $3 per proof gallon and an additional duty equal to 10 per cent thereof; and not $2 per gallon under the act of 1870.—United States v. Duvivier (12 Blatchf., 449; 25 Fed Cas., 969).

Sec. 34. That sections one to twenty-four, both inclusive, of an Act entitled "An Act to reduce taxation, to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes," which became a law on the twenty-eighth day of August, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed, said repeal to take effect on and after the passage of this Act, but the repeal of existing laws or modifications thereof embraced in this Act shall not affect any act done, or any right accruing or accrued, or any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil cause before the said repeal or modifications; but all rights and liabilities under said laws shall continue and may be enforced in the same manner as if said repeal or modifications had not been made. Any offenses committed and all penalties or forfeitures or liabilities incurred prior to the passage of this Act under any statute embraced in or changed, modified, or repealed by this Act may be prosecuted or punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if this Act had not been passed. All acts of limitation, whether applicable to civil 1897 causes and proceedings or to the prosecution of offenses or for the recovery of penalties or forfeitures embraced in or modified, changed, or repealed by this Act shall not be affected thereby; and all suits, proceedings, or prosecutions, whether civil or criminal, for causes arising or acts done or committed prior to the passage of this Act may be commenced and prosecuted within the same time and with the same effect as if this Act had not been passed: And provided further, That nothing in this Act shall be construed to repeal the provisions of section three thousand and fifty-eight of the Revised Statutes as amended by the Act approved February twenty-third, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, in respect to the abandonment of merchandise to underwriters or the salvors of property, and the ascertainment of duties thereon: And provided further, That nothing in this Act shall be construed to repeal or in any manner affect the sections numbered seventy-three, seventy-four, seventy-five, seventy-six, and seventy-seven of an Act entitled "An Act to reduce taxation, to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes," which became a law on the twenty-eighth day of August, eighteen hundred and ninety-four.

SEC. 72. All Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed, but the repeal of existing laws or modifications thereof embraced in this Act shall not affect any act done, or any right accruing or accrued, or any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil cause before the said repeal or modifications; but all rights and liabilities under said laws shall continue and may be enforced in the same manner as if said repeal or modifications had not been made. Any offenses committed and all penalties or forfeitures or liabilities incurred prior to the passage of this Act under any statute embraced in or changed, modified, or repealed by this Act may be prosecuted or punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if this Act had not been passed. All acts of limitation, whether 1894 applicable to civil causes and proceedings or to the prosecution of offenses of for the recovery of penalties or forfeitures embraced in or modified, changed, or repealed by this Act shall not be affected thereby; and all suits, proceedings, or prosecutions, whether civil or criminal, for causes arising or acts done or committed prior to the passage of this Act, may be commenced and prosecuted within the same time and with the same effect as if this Act had not been passed: And provided further, That nothing in this Act shall be construed to repeal the provisions of section three thousand and fifty-eight of the Revised Statutes as amended by the Act approved February twenty-third, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, in respect to the abandonment of merchandise to underwriters or the salvors of property, and the ascertainment of duties thereon.

SEC. 55. That all laws and parts of laws inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed: Provided, however, That the repeal of existing laws, or modifications thereof, embraced in this act shall not affect any act done or any right accruing or accrued, or any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil cause before the said repeal or modifications, but all rights and liabilities under said laws shall continue and may be enforced in the same manner as if said repeal or modification had not been made.

Any offenses committed, and all penalties or forfeitures or liabilities 1890 incurred under any statute embraced in, or changed, modified, or repealed by this act may be prosecuted and punished, in the same manner and with the same effect as if this act had not been passed. All acts of limitation, whether applicable to civil causes and proceedings or to the prosecution of offenses, or for the recovery of penalties or forfeitures, embraced in or modified, changed, or repealed by this act, shall not be affected thereby, and all suits, proceedings, or prosecutions, whether civil or criminal, for causes arising or acts done or committed prior to the passage of this act may be commenced and prosecuted within the same time and with the same effect as if this act had not been passed.

SEC. 11. Nothing in this act shall in any way change or impair the force or effect of any treaty between the United States and any other government, or any laws passed in pursuance of or for the execution of any such treaty, so long as such treaty shall remain in force in respect of the subjects embraced in this act; but whenever any such treaty, so far as the same respects said subjects, shall expire or be otherwise terminated, the provisions of this act shall be in force in all respects in the same manner and to the same extent as if no such treaty had existed at the time of the passage hereof.

SEC. 13. That the repeal of existing laws or modifications thereof embraced in this act shall not affect any act done, or any right accruing or accrued, or any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil cause, before the said repeal or modifications; but all rights and liabilities under 1883 said laws shall continue and may be enforced in the same manner as if said repeal or modifications had not been made, nor shall said repeal or modifications in any manner affect the right to any office, or change the term or tenure thereof. Any offenses committed, and all penalties or forfeitures or liabilities incurred under any statute embraced in or changed, modified, or repealed by this act may be prosecuted and punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if this act had not been passed. All acts of limitation, whether applicable to civil causes and proceedings or to the prosecution of offenses or for the recovery of penalties or forfeitures embraced in or modified, changed or repealed by this act, shall not be affected thereby; and all suits, proceedings, or prosecutions, whether civil or criminal, for causes arising or acts done or committed prior to the passage of this act, may be commenced and prosecuted within the same time and with the same effect as if this act had not been passed.

[The following section (25) of the act of 1894 remains in force, not being affected by the repealing clauses of the tariff law of 1897. Section 52 of the act of 1890, which it superseded, is inserted for purposes of comparison.]

SEC. 25. That the value of foreign coin as expressed in the money of account of the United States shall be that of the pure metal of such coin of standard value; and the values of the standard coins in circulation of the various nations of the world shall be estimated quarterly by the Director of the Mint, and be proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury immediately after the passage of this Act and thereafter quarterly on the first day of January, April, July, and October in each year. And the values so proclaimed shall be followed in estimating the value of all for-1894 eign merchandise exported to the United States during the quarter for which the value is proclaimed, and the date of the consular certification of any invoice shall, for the purposes of this section, be considered the date of exportation: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may order the reliquidation of any entry at a different value, whenever satisfactory evidence shall be produced to him showing that the value in United States currency of the foreign money specified in the invoice was, at the date of certification, at least ten per centum more or less than the value proclaimed during the quarter in which the consular certification occurred.

SEC. 52. That the value of foreign coin as expressed in the money of account of the United States shall be that of the pure metal of such coin of standard value; and the values of the standard coins in circu-
1890 lation of the various nations of the world shall be estimated quarterly by the Director of the Mint, and be proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury immediately after the passage of this act and thereafter quarterly on the first day of January, April, July and October in each year.

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 25, ACT OF 1894.

(a) In reducing foreign standard coins to United States currency the basis in all cases is the value of the pure metal in such coins and not their exchange value. This long-established rule was not changed by the proviso to this section, where it appeared that the value specified in the invoice had varied at the time of the invoice more than 10 per cent from that proclaimed by the Secretary for that quarter; and the collector is not authorized, because the consular certificate accompanying the invoice shows the current exchange value of the money of the invoice to be more than 10 per cent greater or less than the proclaimed value for the quarter, to depart from such proclaimed value and adopt for the purpose of assessing duty the exchange value shown by the certificate.—United States v. J. Alston Newhall & Co. (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 525); but see United States v. Whitridge (197 U. S., 135; T. D. 26126).

(a) Entry made on an invoice in rupees and liquidation not in accordance with the proclaimed value, but at a higher value, the collector assuming to act under the proviso that the Secretary may order reliquidation on satisfactory evidence that the value of the foreign money exceeds by 10 per cent the proclaimed value. The importer made protest. After protest the Secretary wrote the collector that he was satisfied the value of the foreign money was more than 10 per cent greater than the proclaimed value, and that under the authority conferred on him he approved the collector's action. Held, that the importer had a right to have a proper liquidation in the first instance, which right was fixed by the protest, and was not affected by the subsequent action of the Secretary.—United States v. Beebe (C. C. A.), (106 Fed. Rep., 75), affirming 103 id., 785, and T. D. 21423, G. A. 4498.

(b) The action of the collector in declining to accept the proclaimed value of a foreign standard coin and adopting the value declared in the consular certificate, thereby increasing the amount of duties, although approved by the Secretary, is reviewable on protest by the Board of General Appraisers and by the Circuit Court. T. D. 21423, G. A. 4498, sustained.—United States v. Beebe (C. C.), (103 Fed. Rep., 785); see T. D. 26570, G. A. 6093, post.

(c) The power conferred upon the Director of the Mint to estimate "the values of the standard coins in circulation of the various nations of the world," necessarily involves the power to determine in the first instance whether or not a certain coin is standard. His proclaimed finding that a particular coin is a standard coin is conclusive upon customs officers and his omission of such coin from later proclamations is an indication that he no longer considers it a standard coin.—T. D. 23422, G. A. 5047.

(d) Where the currency of the invoice is a standard one, based on coin, the proclamation of the Director of the Mint fixes its value; if it is a depreciated currency the value shown by the certificate of the consul should be taken.—Cramer v. Arthur (102 U. S., 612, 619) followed; T. D. 23422, G. A. 5047.

(e) The invoices of certain imported pineapples were made out in Mexican dollars, such being the currency in which the goods were purchased. On each of the invoices were noted the exchange equivalents of the amount thereof in sterling and United States gold. Held, that the collector erred in liquidating the entries on the basis of such exchange equivalents of the amounts of the invoices; that he should have liquidated on the basis of the value of the Mexican dollar as estimated by the Director of the Mint and proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury for the respective quarters within which the invoices were certified by the United States consul.—T. D. 25596, G. A. 5792.

(f) The authority conferred upon the Director of the Mint to estimate the values of standard coins under the provisions of this section necessarily includes the power to determine in the first instance whether or not a certain coin used in a foreign country is in fact a monetary standard. The standard value of the rupee not having been thus proclaimed at the time of the exportations in question, it was proper for the collector to liquidate the entries in standard gold dollars of the United States in accordance with the consular certificate attached to the invoice and article 409, Customs Regulations of 1899.—T. D. 26188, G. A. 5979.

(a) In an invoice of goods exported from the Kingdom of Greece, where the currency of the invoice is described as drachmas, it is presumed to refer to the standard coin of that name and not to a depreciated or paper currency; and in the absence of a consular currency certificate complying with the requirements of article 692, Consular Regulations, no allowance can be made lawfully for any depreciated currency.—Hecht v. Magone (T. D. 10013); T. D. 26448, G. A. 6066.

(b) Where there is no question that the price paid for imported merchandise is the market value thereof, and such merchandise is entered on an invoice made out in terms which do not express the unit of value of any country or any coin, the value of which has been estimated by the Director of the Mint, or the name of any coin, the value of which has been estimated by the Director of the Mint and proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to this section, the collector in determining the amount in the money of the United States upon which tariff duties should be assessed should ascertain the exact amount paid for such merchandise in the money of account of the United States, and upon this amount duty should be assessed. The Republic of Cuba has no currency or coin of its own in circulation and no monetary unit, and the term "Spanish gold," in which the unit of value is expressed, does not appear in any of the quarterly estimates made by the Director of the Mint and proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury, and has no definite meaning, and is not known to be the name of any coin or unit of value in Cuba or any other country; hence, in translating the terms of the invoices expressed in Spanish gold to the money of the United States this section is not applicable.—T. D. 26515, G. A. 6083.

(c) Where the exchange value of the invoice currency is found to differ more than 10 per cent from the value of the pure metal therein as ascertained by the Director of the Mint and proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury for the respective quarters covering importations, the entries of which have been liquidated upon the basis of such pure metal value, the Secretary of the Treasury under the authority conferred on him by this section has full power to order a reliquidation of such entries on the basis of the exchange value of the invoice currency.—United States v. Whitridge (197 U. S., 135; T. D. 26126), reversing 129 Fed. Rep., 33; T. D. 25154, and T. D. 23632, G. A. 5110, and overruling in effect United States v. Beebe (122 Fed. Rep., 762; 117 id., 670) and T. D. 23384, G. A. 5033, followed; T. D. 26570, G. A. 6093.

(d) Where the collector under orders from the Secretary of the Treasury makes a reliquidation under the proviso to this section, the Board of General Appraisers will in the first instance take jurisdiction of the case for the purpose of ascertaining whether such reliquidation was lawful and in accordance with the powers conferred by law on the Secretary of the Treasury. If the Secretary of the Treasury acts within the scope of his authority, the Board is without jurisdiction to review his action, as it is not the decision of the collector within the meaning of section 14, act of June 10, 1890, but that of the Secretary. United States v. Beebe (103 Fed. Rep., 785). Protests against such reliquidation should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction.—T. D. 26570, G. A. 6093.

(e) Where the collector reliquidates entries expressed in silver rupees of India upon the basis of a value different from that estimated by the Director of the Mint and proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury for the quarter covering such exportations, his action is unlawful and the subsequent approval of the Secretary of the Treasury will not validate his action or legally constitute a reliquidaton by the Secretary of the Treasury. Importers have a right to have a proper liquidation made by the collector in the first instance prior to any action being taken to make a reliquidation ordered by the Secretary of the Treasury.—United States v. Beebe (106 Fed. Rep., 75) followed; T. D. 26571, G. A. 6094.

(a) When no standard value of a coin has been found by the Director of the Mint and proclaimed by the Secretary of the Treasury, an invoice expressed in such coin may be converted into terms of standard gold dollars of the United States by the collector. Indian currency acts reviewed.—T. D. 26572, G. A. 6095.

(b) Under this section the date of certification of an invoice by the American consul is conclusive evidence of the time of exportation.—United States v. Lawrence (137 Fed. Rep., 466; T. D. 26121), reversing 127 id., 750; T. D. 25073, followed; T. D. 26816, G. A. 6188.

(c) The value of foreign coins as proclaimed by virtue of the authority contained in this section is conclusive on the Board and the courts and not subject to review, and it is immaterial that the importer paid for this currency in the country of exportation an amount less than such proclaimed value.—T. D. 28348, G. A. 6649.

(d) A collector of customs liquidated duties at the exchange value of the rupee and subsequently sustained a protest of the importers against this action, and reliquidated the entry at the pure-metal value of the rupee. He did not, however, make any actual refund of duties. Subsequently, under instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury he reliquidated the entry at the exchange value. It was held that this third liquidation was legal as being within the Secretary's power under this section, although more than a year had then elapsed from the time of entry; the filing of the protest by the importers, though it had been sustained, being held to have the effect of exempting the transactions from the operation of section 21, act of June 22, 1874 (18 Stat., 190), which makes the final liquidation and settlement of duties after the expiration of one year from the time of entry in the absence of protest.—Gulbenkian v. Stranahan (Fed. Rep., ; T. D. 28451).

(e) A cause of action does not accrue against a collector of customs in favor of importers where he acted in accordance with instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury issued under this section, bestowing on the Secretary the right to order reliquidation in certain cases of variation in currency values.—Ibid.

(f) The Board of General Appraisers sustained an importer's protests relative to the value of the rupee, and the collector of customs reliquidated the entries accordingly. But subsequently he reliquidated under instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury issued under this section, giving the Secretary the right to order reliquidation in certain cases of currency values. Held, that it was legal for the Secretary to issue such instructions regardless of the prior decision of the Board.—Klumpp v. Thomas (Fed. Rep., ; T. D. 28453).

(g) The Secretary of the Treasury ordered a reliquidation more than one year after entry, on the authority of this section, in a case in which a protest had been filed by the importer and sustained by the Board of General Appraisers and a reliquidation in accordance with such decision had been made. Held, that a protest having been filed, this action of the Secretary was not in contravention of section 21, act of June 22, 1874 (18 Stat., 190), forbidding reliquidation more than one year after entry, except where a protest has been filed.—Ibid.

(a) The value of foreign coin at the date of exportation is to be taken and not the value at the time of importation.—T. D. 12577, G. A. 1261.

(b) Wool invoiced in paper ruble of Russia. Held, that the value is to be taken at the date of entry and not at the date of shipment.—T. D. 11847, G. A. 838; T. D. 13050, G. A. 1555.

(c) Goods exported from Russia during the last quarter of 1891 and brought to this country during the first quarter of 1892, invoiced in paper rubles and the value converted into silver at the rate mentioned in the consular certificate, and the silver reduced to United States money at the rate given in the estimate proclaimed by the Secretary on Ocober 1, 1891. The importer claimed that the reduction should be on the estimate of January 1, 1892. Protest overruled.—T. D. 17160, G. A. 3477; modifying T. D. 13050, G. A. 1555.

(d) In estimating the value of the currency of an invoice, the collector is to be governed by the proclamation of the Secretary for the quarter in which the actual sailing of the vessel occurred.—T. D. 20954, G. A. 4400.

(e) This section and R. S. 3564 do not require the Secretary to take the valuation of the coin as established by proclamation at the date of the entry, rather than at the date of exportation, in the estimate of the value of imported merchandise. And the proclamation of July 1, 1891, and the corresponding regulations of 1892, changing the time from the former to the latter date, are valid. Sustaining the Circuit Court.—Wood v. United States (C. C. A.), (72 Fed. Rep., 254).

(f) When the value is stated in the invoice in foreign currency, the value at the time of exportation is to be taken for the purpose of fixing the value.—United States v. Knauth (C. C.), (77 Fed. Rep., 599).

(g) Russian wool of class 3 dutiable under paragraph 385, act of 1890, was invoiced in paper rubles. Attached to the invoice was a certificate of the United States consul as to the value of the paper ruble. The appraiser found the value at the time of the shipment as given by reducing the paper to United States money at the rate fixed by the consul to be the true market value. The collector assessed duty on a valuation based on the value of the ruble as fixed by the Secretary in proclamation of October 1, 1890, under the act of October, 1890. Held, (1) that the appraiser exhausted his powers when he found the value in paper rubles at date of shipment; (2) that it was exclusively the duty of the collector at the date of entry to reduce the ruble to its equivalent in gold dollars; (3) that the President can not fix an arbitrary valne to depreciated currency without regard to its intrinsic value; (4) that the instructions given by the Secretary as to the value of depreciated currency are to be regarded as given by the President; (5) that by regulations established by the President the value of the paper ruble was that given in the consular certificate. (Article 1294, Regulations 1884, and T. D. 7398).—T. D. 11847, G. A. 838.

(h) Invoice of wool made out in Russian paper rubles, the extension being made in paper and silver rubles, and the consul in certifying the value included both the given number of paper and silver rubles, in addition to which he separately certified the value of the paper ruble. Held, that the value of the merchandise in silver rubles, given by the consul and returned correct by the appraiser, was binding on the collector and the entry should have been liquidated in accordance with the value of the silver ruble as proclaimed by the Director of the Mint. (See T. D. 11752 and 11800.)—T. D. 12625, G. A. 1274.

(a) Invoice made out in Italian lira, a depreciated currency, the value of which was certified to by the consul as prescribed in Executive order of August 11, 1892. The collector estimated the value as proclaimed for the standard coin of Italy. Held, that the value should have been estimated on the certificate of the consul.—T. D. 13511, G. A. 1813.

(b) Goods purchased in Malaga and paid for in money of Great Britain, which is the custom of that place. The consul refused to certify the invoices in such currency, but forced the importer to make the invoice in the Spanish peseta, estimated by him. Held, that the entry was under compulsion, that the invoices are illegal, and that on the receipt of an invoice made in the currency actually paid the appellants are entitled to make entry on same.—T. D. 14246, G. A. 2210.

(c) The gist of the certificate of the consul is the percentage of depreciation, the statement of the total being merely an extension or computation. The consul could not certify the value in United States money, but only in the standard currency of the country of exportation.—T. D. 17170, G. A. 3487.

(d) Consular certificates must be presented with invoices at the time of entry; (2) they must follow the form prescribed by the President (T. D. 11661); (3) they must state the percentage of depreciation from the standard coin or currency of the country.—T. D. 17252, G. A. 3514.

(e) Invoice value is value per unit of quantity and not the value stated in the invoice for the total importation. The currency of the invoice is the currency in which the invoice value is given, and a total valuation in a different currency is to be ignored.—T. D. 18914, G. A. 4071.

(f) The importer is bound by statements in foreign currency on entry on pro forma invoice.—T. D. 13485, G. A. 1787.

(g) Invoice made out in paper florins of Austria-Hungary. No consular certificate giving the value of the paper florin accompanied the invoice. In reducing the invoice currency to United States money the collector estimated the florin at $0.482, the value of the gold florin as proclaimed by the Secretary. The importer claimed that the collector should have adopted the silver florin as the standard value as proclaimed by the Secretary, which was $0.32. Held, (1) that the collector's action was correct, for the reason that in the proclamation of July 1, 1892, fixing the value of foreign coins, and the footnote thereto, silver was stated to be only the nominal standard, while paper was the actual standard, the depreciation of which was to be measured by the gold standard; (2) the action of the collector in adopting the gold standard at the estimate fixed was not subject to review by the Board of Appraisers; (3) a Circuit Court has jurisdiction to review the action of the Board of General Appraisers in entertaining such an appeal and in reversing the action of the collector in that respect.—United States v. Klingenberg (153 U. S., 93).

(h) The invoice of goods purchased in Austria stated the value in both florins and marks, florins being the legal currency. The collector on reducing both expressions of value found that the florins gave $207 and the marks $240, and assessed the duty on the latter valuation. Held, that this was erroneous; that the value must be taken in the legal currency of the country where the purchase was made; and this was not merely a question of appraised value, which could not be raised by protest, under section 14, act of June 10, 1890.—United States v. Klingenberg (C. C.), (77 Fed. Rep., 279).

(a) A proclamation of the Secretary stated the value of the florin of Austria-Hungary to be $0.482 according to the gold standard, $0.32 according to the silver standard, with silver the nominal standard, paper the actual standard, its depreciation measured by the gold standard. Held, that a valuation of imported merchandise in florins must be reduced to United States currency on the basis of the gold standard.—Reversing the Board of General Appraisers.—United States v. Knauth (C. C.), (77 Fed. Rep., 599).

(b) The value of foreign coins as estimated by the Director and proclaimed by the Secretary is conclusive upon customs officers and importers.—Hadden v. Merritt (115 U. S., 25); T. D. 20448, G. A. 4319; U. S. v. Knauth (77 Fed. Rep., 599).

(c) The proclamation of October 1, 1890, presumed to have been issued when the act of 1890 was in effect.—T. D. 10872, G. A. 367.

(d) Section 52 of the act of October 1, 1890, repeals R. S. 3564, and goods purchased August 12, 1890, invoiced in rupees, entered October 5, 1890, and entry liquidated December 26, 1890, should be assessed on the value of the rupee as proclaimed by the Secretary October 1, 1890.—T. D. 10876, G. A. 371.

(e) Goods shipped from Austria on November 19, 1890, and invoice made out in florins. The value was estimated on the value of the florin as proclaimed by the Director of the Mint on October 1, 1890. Held, that the value thus established is to be taken until January 1, 1891, unless it is shown that the paper florin in which payment was made is a depreciated currency.—T. D. 11875, G. A. 866.

(f) Wool invoiced in Chinese taels on April 16 and 30, 1890, entered November 12, 1890, and duty liquidated in accordance with value as proclaimed October 1, 1890. Protest overruled.—T. D. 12038, G. A. 951.

(g) As to the value of the Turkish piaster.—T. D. 13000, G. A. 1551.

(h) On July 5, 1892, the Austrian paper florin was not a depreciated currency.—T. D. 13495, G. A. 1797.

(i) Goods invoiced in Persian krans, which were estimated at eight to the dollar and which the importer claims are worth nine and one-fourth to the dollar. The kran not being included in the estimate promulgated by the Secretary, the Board accepts the statement of the Imperial Bank of Persia, in London, which gives 45 krans to the pound, being the equivalent of 9¼ krans to a dollar.—T. D. 14827, G. A. 2510.

DECISIONS UNDER EARLIER STATUTES ON SAME SUBJECT MATTER.

(j) Merchandise purchased at Dux, a town in Bohemia near the border of the German Empire. Each item in the invoice specified in rix marks and in florins, the florin being the currency of Austria. The consul at Prague certified the invoice in accordance with the R. S. 2838. Invoice value found to be correct.—T. D. 10561, G. A. 211.

(k) Austrian florins are to be valued at the rate fixed by the Director of the Mint.—Meyer v. Cooper (C. C.), (44 Fed. Rep., 55).

(l) Merchandise purchased in Bohemia, within the Empire of Austria-Hungary, of which country the florin was the standard currency, was invoiced to the importer at New York, and the values in rix marks and florins, the value of the florin being stated in the certificate of the consul annexed to the invoice as 41.57 cents. Held, that the value of the merchandise should have been estimated in florins reduced to United States currency on the basis of 34.5 cents to the florin, as declared by the Director of the Mint and proclaimed by the Secretary on the 1st of January previous, and not in rix marks at 23.8 cents to the rix mark, although the total value of the goods in United States money was greater by the latter process.—In re McCarty (C. C.), (46 Fed. Rep., 360).

(a) The act of May 22, 1846, section 1 (9 Stat., 114), enacting that "in all computations at the custom-house the franc of France * * * shall be estimated at eighteen cents and six mills," is repealed by the act of March 3, 1873 (17 Stat., 602). Held, accordingly, that the Director of the Mint having estimated the franc of France at 19 cents and 3 mills, and the Secretary of the Treasury having on January 1, 1874, proclaimed it as of that value, goods invoiced in French francs and entered in March, 1874, were to be charged at the new valuation of the franc.—The Collector v. Richards, (23 Wallace, 246).

(b) The valuation of foreign standard coins under R. S. 3564 is as binding on collectors and importers as if declared by statute, and evidence is not admissible to show that it is inaccurate.—Cramer v. Arthur (102 U. S., 612).

(c) Wool of the third class was dutiable at 3 cents per pound if its value at the last port or place of exportation to the United States, excluding charges in such port, was 12 cents or less per pound, and at 6 cents per pound if such value exceeded 12 cents per pound. On January 5, 1874, such wool bought in Russia in October, 1873, the actual cost of which, exclusive of charges, was below 12 cents per pound at the time and place of exportation, was entered at the custom-house at New York at an invoice value stated in Russian silver rubles. The collector computed the ruble at 77.17 cents under the authority of a proclamation to that effect made by the Secretary in December, 1873, in pursuance of an estimation of the value of the ruble for 1874 made by the Director of the Mint. Prior to that act the value of the ruble had been fixed at 75 cents. If the ruble had been computed at 75 cents the invoice value would have been less than 12 cents per pound. Computing it at 77.17 raised such value above 12 cents per pound. The collector exacted a duty of 6 cents per pound. In an action to recover, held, (1) the effect of the act of March 3, 1873, was to repeal the act of 1843; (2) the requirements of section 7 of the act of March 3, 1865, forbade the assessment of duty on an amount less than the invoice value; (3) the collector was therefore required to compute the ruble at 77.17 cents, although the cost of the goods, computing the ruble at 75 cents, was 12 cents or less per pound.—Heinemann v. Arthur's Executors (120 U. S., 82).

(d) Wool purchased in Buenos Ayres and paid for in depreciated paper dollars. Between the date of the purchase and the date of shipment wool depreciated in value. If the purchase price had been reduced to money of the United States at its ratio on the day of purchase the value of the wool would have been less than 12 cents per pound. If the value at the date of shipment had been reduced at the price of the paper money on that day the value would have been less than 12 cents. The only way to make the price exceed 12 cents per pound was to reduce the purchase price as given in the invoice to money of the United States at the value of the paper money on the day of shipment. This method was followed and the value assessed at more than 12 cents and duty assessed at 6 instead of 3 cents per pound. Held, that this appraisement was not conclusive on the court, although no reappraisement was demanded, and as the wool was actually worth less than 12 cents at the time and place of shipment the importer could recover the excess of duty paid.—Davidson v. Draper (5 Int. Rev. Rec., 94; 7 Fed. Cas., 31).

(e) It is not essential to a coin that it should bear the date of its issue, nor that it should bear the name or insignia of the sovereign, nor that it should be of any particular form, nor that its counterfeiting be made a crime by statute.

(a) Small masses of silver, not always uniform in size nor regular in shape, but conforming generally to an oval shape, like that of a hat turned upside down or of a Chinese shoe, marked, by an officer selected by the consensus of Chinese bankers, with characters indicating the fineness and the number of taels or the weight of the silver therein, and circulated in China as the only money of account, are coins of China, and the value of a tael of same is a proper subject of annual estimation by the Director of the Mint and of proclamation by the Secretary.—Id.

(b) If the value of a foreign coin be estimated by the Director of the Mint upon the basis used by him in estimating the value of other foreign coins of the same metal, proclaimed by the Secretary on the 1st day of January of any year, and be proclaimed by the Secretary during a subsequent month of the same year, the director, in the absence of any proof to the contrary, will be presumed to have performed his entire duty and to have made such estimation of value at the time required by section 3564, R. S., and the proclamation during such subsequent month by the Secretary of the value so estimated is a compliance by him with the requirements of that section.—Gordon v. Magone (C. C.), (40 Fed. Rep., 747).

(c) An importer being required under section 36 of the act of March 2, 1792, to specify in his entry the species of money in which the invoice is made out, and it being required by section 2 of the act of March 3, 1801, that the invoices of goods subject to ad valorem duty shall be made out in the currency of the country from which the importation is made and shall contain a statement of the actual cost in such currency, without respect to the value of the coins of the United States in such country, and it being provided by section 61 of the act of 1799 that all denominations of foreign money not therein enumerated shall be estimated in value, as nearly as may be, according to the intrinsic value thereof as compared with the money of the United States, an importer whose invoice and entry are correctly made out in a denomination of foreign money not enumerated in said section is entitled to have the value of his goods estimated, for the purposes of duties, according to the intrinsic value of such foreign money compared with the money of the United States.—De Forest v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 478; 7 Fed. Cas., 364).

(d) Under the proviso to section 61, act of March 2, 1799, an importer of goods from Austria is entitled to enter them on the payment of duties on their specie value, although the invoice is made out in a depreciated paper currency legitimated by the Austrian Government; but in order to avail himself of the benefit of the proviso the deterioration of the invoice currency must be proved in the manner required by the proviso.—Dutilh v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 541; 8 Fed. Cas., 168).

(e) Accordingly as the proviso authorizes the President to make regulations for estimating the duties on goods invoiced in a depreciated currency issued under the authority of a foreign government, held, that under a Treasury circular requiring invoices of goods when made out in such depreciated currency to be accompanied by a consular certificate showing the specie value of such currency the presentation of such certificate is a prerequisite to any correction of the invoice or to any relief founded upon such depreciation in currency.—Id.

(f) Where no such certificate accompanies the invoice and no bond for its production is given its place can not be supplied by parol evidence of the depreciation of the currency.—Id.

(g) Where duties on an importation are fully paid, a consular certificate of depreciation of the foreign paper currency in which the invoice was made up can not be afterwards presented to the collectors so as to entitle the importer to recover back the duties paid on the difference between the specie value of the goods and their invoice value.—Dutilh v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 548; 8 Fed. Cas., 170).

(a) It is not necessary that a consul's certificate as to the value of paper currency should be presented with the invoice when the entry is made, but if it is not so presented a bond must be given to produce it.—Craig v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 545; 6 Fed. Cas., 728).

(b) When such a certificate is rejected, or when an offer is made to produce one and the collector does not exact such bond, it will be presumed that the collector refused to be governed by such certificate if exhibited.—Id.

(c) Where two entries on importations from the same Austrian port were made not much over one month apart, and the goods were valued in the invoices in both cases in a depreciated paper currency, and a deduction was claimed in both cases on that account, a proper consular certificate having been presented to the collector in the first case and rejected on the ground that no allowance for depreciation could be made, and there being a proper written protest in the second case, held, although the importer presented no consular certificate with his entry in the second case, he was entitled in that case to a deduction of the rate of depreciation stated in the certificate in the first case.—Reynolds v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 555; 20 Fed. Cas., 623).

(d) Under section 61, act of 1799, the President has, through circulars from the Treasury Department, regulated the manner in which the costs of goods invoiced in a foreign depreciated currency shall be estimated in United States currency.—Rich v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 127; 20 Fed. Cas., 677).

(e) Such regulation is in force in respect to depreciation of the Austrian florin, occurring since the act of May 22, 1846.—Id.

(f) To entitle an importer to an allowance for any depreciation of Austrian currency his invoice must be accompanied by a consular certificate of the value of such currency.—Id.

(g) It is not necessary for the collector to demand such certificate from the importer; but the importer must offer to the collector such certificate, or a bond must be given to produce it thereafter, in order to be entitled to an allowance for such depreciation.—Id.

(h) The proviso to section 61, act of March 2, 1799, is not repealed by the act of May 22, 1846 (9 Stat., 14), which prescribes the rates at which foreign coins shall be estimated in computations at the custom-house.—Grant v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 220; 26 Hunt Mer. Mag., 60; 10 Fed. Cas., 981).

(i) Notwithstanding the act of May 22, 1846, an importer of foreign goods is entitled, under the proviso to section 61, act of 1799, and the Treasury instructions issued for carrying the same into effect, to enter his goods upon paying duties only upon their cash value in the country of their purchase and is entitled, in order to fix their value, to have the paper or nominal value at which they were purchased and invoiced reduced to its specie value in such country at the time of the purchase and to enter the goods on that valuation.—Grant v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 220; 26 Hunt Mer. Mag., 60; 10 Fed. Cas., 981).

(j) Where goods purchased in Austria in 1850 were imported and the entry and invoice set forth the price in paper florins at which they were paid for, and it appeared that the paper florin was depreciated in Austria at the date of purchase below the value of the silver florin, although it was the legal currency in Austria and was a legal tender at its nominal value, held, that although the act of May 22, 1846, directed the florin of the Austrian Empire to be estimated at 48½ cents, yet under the proviso of section 61, act of 1799, and the Treasury instructions in regard to invoices made out in foreign depreciated currency the goods were chargeable only with duty on their value in silver florins after allowing for the depreciation.—Id.

(a) Under the proviso to section 61, act of 1799, the President can not fix an arbitrary value to foreign depreciated currency without regard to its intrinsic value as compared with the money of the United States.—De Forest v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 478; 7 Fed. Cas., 364).

(b) A consular certificate attached to an invoice, as to the value of the foreign currency in which the invoice is made out, is only prima facie evidence of such value and may be contradicted by the importer.—Id.

(c) Appraisers must in valuing importations adopt the real market value of goods abroad in cash and not their value in depreciated currency.—Lowenstein v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 401; 15 Fed. Cas., 784).

(d) Goods purchased in Austria were invoiced and entered here in florins at their specie value. The appraiser valued the goods according to the nominal value of the florin paper currency, which was 11 per cent less than its specie value. Held, that the appraisement was erroneous and should have been made in florins at their specie value.—Id.

(e) Such an erroneous appraisement is not conclusive on the importer.—Id.

(f) In an action to recover duties paid on importations valued in depreciated foreign currency, where it appears that a bond was given under Regulations of February 1, 1857, article 226, for the production of the consular certificate of its valuation in Spanish or United States silver dollars, the importer can not recover if he fails to show that such certificate was produced within the time prescribed in the bond.—Cousinery v. Schell (34 Fed. Rep., 272).

(g) Pursuant to R. S. 2903, regulations were established that where the standard value of a foreign currency has been proclaimed by the Secretary in the manner provided by law such value shall control in estimating custom duties unless the collectors have been otherwise instructed or unless a depreciation in the value of that currency, "expressed in an invoice from the standard of that currency, shall be shown by consular certificate thereto attached." Held, that the proclamation and certificate are conclusive.—Cramer v. Arthur (102 U. S., 612).

(h) Under the act of March 3, 1843, the value of the Bremen thaler of 72 grotes is fixed at 71 cents, and if the collector in assessing duties in an invoice and entry made out in Bremen thalers computes the thaler at a higher rate than 71 cents the excess of duties in consequence of such computation may, if paid under a proper protest, be recovered back.—Roosevelt v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 391; 20 Fed. Cas., 1155).

CUSTOMS ADMINISTRATIVE ACT OF JUNE 10, 1890 [26 STAT., 131; U. S. COMP. STAT., 1901, P. 1886], AS AMENDED BY THE ACTS OF OCTOBER 1, 1890 [26 STAT., 567]; JULY 24, 1897 [30 STAT., 151; U. S. COMP. STAT., 1901, P. 1626]; MAY 17, 1898 [30 STAT., 417; U. S. COMP. STAT., 1901, P. 1930; T. D. 19381]; AND DECEMBER 15, 1902 [32 STAT., 753], WITH DIGEST OF DECISIONS UNDER SAID ACT AND UNDER PRIOR STATUTES RELATING TO THE SAME SUBJECT-MATTER.

An Act To simplify the laws in relation to the collection of the revenues.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all merchandise imported into the United States shall, for the purpose of this act, be deemed and held to be the property of the person to whom the merchandise may be consigned; but the holder of any bill of lading consigned to order and indorsed by the consignor shall be deemed the consignee thereof; and in case of the abandonment of any merchandise to the underwriters the latter may be recognized as the consignee.

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 1, ACT OF JUNE 10, 1890.

(a) Section 1, act of June 10, 1890, does not prohibit the consignment of goods to another than the real owner.—Burke v. Davis (C. C.), (63 Fed. Rep., 456).

(b) Section 1 of the act of June 10, 1890, providing that all imported merchandise shall be the property of the consignee, was intended to prevent frauds upon the Government arising from collusive transfers, and confers no right upon a mere consignee to make a declaration as "owner," but he must make the declaration as consignee, and in the declaration must state truly the name of the owner.—United States v. Fawcett (C. C.), (86 Fed. Rep., 900).

(c) As stated in this section, imported merchandise is, for the purpose of assessing duty, deemed the property of the consignee, and it is no defense to an action by the United States against the consignee of imported merchandise to collect additional duties incurred for undervaluation by virtue of the provisions of section 7 of the administrative act, as amended by section 32, tariff act of 1897, that the consignor, or any party who, at the request or with the consent of the consignee, procured the importation, failed to obey the latter's instructions or to comply with the terms of the contract between them. But it may be, and doubtless is, true that a stranger can not, by consigning goods to anyone who has not in any way authorized or induced him to do so, charge such a consignee, even in favor of the United States, with liabilities for duties upon the importation.—United States v. Bishop (125 Fed. Rep., 181; T. D. 25093).

(d) If a common carrier pays the duties on imported merchandise in order to get possession of the same and forward it to its destination, the carrier is not a mere volunteer, and the lien of the United States for the duties passes to it.—Wabash Railroad Company v. Pearce (192 U. S., 179; T. D. 25122).

(e) Customs brokers, to whom goods are consigned for another, are consignees under this section and are liable for additional duties assessed because of undervaluation.—Baldwin v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 217).

(f) Where a firm ordered cotton waste, which is free of duty, and the foreign shippers sent wool waste, which is dutiable, and a railway agent at the Canadian frontier made an unauthorized entry of the goods, naming the firm as consignees, it was held that they were not liable as consignees under this section for a deficiency in duties resulting from a sale of the goods consequent on the firm's refusal to receive them.—United States v. O'Neill (129 Fed. Rep., 909), affirming 122 id., 547.

(a) A custom-house broker who makes entry of imported merchandise, declaring under oath that he is the consignee, will not be heard as against the Government to deny that he is the consignee for the purpose of avoiding payment of additional duties imposed for undervaluation.—United States v. Vandiver (133 Fed. Rep., 252; T. D. 26036).

(b) Where merchandise imported by railroad is consigned by one agent of the railroad to another agent of the same road, the latter making entry at the custom-house in his own name as consignee, each being the authorized agent of the company, all parties concerned knowing they were acting for the company, the company is the consignee of the goods and is liable for the duties under this section.—United States v. Mexican International Railroad Company (151 Fed. Rep., 545; T. D. 28182).

(c) The collector of customs was held not liable for damages consequent on his delivery of goods to parties who were named in the ship's manifest as the consignees, who had entered them on a pro forma invoice and who had sworn that they were the owners and had paid the duties, but who had not produced the bill of lading. There had been no intimation to the collector of adverse interests and the holder of the bill of lading had not presented it to the collector until several weeks after entry and delivery.—Derobert v. Stranahan (126 Fed. Rep., 581; T. D. 25071). Stricken from docket of Supreme Court for want of prosecution (199 U. S., 614; T. D. 27430).

DECISIONS UNDER EARLIER STATUTES PERTAINING TO SAME SUBJECT MATTER.

(d) Imported goods sold "to arrive" were entered at the custom-house in the name of the seller and were stored in a bonded warehouse selected by the purchaser. He withdrew a portion of them upon an order signed by the seller under the Treasury Regulations, which require such an order where the goods in bond are withdrawn by any person other than the one in whose name they are entered and he afterwards became bankrupt. Held, that as to the rest of the goods the right of stoppage in transit existed in favor of the seller, and his seizure of them would not affect his right to prove his debt on account of the purchase money of those withdrawn.—In re Bearns (18 N. B. R., 500; 2 Fed. Cas., 1190).

(e) Under section 36, act of 1799, consignees are authorized to enter goods and give bonds for duties. In such case the United States have no remedy over against the owner, for whom the consignee acts, if the duties are not paid.—Knox v. Devens (5 Mason, 380; 14 Fed. Cas., 801).

(f) No person but the owner or consignee, or in case of his sickness or absence his agent or factor, is entitled to enter and bond goods at the custom-house. A subpurchaser after importation has no such right. The collector has no right to receive the bond of any person as security for the payment of duties, except such person be legally entitled to enter them.—United States v. Lyman (1 Mason, 482; 26 Fed. Cas., 1024).

(g) A consignment of a homeward cargo being "to order," the plaintiffs, who were endorsees of the bills of lading, had a right to enter the goods under sections 36 and 62, act of 1799.—Conard v. Pacific Insurance Co. of New York (6 Pet., 262).

(a) If the shipper of goods sends with them an offer in writing to the consignee to become jointly interested in the consignment, until the offer is accepted, the consignor is the sole owner.—The Venus (8 Cranch, 253).

(b) When goods are sent upon the account and risk of the shipper, the delivery to the master is delivery to him as the agent of the shipper, not of the consignee; and it is competent for the consignor at any time before actual delivery to the the consignee to countermand it and thus prevent the consignee's lien from attaching.—The Frances (8 Cranch, 418).

(c) If a British merchant purchase with his own funds two cargoes of goods in consequence of, but not in exact conformity with, the orders of an American house and ship them to America, giving to the American house an option within twenty-four hours after the receipt of his letter to take or reject both cargoes, and if they give notice within the time that they will take one cargo, but will consider as to the other; this puts it in the power of the British merchant either to cast the whole upon the American house or to resume the property and make them accountable for that which came to their hands, and therefore the right of property in the cargo not accepted does not in transit vest in the American house, but remains in the British subject, and is liable to condemnation, he being an enemy.—The Frances (9 Cranch, 183).

(d) Goods shipped by a British to an American house (partly in conformity with orders and partly without orders), who had an option to accept or reject the whole invoice in a limited time, remain the property of the shippers until the election he made to accept them.—The Frances (8 Cranch, 354).

(e) An intention of the consignors of goods to vest the right of property in the consignee is not sufficient to effect such a change of property until the goods are received by the consignee or some evidence is given of his agreement to take them on his own account; until that time the goods are at the risk of the shippers; and if they are enemies the goods, if captured, are good prize; and this though the consignee were the agent of a third person who had directed him to order the goods, unless it appears that he actually did order them.—The Frances (8 Cranch, 354, 359).

(f) Where goods were shipped from an enemy's country in pursuance of orders from this country received before the declaration of war, but previous to the execution of the orders, the shippers became embarrassed and assigned the goods to certain bankers to secure advances made by them, with a request to the consignee to remit the amount to them (the bankers), and they also repeated the same request, the invoice being for account and risk of the consignees, but stating the goods to be then the property of the bankers, it was held that the goods having been purchased and shipped in pursuance of orders from the consignees, the property was originally vested in them and was not divested by the intermediate assignment, which was merely intended to transfer the right to the debt due from the consignees.—The Mary & Susan (1 Wheat., 25).

(g) A merchant having a fixed residence at the place of his birth and carrying on business there does not acquire a foreign commercial character by occasional visits to another country.—The Nereide (9 Cranch, 388).

(h) The importer has such a right of possession as general owner that after he has duly offered to enter the goods and pay the duties he may maintain an action of trespass for the wrongful taking thereof.—Conard v. Pacific Ins. Co. of New York (6 Pet., 262).

(a) Where goods are sold while at sea the vendee acquires, without actual possession, a constructive possession sufficient to maintain trespass against a wrongdoer.—Howland v. Harris (4 Mason, 497; 12 Fed. Cas., 734).

(b) Where goods are imported in a ship, after such sale and before they are unladen an inspector is put on board, his custody thereof to secure the lien of the United States for duties is not a divestment of the title and possession of the vendee as against a wrongdoer.—Id.

(c) Some of the goods removed from the bonded warehouse and then brought back were seized by the United States as goods unlawfully imported in a certain ship or vessel without having a manifest on board. Held, that the record of that proceeding when offered in evidence was not an estoppel to the right of the plaintiffs to recover the goods in this case.—McGlinchy v. United States (4 Cliff., 312; 16 Fed. Cas., 118).

(d) Trover will lie against a collector who unlawfully detains the goods of an importer, and it is no defense that the collector acted under instructions of the Secretary.—Fiedler v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 552; 8 Fed. Cas., 1194).

Sec. 2. That all invoices of imported merchandise shall be made out in the currency of the place or country from whence the importations shall be made, or, if purchased, in the currency actually paid therefor, shall contain a correct description of such merchandise, and shall be made in triplicate or in quadruplicate in case of merchandise intended for immediate transportation without appraisement, and signed by the person owning or shipping the same, if the merchandise has been actually purchased, or by the manufacturer or owner thereof, if the same has been procured otherwise than by purchase, or by the duly authorized agent of such purchaser, manufacturer or owner.

Sec. 3. That all such invoices shall, at or before the shipment of the merchandise, be produced to the consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent of the United States of the consular district in which the merchandise was manufactured or purchased, as the case may be, for export to the United States, and shall have indorsed thereon, when so produced, a declaration signed by the purchaser, manufacturer, owner or agent, setting forth that the invoice is in all respects correct and true, and was made at the place from which the merchandise is to be exported to the United States; that it contains, if the merchandise was obtained by purchase, a true and full statement of the time when, the place where, the person from whom the same was purchased, and the actual cost thereof, and of all charges thereon, as provided by this act; and that no discounts, bounties or drawbacks are contained in the invoice but such as have been actually allowed thereon; and when obtained in any other manner than by purchase, the actual market value or wholesale price thereof, at the time of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country from whence exported; that such actual market value is the price at which the merchandise described in the invoice is freely offered for sale to all purchasers in said markets, and that it is the price which the manufacturer or owner making the declaration would have received, and was willing to receive, for such merchandise sold in the ordinary course of trade in the usual wholesale quantities, and that it includes all charges thereon as provided by this act; and the actual quantity thereof; and that no different invoice of the merchandise mentioned in the invoice so produced has been or will be furnished to anyone. If the merchandise was actually purchased, the declaration shall also contain a statement that the currency in which such invoice is made out is that which was actually paid for the merchandise by the purchaser.

Sec. 4. That, except in case of personal effects accompanying the passenger, no importation of any merchandise exceeding one hundred dollars in dutiable value shall be admitted to entry without the production of a duly certified invoice thereof as required by law, or of an affidavit made by the owner, importer or consignee, before the collector or his deputy, showing why it is impracticable to produce such invoice; and no entry shall be made in the absence of a certified invoice, upon affidavit as aforesaid, unless such affidavit be accompanied by a statement in the form of an invoice, or otherwise, showing the actual cost of such merchandise, if purchased, or if obtained otherwise than by purchase, the actual market value or wholesale price thereof at the time of exportation to the United States in the principal markets of the country from which the same has been imported; which statement shall be verified by the oath of the owner, importer, consignee or agent desiring to make entry of the merchandise, to be administered by the collector or his deputy, and it shall be lawful for the collector or his deputy to examine the deponent under oath, touching the sources of his knowledge, information or belief, in the premises, and to require him to produce any letter, paper or statement of account in his possession, or under his control, which may assist the officers of customs in ascertaining the actual value of the importation or any part thereof, and in default of such production, when so requested, such owner, importer, consignee or agent shall be thereafter debarred from producing any such letter, paper or statement for the purpose of avoiding any additional duty, penalty or forfeiture incurred under this act, unless he shall show to the satisfaction of the court or the officers of the customs, as the case may be, that it was not in his power to produce the same when so demanded; and no merchandise shall be admitted to entry under the provisions of this section unless the collector shall be satisfied that the failure to produce a duly certified invoice is due to causes beyond the control of the owner, consignee or agent thereof. Provided that the Secretary of the Treasury may make regulations by which books, magazines and other periodicals published and imported in successive parts, numbers or volumes, and entitled to be imported free of duty, shall require but one declaration for the entire series. And when entry of merchandise exceeding one hundred dollars in value is made by a statement in the form of an invoice, the collector shall require a bond for the production of a duly certified invoice.

Sec. 5. That whenever merchandise imported into the United States is entered by invoice, one of the following declarations, according to the nature of the case, shall be filed with the collector of the port at the time of entry by the owner, importer, consignee or agent, which declaration so filed shall be duly signed by the owner, importer, consignee or agent before the collector, or before a notary public or other officer duly authorized by law to administer oaths and take acknowledgments, who may be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury to receive such declarations and to certify to the identity of the persons making them, under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; and every officer so designated shall file with the collector of the port a copy of his official signature and seal. Provided, that if any of the invoices or bills of lading of any merchandise imported in any one vessel, which should otherwise be embraced in said entry, have not been received at the date of entry, the declaration may state the fact, and thereupon such merchandise, of which the invoices or bills of lading are not produced, shall not be included in such entry, but may be entered subsequently.

DECLARATION OF CONSIGNEE, IMPORTER, OR AGENT.

I, —— ——, do solemnly and truly declare that I am the consignee, importer, or agent of the merchandise described in the annexed entry and invoice; that the invoice and bill of lading now presented by me to the Collector of —— are the true and only invoice and bill of lading by me received of all the goods, wares and merchandise imported in the ——, whereof ———— is master, from ——, for account of any person whomsoever for whom I am authorized to enter the same; that the said invoice and bill of lading are in the state in which they were actually received by me, and that I do not know or believe in the existence of any other invoice or bill of lading of the said goods, wares and merchandise; that the entry now delivered to the collector contains a just and true account of the said goods, wares and merchandise, according to the said invoice and bill of lading; that nothing has been on my part, nor to my knowledge on the part of any other person, concealed or suppressed, whereby the United States may be defrauded of any part of the duty lawfully due on the said goods, wares and merchandise; that the said invoice and the declaration therein are in all respects true, and were made by the person by whom the same purport to have been made; and that if at any time hereafter I discover any error in the said invoice, or in the account now rendered of the said goods, wares and merchandise, or receive any other invoice of the same, I will immediately make the same known to the collector of this district. And I do further solemnly and truly declare that to the best of my knowledge and belief [insert the name and residence of the owner or owners] is [or are] the owner [or owners] of the goods, wares and merchandise mentioned in the annexed entry; that the invoice now produced by me exhibits the actual cost [if purchased] or the actual market value or wholesale price [if otherwise obtained] at the time of exportation to the United States in the principal markets of the country from whence imported of the said goods, wares and merchandise, and includes and specifies the value of all cartons, cases, crates, boxes, sacks and coverings of any kind, and all other costs, charges and expenses incident to placing said goods, wares and merchandise in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States, and no other or different discount, bounty or drawback but such as has been actually allowed on the same.

DECLARATION OF OWNER IN CASES WHERE MERCHANDISE HAS BEEN ACTUALLY PURCHASED.

I, —— ——, do solemnly and truly declare that I am the owner of the merchandise described in the annexed entry and invoice; that the entry now delivered by me to the Collector of ——— contains a just and true account of all the goods, wares and merchandise imported by or consigned to me, in the ——, whereof ——— is master, from ———; that the invoice and entry, which I now produce, contain a just and faithful account of the actual cost of the said goods, wares and merchandise, and include and specify the value of all cartons, cases, crates, boxes, sacks and coverings of any kind, and all other costs, charges and expenses incident to placing said goods, wares and merchandise in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States, and no other discount, drawback or bounty but such as has been actually allowed on the same; that I do not know nor believe in the existence of any invoice or bill of lading other than those now produced by me, and that they are in the state in which I actually received them. And I further solemnly and truly declare that I have not in the said entry or invoice concealed or suppressed anything whereby the United States may be defrauded of any part of the duty lawfully due on the said goods, wares and merchandise; that to the best of my knowledge and belief the said invoice and the declaration thereon are in all respects true, and were made by the person by whom the same purport to have been made, and that at any time hereafter I discover any error in the said invoice or in the account now produced of the said goods, wares and merchandise, or receive any other invoice of the same, I will immediately make the same known to the collector of this district.

DECLARATION OF MANUFACTURER OR OWNER IN CASES WHERE MERCHANDISE HAS NOT BEEN ACTUALLY PURCHASED.

I, —— ——, do solemnly and truly declare that I am the owner [or manufacturer] of the merchandise described in the annexed entry and invoice; that the entry now delivered by me to the Collector of —— contains a just and true account of all the goods, wares and merchandise imported by or consigned to me in the ——, whereof —— —— is master, from ——; that the said goods, wares and merchandise were not actually bought by me, or by my agent, in the ordinary mode of bargain and sale, but that nevertheless, the invoice which I now produce contains a just and faithful valuation of the same, at their actual market value or wholesale price, at the time of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country from whence imported for my account [or for account of myself or partners]; that such actual market value is the price at which the merchandise described in the invoice is freely offered for sale to all purchasers in said markets and is the price which I would have received and was willing to receive for such merchandise sold in the ordinary course of trade in the usual wholesale quantities; that the said invoice contains also a just and faithful account of all the cost of finishing said goods, wares and merchandise to their present condition, and includes and specifies the value of all cartons, cases, crates, boxes, sacks and coverings of any kind, and all other costs and charges incident to placing said goods, wares and merchandise in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States, and no other discount, drawback or bounty, but such as has been actually allowed on the said goods, wares and merchandise; that the said invoice and the declaration thereon are in all respects true, and were made by the person by whom the same purports to have been made; that I do not know nor believe in the existence of any other invoice or bill of lading other than those now produced by me, and that they are in the state in which I actually received them. And I do further solemnly and truly declare that I have not in the said entry or invoice concealed or suppressed anything whereby the United States may be defrauded of any part of the duty lawfully due on the said goods, wares and merchandise; and that if at any time hereafter I discover any error in the said invoice, or in the accounts now produced of the said goods, wares and merchandise, or receive any other invoice of the same I will immediately make the same known to the collector of this district.

Sec. 6. That any person who shall knowingly make any false statement in the declarations provided for in the preceding section, or shall aid or procure the making of any such false statement, as to any matter material thereto, shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000, or by imprisonment at hard labor not more than two years, or both, in the discretion of the court. Provided that nothing in this section shall be construed to relieve imported merchandise from forfeiture by reason of such false statement or for any cause elsewhere provided by law.

DECISIONS UNDER SECTIONS 2 TO 6, ACT OF JUNE 10, 1890.

(a) There is no penalty for the failure to comply with section 2, act of June 10, 1890, which provides that all invoices of imported merchandise shall be made in the currency of the place or country from which the importation shall be made, or if purchased in the currency actually paid therefor, except the refusal of the collector to allow the entry of goods on such an invoice.—T. D. 26515, G. A. 6083.

(b) It seems that it is mandatory on a consul to certify an invoice properly produced before him unless he has reason to believe that the statements contained therein are untrue.—T. D. 23141, G. A. 4951.

(c) The invoice specifies a discount of 2½ per cent, but the importer claims that the discount was 5 per cent. Held, that the statement on the invoice operates as an admission that the discount was 2½ per cent and also that the remedy was by asking for a reappraisement.—T. D. 12463, G. A. 1201.

(d) Goods invoiced as printed cotton cambrics and claimed to be printed cotton handkerchiefs. Importers held to statements in invoice.—T. D. 13222, G. A. 1643.

(e) The appraiser reported an excess over the invoice quantity which the importer denies. The importer should have asked the collector to have a reexamination while the goods were in the possession of the Government or in the presence of an officer.—T. D. 14638, G. A. 2396.

(f) Rice entered on pro forma invoice and bond given to produce invoice within six months. Duly authenticated invoice not produced although the collector received within six months the triplicate invoices required by R. S. 2855, to be forwarded from the United States consul when verified in Italy. Held, that the United States, upon default, are not entitled to recover the full penalty of the bond but only the duties.—United States v. Cutajar (C. C.), (59 Fed. Rep., 1000).

(g) The bond required by section 4, act of June 10, 1890, is not intended to secure a penalty for breach of duty, but only such damage as results from the absence of the invoice, and the sureties upon such a bond can only be called upon to respond for those damages. 59 Fed. Rep. 1000 affirmed.—United States v. Cutajar (C. C. A.), (67 Fed. Rep., 530).

(h) Entry was made on an invoice which the importers knew to be imperfect in a material particular, in that it stated that the merchandise was imported from London, England, whereas in fact it came from Portugal. They did not offer to give bond for the production of a corrected invoice, nor did they obtain any corrected invoice until after the collector had liquidated the entry. Against the liquidation they filed a protest, claiming that the merchandise was imported from Portugal, and subject to the benefits of the commercial agreement between the United States and Portugal. In support of this claim, they produced before the Board of Classification a corrected consular invoice, certified at Oporto, Portugal, and asked that this be substituted for the invoice on which the entry had been made. Held, that they were estopped from denying the correctness of the original invoice on which entry was made, having sworn that it was in all respects correct and true, when they had full knowledge that such was not the case.—T. D. 23754, G. A. 5152.

(a) Entry was made on an invoice which the importers knew to be imperfect in a material particular, in that it stated that the maker of the invoice was the seller of the goods when he was in fact the agent of the purchaser. Against a liquidation which, on the ground that a vender could not charge a commission in any proper sense, included a so-called commission in the total invoice value, the importers protested, alleging and proving that the maker of the invoice was not the vender of the goods but was their agent to whom they paid a bona fide commission. Held, that they were estopped from denying the correctness of the invoice on which the entry was made, having sworn to the best of their knowledge and belief it was in all respects true and was made by the person by whom it purported to be made when they had knowledge that such was not the case.—T. D. 24152, G. A. 5254.

(b) An importer may have the benefit of a corrected invoice, even though he made entry on papers which he knew to be imperfect without giving a bond to procure a proper invoice, he having obtained and offered a corrected invoice to the collector before the entry was liquidated.—T. D. 18409, G. A. 3966, reversed.—Gillespie v. United States (124 Fed. Rep., 106).

(c) Where importers discover that invoices sent them are incorrect, they have a right to seek to procure correct ones and substitute them for the originals. It would seem that a bond should be given in accordance with section 4, act of June 10, 1890. The first invoice covered statement of the price for the delivery of the machines at New York, thus including ocean freight, a nondutiable item, but did not show amount of such freight. The importer sent for a second invoice which gave the price f. o. b. steamer in Kalmar, Sweden, without package. The packing charges, which as to these goods were dutiable, were not specified. Held, that the second invoice does not answer the requirements of the act of June 10, 1890, and the importer can not demand that it be received as a substitute for the first invoice.—T. D. 23141, G. A. 4951.

(d) If an invoice contains an imperfect description of the relations existing between the makers of the invoice and the importers, the latter are not estopped by the oath they took to the correctness of the invoice from explaining and corroborating the facts to which they have sworn. Especially is this the case where the relation of the parties may be viewed in more than one aspect and the determination of it involves a certain degree of judgment.—T. D. 24721, G. A. 5443, affirmed in United States v. Smith (132 Fed. Rep., 1007; T. D. 25394).

(e) The rule of evidence that in any cases connected with the administration of public justice and of government admissions made under oath are conclusive, discussed and approved, but the mere fact that an admission was made under oath does not render it conclusive.—Ibid.

(f) Where merchandise is actually purchased abroad from manufacturers and the invoice of the goods contains, respectively, the names of the venders of the goods which have been bought by agents of an American house with limited authority to purchase, and with a view of immediate shipment of the same to this country, such merchandise will be regarded as having been actually purchased and not consigned. Where such invoices are made out in the form prescribed by section 5 of this act, providing for "the declaration of owner in cases where the merchandise has been actually purchased," the naming of the agents of the importing house as the sellers of the goods is subject to explanation and does not operate as an estoppel against the importers to prevent them from proving the facts of the case. The importers having been denied by the collector the right to make the requisite additions to market value under section 7 of this act, as amended by section 32 of the present tariff act of 1897, the Board of General Appraisers will grant proper relief correcting the decision of the collector assessing penal duties on the merchandise.—T. D. 27243, G. A. 6326.

(a) In an indictment under section 6, act of June 10, 1890, an averment that the defendant "willfully declared that he was the owner of the goods, whereas in fact he was not the owner, as he then and there well knew," is sufficient upon demurrer.—United States v. Fawcett (86 Fed. Rep., 900).

(b) An intent to defraud the United States is not an essential ingredient of the offense constituted by section 6, act of June 10, 1890.—Id.

(c) No offense is complete under section 6, act of June 10, 1890, until the false declaration there referred to is filed or offered to be filed with the collector when making or attempting to make the entry.—Id.

DECISIONS UNDER EARLIER STATUTES PERTAINING TO THE SAME SUBJECT-MATTER.

(d) An invoice is not a bill of sale nor is it evidence of a sale. It is a mere detailed statement of the nature, quantity, and cost or price of the thing invoiced, and it is as appropriate to a bailment as to a sale. It does not of itself necessarily indicate to whom the things are sent, or even that they have been sent at all. Hence, standing alone, it is never regarded as evidence of title.—Dows v. National Exchange Bank (91 U. S., 618, 630).

(e) Under section 1, act of March 3, 1863, the collector has no power to permit an entry of merchandise unaccompanied by an invoice, or a sufficient excuse for its absence, but this section gives the Secretary that authority and the same equitable power of remission as in other cases.—United States v. Thirty Nine Thousand One Hundred and Fifty Cigars (3 Ware, 324; 28 Fed. Cas., 55).

(f) When goods are refused an entry for want of an invoice if the owner attempts to procure an entry by any false and fraudulent practice or appliance whatever the goods are forfeited.—Id.

(g) Invoices of merchandise entitled to free entry were required in 1889 to conform to the requirements of R. S. 2853, 2854, 2855, and 2860.—Phelps v. Siegfried (142 U. S., 602).

(h) Where an importer purchased goods through an agent in Europe and the agent, though having a lien for advances, surrenders the goods to the importer for much less than the purchase price because the latter is unable to pay more, the sum for which they are thus surrendered is not the proper invoice price, but the invoice should be at the original price at which the agent purchased the goods.—United States v. Sixty-five Packages of Glass (Betts, Scr. Bk., 23; 27 Fed. Cas., 1115).

(i) But if the agent violated his authority in purchasing the goods and thereby made them his own the importer would have a right to purchase them from the agent as owner; and if he obtained them at a reduced price this would be the price at which they should be invoiced and entered although much below the prevailing price of the goods.—Id.

(a) The agent of the claimants having assumed in his oath to the invoice or entry of shipment the position of a purchaser he could not avail himself of the defense that he was not a purchaser but a producer or manufacturer.—Alfonso v. United States (2 Story, 421; 1 Fed. Cas., 395).

(b) Under the act of March 3, 1863, section 1, the invoice of goods, which are procured otherwise than by purchase, must state their actual market value at the time and place, when and where they are procured or manufactured.—Twelve Hundred and Nine Quarter Casks, etc., of Wine (2 Ben., 249; 7 Int. Rev. Rec., 114; 24 Fed. Cas., 398).

(c) S. through his agent K. purchased in England unfinished goods and through K. had them dyed there by one man and made up by another. In each case S. paid the cost of the work. K. then invoiced the goods to S. at New York at a price equal to the cost of purchase, dyeing and making up, with K.'s commissions added. Entry of goods was made on such invoice on the ordinary purchaser's oath provided for by section 4, act of Mar. 1, 1823, now R. S. 2841. The valuation in the invoice was below the market value. Held, that the invoice and the oath ought to have been such as the statute requires of the manufacturer.—Sinn v. United States (14 Blatchf., 550; 22 Fed. Cas., 226).

(d) When goods are purchased in a foreign country and in quantities sufficient to load several vessels an invoice executed in triplicate must be produced and exhibited to the American consul at or before each shipment, and where the importation is by rail the same rule applies to each train of one or more cars laden with the goods.—Locke v. United States (2 Cliff., 574; 15 Fed. Cas., 740).

(e) The fact that at the time a person entered goods at the custom-house there were in existence to his knowledge several copies of the bills of lading and invoices presented by him does not make his sworn statement under R. S. 2841 a false oath; as the other invoices or bills of lading intended by the statute are bills or invoices different from those presented and not merely the copies thereof which by commercial usage or statute are required to be procured.—United States v. Harrison (32 Fed. Rep., 386).

Sec. 7. [As amended by section 32, act of July 24, 1897 (30 U. S. Stats. 151)]. That the owner, consignee, or agent of any imported merchandise which has been actually purchased, may, at the time when he shall make and verify his written entry of such merchandise, but not afterwards, make such addition in the entry to the cost or value given in the invoice, or pro forma invoice, or statement in form of an invoice, which he shall produce with his entry, as in his opinion may raise the same to the actual market value or wholesale price of such merchandise at the time of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country from which the same has been imported; but no such addition shall be made upon entry to the invoice value of any imported merchandise obtained otherwise than by actual purchase; and the collector within whose district any merchandise may be imported or entered, whether the same has been actually purchased or procured otherwise than by purchase, shall cause the actual market value or wholesale price of such merchandise to be appraised; and if the appraised value of any article of imported merchandise subject to an ad valorem duty or to a duty based upon or regulated in any manner by the value thereof shall exceed the value declared in the entry, there shall be levied, collected and paid, in addition to the duties imposd by law on such merchandise, an additional duty of one per centum of the total appraised value thereof for each one per centum that such appraised value exceeds the value declared in the entry, but the additional duties shall only apply to the particular article or articles in each invoice that are so undervalued, and shall be limited to fifty per centum of the appraised value of such article or articles. Such additional duties shall not be construed to be penal, and shall not be remitted, nor payment thereof in any way avoided, except in cases arising from a manifest clerical error, nor shall they be refunded in case of exportation of the merchandise, or on any other account, nor shall they be subject to the benefit of drawback. Provided, That if the appraised value of any merchandise shall exceed the value declared in the entry by more than fifty per centum, except when arising from a manifest clerical error, such entry shall be held to be presumptively fraudulent, and the collector of customs shall seize such merchandise and proceed as in case of forfeiture for violation of the customs laws, and in any legal proceeding that may result from such seizure, the undervaluation as shown by the appraisal, shall be presumptive evidence of fraud, and the burden of proof shall be on the claimant to rebut the same, and forfeiture shall be adjudged unless he shall rebut such presumption of fraudulent intent by sufficient evidence. The forfeiture provided for in this section shall apply to the whole of the merchandise or the value thereof in the case or package containing the particular article or articles in each invoice which are undervalued. Provided further, That all additional duties, penalties or forfeitures, applicable to merchandise entered by a duly certified invoice, shall be alike applicable to merchandise entered by a pro forma invoice or statement in the form of an invoice, and no forfeiture or disability of any kind, incurred under the provisions of this section, shall be remitted or mitigated by the Secretary of the Treasury. The duty shall not, however, be assessed in any case upon an amount less than the invoice or entered value.

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 7, ACT OF JUNE 10, 1890.

(a) Goods entered without additions to invoice. By the next mail the importer received a letter from the shipper stating that the books entered at 21d. should have invoiced at 2s. The importer communicated this information to the appraiser who made the addition to the invoice, which raised the value more than 10 per cent and the penalty was imposed. Held, that additions to invoice value can not be made by the importer after entry.—T. D. 10532, G. A. 182.

(b) Invoiced value of consigned goods can not be advanced on entry.—T. D. 13062, G. A. 1567.

(c) Additions to entry upon merchandise purchased abroad made by the consignees and agents to avoid additional duty and penalty not authorized.—T. D. 13499, G. A. 1801.

(d) Goods purchased by Passavant, of Paris, from G., of Paris, and consigned to H., of New York, for sale on account of Passavant, are goods obtained otherwise than by actual purchase and addition can not be made on entry to the invoice value.—T. D. 14806, G. A. 2489.

(e) Section 7 of the act of June 10, 1890, as amended by section 32, act of 1897, authorizes additions to invoice on entry so as to raise the same to market value only where such merchandise has been "actually purchased," as distinguished from that "obtained otherwise than by actual purchase." Goods purchased abroad by one member of a partnership resident in New Orleans, La., for sale on joint account of the firm, are consigned goods "obtained otherwise than by purchase," and are not entitled to the benefit of the provisions accorded to goods "actually purchased." The purchase contemplated by the statute is a purchase made by an owner or consignee in the United States from a consignor in some foreign country and has no reference to transactions of bargain and sale exclusively conducted between aliens or other persons resident abroad.—T. D. 21592, G. A. 4552.

(f) In reference to this action, providing that importers may at the time of entry add to the invoice value to raise it to the actual market value of the merchandise at the time of exportation, it was held (1) that such addition should be stated in the entry in such definite terms that its amount can be ascertained by the customs officers; and (2) that, where importers on entry noted that a certain sum should be added, less certain charges unspecified in amount, the addition should be considered as of the gross sum thus stated, reduced, however, by the amount of such charges as were officially known to the customs officers.—Woodruff v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 861; T. D. 28207).

(a) Goods bought in Germany by a member of a partnership resident in this country and shipped to the United States to be sold on joint account of the partnership constitute a consignment of the purchases within the meaning of this section and no addition upon entry to make market value can be permitted in such cases. Neither the appraiser nor the collector can lawfully consent to the importers of such goods making additions to the entered value and the Government is not estopped by the unauthorized action of such officers.—T. D. 26667, G. A. 6135.

(b) Protest that the additional duty (fixed by the appraiser and on reappriasement by a general appraiser and by the Board of General Appraisers) is "unjust, as the invoice presented by me was made by the manufacturers of said lime, under instructions of the American consul, and presented the true value and charges on said lime," overruled. If the invoice was made out at the true value of the merchandise, under instructions from the consul, there could be apparently no ground for complaint of duress on the part of the Government officers. The importer exhausted his remedies in appealing to the tribunal of last resort against the valuation and the additional duty exacted in accordance with law must stand.—T. D. 10547, G. A. 197.

(c) The date of consular invoice does not affect the imposition of additional duty. (Invoice dated prior to August 1, 1890).—T. D. 10550, G. A. 200.

(d) An advance of a fraction more than 10 per cent is an advance of more than 10 per cent.—T. D. 11841, G. A. 832.

(e) When the question whether goods are to pay a specific or an ad valorem duty depends on whether they exceed a certain value (as in the case of gloves under paragraph 458, act of 1890), an appraisement is essential and if the appraisement discloses that the goods have been undervalued more than 10 per cent they are subject to the penalty of an increased duty, although the excess of over 10 per cent on the invoiced value is not sufficient to require an ad valorem instead of a specific duty. T. D. 13780, G. A. 1974, reversed.—Pings v. United States (C. C. A.), (72 Fed. Rep., 260).

(f) Where bottles dutiable under paragraphs 103 and 104, act of 1890, are advanced in value more than 10 per cent over the value as given in the invoice they are subject to the additional duty.—T. D. 17154, G. A. 3471.

(g) An invoice of handkerchiefs contained thirty-three items, one item of which covering ten dozen handkerchiefs, was advanced in value more than 10 per cent and additional duty assessed. The importer claimed that as the advance was not 10 per cent of the whole importation of handkerchiefs covered by the invoice the penal duty did not attach. Held, that in this case handkerchiefs of a special number, size, and weight, invoiced in one item distinct from others, were undervalued and the penal duty attached to the particular articles embraced in the item.—T. D. 11999, G. A. 912.

(h) Three cases of cotton cloth, dutiable under paragraphs 344–348, were advanced in value more than 10 per cent but such advance did not change the specific rate to which they were subject. Held, that the additional duty did not attach.—T. D. 13810, G. A. 2004.

(a) Where goods dutiable under the countable clauses are advanced in value by the appraisers in excess of 10 per cent of the value declared in the entry they are subject to the additional duty provided for in the customs administrative act.—T. D. 17154, G. A. 3471.

(b) The value of steel wire entering into steel wire rope (dutiable under paragraph 148, act of 1890) was declared in pro forma invoice to be £11 7s. and the completed rope £23 12s. Values advanced on appraisement and reappraisement to £12 17s. 11d. for the wire and £24 18s. 4d. for the rope. The advance value of the steel wire exceeding the invoice value by more than 10 per cent additional duty was exacted. The appraised value of the rope did not exceed the invoice value by 10 per cent. Held, that the additional duty did not accrue.—T. D. 14626, G. A. 2384.

(c) Wire rope is dutiable either by specific or ad valorem rate according to the value, and it is essential that that value be ascertained in order that the rate may be adjusted. Reappraisement is legal in such case and the penalty for undervaluation is properly imposed.—T. D. 22504, G. A. 4770.

(d) Wool invoiced as 9,892 pounds, at 6¼d. per pound, the total value on the entry being $1,254. The appraiser advanced the price to 7½d., the weight returned was 9,725 pounds and the total value $1,479. The appraised value per pound having exceeded the entered value by 20 per cent an additional duty of 40 per cent was assessed. The importer claimed that the advance should not be considered per pound but estimated at the difference between the total entered and advanced value. Held, that the article advanced was the wool per pound and that the additional duty was properly assessed.—T. D. 14858, G. A. 2541.

(e) A nondutiable item specified in an invoice can not be included in entered value of consigned goods so as to evade penal duty.—T. D. 17949, G. A. 3824.

(f) Goods bought and paid for in Austria in francs and invoiced in that currency. The equivalent of the value in francs was stated on the invoice to be 356.46 florins of the value of 41.67 cents each, the value of the paper florin in actual use in Austria. The consul certified the value with the charges to be 356.46 florins. The importer offered to enter the merchandise in francs but was required to make entry in florins, and he entered at 356.46 less 11.46, the amount of the charges. The appraiser returned "add to make market value the difference in currency 47.59 florins." On reappraisement the value was found to be 739.25 francs and the collector liquidated the entry at that sum, making $143, and the entered value of 345 florins net he found to be $125, and assessed the additional penalty. Held, that additional duties do not accrue on account of difference in value of currency.—T. D. 14239, G. A. 2203.

(g) All decisions of the Board as to market value are final and conclusive as to dutiable value where there is no fraud or irregularity, and the additional or penal duty is a mere incident which necessarily follows the finding of value in excess of the entered value to the extent provided by law.—T. D. 14046, G. A. 2097.

(h) One who is assessed with a penalty for entering dutiable goods at a sum below their actual value can not, in an action for the penalty, defend on the ground that he intentionally omitted certain items from the entry in order to pay them separately under protest. He must either give notice and ask for a reappraisement or take an appeal as provided by law.—United States v. Strauss (C. C.), (55 Fed. Rep., 388).

(i) An importation of sugar was invoiced as "basis 81 degrees" with a memorandum attached stating "purchased at 1¼ cents per Sp. lb. net, basis 81 degrees, average, 1.32 cents per pound to be added for each degree above 81 degrees test, or 1.16 cents per pound to be deducted for each degree below 80 degrees test; fractional of a degree pro rata." This meant that the price was to vary according to the quality as shown by the polariscope test. Upon appraisal the value of the sugar was found to be more than 10 per cent above the price of $1\frac{3}{4}$ cents per pound, but much less than that above the price as fixed by the test according to the memorandum. Held, that this was not an undervaluation of more than 10 per cent, which would justify the imposition of the additional duty.—United States v. American Sugar Refining Co. (C. C.), (71 Fed. Rep., 951).

(a) An addition made by the importer to the invoice value, though marked upon the invoice itself, becomes a part of the entered value and the collector can not ignore such addition and then assess a penal duty which would not otherwise have accrued.—United States v. Merck & Co. (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 641).

(b) Cattle one year old or over, dutiable either at a specific or an ad valorem rate, according to the value per head, under paragraph 218 (1897) are merchandise subject to a duty "based upon or regulated by" the value thereof; and additional duty accrues for undervaluation.—T. D. 22598, G. A. 4802.

(c) The additional duties are payable, except in cases of clerical error, irrespective of any question of fraudulent undervaluation on the part of the importer, but the merchandise is not forfeited except in cases of fraudulent undervaluation.—United States v. Sixteen Hundred and Twenty-one pounds of Fur Clippings (C. C. A.), (106 Fed. Rep., 161).

(d) Appraised value exceeded invoice value by more than 50 per cent. Held, that the fact that a case is within the terms of the proviso to this section or that the Government has proceeded thereunder for the forfeiture of the goods does not relieve the importer from liability for the additional duty imposed by the previous portion of the section.—United States v. Gray; Same v. Sherman; Same v. Baldwin (C. C.), (107 Fed. Rep., 104).

(e) Additional duties accrue under this section when containers of merchandise are found to be undervalued providing such containers are treated as separate articles of merchandise in the tariff act, as, for instance, lemon boxes under the tariff act of 1890.—Phelps v. United States (T. D. 26822), affirming T. D. 11200, G. A. 559.

(f) When goods are found to be undervalued over 50 per cent the institution and prosecution of proceedings for forfeiture do not relieve the importer from liability for the additional duty of 1 per cent of the total appraised value for each 1 per cent that the appraised value exceeds the entered value.—Gray v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 213).

(g) Additional duties are incurred under this section where goods paying a specific rate of duty varying with their value are appraised at a value in excess of that at which they are entered notwithstanding that the advance made on appraisement did not result in altering their dutiable classification so as to subject them to any higher rate than that at which they were entered.—United States v. Nuckolls (118 Fed. Rep., 1004), affirming T. D. 22598, G. A. 4802.

(h) There is a clear line of distinction between actions or proceedings to forfeit goods for undervaluation as provided in this section and actions to collect additional duties for undervaluation also herein provided for. In the former a fraudulent intent is indispensable to the maintenance of the action. In the latter such intent is immaterial, the circumstance that the goods are undervalued being the sole condition to the right of the Government to the additional duties.—United States v. Bishop (125 Fed. Rep., 181; T. D. 25093).

(a) No additional duty accrues by reason of the appraised value of sugar according to corrected polariscopic test exceeding the conditional value subject to correction at which the sugar was entered.—Leaycraft v. United States (T. D. 25465).

(b) The provision in this section imposing additional duties when the appraised value exceeds the entered value is penal in its nature, and the additional duties are a penalty. The district court has exclusive jurisdiction of a suit brought by the United States to recover such additional duties and the Circuit Court has no jurisdiction of such suit.—Helwig v. United States (188 U. S., 605).

(c) The percentage of additional duties imposed on imported goods for undervaluation under this section is to be computed on the basis of the entered value of the merchandise, which should include the cost of the coverings and the packing as provided in section 19 of this act. The percentage so ascertained becomes the rate of additional duty to be assessed upon the total appraised value of the merchandise.—T. D. 26243, G. A. 6004.

(d) The obligation to pay duty is incurred by the act of importing merchandise and is not relieved by the violation of some provision of law that imposes the penalty of forfeiture. The additional duty of 1 per cent of the total appraised value of imported merchandise for each 1 per cent that such appraised value exceeds the value declared in the entry is not in the nature of a penalty, hence may be collected from the importer the same as the regular duty where the merchandise has been forfeited for undervaluation.—T. D. 26612, G. A. 6115.

(e) Where an importation of merchandise is made through the parcels post under the parcels-post convention between the United States and Mexico, ratified April 28, 1888 (25 U. S. Stat. L., p. 1428), which provides for the admission to the mails of certain articles of merchandise and mail matter, no additional duty can be assessed by the collector for undervaluation under the provisions of this section as amended by section 32, tariff act of 1897, there being no provision made for the formal entry of such merchandise.—T. D. 26664, G. A. 6132.

(f) Where imported merchandise is entered upon a pro forma invoice and has been advanced in value on appraisement additional duties will be assessed under this section, as amended by section 32 of the act of 1897, in the same manner and to the same extent as if the merchandise had been entered by a duly certified invoice.—T. D. 26691, G. A. 6146.

(g) Transportation charges from the place of production to the principal market when added by appraising officers to the entered value of merchandise can not be excluded in determining whether additional duty for undervaluation accrues, under this section, upon the theory that, although properly dutiable charges, they form no part of the "appraised value" of the goods.—T. D. 26749, G. A. 6162.

(h) Where merchandise is found to be undervalued the additional duty thus incurred is to be assessed as well on any quantity of said merchandise found in excess of the quantity invoiced.—United States v. Leeming (153 Fed. Rep., 489; T. D. 27986), reversing in part T. D. 27216, G. A. 6315, and overruling in effect T. D. 25645, G. A. 5804.

(i) The importer entered certain merchandise upon a copy of the invoice which he secured from the collector. The regular consular invoice did not reach him until several days later. Upon the entry thus made the merchandise was regularly appraised and advanced in value and the penalty, which the law prescribes under such circumstances, was imposed. Against the exaction of this penalty the importer protests, claiming that if, at the time he made the entry, he had possessed the information which he afterwards obtained he would have advanced the merchandise to its true market value; upon securing that information he made application to the collector to amend his entry. Held, that the Board of United States General Appraisers has no power or jurisdiction to grant relief in such a case. The failure of the collector to transmit to the Secretary of the Treasury an application by an importer to amend an entry under article 1449 of the Treasury Regulations of 1899 does not present a question within the jurisdiction of this Board.—T. D. 27487, G. A. 6397.

(a) The additional duties provided in this section are assessable, except in cases arising from a manifest clerical error, irrespective of any question of fraudulent undervaluation on the part of the importer.—T. D. 27887, G. A. 6536.

(b) Where goods have been seized under an order of the United States district court for forfeiture for undervaluation the sole question to be determined by the court is whether such undervaluation was fraudulent. Such court, however, is without jurisdiction to determine the rate and amount of duty assessable on such imported merchandise.—T. D. 27887, G. A. 6536.

(c) Framed paintings were described on the invoice simply as paintings and the invoice value was sufficient to cover the frames as well as the paintings; it being shown that it was a long-established practice to describe framed paintings simply as paintings, it was held that the frames were not articles "not specified in the invoice" within the meaning of R. S. 2901, and that it was therefore illegal to add their value to said invoice value as prescribed in said section. It was also held that the invoice value should not be ascribed wholly to the paintings but should be considered to cover frames as well.—United States v. Hensel (158 Fed. Rep., 645), T. D. 28537.

(d) Merchandise imported into Canada from another country was shipped to the United States on an invoice certified in Canada before an American consul which contained an item of the amount of the Canadian duty on the merchandise. It was held that such item was properly included in the entered value and that the importer included such item in his entered value because advised to do so by the entry clerk at the custom-house does not constitute duress.—T. D. 28424, G. A. 6664.

(e) Where an importer received a consular invoice showing his goods to be exported from the country of immediate exportation and he believes that they should be invoiced as coming from the country of origin he may abandon the consular invoice and enter on a pro forma invoice under bond for the production of a correct consular invoice.—Ibid.

(f) The offer of an importer to enter his merchandise at whatever might be the invoice value thereof if permitted to open the package and examine the invoice contained therein held to be tantamount to an entry at that value. Where the authorized customs officials refuse to permit an importer to open a package in order to see the invoice that he might enter the merchandise at its correct value, he not having any invoice of it and not knowing its exact value, but require him to make an entry before the package is opened, and that entry is below the invoice value, as found upon opening the package and examining the invoice, additional duty should not be assessed under the provisions of this section.—T. D. 28495, G. A. 6676.

(g) An error admitting of rectification must be manifest upon the face of the papers.—T. D. 10238, G. A. 16.

(a) Entry was made at 3,160.87 marks. Appraiser's return shows foreign market value to be 2,525.40 marks. Held to be a manifest clerical error.—T. D. 10534, G. A. 184.

(b) The fact that identically the same article was invoiced at different prices in the same invoice held to be a manifest clerical error.—T. D. 10773, G. A. 326.

(c) The value stated on the invoice was £661 2s. 4d., and following this were charges not included in the foregoing prices, wrappers, boxes, etc., £47 12s. 7d. The entry and appraised value was £661 2s. 4d. The collector added to the charges £47 12s. 7d. and assessed duty on £780 14s. 11d. Held (1) that the appraiser's notation if correct was equivalent to reporting that the entered value, the invoice value, and the dutiable value agreed and were correct; (2) that it is the province of the collector to determine for himself what is the invoice value; (3) his decision in this respect is not in the nature of an appraisement and is not subject to reappraisement; (4) the remedy of the importer was not an appeal for reappraisement but a protest, and the question on its merits is properly before the Board on protest; (5) it appearing that a series of invoices of similar goods, both prior and subsequent to this entry, end with the statement "charges included in the foregoing," it is held that there was a clerical error in the insertion of the word "not" in the sentence "charges not included in the price of the goods."—T. D. 11880, G. A. 871.

(d) The deduction of nondutiable charges from the net amount of the invoice instead of the gross amount held to be a manifest clerical error.—T. D. 13065, G. A. 1570.

(e) The Board has jurisdiction of a protest against the exaction of a penalty accruing through a clerical error. Clerical error corrected.—T. D. 14946, G. A. 2575.

(f) The original consular invoice had this statement: "The following charges are not included in the above prices." The importer produced a duplicate which stated: "The following charges are included in the above prices." Held, to be a clerical error and correction ordered.—T. D. 13290, G. A. 1670.

(g) An error in translation is a clerical error. Such an error found to be a manifest clerical error.—T. D. 13503, G. A. 1805.

(h) A pro forma invoice stands in the place of a certified invoice and a manifest clerical error therein can be corrected after entry.—T. D. 13503, G. A. 1805.

(i) Invoice value on silk embroidered flowers given as 6 marks per dozen and claimed to be 0.60 mark per dozen. Held, that the excessive valuation was due to a clerical error manifest to an appraising officer making a careful and intelligent examination.—T. D. 14625, G. A. 2383.

(j) Clerical error in invoice directed to be corrected and the entry reliquidated.—T. D. 14819, G. A. 2502.

(k) The omission from the entry of an amount stated in a memorandum attached to the invoice held to be a manifest clerical error.—T. D. 15071, G. A. 2624.

(l) Importers' notation of "125 dozen, at 2.16 silver yen, equal to 250 silver yen," held to be a manifest clerical error.—T. D. 15318, G. A. 2752.

(m) Protest against the exaction of additional duties on two cases of Chinese envelopes, invoiced at $3.40 instead of at $34, through an alleged clerical error, sustained.—T. D. 15832, G. A. 2932.

(n) The merchandise was invoiced at a price which included cost of coverings and all charges and expenses, the value of the cartons being separately specified on the invoice. The importers in making entry added the items of charges and cartons a second time. Held, that excessive additions to value on entry are not clerical errors.—T. D. 10533, G. A. 183.

(a) Importers made entry of "olive oil, 880 francs, and bottles, 30 francs." Value of bottles increased to 94 francs and additional duty assessed. Held, that there is no evidence that there was a manifest clerical error in invoicing the bottles.—T. D. 12226, G. A. 1040.

(b) Goods invoiced at a certain value less given charges, leaving a balance which is given, but the entry gives the total value, making no deduction for charges. Held, not a manifest error.—T. D. 12452, G. A. 1190.

(c) The invoice gives per se value of merchandise and also packing charges. The importer claims that these charges have already been included in per se value. Held, that this is not a manifest clerical error; that the remedy is not by a protest, but by an appeal for reappraisement.—T. D. 12460, G. A. 1198.

(d) Blueberries invoiced and entered at $2.75 per case and duties paid. Corrected consular invoice gave the value at $1.34 per case, which was the value. Held (1) not to be strictly a clerical error, and (2) that the protest is an attempt to collaterally impeach the appraised value, which, in the absence of fraud, is final and conclusive.—T. D. 12523, G. A. 1207.

(e) Tissue paper invoiced and entered at 3s. 10d. per ream, to which the appraiser added 7d. to make market value. Three days after entry the importer, the owner and purchaser, asked to make correction, claiming that the shipper had, through error, invoiced the paper 7d. per ream too low. Held, not to be a manifest clerical error.—T. D. 12524, G. A. 1208.

(f) Entry gave value of cherry juice as 496.99 marks and casks as 207.22 marks. The invoice value of the casks was 791.51 marks, which was returned as correct by the appraiser. Entry corrected and the duties on increased value promptly paid (Oct. 6, 1890). In accordance with instructions from the Department the collector, on June 11, 1891, reliquidated the entry and additional duty or penalty was exacted. The protest claimed that the entry for the casks was a clerical error and that the original liquidation was final. Held, that while the value of the casks as given in the entry was an error there was nothing on the face of the entry to denote that such was the case, and that the additional duty was a debt to the Government which could not be remitted by the collector either directly or indirectly.—T. D. 12689, G. A. 1338.

(g) Claim of manifest clerical error overruled.—T. D. 13500, G. A. 1802; T. D. 13551, G. A. 1823; T. D. 16208, G. A. 3087.

(h) Failure to add invoice charges on entry, whether intentional or not, is not a manifest clerical error.—T. D. 13508, G. A. 1810.

(i) Clerical error not apparent on invoice.—T. D. 14552, G. A. 2344.

(j) Woolen or worsted cloth imported in nine cases invoiced at 276¼ pounds. The case ordered to the public store for examination was found to weigh 258¼ pounds and the boards and paper 18 pounds. The remainder of the goods were called for but could not be produced. The importer claimed that in making up the invoice the weight of the boards, etc., was added and that this was a manifest clerical error. Protest overruled.—T. D. 14633, G. A. 2391.

(k) Merchandise entered on pro forma invoice as of the value of 3,000 francs. Invoice received showing value to be 1,196.70 francs before the goods had been taken from the public store. Held, not to be a clerical error and protest overruled.—T. D. 12538, G. A. 1222.

(a) Linen fabrics entered at 18, 22, and 24 silver yens per piece of 20 yards, which was the value per piece of 40 yards. Held, to be a clerical error and the collector authorized to reliquidate.—T. D. 17070, G. A. 3451.

(b) Addition on invoice not noted on entry is manifest clerical error.—T. D. 20730, G. A. 4362.

(c) The mere report of the appraising officer that the invoice value includes certain nondutiable items is not of itself sufficient to establish a claim that a clerical error was committed in the preparation of the invoice.—T. D. 22934, G. A. 4900.

(d) Although the statement in an invoice of steel billets at a certain sum per ton "on trucks" shows that something not dutiable may be included in the price, it does not show any value less than that stated, since it does not show how much must be taken out for nondutiable items; and such statement of the price is not such a manifest clerical error as entitles the importer to correction on a new invoice.—Roebling v. United States (C. C.), (77 Fed. Rep., 601).

(e) Through clerical error some nondutiable charges were included in the entered value of certain matting, resulting in the assessment of duty at the rate of 7 cents per square yard and 25 per cent ad valorem, instead of 3 cents per square yard. The first notice of the error received by the importer was after the liquidation of the entry at the increased rate. It was held that the real value of the merchandise might be shown and the rate of duty corrected accordingly.—Wilmerding v. United States (139 Fed. Rep., 1004; T. D. 26391).

(f) Where the agents of the importers in preparing the entry made their own selection of the items which they considered dutiable and of those not dutiable and in doing so omitted a dutiable item from the entered value such omission is not a manifest clerical error.—Fuerst v. United States (T. D. 26658).

(g) The power to correct clerical errors in invoices and entries, vested by law in the Secretary of the Treasury and in the Board of Classification, operates as an exception to this section, which forbids an assessment of duty on an amount less than the invoice or entered value. Where an importer perceives an error in his consular invoice before entry and offers to enter on a pro forma invoice pending the receipt of a corrected consular invoice, which offer is rejected by the collector, who compels the importer to make entry on the erroneous invoice, such refusal of the collector does not defeat the importer's right to have the error corrected by the Board of Classification upon satisfactory proof that it is a clerical error.—T. D. 23519, G. A. 5077.

(h) An error in the entered value of merchandise arising from a miscalculation of the American equivalent of a foreign unit held not to be a manifest clerical error.—T. D. 25257, G. A. 5667.

(i) Where an importer on entering goods presents an entry and invoice, the former of which omits some dutiable item while the latter sets out such item and there are no circumstances indicating an intention to evade the law, the case may be considered one of manifest clerical error and the importer may be relieved from an assessment of additional or penal duty in consequence of his omission.—Lawder v. Stone (125 Fed. Rep., 809; T. D. 25001) followed; T. D. 25579, G. A. 5789.

(j) The Board of United States General Appraisers, by virtue of its statutory power to examine and decide all cases properly before it, has power to correct clerical errors or mistakes in an invoice when the same is necessray to a just administration of the customs law. This power is not derived from this section as amended by section 32, act of 1897, and hence it is not necessary that the error should be a clerical one or manifest from the papers. That it is satisfactorily established before the Board is sufficient.—Gillespie v. United States (124 Fed. Rep., 106) cited; T. D. 25890, G. A. 5877.

(a) Where a mistake is made by the foreign house in filling an order so that merchandise different from that ordered and invoiced is shipped and is entered for duty as invoiced, it does not constitute such a clerical error which the Board of General Appraisers can correct so as to relieve the importer from the payment of the additional duties incurred by reason of the alleged error.—T. D. 28231, G. A. 6614.

(b) The invoice or entered value is conclusive upon the importer.—T. D. 10329, G. A. 50; T. D. 12667, G. A. 1316.

(c) A pro forma invoice for entry for immediate transportation from New York to Chicago. At Chicago the importer sought to make consumption entry on consular invoice which gave value as less than that in the pro forma invoice. The appraiser returned market value at less than that stated in pro forma invoice. The collector exacted duty on the value as stated in the pro forma invoice. Held, that an entry for immediate transportation to an interior port and a pro forma invoice for that purpose is not the entry nor pro forma invoice contemplated by section 7, act of June 10, 1890.—T. D. 12106, G. A. 968.

(d) Duties should be assessed upon the quantity of merchandise actually imported and not on the quantity appearing on the invoice. The last clause of section 7, act of June 10, 1890, as amended by section 32, act of 1897, forbidding an assessment on an amount less than the invoice value, refers only to the price and not to the quantity of merchandise.—T. D. 21525, G. A. 4529.

(e) Where an invoice contains no specification of costs and charges and the importers make entry at the value named in the invoice without seeking to make any deductions therefrom, it is proper for the collector to assess duty on such entered value, even though the appraiser has reported that it includes nondutiable items.—T. D. 22934, G. A. 4900.

(f) Certain items of interest had been included by the importers in the entered value of the goods. Held, that under the provisions of this section duty could not be assessed on a less amount than the entered value.—T. D. 24765, G. A. 5464.

(g) Under this section the entered value of imported merchandise when higher than the invoice value is not only the minimum value upon which ad valorem duties must be assessed, but will determine the classification of the goods rather than any lower invoice or appraised value when the classification is dependent upon or regulated in any manner by value.—T. D. 25764, G. A. 5845.

(h) The importer added 10 per cent to the cost price of St. Gall embroideries and made this statement in the invoice: "Added under protest 10 per cent, as required by the Treasury Department." He then claimed that this amount was added under duress. Held, that duty could not be assessed upon an amount less than that stated in the invoice.—T. D. 10763, G. A. 316; T. D. 11887, G. A. 878.

(i) Transportation charges from Dundee to Glasgow added because the collector refused to permit the importer to deduct such transportation. Held, that the consignee by reason of duress is not bound by the entered value.—T. D. 14554, G. A. 2346.

(j) Additions to entered value of the cost of transportation from Nottingham to Liverpool held to have been made under duress.—T. D. 14555, G. A. 2347.

(a) Carbons imported and pending reappraisement on previous similar importations the importer added to the entry to make value found on the first reappraisement. The Board having sustained the invoice value in the first instance the importer claims that the addition in this case was made under compulsion. Protest overruled.—T. D. 14748, G. A. 2470.

(b) Invoicing goods in accordance with a previous value established by the Board of General Appraisers is not invoicing under duress.—T. D. 18082, G. A. 3884.

(c) Claim of unlawful duress in the valuation of cattle overruled.—T. D. 18164, G. A. 3921.

(d) The unauthorized act of a United States consul in adding to the invoice value of goods the amount of ocean freights is not conclusive upon the importer and he is entitled to have the valuation corrected even though the appraiser has, in a pro forma manner, approved the invoice by marking it "correct."—United States v. Zuricaldy (C. C.), (71 Fed. Rep., 955).

(e) The collector may refuse to permit an importer to enter his goods at a lower price than that disclosed in his invoice at which they were purchased, even though the consular notation shows such lower price to be the actual market price on day of shipment. Section 8 of the act of June 10, 1890, requires statement in detail of purchase price and section 7 does not permit an assessment on a lower price. Consular notation is not conclusive. The purpose of the law is to secure information and guard against wrongdoing only.—T. D. 21199, G. A. 4447.

(f) Where an importer in making an entry of cigars imported from Cuba voluntarily adds to make the market value $2 per thousand, which represents the internal-revenue tax levied on cigars in Cuba, such item is to be included in the dutiable value of such merchandise; and an allegation in a protest that such entry was made under duress will not be sustained in the absence of satisfactory evidence bringing the case within the rule declared in Robertson v. Bradbury (132 U. S., 491).—T. D. 26233, G. A. 5994.

(g) Nondutiable items of commissions if voluntarily added to the value of merchandise by the importer in making his entry become part of the dutiable value under the provision that "duty shall not * * * be assessed in any case upon an amount less than the invoice or entered value," and it does not render such an addition less binding that the right of the customs officers to assess duties on such charge was disputed and in litigation when the entry was made, at least where the addition of the charge would not relieve the importer from any unlawful exaction. The mere apprehension on the part of importers of incurring additional or penal duties does not make such an addition in the entry coercive so as to constitute duress, where slight investigation would have shown that it was not the practice of the customs officers to impose additional duties in such cases.—T. D. 26920, G. A. 6234.

(h) Where certain cigars exported from Cuba are subject to an internal-revenue tax of $2 per thousand and the market value of such goods in Cuba is ascertained to be the invoice value, less the internal-revenue tax, such tax is a nondutiable item, forming no part of such value unless it is voluntarily included by the importer as such in making his entry. Where the importers of such cigars offered to make entry of the merchandise so as to exclude from the value this internal-revenue tax and this offer was refused by the collector, the addition of such tax being made a condition precedent to the acceptance of the entry by the collector, such entry held to be made under duress and is not binding on the importer.—Robertson v. Bradbury (132 U. S., 491).—T. D. 27204, G. A. 6309.

(a) Where an importer voluntarily includes in his entry an item of $2 per thousand cigars exported from Cuba, which represents the internal-revenue tax levied on cigars sold in the domestic markets of that country, the action of the collector in liquidating the entry on the basis of the entered value is without error. Where an item of the above-named character may or may not constitute a part of the market value of imported merchandise according to the ascertained value of cigars sold in the principal markets of Cuba, the question of such value becomes one of appraisement by the proper appraising officer and not one of mere classification by the collector. Facts not constituting duress.—T. D. 27537, G. A. 6407.

(b) Where merchandise is entered upon a pro forma invoice and a consular invoice is thereafter produced the requirements of the statute and of the regulations requiring a certificate of depreciation in the value of currency to be attached to the invoice are satisfied if such certificate of depreciation is attached to the consular invoice.—T. D. 26605, G. A. 6108.

(c) Where entry is made upon a pro forma invoice and bond given for the production of a consular invoice as required by section 4, act of June 10, 1890, the entry remains "open" until the conditions of the bond have been fulfilled, and if when such consular invoice is produced by the importer and the values therein stated are found to be correct by the appraising officer the entry should be liquidated on the basis of the value shown by the consular invoice rather than the pro forma invoice.—United States v. Commercial Cable Company (141 Fed. Rep., 473; T. D. 26494), affirming T. D. 25801, G. A. 5856, followed; T. D. 26636, G. A. 6126.

(d) It is now settled beyond question that in a proper case an importer has the right to file a corrected invoice in place of one that he finds to be incorrect.—Ibid.

(e) It is the duty of the collector to assess duty upon imported merchandise upon the value thereof as returned by the appraiser unless reappraisement has been duly asked for. If the value of merchandise entered upon a pro forma invoice is approved by the appraiser it is equivalent to a finding by that officer that such is the wholesale market value of the merchandise; and the importer if dissatisfied has its remedy by appeal for reappraisement. The Board of General Appraisers can not grant him relief upon a protest, even when the consular invoice, duly filed with the collector, but not approved by the appraiser, shows a lower value than that stated in the pro forma invoice.—United States v. Commercial Cable Company (141 Fed. Rep., 473; T. D. 26494) and T. D. 26605, G. A. 6108, distinguished; T. D. 27488, G. A. 6398.

(f) Merchandise was entered on a pro forma invoice, the value therein stated being approved by the appraiser on appraisal made before the production of the consular invoice. It appeared that through clerical error the value in the pro forma invoice had been stated too high; that the appraiser in approving that invoice merely determined that the value there given was sufficiently high without fixing a positive price; and that the value given in the consular invoice was correct. It was held that there had been no valid appraisement and that the value stated in the latter invoice should be taken as the dutiable value.—United States v. Muller (152 Fed. Rep., 575; T. D. 27895), affirmed by C. C. A. (T. D. 28518).

DECISIONS UNDER EARLIER STATUTES PERTAINING TO SAME SUBJECT-MATTER.

(a) On entry of merchandise actually purchased or procured otherwise than by purchase, the owner, consignee, or agent may make such addition in the entry to the cost or value given in the invoice as may, in his opinion, raise the same to the true market value of such imports in the principal markets of the country whence the importation is made and may add thereto all costs and charges which would form a part of the true value at the port where the same was entered. No duties can, however, be assessed upon an amount less than the entered or invoice value.—Harding v. Whitney (4 Cliff., 96; 11 Int. Rev. Rec., 103; 11 Fed. Cas., 496).

(b) When charges are added under protest, and by reason of the refusal of the entry clerk to receive the entry unless such additions are made, and for the purpose of obtaining possession of the goods, the additions so made are not voluntary, so as to preclude recovery. The exactions being compulsory the collector can not insist that the appraisement was conclusive. The act of the entry clerk in compelling the addition to the entry was official, notwithstanding that the collector gave no instructions to him other than to make entries according to law and the Treasury Regulations.—Benkard v. Schell (3 Fed. Cas., 192).

(c) The importer added 18 per cent to the market value as stated in the invoice, with a protest stating that he made the addition to prevent a seizure and that the real value was the original invoice value. On like merchandise entered before by the importer 18 per cent had, on appraisal, been added to the invoice value and the goods had been seized for forfeiture. In a suit to recover the duties paid on the 18 per cent: Held, that the action could not be maintained. After the addition of the 18 per cent the value of the goods for duty could not be fixed by appraisal at a less sum than that arrived at by such addition.—Id.; Haas v. Arthur (14 Blatch., 346; 11 Fed. Cas., 139).

(d) Wool bought at Cape Town for 10d. per pound. Held for several months and shipped when wool was worth 8½ cents per pound. Importers contended that it should be free. Under the act of March 3, 1857 (11 Stat., 192), which act allows an importer to make additions to the value of goods as given in the entry or invoice and which provides "that under no circumstances shall the duty be assessed upon an amount less than the invoice or entered value, any law of Congress to the contrary notwithstanding," and the act of the same day (id., 199), which enacts that "manufactured sheep's wool above the value of 20 cents shall pay an ad valorem duty of 24 per cent, but if of the value of 20 cents or less at the place of exportation, shall be exempt from duty," the invoice and entered value (which in this case was the actual cost) and not any lower market value of the goods at the place and date of exportation is the value upon which duty is to be assessed.—Kimball v. The Collector (10 Wallace, 436).

(e) The collector is right in assessing the invoice price of imported goods as the minimum valuation on which duties shall be assessed.—Ballard v. Thomas (19 How., 382).

(f) The proviso in section 7, act of March 3, 1865 (13 Stat., 491, 494), that the duty shall not be assessed upon an amount less than the invoice or entered value, and the like proviso in section 9, act of July 28, 1864 (14 Stat., 328, 330), are applicable to the valuation of wools for the purpose of determining the rate of duty chargeable upon them under the act of March 2, 1867 (14 Stat., 559), and June 6, 1872 (17 Stat., 230).—Saxonville Mills v. Russell (116 U. S., 13).

(a) Three lots of Japanese curios imported. Importer being dissatisfied with the appraisement called for merchant appraisers. The appraisers reported many of the items below the value given in the invoice and their appraisement, taken as a whole, did not increase the value 10 per cent above the entry value. The collectors disregarded all valuations by the merchant appraisers of items on the invoice where made lower than the entry. Upon this basis the value was more than 10 per cent above the entered value and a penalty of 20 per cent was added. Held, that the collector erred in assuming that the importer was estopped from going below his own entered value on any single item in the invoice and the duties should have been assessed on the invoice as a whole, as appraised and valued by the merchant appraisers, and that the additional duty was erroneously assessed.—Yanada v. Spalding (24 Fed. Rep., 21).

(b) The invoice of castile soap made at the time of its shipment gave the weight as 72,983 pounds. The custom-house weigher reported the weight as 70,286 pounds. The duty should be assessed only on the quantity of goods arriving in port and not on the quantity appearing by the invoice to have been shipped. The last paragraph of R. S. 2900, forbidding an assessment of duty on an amount less than the invoice value, refers only to the price and not to the quantity.—Weaver & Sterry (limited). v. Saltonstall (C. C.) (38 Fed. Rep., 493).

(c) Upon seizure of goods as forfeited and information filed no penal increase of duties can be exacted by the collector, though such a penalty might have been imposed before the goods were seized as forfeited. If such a penal increase has been received by the collector before the seizure the goods, though they would otherwise have been liable to forfeiture, are exempt from such liability. The exaction of such an increase after information filed though an illegal act does not affect the prosecution.—United States v. Segars (16 Leg. Int., 388; 3 Phila., 517; 27 Fed. Cas., 1015).

(d) Goods seized (1876) as forfeited for undervaluation. Appraised value exceeded entered value by more than 10 per cent and the goods thereby became liable to 20 per cent additional duty. They were proceeded against and taken into custody by the marshal. Under proceedings for a remission of the forfeiture the Secretary remitted it on condition that the importer should pay the cost and the duties on the goods if they were due or give bond to export the goods. He elected to give bond but the collector refused to permit the goods to be delivered until the importer had paid the 20 per cent additional duty. He paid and brought suit to recover. Held, that the exaction was illegal and the plaintiff was entitled to recover.—Murray v. Arthur (13 Blatchf., 429; 22 Int. Rev. Rec., 257; 17 Fed. Cas., 1045).

(e) Goods delivered to the claimant on his executing a bond as provided by section 89, act of 1799 (1 Stat., 627, 695). Judgment of condemnation and amount of the bond paid into court. In the course of the proceedings for the delivery of the goods to the claimant the penal duty of 20 per cent had been exacted by the collector in addition to the regular duty. The court ordered this penal duty to be returned.—United States v. Linens (16 Leg. Int., 388; 3 Phila., 523; 26 Fed. Cas., 972).

(f) Although articles may be dissimilar and known by different trade names, still, if they belong to the same class and are grouped together in the tariff acts as dutiable under their class names at the same rate and are valued in the entry at a lump sum for the entire importation, the penalty is not incurred unless the appraisement of the importation as a whole exceeds by 10 per cent or more the value declared in the entry.—Morris v. Robertson (37 Fed. Rep., 199).

(a) The additional duty attaches on pro forma invoices.—T. D. 10548, G. A. 198.

(b) If an invoice comprises several items of the same kind or description and one or more items are found to have been undervalued the penal duty will be imposed upon all the items of the same kind and description if the appraised value exceeds by 10 per cent the aggregate entered value of such items.—Schmeider v. Barney (6 Fed. Rep., 150).

(c) Ladies' dress goods do constitute items of the same kind within this rule where they differ so much in price, figures, and arrangement of colors as to be classified and known to the trade by different names.—Id.

(d) The valuation of such importations should be made on the corrected invoice received and accepted by the collector before the appraisement of the goods.—Id.

(e) Soap having been entered at the custom-house at a valuation based upon its net weight, after deducting the actual weight of the boxes, the custom-house valuation, upon an allowance of only 10 per cent on the gross weight, as tare, having exceeded the invoice valuation by more than 10 per cent and the collector having imposed an additional duty of 20 per cent upon the custom-house valuation, claiming that such penalty was authorized in consequence of such excessive valuation. Held, that the penalty was illegally exacted.—Wilson v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 316; 30 Fed. Cas., 147).

(f) The weight of the boxes, cases, or packages in which goods are imported is not the subject of appraisement within the meaning of this section.—Id.

(g) Where goods are, on appraisal, valued at more than 10 per cent above the invoice price, they are, nevertheless, not liable to an additional duty of 20 per cent if they were manufactured by the importer or were procured by him in the country of their production otherwise than by purchase.—Thomson v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 385; 23 Fed. Cas., 1100).

(h) Where the invoice valuation of goods imported by the manufacturer is increased more than 10 per cent the collector can not impose the penalty of 20 per cent.—Durand v. Lawrence (2 Blatchf., 396; 8 Fed. Cas., 113).

(i) Coal was invoiced and entered at a certain weight and price per ton. On appraisement the price per ton was reported to be correct, but the quantity was reported as so much greater as to make the entire valuation greater by 10 per cent than the entry valuation. The collector exacted a penalty of 20 per cent. Held, that this was illegal.—Manhattan Gas Light Co. v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 405; 16 Fed. Cas., 600).

(j) Where an invoice sets forth the prices of goods in a foreign paper currency and also carries them out reduced to a specie standard and the importer makes the entry in the specie value and, on appraisement, the value is returned at the invoice paper currency prices, which is greater by 10 per cent than the specie value; it seems that this is not such an excess of appraised value over the value declared in the entry as to warrant the imposition of a penalty of 20 per cent for undervaluation.—Fiedler v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 552; 8 Fed. Cas., 1194).

(k) When an invoice of quicksilver from London (1846) did not show that the article was the produce of Spain and its invoice value was raised by appraisal to its true value in the London market and the collector imposed duty on the additional valuation and a penalty for the undervaluation and the importer had not proved or offered to prove, before the appraisers or the collector, that the quicksilver was the produce of Spain. Held, that the additional duties and the penalty were properly imposed and collected, although the quicksilver was in fact the produce of Spain.—Belmont v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 119; 3 Fed. Cas., 150).

(a) Goods imported by their manufacturer are not subject to the additional duty of 20 per cent. This section relates only to goods which have been purchased in a foreign market and is not repealed or modified by section 1 of the act of 1851.—Christ v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 129; 5 Fed. Cas., 652).

(b) Such additional duty was not authorized by section 17, act of 1842, or section 13, act of 1823, for the like reason and also because the increased duty specified in each of those acts is 50 per cent and the collector can not exact a less or different one.—Id.

(c) The additional duty is chargeable alike whether the importer avails himself of the privilege given by this section and adds to his invoice or whether an appraisal is made upon the invoice as originally made.—Goddard v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 131; 10 Fed. Cas., 510).

(d) The additional duties of 20 per cent are not fines and penalties, and the collector is not entitled to a moiety of them.—Collier v. United States (3 Blatchf., 325; 25 Fed. Cas., 527).

(e) Lemons taken on board at San Remo, and the freight on them from San Remo to Genoa was added to the dutiable charges, increasing the invoice value by more than 10 per cent, in consequence of which additional duties of 20 per cent were imposed. The addition of the freight between San Remo and Genoa was, under the circumstances of this case, illegal.—Vaccari v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 368; 28 Fed. Cas., 862).

(f) The imposition of the additional duty in consequence of the addition of the freight and the increase of the commissions was illegal.—Id.

(g) Freight and commissions, although dutiable items in proper cases, are not the subject of penal duties in themselves, nor by being added to the value of the imports can they be the means of imposing a penalty on the latter.—Id.

(h) A collector has authority, upon an appraisement, to assess the additional duty for undervaluation of purchased goods which is prescribed in this section, although the importer has made no addition in the entry to the invoice value of the goods.—Id.

(i) Where on an entry of goods the importer offered to write up the entry by adding thereto a sum which would make it equal to what the custom-house considered to be the market value of the goods, and the collector refused to permit such addition to be made because the importer and owner was the manufacturer of the goods and was not authorized by this section to add to his invoice and imposed a penal duty on the goods, on appraisement, for their undervaluation. Held, that the collector, having refused to allow the importer to add on his entry to the invoice price because he was the manufacturer of the goods, could not then impose a penal duty on the goods as having been purchased in a foreign market.—Crowley v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 383; 6 Fed. Cas., 914).

(j) The act of 1842 does not subject a manufacturer to penal duties for undervaluation, and this section has the same restriction.—Id.

(k) Under this section an importer has a right to make in his entry an addition to the value as contained in his invoice; but the additional duty attaches, if the appraised value exceeds by 10 per cent the value in the entry, whether such addition has been made by the importer or not.—Schmaire v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 408; 21 Fed. Cas., 700).

(a) Semble, that the proviso which concludes this section is not repealed by the act of 1851, and that it applies to entries made without any increase in the valuation given in the invoice as well as to those in which an addition has been made to the invoice.—Lillie v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 41; 15 Fed. Cas., 538).

(b) Where goods are imported by their manufacturer they are not subject to an additional duty or penalty of 20 per cent for undervaluation in the invoice, but are subject to a penalty of 50 per cent under the act of 1842.—Bischoff v. Maxwell (4 Blatchf., 384; 19 How. Pr., 191; 3 Fed. Cas., 451).

(c) Where the valuation of molasses in casks, in an invoice, is correct, but the quantity stated in the invoice is less than the actual quantity found on gauging, the case is not one for the imposition of a penalty for undervaluation.—Yznaga v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 469; 17 Leg. Int., 357; 30 Fed. Cas., 903).

(d) Where an invoice of molasses in casks does not specify the number of gallons, the case is one of undervaluation and the penalty may properly be imposed.—Id.

(e) After imported goods have been seized by a collector as having been invoiced and entered below their value to defraud the revenue, and have been libeled for forfeiture and discharged on trial, the collector may still impose the additional duty.—Falleck v. Barney (5 Blatchf., 38; 8 Fed. Cas., 974).

(f) If such additional duty is paid it can not be recovered back, unless a proper protest is made at the time of payment.—Id.

(g) The penalty for undervaluation attaches whether the importer makes the additiou to his invoice or not.—Lehmaier v. Maxwell (N. Y. Times, Jan. 28, 1856; 15 Fed. Cas., 250).

(h) Additional duties do not make part of the drawback to be returned on exportation.—Bartlett v. Kane (16 How., 263, 274).

(i) Additional duties are not distributable to any officers of the customs.—Ring v. Maxwell (17 How., 147).

(j) Though the act of February 11, 1843 (9 Stat., 3), applies in terms only to the additional duties levied under the act of 1842, yet those levied under this section are only substitutes therefor in certain cases and to be governed by the same rules as to distribution.—Id.

(k) Where on an appraisement legally made it appears that the value was more than 10 per cent above the value at which the goods were entered, the penalty of 20 per cent on the value attaches, whether they are entered at the invoice value or at a greater or less value than stated by the importer.—Stairs v. Peaslee (18 How., 521).

(l) When additional duty is levied for a false entry it is upon the value of the goods aloue and not upon their value with charges and commissions added.—Sampson v. Peaslee (20 How., 571, 575).

(m) Where an importation of hemp in one vessel by the same party is divided into two invoices and two entries, they can not be treated so as to reduce their whole valuation to less than 10 per cent above the entry, but each must stand on its own appraisement.—Sampson v. Peaslee (20 How., 571, 579).

(n) The act of March 3, 1851, section 1 (9 Stat., 629), only varies the provisions of the act of 1846 so far as concerns the period of time with reference to which the valuation of imported merchandise is to be made, and does not affect the question of the imposition of extra duties because of undervaluation.—Morris v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 143; 17 Fed. Cas., 824).

(a) Where, under such circumstances, the appraisers, without any valuation of the goods, added to the first invoice exactly the difference between the two invoices, and a penalty of 20 per cent for undervaluation (under act of July 30, 1846, sec. 8) was imposed because such difference exceeded 10 per cent, held that under sections 16 and 17, act of 1842, an actual appraisal of purchased goods as of the time of purchase must be made to authorize the imposition of a penalty of 20 per cent for undervaluation.—Id.

(b) Where, on an entry of goods by their consignee, he presented as a true invoice one sent to him by their owner and swore to it, and the collector directed the appraisers to value the goods as of the time of their shipment, and the consignee, before the appraisement was made, applied to the collector to amend the entry by adding to the price set down in it an amount sufficient to raise the goods to their fair market value abroad "in order to avoid the penalty," which was refused, held that it was lawful for the collector to so refuse and to impose duties on the value ascertained by the appraisers and a consequent penalty for undervaluation.—Harriman v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 421; 11 Fed. Cas., 603).

(c) Where it is not shown either by the invoice, the entry, or the protest that the goods imported were purchased it is lawful for the collector to have them appraised at their value abroad at the time of their shipment and to collect duties on such value, and to impose any consequent penalty for undervaluation, although, in fact, the goods were purchased at the price in the entry and such price was their fair market value abroad at the time of their purchase.—Id.

(d) Section 17, act of 1842, authorizes the imposition of a penalty of 50 per cent for undervaluation of imported goods other than those purchased, which latter are provided for by section 8, act of July 30, 1846 (9 Stat., 43), which imposes a penalty of 20 per cent on their appraised value.—Bannendahl v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 223; 2 Fed. Cas., 763).

(e) A cargo of goods was shipped from Canton to London and thence to New York. The freight from Canton to London was added as a part of the dutiable value. Held, (1) that this charge was not authorized; (2) that even if this freight were a proper charge it would form no part of the "appraised value" of the goods and its addition would not authorize the imposition of the 20 per cent penalty under the act of 1846.—Grinnell v. Lawrence (1 Blatchf., 346; 19 Hunt Mer. Mag., 533; 11 Fed. Cas., 54).

(f) On an importation of woolen goods from Paris the appraisers took as a guide to their valuation the market price at the period of exportation, and on their report the value was raised 10 per cent and more above the invoice value, and 50 per cent was added to the duties. Held, that the appraisers were required to appraise the goods at their value at the time of their purchase, and that the appraisement was void, and that the duties on the increase in valuation and the penalty were illegally exacted.—Morlot v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 122; 17 Fed. Cas., 772).

(g) Where an invoice of goods not purchased in a foreign market, but belonging to their producer, was entered at the custom-house by their consignee, and before any action was taken to determine the value of the goods a corrected invoice was given to the collector by the consignee, held that it was the duty of the collector to take the value of the goods in the corrected invoice as the entry valuation, and that it was illegal for him to impose a penalty for undervaluation because of the difference between the two invoices.—Howland v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 146; 12 Fed. Cas., 742).

(a) The rule of the appraisement of goods imported by manufacturers prescribed by the acts of March 1, 1823 (7 Stat., 729), and the act of July 14, 1832 (4 Stat., 583), is applicable to this case notwithstanding the act of 1842.—Belcher v. Lawrason (21 How., 251).

(b) But section 17, act of 1842, which prescribes a penalty of 50 per cent of the value so appraised where the value so properly ascertained exceeds by 10 per cent the invoice value, is also applicable, because the subsequent act of 1846, which reduces this penalty to 20 per cent where goods were purchased abroad, does not change the penalty as to goods imported by manufacturers.—Id.

Sec. 8. That when merchandise entered for customs duty has been consigned for sale by or on account of the manufacture thereof, to a person, agent, partner or consignee in the United States, such person, agent, partner or consignee shall, at the time of the entry of such merchandise, present to the collector of customs at the port where such entry is made, as a part of such entry, and in addition to the certified invoice or statement in the form of an invoice required by law, a statement signed by such manufacturer, declaring the cost of production of such merchandise, such cost to include all the elements of cost as stated in section 11 of this act. When merchandise entered for customs duty has been consigned for sale by or on account of a person other than the manufacturer of such merchandise, to a person, agent, partner or consignee in the United States, such person, agent, partner or consignee shall at the time of the entry of such merchandise, present to the collector of customs at the port where such entry is made, as a part of such entry, a statement signed by the consignor thereof, declaring that the merchandise was actually purchased by him or for his account, and showing the time when, the place where, and from whom he purchased the merchandise, and in detail the price he paid for the same. Provided, That the statements required by this section shall be made in triplicate, and shall bear the attestation of the consular officer of the United States resident within the consular district wherein the merchandise was manufactured, if consigned by the manufacturer or for his account, or from whence it was imported when consigned by a person other than the manufacturer, one copy thereof to be delivered to the person making the statement, one copy to be transmitted with the triplicate invoice of the merchandise to the collector of the port in the United States to which the merchandise is consigned, and the remaining copy to be filed in the consulate.

Sec. 9. That if any owner, importer, consignee, agent or other person shall make or attempt to make any entry of imported merchandise by means of any fraudulent or false invoice, affidavit, letter, paper, or by means of any false statement, written or verbal, or by means of any false or fraudulent practice or appliance whatsoever, or shall be guilty of any willful act or omission by means whereof the United States shall be deprived of the lawful duties, or any portion thereof, accruing upon the merchandise, or any portion thereof, embraced or referred to in such invoice, affidavit, letter, paper or statement, or effected by such act or omission, such merchandise, or the value thereof, to be recovered from the person making the entry, shall be forfeited, which forfeiture shall only apply to the whole of the merchandise or the value thereof in the case or package containing the particular article or articles of merchandise to which such fraud or false paper or statement relates; and such person shall, upon conviction, be fined for each offense a sum not exceeding $5,000, or be imprisoned for a time not exceeding two years, or both, in the discretion of the court.

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 9, ACT OF JUNE 10, 1890.

(c) Loss of lawful duties is not a necessary element of the crime of making a fraudulent entry under section 9, act of June 10, 1890, and therefore the crime can be committed by an entry of cheese by means of false and fraudulent papers, notwithstanding the cheese is subject to a specific duty (par. 267, act of 1890), the weight to be determined by the public weigher and not by the papers connected with the entry.—United States v. Cutajar (C. C.), (60 Fed. Rep., 744).

(a) An invoice describing a shipment of tobacco as filler when in fact it was wrapper held to be false and fraudulent under this section and the goods forfeited.—United States v. Nineteen Bales of Tobacco (112 Fed. Rep., 779).

(b) An importation of tobacco invoiced as filler was found on examination to be part filler and part wrapper. It was held on proceedings for forfeiture that such description did not constitute an entry by means of a false or fraudulent invoice which would work a forfeiture of the goods, especially in view of the fact that there was nothing to indicate an intent on the part of the importers to defraud, and in view of the further fact that they knew that the entire importation would be examined by the customs officers.—United States v. Seventy-five Bales of Tobacco (147 Fed. Rep., 127; T. D. 27449).

(c) The provision herein that in case of fraudulent entry the value of "such merchandise," "to be recovered from the person making the entry, shall be forfeited" is to be enforced by an action in personam where the merchandise has been sold and converted into money and not by an action in rem against the money itself.—United States v. A Lot of Precious Stones and Jewelry (134 Fed. Rep., 61; T. A. 26159).

(d) None of the acts denounced by this section constitutes an offense thereunder unless the United States is thereby deprived of some of its lawful duties, and the statement in the entry of certain goods that he was the "owner" of them, made in good faith by one to whom they were invoiced and who had the right of possession of them and a lien upon them for transportation expenses which he had paid and the option to purchase any of them at fixed prices or to return them to the tentative vendors, the statement not resulting in the loss to the Government of any duties, was not an offense under this statute.—United States v. Ninety-nine Diamonds (139 Fed. Rep., 961; T. D. 26775), affirming 132 id., 579; T. D. 25806.

(e) Where goods are seized under proceedings for forfeiture the court will grant a certificate of reasonable cause, under R. S. 970, where the evidence shows affirmatively that the officers were acting in good faith and under circumstances which would justify a reasonable suspicion.—United States v. Eighty-three Sacks of Wool (147 Fed. Rep., 747; T. D. 27772).

(f) The finding in a case of merchandise of articles that are not on the invoice does not of itself justify forfeiture under the provisions of this section.—The Lace House v. United States (141 Fed. Rep., 869; T. D. 26970).

(g) The provision in this section for a forfeiture in case of fraudulent undervaluation of merchandise is penal in its nature, and the statute of limitations contained in section 22, act of June 22, 1874 (18 Stat., 190), is the one that applies to it.—United States v. Witteman (152 Fed. Rep., 377; T. D. 27876).

(h) Where a person arriving in the United States falsely and intentionally denies, on being questioned by the customs officers, that he has any precious stones in his clothes or on his person, he is guilty of attempting a "willful act or omission by means whereof the United States shall be deprived of the lawful duties" within the meaning of this section.—United States v. 218¼ Carats Loose Emeralds (153 Fed. Rep., 643; T. D. 27851); affirmed in 154 id., 839; T. D. 28235.

(i) The forfeiture provided in this section when merchandise is entered "by means of any fraudulent or false invoice" is not incurred where a false invoice was used innocently by the importers in making entry, though the invoice was made out with fraudulent intent by the shipper.—United States v. Three Bales of Rugs (T. D. 28387).

(a) The right of the United States to forfeit goods seized from the purchaser of the goods while he was attempting to smuggle them into the United States is not subject in any way to the right of the seller of the goods, as against the purchaser, to rescind the sale on account of the fraud of the purchaser and to recover them. To permit secret claims of ownership to be asserted after forfeiture would be in plain violation of the statute.—Five-hundred and Eighty-one Diamonds v. United States (119 Fed. Rep., 556).

(b) An invoice which sets forth the value of the goods at less than the price that was actually paid for them is fraudulent, notwithstanding that the invoice price represents the true foreign market value of the goods in wholesale quantities. When goods are seized for such fraudulent entry and released upon the payment of a fine equal to the amount of duty, the importers are not thereby relieved from the payment of duty. The fine is a penalty incurred by reason of the violation of a law. The duty accrues under the law by the act of importation. They are separate and distinct and bear no relation to each other.—T. D. 25970, G. A. 5896.

Sec. 10. [As amended by section 32, act of July 24, 1897, 30 U. S. Stat., 151.] That it shall be the duty of the appraisers of the United States, and every of them, and every person who shall act as such appraiser, or of the collector, as the case may be, by all reasonable ways and means in his or their power, to ascertain, estimate and appraise (any invoice or affidavit thereto or statement of cost, or of cost of production to the contrary notwithstanding) the actual market value and wholesale price of the merchandise at the time of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country whence the same has been imported, and the number of yards, parcels, or quantities, and actual market value or wholesale price of every of them, as the case may require.

Sec. 11. That when the actual market value as defined by law, of any article of imported merchandise wholly or partly manufactured and subject to an ad valorem duty, or to a duty based in whole or in part on value, can not be otherwise ascertained to the satisfaction of the appraising officer, such officer shall use all available means in his power to ascertain the cost of production of such merchandise at the time of exportation to the United States, and at the place of manufacture; such cost of production to include the cost of materials and of fabrication, all general expenses covering each and every outlay of whatsoever nature incident to such production, together with the expense of preparing and putting up such merchandise ready for shipment, and an addition of not less than 8 nor more than 50 per centum upon the total cost as thus ascertained; and in no case shall such merchandise be appraised upon original appraisal or reappraisement at less than the total cost of production as thus ascertained. It shall be lawful for appraising officers, in determining the dutiable value of such merchandise, to take into consideratoin the wholesale price at which such or similar merchandise is sold or offered for sale in the United States, due allowance being made for estimated duties thereon, the cost of transportation, insurance, and other necessary expenses from the place of shipment to the United States, and a reasonable commission, if any has been paid, not exceeding 6 per centum.

Sec. 12. That there shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, nine general appraisers of merchandise, each of whom shall receive a salary of $7,000 a year. Not more than five of such general appraisers shall be appointed from the same political party. They shall not be engaged in any other business, avocation or employment, and may be removed from office at any time by the President for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office. They shall be employed at such ports and within such territorial limits as the Secretary of the Treasury may from time to time prescribe, and are hereby authorized to exercise the powers and duties devolved upon them by this act, and to exercise under the general direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, such other supervision over appraisements and classifications, for duty, of imported merchandise as may be needful to secure lawful and uniform appraisements and classifications at the several ports. Three of the general appraisers shall be on duty as a board of general appraisers daily (except Sunday and legal holidays) at the port of New York, during the business hours prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, at which port a place for samples shall be provided, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may from time to time prescribe, which shall include rules as to the classes of articles to be deposited, the time of their retention, and as to their disposition, which place of samples shall be under the immediate control and direction of the board of general appraisers on duty at said port.

Sec. 13. That the appraiser shall revise and correct the reports of the assistant appraisers as he may judge proper, and the appraiser, or, at ports where there is no appraiser, the person acting as such, shall report to the collector his decision as to the value of the merchandise appraised. At ports where there is no appraiser the certificate of the customs officer to whom is committed the estimating and collection of duties, of the dutiable value of any merchandise required to be appraised, shall be deemed and taken to be the appraisement of such merchandise. If the collector shall deem the appraisement of any imported merchandise too low, he may order a reappraisement, which shall be made by one of the general appraisers, or if the importer, owner, agent or consignee of such merchandise shall be dissatisfied with the appraisement thereof, and shall have complied with the requirements of law with respect to the entry and appraisement of merchandise, he may within two days thereafter give notice to the collector, in writing, of such dissatisfaction, on the receipt of which the collector shall at once direct a reappraisement of such merchandise by one of the general appraisers. The decision of the appraiser or the person acting as such (in cases where no objection is made thereto, either by the collector or by the importer, owner, consignee or agent), or of the general appraiser in cases of reappraisement, shall be final and conclusive as to the dutiable value of such merchandise against all parties interested therein, unless the importer, owner, consignee or agent of the merchandise shall be dissatisfied with such decision, and shall, within two days thereafter, give notice to the collector, in writing, of such dissatisfaction, or unless the collector shall deem the appraisement of the merchandise too low, in either case the collector shall transmit the invoice and all the papers appertaining thereto to the board of three general appraisers, which shall be on duty at the port of New York, or to a board of three general appraisers who may be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury for such duty at that port or at any other port, which board shall examine and decide the case thus submitted, and their decision or that of a majority of them shall be final and conclusive as to the dutiable value of such merchandise against all parties interested therein, and the collector or the person acting as such shall ascertain, fix and liquidate the rate and amount of the duties to be paid on such merchandise, and the dutiable costs and charges thereon, acording to law.

DECISIONS UNDER SECTIONS 10 TO 13, ACT OF JUNE 10, 1890.

(a) Under article 1126, Regulations 1892, after an appraisement has been completed and a return thereof made to the importer and accepted by him the appraisement can not be recalled even for the correction of a clerical error where the effect of such correction is to change the appraisal, and if such action is taken the importer has the right to protest against the second valuation on the ground that it amounts to a new appraisement, and that the appraiser is without jurisdiction, and he is not bound to give notice of dissatisfaction.—United States v. Morewood & Co. (C. C.), (94 Fed. Rep., 639).

(b) Appraising officers in putting inquiries under section 10 are limited to "reasonable ways and means" in ascertaining market value and should exercise discretion and judgment as to the materiality of their questions.—United States v. Doherty (27 Fed. Rep., 730).

(c) Protest against appraisement on account of irregularities overruled.—T. D. 10474, G. A. 124.

(d) Sheet steel dutiable under paragraph 146, act of 1890, was manufactured in Sheffield, England, and sold to parties in Montreal, Canada, rejected by consignee, and resold to importer at invoice price. The appraiser found the invoice price to be the market value in England, and added thereto the cost and freight from England to Montreal to get market value at Montreal. Held, (1) that it was the duty of the appraiser to ascertain the market value at the principal market of the country from whence exported; (2) had the appraiser determined that Montreal was one of the principal markets of the British dominions and found the value based on that fact his finding would have been conclusive on the importer unless he had called for a reappraisement; (3) he could not raise the question of value by protest; (4) when the appraiser proceeds on a wrong principle to raise values his action is impeachable by protest; (5) the word "country" embraces all the possessions of a foreign state which are subject to the same supreme executive control; and (6) the market value at Sheffield was the dutiable value.—T. D. 12145, G. A. 1007.

(a) Cotton underwear consisting of shirts and drawers run, the shirts from 32 to 44 and the drawers from 28 to 40. The appraiser did not raise the total invoice price, but showed a difference in value between the smaller and the larger sizes. The collector (acting under R. S. 2910) assessed duty on the whole importation at the highest rate given by the appraiser. The importer protests that there is no difference in value between the smaller and the larger sizes. Held, that the action of the collector was mandatory by statute and the remedy of the importer was to call for a reappraisement.—T. D. 12344, G. A. 1116.

(b) Cotton drawers and shirts imported in sizes ranging, as to the shirts, from 34 to 44, and, as to the drawers, from 28 to 44, invoiced at one price per dozen. Held, that it is the custom of trade to purchase this quality of shirts and drawers in assorted sizes at one price and that the provisions of R. S. 2910 do not apply to this class of goods.—T. D. 14621, G. A. 2379.

(c) When the appraisers resort to section 11, act of June 10, 1890, in order to ascertain the cost of production, this is conclusive of the fact that the market value of the merchandise could not be ascertained to their satisfaction under the provision of section 10.—T. D. 12996, G. A. 1547.

(d) The appraiser is authorized to measure the goods, so as to make an intelligent return.—T. D. 13556, G. A. 1828; T. D. 16339, G. A. 3168.

(e) The return of the appraiser is conclusive as to the character of the merchandise and is binding unless it is overthrown by competent evidence.—T. D. 17335, G. A. 3555.

(f) Oil paintings (dutiable under paragraph 465, act of 1890) invoiced without mentioning frames. Appraiser added value of frames to make invoice value. It was found that the value of the frames was included in the invoice value.—T. D. 17402, G. A. 3593.

(g) The date of exportation is not presumptively the day of the date of the bill of lading, but is the date of the actual sailing of the vessel transporting the merchandise. In the absence of proof it will be presumed that the vessel did not sail prior to the date of the authentication of the invoice by the United States consul.—T. D. 20954, G. A. 4400.

(h) Merchandise imported from one country, having been produced in and exported from another country, is lawfully appraised at its actual value in the principal market of the country from which immediately imported unless it appears that it was in good faith destined for the United States at the time of original shipment, without any contingency of diversion. Held, accordingly, that goods from Germany and Austria exported to Hamilton, Canada, and then imported into the United States, were dutiable on the basis of their value in Canada, there being no evidence which would justify the conclusion that this country was the ultimate destination of the goods at the time of original shipment, although they remained in bonded warehouse while in Canada and paid no Canadian duties.—T. D. 22338, G. A. 4719.

(a) Appraising officers have no right to find a lower value than that stated in the invoice or entry.—T. D. 23111, G. A. 4940.

(b) The action of a local appraiser in making an advance on the entered value by adding percentages instead of by adding a specific sum per unit of value is not illegal and does not vitiate an appraisement so made. Article 845, Customs Regulations (1266 in 1899 edition), is directory and not mandatory.—United States v. Loeb (107 Fed. Rep., 692).

(c) Certain merchandise was invoiced upon the basis of net weight, and the appraiser returned a value per ton based on the net weight of the merchandise in packed condition. Held, that to find the total dutiable value such appraised value must be multiplied by the net weight of the importation as returned by the United States weigher, and it is error for the collector to base his computation upon gross weight. It seems that the collector's action would have been justified had the value per ton been appraised upon the basis of gross weight.—T. D. 23553, G. A. 5085.

(d) In the examination of imported silk fabrics dutiable under paragraph 387, tariff act of 1897, which requires an ascertainment as to the measurement, the weight per yard, the percentage of silk, the color, the conditions of dyeing, etc., it is properly within the duty of an examiner, in addition to appraising the value of the merchandise, to ascertain and report its weight. It would seem that the function of a United States weigher is in its general nature to ascertain the weight of the gross article to enable the duty to be computed directly therefrom. The mere fact that weighing enters into an examination of goods and that the duty is computed ultimately upon the weight does not require that the article should be sent to the weigher, provided other investigation be required beyond the skill or knowledge of the weigher.—United States v. Rosenthal (126 Fed. Rep., 766; T. D. 25118); Browne v. United States (145 Fed. Rep., 1; T. D. 26928).

(e) By the custom of the trade in England, the market value of furs is the price obtained at the annual sale in December, plus 5 per cent interest up to the time of exportation. In the case of furs purchased in December, 1899, and exported in June, 1901, it was held error of the local appraiser to fix the market value by adding the interest from December, 1899, to December, 1900, and for the Board of General Appraisers to affirm his action. It was held further that such furs when subjected to a process of manufacture after such purchase and before the importation should be appraised by adding the necessary cost of such manufacture and a reasonable profit within the limitations of section 11.—T. D. 23558, G. A. 5090.

(f) Goods were entered, duly appraised, and delivered to the importer. Subsequently, upon the report of a special agent of the Treasury Department that the goods were undervalued, the collector reliquidated the entry on the basis of the value suggested by the special agent. On the importer protesting that duty can be assessed only on the basis of the appraised value, it is held that the collector's action was tantamount to a new appraisement which he was without legal authority to make. An appraisement duly and properly made by a local appraiser is final and conclusive unless an appeal is taken from his decision in the mode prescribed by the law. When goods have passed out of the control of the customs officers no appraisement can lawfully be held.—T. D. 23601, G. A. 5100.

(a) A bill of sale showing the cost of materials out of which imported merchandise has been manufactured can not be treated as the invoice or "statement in the form of an invoice" of the merchandise itself, and where the appraised value of the merchandise is lower than the value shown by the bill of sale, it is error for the collector to assess duty on the latter instead of on the former. Neither the Board of Classification nor the courts have power to interfere with an appraisement made without irregularity or excess of power on the part of the appraising officers.—T. D. 23789, G. A. 5157.

(b) Where items are illegally added to the invoice value of goods, either by an appraising or liquidating officer, for the purpose of making dutiable value, such addition may be objected to by protest, and the action of the customs officer may be reviewed by the Board of Classification and the courts. (Oberteuffer v. Robertson, 116 U. S., 499, 515–516; 6 Sup. Ct. Rep., 462.) Ocean freight is not properly an item in the dutiable value of imported merchandise under the provisions of the customs administrative act of June 10, 1890. (United States v. Zuricaldy, 71 Fed. Rep., 955.) Charges for transporting merchandise from the place of manufacture to the principal market of the country of production constitute a proper item of value in determining the market value of such merchandise in that principal market, and the finding of the appraising officer as to the principal market is final, but, generally speaking, the determination of whether or not an item is dutiable is the function of the liquidating rather than the appraising officer.—T. D. 23851, G. A. 5170.

(c) Certain merchandise under reappraisement by the Board of General Appraisers was found by them to have no open market value. They acted properly and legally in the proceeding to ascertain the foreign market value of the goods by deducting from the wholesale market price at which such merchandise is offered for sale in the United States the necessary expenses of placing it on the market.—Comacho v. United States (115 Fed. Rep., 190).

(d) Section 10 relates to the duties of appraisers only, not to collectors as custodians of imported goods awaiting appraisement. It confers on the collector no right to yield custody of the goods to other persons for purposes of appraisement, and the collector at Providence was enjoined from sending an importation of diamonds to New York for submission to trade experts.—Bruhl v. United States (123 Fed. Rep., 957).

(e) It was proper for the appraising officer at a small port to send samples of merchandise under appraisement to the appraiser at New York in order to ascertain the market value of the goods.—The Lace House v. United States (141 Fed. Rep., 869; T. D. 26970).

(f) The action of a local appraiser in advancing the value of goods is illegal and void as an appraisement if he did not have the goods or sufficient samples thereof before him. This, notwithstanding he had examined at least one package in ten on the invoice, as required by R. S. 2910, and that the figure at which he appraised the goods was the same to which he had advanced similar goods some months before, which advance had been sustained on reappraisement. The appraisement being illegal and void, the entry should be reliquidated on the basis of the entered value.—United States v. Beer (150 Fed. Rep., 566; T. D. 27753), affirming 142 id., 199; T. D. 26880, and T. D. 26354, G. A. 6035.

(g) The appraisement of imported merchandise is restricted to determine the price or value of the parcel or quantity by which the purchase and sale of the article are made and has rightfully no reference to the totality of the purchase. If appraisers undertake to ascertain the weight or quantity of goods which should properly be weighed by a United States weigher, their action in that respect is coram non judice and a nullity. Where an appraising officer, on being requested by the collector to report the correct dutiable value of goods, makes a return showing the value of the goods in quantity and at the same time leaves the value per unit as stated on the invoice to stand unchanged, the collector is justified in rejecting the gross value and calculating duty at the unit value upon the weight shown by the United States weigher.—T. D. 23871, G. A. 5178.

(a) The French general internal-revenue tax on alcohol, which is not collected on goods exported, is a part of the dutiable value of such goods when purchased in the markets of France; but local taxes designated as "octroi" and "droit de ville," which vary with the locality, can not be properly considered as elements of market value.—Rheinstrom v. United States (118 Fed. Rep., 303), affirming T. D. 20761, G. A. 4368, followed; T. D. 24653, G. A. 5414.

(b) Taxes known in France as "droit de ville" and "octroi," which are special local taxes assessed on alcohol consumed in the markets of France, are nondutiable items and should not be added to make market value of goods containing alcohol exported from that country.—United States v. Godillot (139 Fed. Rep., 1; T. D. 26272), affirming (131 id., 653), followed; T. D. 26771, G. A. 6168.

(c) An appraisement made by disallowing certain discounts on the invoice to make market value instead of by ascertaining the value of each article on the invoice is not illegal.—Meyer v. United States (140 Fed. Rep., 334; T. D. 26656).

(d) The drawback allowed by the German Government on goods exported from Germany is a dutiable item and should be included in the market value of the merchandise.—T. D. 25103, G. A. 5608.

(e) A license fee paid to the patentee in France for the right to use a certain process for making soap is no part of the dutiable value of machinery imported to be used in connection with making soap by that process.—T. D. 25176, G. A. 5637.

(f) While an appraisement is final and not reviewable by the courts, yet an alleged inclusion of something not properly part of the market value and not dutiable at all may be challenged by protest and re-examined by the courts on appeal.—Oberteuffer v. Robertson (116 U. S., 499), followed; Hermann v. United States (C. C.), (84 Fed. Rep., 151).

(g) Where appraising officers include in their report of the value of the goods items that are independent of the actual value of the merchandise, the propriety of the inclusion of such items may be questioned, and where a so-called converters' commission was included in the appraised value, the legality of this proceeding could be attacked by protest, and it was proper on the hearing to admit evidence as to the nature of the item.—Erlanger v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 949; T. D. 28236), affirming 152 id., 576; T. D. 27874.

(h) An appraisement made by a local appraiser is final in the absence of reappraisement, and a collector of customs is without authority to reliquidate an entry by changing the value of merchandise unless there has been a reappraisement.—T. D. 27492, G. A. 6402.

(i) When an appraiser adds an item of inland freight to the dutiable amount stated upon an invoice, the presumption is that he adds it because, in his judgment, the principal market for the commodity in question was the point from whence it was exported and the cost of bringing the merchandise to that point was a part of the market value. Hence, a question arising out of the addition of such item of inland freight is one of reappraisement and not protest.—T. D. 27671, G. A. 6465.

(a) When the appraiser adds to make market value on imported merchandise, the appraisement is not conclusive against the importer and liquidation thereon is illegal unless notice of the advance is given to the importer.—Ibid.

(b) Where an appraiser adds to the invoice value of merchandise, it is sufficient to notify the importer that certain items upon his invoice have been advanced, without specifically naming all of the items.—T. D. 27715, G. A. 6478.

(c) It was clearly the intention of the statute that the appraisement must be reduced to writing, for the certificate of the appraising officer is the legal evidence of appraisement. Hence, an appraisement that is not so noted is invalid and of no effect, and in respect to such matter articles 1246 and 1266, Customs Regulations of 1899, are mandatory and not merely directory. Where the appraising officer failed to commit his appraisement to writing and to give notice thereof to the importers, thus depriving them of their right to demand a reappraisement within two days, the appraisement was illegal and additional duties for alleged undervaluation could not be assessed thereunder.—The Lace House v. United States (141 Fed. Rep., 869; T. D. 26970).

(d) If an appraising officer makes an addition to the entered value of merchandise and fails to notify the importers of the advance, in accordance with article 1267, Customs Regulations of 1899, the appraisement is not binding on and conclusive against them.—Ibid.

(e) Notice of advance in value of imported merchandise made by the appraiser must be given to the importer as provided in section 1267 of the Customs Regulations of 1899. If this notice is not given the appraisement is not conclusive against the importer and liquidation thereon is illegal. Notice of advance in the value of imported merchandise made by the appraiser may be served by mail and the depositing of such a notice in a duly franked envelope property addressed is prima facie evidence of its receipt, but this may be overcome by positive testimony that such notice was not received and was not addressed to the residence or place of business of the importer.—T. D. 28250, G. A. 6621.

(f) Where an appraiser makes no effort to ascertain the actual market value of merchandise as prescribed in section 10, but merely accepts the value stated in the invoice as being high enough, he has not made a valid appraisement.—United States v. Muller (158 Fed. Rep., 405), T. D. 28518.

(g) The method prescribed in article 1266, Customs Regulations 1899, for indicating additions to make market value by appraisers is not mandatory but only directory, and a failure to comply with its requirements does not vitiate or render illegal an appraisement.—T. D. 28572, G. A. 6682.

(h) Claim of irregularities in reappraisement overruled.—T. D. 10344, G. A. 65.

(i) Reappraisement pending August 1, 1890, should be under the act of June 10, 1890.—T. D. 10465, G. A. 115.

(j) Objection to valuation should be made within two days by an appeal for reappraisement and not by protest.—T. D. 10642, G. A. 226.

(k) On reappraisement, it is the duty of the general appraiser to appraise the foreign market value without regard to any previous valuation, and the fact that his valuation is higher than that of the local appraiser does not make it illegal.—T. D. 10670, G. A. 254.

(a) Additions prorated on reappraisement on coverings.—T. D. 10721, G. A. 274.

(b) The remedy of the importer on a disallowance of a discount on an invoice is by an appeal for reappraisement.—T. D. 11036. G. A. 479.

(c) The appraiser disallowed 2.5 per cent discount for cash to make market value. Held, that the remedy of the importer is an appeal for reappraisement and not a protest.—T. D. 11041, G. A. 484.

(d) The decision of the local appraiser as to values can not, in any respect, fetter the authority of the General Appraiser whose duty it is to review the decision de novo, and to declare the market value whether above or below that found in the original appraisement, and whether the appeal for the reappraisement was by the importer or the collector.—T. D. 11537, G. A. 712.

(e) The decision of the Board is final and conclusive as to dutiable value.—T. D. 11986, G. A. 899.

(f) On the face of the invoice of cigars, dutiable under paragraph 245, act of 1883, there appeared a discount which was disallowed by the appraising officer. Held, that the remedy was an appeal for reappraisement and not a protest.—T. D. 12358, G. A. 1130.

(g) Where the importer objects to charges or commissions being included as dutiable value his remedy is an appeal for reappraisement.—T. D. 12375, G. A. 1147.

(h) The appraiser added to the invoice value £13 for packing and shipping, and the importer protests that the amount is excessive as he actually paid only £3. Protest overruled because the remedy was an appeal for reappraisement.—T. D. 12424, G. A. 1162.

(i) Goods invoiced at £57, less charges £28, leaving balance £29, but the entry is £57 with no deduction for charges. Held, that the remedy was an appeal for reappraisement.—T. D. 12452, G. A. 1190.

(j) Appraisement, appeal for reappraisement appraisal by a General Appraiser and by a board of three general appraisers. The finding of the board as to value was final.—T. D. 12534, G. A. 1218.

(k) Where an entry has been made without invoice, under article 328, Regulations 1884, there may be a reappraisement.—T. D. 12536, G. A. 1220.

(l) When the importer is dissatisfied with the appraisement, he should ask for a reappraisement, and a protest will not be entertained.—T. D. 12639, G. A. 1288.

(m) The appraisers resorted to section 11, act of June 10, 1890, to ascertain the cost of production of St. Gall embroideries. The importer claimed that the appraisers could have ascertained the market value under section 10. Held, that the valuation returned by the appraisers could not be reviewed by protest.—T. D. 12996, G. A. 1547.

(n) When the importer claims that samples are free as having no commercial value, the remedy is an appeal for reappraisement.—T. D. 12645, G. A. 1294; T. D. 13330, G. A. 1710; T. D. 13677, G. A. 1915.

(o) The importer is entitled to notice of advance on appraisement, and where the collector did not mail any notice to the importer and he was not advised of the action of the local appraiser as required by articles 846–849 (1892), T. D. 10162, the irregularity vitiates the proceedings and authorizes the board to reverse the collector.—T. D. 13221, G. A. 1642.

(p) Stone ballast imported, invoiced, and entered at $100. The importer claimed that it had no commercial value and was free. Held, that the finding of the appraiser as to value is final, unless a reappraisement is demanded and that the collector could not but levy the duty.—T. D. 13660, G. A. 1898.

(a) All decisions of the board as to market value are final and conclusive as to dutiable value where there is no fraud or irregularity.—T. D. 14046, G. A. 2097.

(b) Merchandise invoiced at 9s. a yard, which is claimed to be a clerical error and that it should be 8s. 9d. Held, that the remedy was through reappraisement through a corrected invoice.—T. D. 14754, G. A. 2476.

(c) The appraiser returned market value at Antwerp at a price which apparently included cost of transportation from Sappermeer, Holland. Held, that if the importer is dissatisfied with the appraisement, his remedy is an appeal for reappraisement.—T. D. 14761, G. A. 2483.

(d) Invoice sent to appraiser May 17, and on May 21 he made his appraisement. On June 6 the collector returned the invoice to the appraiser who made a new appraisement. Held, that the only remedy of the collector was to order a new appraisement by a General Appraiser and that the second appraisement was void.—T. D. 15320, G. A. 2754.

(e) Addition to market value of bleached cotton cloth made in the liquidation of the entry for the quantity of cloth in excess of that reported in the invoice. Protest claimed that the addition was not authorized, because the goods were bought and paid for by the piece and at the price stated in the invoice. Held, that as the addition was to make market value, it can be challenged only by an appeal for reappraisement and not by a protest.—T. D. 15582, G. A. 2842.

(f) A verbal request for reappraisement is not sufficient.—T. D. 16569, G. A. 3265.

(g) Eight importations of merchandise made by the same importer on separate steamers and at different times were duly appraised by the local appraiser and the entries liquidated by the collector, who, however, called for reappraisements on two of the lots, which reappraisements were duly held by a General Appraiser who advanced the value of the goods. The collector reliquidated the entries covering these two lots and also those covering the remaining six lots, although no appeal had been taken from the local appraiser's valuation thereof, basing his action in every instance upon the return made by the General Appraiser, and on the fact that the goods were of the same general character. Held, that the collector's action was irregular and illegal as to the six lots not passed upon by the General Appraiser, and that an appraisement made by a local appraiser in a case of which he had jurisdiction is conclusive on all parties, unless an appeal is taken in the manner prescribed by law.—T. D. 18617, G. A. 4015.

(h) The collector is not an appraising officer and can not act as such, either with or without the consent of the local appraiser.—Id.

(i) Notice of a reappraisement must be given to an importer, and he must be afforded such opportunity as enables him to give his views and make his contention in respect to the value of the goods.—Id.

(j) The appraiser, in ascertaining market value, made an addition to the entered value on the invoice amounting to 2.5 per cent by disallowing a certain amount claimed as commissions. The remedy of the importer was by appeal for reappraisement.—T. D. 20683, G. A. 4354.

(k) A full Board of Review consists of three General Appraisers, but a quorum may consist of only two members, and a decision made and signed by such quorum of two is regular, legal, and binding on all interested parties.—T. D. 21785, G. A. 4604.

(a) When goods described on an invoice as of the same kind and value are appraised by a Board of Review at different market values, such decision is final and conclusive in the absence of fraud or irregularity.—T. D. 21785, G. A. 4604.

(b) A general appraiser, when reappraising the value of imported merchandise pursuant to the requirements of sec. 13, act of June 10, 1890, is not constrained at all by the rules that pertain to courts, but may reappraise such merchandise at a higher value than that fixed by the local appraiser, even though such reappraisement be had at the instance of the importer and not at that of the collector. T. D. 11537, G. A. 712; T. D. 10670, G. A. 254, sustained.—In re Megroz (C. C.), (49 Fed. Rep., 828).

(c) The findings of a reappraising board as to the value of imported merchandise is final and conclusive and can not be reviewed by the courts.—Muser v. Magone (C. C.), (41 Fed. Rep., 877).

(d) Under section 13, act of June 10, 1890, which provides for an appeal to the Board of General Appraisers if the importer is dissatisfied with the valuation, and section 25 which declares that no action shall be had against the collector in any case in which the importer is entitled to appeal under this act, the remedy by appeal from an appraisement is exclusive, and an action can not be maintained against the collector to recover an alleged excess of duties paid on a valuation advanced by an appraiser over the invoice value.—Loeb v. Hendricks (C. C.), (57 Fed. Rep., 568).

(e) The Circuit Court has no jurisdiction to review a decision of the Board of General Appraisers involving merely the valuation of imported merchandise.—Passavant v. United States (148 U. S., 214).

(f) In appraising certain dress goods, the appraiser made an addition to the entered value of the invoice by disallowing a commission of 2.5 per cent claimed as a discount for cash. This was done, as the appraiser said, "to make market value," the discount being considered as excessive. The importer protested. Held, that it must be assumed that the discount was not arbitrarily rejected, but that the same was taken as the measure of the advance, which the appraiser deemed it his duty to make in ascertaining market value, and that, therefore, the remedy of the importer was not by protest but by an appeal for reappraisement.—Wanamaker v. Cooper (C. C.), (69 Fed. Rep., 329).

(g) The Board of General Appraisers in appraising Swiss goods made a report adding percentages to value as follows: "On items invoiced at 18 centimes, stitch rate, add 36 per cent; on balance of goods, add 10 per cent." They did not, however, carry out on the invoice the value per aune (the Swiss unit) in francs and centimes, though it could easily be computed. Held, that there was no violation of the requirements of section 10, act of June 10, 1890.—United States v. Loeb (C. C. A.), (107 Fed. Rep., 692).

(h) Article 845, Regulations of the Treasury, 1892, provides that appraisers should make advances on invoices on the unit value declared on entry, in the currency in which the invoice is made out, in a specific sum per pound, yard, or other unit of value, and not by percentages, and in the weight, gauge, or measure expressed in the invoice, but that no average valuation shall be made, and that the additions shall be made by writing on the invoice opposite each item advanced, the words "add to make market value," stating in numerals the amount necessary to make the price per unit. Held, directory and not mandatory, in the sense that neglect to conform thereto would create an illegal appraisal.—Ibid.

(a) Under section 13, act of June 10, 1890, formal notice to the Board of dissatisfaction as to reappraisement by a General Appraiser, by the importer or collector, is not needed to give the Board of three General Appraisers jurisdiction; transmission to the board of the designated papers is sufficient, and hence the fact that a collector was satisfied but ordered a reappraisement pursuant to instructions from the Treasury Department, does not nullify the action of the Board. T. D. 21498, G. A. 4521, and the Circuit Court reversed.—Ibid.

(b) The duty of determining whether or not an appraisement by a single General Appraiser is too low is devolved upon the collector, and in the performance of such duty he acts judicially, and his discretion can not be controlled by the Secretary of the Treasury. Hence, when he does not in fact deem the appraisement too low, an appeal taken by him by direction of the Secretary confers no jurisdiction on the Board of three General Appraisers to review such appraisement, and he is a competent witness to rebut the presumption of jurisdiction arising from the fact of the appeal by showing that it was not taken in the exercise of his own judgment.—United States v. Loeb (C. C.), (99 Fed. Rep., 723); reversed, in 107 Fed. Rep., 692.

(c) Where importers distinctly testified that the Board of General Appraisers made no personal examination or investigation of goods, as required by R. S. 2901, and no opposing evidence was presented, the facts must be regarded as proved, notwithstanding the presumption in favor of the correctness of official action, and the appraisement must be held invalid.—United States v. Loeb (107 Fed. Rep., 692).

(d) While, as a general rule, the valuation of appraisers is conclusive on all parties, the appraisement may be impeached if the collector proceeded on a wrong principle, contrary to law, or transcended the power conferred by statute or did not comply therewith.—Ibid.

(e) When a case is properly pending on appeal before the Board of Reappraisement, under the provisions of section 13 of the customs administrative act, it is error for the collector to attempt to make a liquidation of the entry, and his action in so doing is void.—T. D. 23453, G. A. 5058.

(f) On reappraisement proceedings the importer is not entitled to have the whole importation produced before the Board of General Appraisers. The statutes do not seem to require the examination, on appeal, of any larger portion than R. S. 2939 directs shall be sent for examination and appraisement to the local appraiser.—Renvy et al. v. United States (121 Fed. Rep., 440).

(g) On a reappraisement by a General Appraiser requested by the collector, neither the goods themselves nor samples thereof were produced at the reappraisement proceedings. As the merchandise had passed out of the possession and control of the importers, and the collector had not duly demanded its return according to a bond for its redelivery given under R. S. 2899, it was held that the reappraisement was invalid and that duty should be assessed on the basis of the value found by the local appraiser.—United States v. Murphy (136 Fed. Rep., 811; T. D. 26269).

(h) While it is a general rule that an appraisement of merchandise made without an inspection of the goods by the appraising officer is irregular and void, it is not necessary that every article in an entire case or importation be examined, and appraisement made upon an inspection of fair samples is valid.—

United States v. Loeb (107 Fed. Rep., 692) and Glbb v. Washington (10 Fed. Cas., 288) cited; T. D. 25128, G. A. 5615.

(a) It seems that a reappraisement may be made without a reexamination of the goods where the matter in dispute relates only to a mere discount or commission on the invoice which can be corrected without an inspection of the merchandise.—United States v. McDowell (21 Fed. Rep., 563) cited; Ibid.

(b) Though an original appraisement may have been irregular, yet its defects are cured by a lawful reappraisement.—Burgess v. Converse (18 How., 413), affirming 4 Fed. Cas., 726; Ibid.

(c) The jurisdiction of the Board of General Appraisers in cases of reappraisement extends only to those items on the invoice as to which an appeal has been prosecuted. If they appraise other items not appealed on, their action is null and void and may be challenged by protest.—T. D. 25336, G. A. 5694.

(d) The provision of section 2901 of the United States Revised Statutes requiring that the collector should designate on each invoice of imported merchandise at least one package out of every ten packages for examination is directory and not mandatory, and a failure to comply strictly with this requirement does not in itself render invalid the examination or the appraisement of such merchandise. While an appraisement of merchandise made without any inspection of the goods by the appraising officer is irregular and void, it is not necessary that every portion of the imported merchandise be separately examined, and an appraisement made upon an inspection of a fair representative sample or samples of such merchandise is valid. In the holding of appraisements or reappraisements of merchandise the presumption is that the appraising officers discharge their duty by making a proper examination of the merchandise, and in order to invalidate their action the onus is on the importer to show the contrary. While an importer has a right to be present after due notice in order to present his views and evidence in regard to an appraisement or reappraisement, he can not insist on the right to remain throughout the proceedings and to be informed as to all the evidence under consideration or to cross-examine the witnesses, as at a trial in open court, much of such testimony ordinarily being of a confidential character.—T. D. 26690, G. A. 6145.

(e) The collector's right to apply for reappraisement under this section is not sacrificed by a liquidation in accordance with the original appraisement, and a reliquidation within one year from the date of entry, based upon an advance in value of the goods upon reappraisement, is valid, notwithstanding the collector's appeal was taken subsequently to the original liquidation.—T. D. 26749, G. A. 6162.

(f) A reappraisement of hides, which by reason of shrinkage were of greater value at the time they were imported into the United States than they were at the time they were shipped, which makes their value at the time they were imported the dutiable value rather than their value at the date of exportation, is valid and was not based upon a wrong principle.—T. D. 26956, G. A. 6247.

(g) The collector may order a reappraisement of merchandise within a reasonable time after the original appraisement, even after the liquidation of the entry, and reliquidate the entry on the value of the merchandise as found by the reappraisement. Held in this case that thirty-five days after appraisement was a reasonable time within which to order a reappraisement.—T. D. 27408, G. A. 6379.

(h) The action of the local appraiser in disallowing certain discounts on an invoice, instead of by ascertaining the market value of each article on the invoice, is not illegal and the importer's remedy is by appeal to reappraisement.—Meyer v. United States (140 Fed. Rep., 334; T. D. 26656).

(a) Under section 13 the jurisdiction of the Board of General Appraisers attaches by the transmission to it of the designated papers by authority of the collector. Such jurisdiction is not affected or abrogated by the mere fact that some investigation has been made as to the market value of the merchandise prior to final decision by the Board and before jurisdiction acquired, provided that before such decision the importers had such notice and opportunity for hearing as enabled them to give their views and make their contention in respect to the market value of the merchandise. Where such papers are transmitted to the Board by a deputy collector under authority and by direction of the collector, the act of the deputy must be taken as that of his principal and would be as valid as if made directly by the collector. Where no advance in market value was made by the local appraiser on a portion of the merchandise and none made by the single General Appraiser, the collector inadvertently assuming the contrary, and where the board of three General Appraisers merely affirmed the appraised value, the action of the board will be construed to cover only such invoice items as have been appraised by the local appraiser.—T. D. 27717, G. A. 6480.

(b) The fact that goods are seized for undervaluation does not deprive the owner or consignee of the right of reappraisement.—The Lace House v. United States (141 Fed. Rep., 869; T. D. 26970).

(c) It is the custom in the markets of Bagdad for mixed wools, white and colored, to be bought together at the same price without any distinction as to color, but before exportation they are separated, each color being baled by itself. On an importation of such wools thus separately packed as to color, but all invoiced at the same price, namely, the price paid for the wool in mixed condition, the local appraiser appraised the wools separately, the colored at less than the invoice price, adding the difference to the white, making the value of the latter over 12 cents per pound. On reappraisement the value found by the local appraiser was approved, and on appeal to a board of three General Appraisers the reappraised value was affirmed. The importers having protested, claiming that the appraisement and reappraisement proceedings were conducted contrary to law, it was held that there was error in appraising the wools separately and that the market value of the merchandise was the price at which and in the condition in which it was bought in the Bagdad market.—Gulbenkian v. United States (153 Fed. Rep., 858; T. D. 28079), reversing T. D. 27512 and T. D. 26719, G. A. 6151.

(d) Wool that was packed separately when shorn and invoiced and entered at different prices for white and colored was appraised and reappraised at the actual market value of each kind, notwithstanding that the testimony showed that the wool was bought as mixed Georgian autumn wool. This method or appraisment was held to be correct, being based on the condition of the wool as imported.—T. D. 27784, G. A. 6502.

(e) A reappraisement proceeding was conducted before a board of three General Appraisers; the importer was there in person; he stated that he made no objection to the sufficiency of the samples before the board; the testimony showed that these samples were entirely sufficient for them to form an exact and accurate estimate of the value of the wool, but the importer objects to the validity of the reappraisement on the ground that the board did not have before it and examine one package in every ten and one package from each invoice, and that the collector did not, as required by R. S. 2901, order one package of every invoice and one package at least of every ten packages brought to the public stores for examination. It was held that the provision of R. S. 2901 is directory and not mandatory, and it was intended for the benefit of the Government, and the failure of the collector to comply with it can not be invoked by the importer to invalidate a reappraisement. It was further held that if in a reappraisement proceeding the examination of the merchandise is necessary or essential to establish that the value placed upon the same by the General Appraiser, from whose action the appeal is taken, is incorrect, the party appealing should produce the merchandise before the board of three General Appraisers or request them to examine the same or samples thereof in their possession; and if he fails to do this he will not be heard to complain that the merchandise was not examined.—Ibid.

(a) Where imported goods have been seized for undervaluation, this fact does not deprive the consignee or owner of the right of reappraisement, and the same principle would apply with equal reason to the right of the collector or surveyor of customs to call for a reappraisement.—T. D. 27887, G. A. 6536.

(b) A board of three General Appraisers, or a single General Appraiser, acquired jurisdiction to hold a reappraisement simply by the transmission to them by the collector of the record and other papers mentioned in this section and directing a reappraisement, without any statement made by such officer that he deems the appraisement as made too low.—T. D. 27887, G. A. 6536.

(c) Every statutory requirement is satisfied by the examination, by a General Appraiser or a board of three General Appraisers upon appeal to him or them upon the value of imported merchandise, of such packages as are required by section 2901, United States Revised Statutes, to be taken to the public stores and examined. Query: Whether section 2901 is applicable to a General Appraiser or a board of three General Appraisers or is directory or mandatory? Upon an appeal to a General Appraiser from the action of a local appraiser in placing a value upon imported merchandise, or from a General Appraiser to a board of three General Appraisers, the presumption is that the value placed upon said merchandise by the local appraiser, or General Appraiser in a reappraisement, is correct, and the onus of showing the contrary is upon the party appealing. If the examination of that merchandise is necessary or essential to establish that the value placed upon the same by the local appraiser, or by a General Appraiser on appeal, is incorrect, the party appealing should produce the merchandise before the General Appraiser or board of three General Appraisers, or request them to examine the same if in their possession, and if he fails to do this he will not be heard to complain that the merchandise was not examined. Upon examination of several large importations of dolls, of which there were many different varieties, the local appraiser advanced the invoice value in a number of instances, and on successive appeals to a General Appraiser and to a board of three General Appraisers the appraised value was affirmed. The importers then protested, attacking the validity of the reappraisement proceedings on the ground that the General Appraisers did not have before them and did not examine the goods or sufficient and adequate samples thereof. On the question of whether on appeal to reappraisement a board of three General Appraisers sits as a court of review or as appraisers, and as to whether or not it is necessary that they actually do examine the goods under reappraisement, there was no ruling. It was held, however, that inasmuch as the appraisement made by the local appraiser was not attacked in the protest the presumption of correctness which attaches to the official action of the local appraiser must prevail. And that as in no instance the board fixed the value of the goods any higher than the valuation made by the local appraiser, liquidation of the entries must proceed on the basis of the value as returned by him, and not on the value at which the goods were entered by the importer.—United States v. Curnen (146 Fed. Rep., 45; T. D. 27262), reversing 136 id., 807 (T. D. 25975), and affirming T. D. 25423, G. A. 5720.

(a) Certain merchandise imported at the port of Philadelphia was advanced by the local appraiser to make market value, whereupon the importers duly filed an appeal to reappraisement. The testimony of the importers was taken at St. Louis before a General Appraiser, and subsequently the Government introduced evidence in support of the appraised value at Philadelphia. This second hearing was before another General Appraiser, who was not aware that the importers had introduced evidence in support of their claim, and who decided the case without knowing of or considering the importers' evidence, treating the absence of the importers from the Philadelphia hearing as a default. Held, that the importers did not have the benefit of a valid reappraisement as provided in this section; that the decision announced in the case was made inadvertently and without there having been a trial of the issues, and that it may be regarded as if it had not been announced, all parties to be relegated to the positions they occupied prior to the announcement of a decision.—United States v. Curnen & Steiner (146 Fed. Rep., 45; T. D. 27262) followed; T. D. 28299, G. A. 6641.

(b) In the matter of the reappraisement of certain chocolate a board of General Appraisers filed a supplemental return two months after its original return, stating that the reappraised value given in the latter did not include the value of the plain wooden coverings of the merchandise. It was held that this supplemental return was in effect an amendment of the reappraisement decision which could not legally be made, and that the finding of the board should be interpreted as including in said reappraised value the value of all coverings of any kind as prescribed in section 19 of the customs administrative act.—Leeming v. United States (153 Fed. Rep., 489; T. D. 27986), reversing in part T. D. 27216, G. A. 6315.

(c) When the validity of a reappraisement by a board of three General Appraisers is challenged by proper protest, the Board of General Appraisers, as a classification board, sits as a court of first instance. Such a board can not examine the testimony that was before the reappraisement board for the purpose of weighing it or determining its preponderance, but only for the purpose of ascertaining and determining whether or not there was any testimony upon which the board based its finding.—T. D. 28382, G. A. 6655.

(d) Certain Haviland china ware was reappraised by a board of three General Appraisers upon appeal by the Government from the decision of a siugle General Appraiser and the reappraised value fixed at figures in excess of the entered values. The importer challenged the validity of this reappraisement, alleging that the board which made it acted upon an illegal principle, contrary to law, and that its finding of the value of such merchandise was arbitrary and not supported by the evidence. Another board of three General Appraisers, sitting as a board of classification, made a finding that the Board of Reappraisement based its decision solely on a certain letter written by one of the importers which was put in evidence and held that the latter board had put an erroneous construction upon the letter, and that consequently its findings were without evidence to support them. The protest was sustained and reliquidation was ordered based upon the value as found by the single General Appraiser, which was the entered value.—Ibid.

(e) The construction of a writing is a question of law for the court when there are no collateral facts or extrinsic circumstances to influence or control the inferences of fact to be drawn from the writing itself. Where there are such collateral facts or extrinsic circumstances the inferences of fact to be drawn therefrom are to be left to the jury.—Ibid.

(a) Question: Whether the case of United States v. Passavant (169 U. S., 16) is authority for the doctrine that the home market price should always be taken in determining the dutiable value of merchandise?—Ibid.

DECISIONS UNDER EARLIER STATUTES PERTAINING TO SAME SUBJECT-MATTER.

(b) In an action against the collector of customs to recover duties paid under protest on an importation of Peruvian bark, where it appeared that the official appraisers, under the instruction of the Secretary, had predicated their valuation of the bark on the quantity of sulphate of quinine produced by the several packages in the invoice, held that the Secretary had no power to fix a chemical analysis of the bark as the only test of its dutiable value. (See circular of November 2, 1848.)—Bartlett v. Kane (Taney, 186; 2 Fed. Cas., 971).

(c) The law fixes the duties upon the market value at the port of exportation; the appraisers must and can only look at the fair market value of the article among those trading in it at the port of exportation; and he can only be required to adopt the methods usually adopted by merchants in making purchases.—Id.

(d) But still the appraisers, when they suspect a wrong to the Government, have a right to employ this means as a test by which, with the other knowledge and information in their power, they may be able to arrive at a correct estimate of the true value of the article imported.—Id.

(e) The official report of the appraiser is prima facie evidence of the examination. An appraiser is a quasi judge. His acts as such are not purely ministerial. If such an office has been colorably created and one commissioned under it who has discharged de facto its duties, his acts, so far as the public or third parties are concerned, are as valid as those of one acting de jure. (The Appraiser-General who acted in this case was appointed under a clause in the general appropriation act of 1853 (10 Stat., 202). The objection was to his acting as appraiser.—Gibb v. Washington (1 McAll., 430; 10 Fed. Cas., 288).

(f) The collector having jurisdiction of customs cases and the appointment of a proper appraiser, any objection to the appraiser must be made first to the collector and afterwards due protest and appeal made to the Secretary in order to entitle the importer to raise such objection as a defense when sued for the liquidated duties. The recent cases of United States v. Schlesinger (120 U. S., 109) and Oelbermann v. Merritt (123 U. S., 356) have not changed the former rule.—United States v. Earnshaw (D. C.), (45 Fed. Rep., 782).

(g) An appraisal of goods by the public appraisers is final and conclusive unless the importer gives to the collector an absolute and unconditional notice of his dissatisfaction with such appraisal.—Schmaire v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 408; 21 Fed. Cas., 700).

(h) Where the notice given by the importer was that the appraisement was not satisfactory and that "if desired" such evidence and statements would be produced to the collector as could be furnished to satisfy him of the correctness of the invoice value, held that this was a conditional notice and was either not an appeal from an appraisal or was an abandonment of the appeal and that the appraisal was final and conclusive.—Id.

(i) If on an appeal from an appraisal a collector illegally refuses to order a reappraisal, still the appraisal is not set aside by the appeal and is conclusive until a reappraisal is in fact made, and the only remedy against the importer is an action against the collector for his breach of duty.—Id.

(a) No error in judgment on the part of the appraisers can be revised by the court.—Harriman v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 421; 11 Fed. Cas., 603).

(b) An actual appraisement is conclusive as to the value of an importation in the absence of an appeal to the merchant appraisers, and the collector is required to assess duty on such valuation.—Saxonville Mills v. Russell (1 Fed. Rep., 118).

(c) The decision of the Government appraisers is final if not appealed from or if an appeal having been taken is waived.—Bartlett v. Kane (16 How., 263).

(d) The assistant appraisers of goods subject to an ad valorem duty (act of May 28, 1830; 4 Stat., 409) are in aid of those under the act of March 1, 1823 (3 Stat., 729), and an appraisement of each set is not necessary.—United States v. Fourteen Packages of Pins (1 Gilp., 235; 25 Fed. Cas., 1182).

(e) An appraisement regularly made under section 9, act of April 20, 1818, is conclusive as to the value on which the duty is to be estimated, and no evidence is admissible to prove that the actual cost or value is different.—Tappan v. United States (2 Mason, 393; 23 Fed. Cas., 690).

(f) In the appraisement of goods imported in 1861, subject to a specific duty, the decision of the appraisers is not conclusive as in the case of goods subject to an ad valorem duty.—Bailey v. Goodrich (2 Cliff., 597; 2 Fed. Cas., 369).

(g) The determination of the appraisers under section 5, act of March 1, 1823 (3 Stat., 729), as to the true and actual market value and wholesale price of an importation in the principal markets of the country from which it was exported is conclusive in the premises.—Id.

(h) But these duties are by section 1, act of March 3, 1851 (9 Stat., 629), limited to goods, wares, and merchandise subject to an ad valorem duty.—Id.

(i) The price fixed by the appraisers (act of Aug. 30, 1842, sec. 16, 5 Stat., 548) is conclusive as to the dutiable value of goods, and the importers have no right to give evidence against it.—Hertz v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 137; 12 Fed. Cas., 59).

(j) An appraisement by public appraisers is conclusive as to dutiable value unless it is appealed from, when there is no protest as to the regularity of the appraisal.—McCall v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 360; 15 Fed. Cas., 1234).

(k) While it may be conceded that the judgment of the appraisers is conclusive if made upon a sufficient examination, the proof of failure to examine one in ten, or even any of the packages as the law requires (act of Aug. 30, 1842, sec. 21), destroys the conclusiveness of their appraisement.—Converse v. Burgess (18 How., 413).

(l) The appraisement is conclusive of the nature of the article and its market value in the place from whence it was imported.—Belcher v. Linn (24 How., 508).

(m) The valuation of merchandise made by customs officers under the statutes for the purpose of levying duties thereon is in the absence of fraud on the part of the officers conclusive on the importer.—Hilton v. Merritt (110 U. S., 97).

(n) The general rule that the value of merchandise made by a customs appraiser is conclusive if no appeal be taken therefrom to merchant appraisers is subject to the qualification that if the appraisers proceed upon a wrong principle, contrary to law, and this be made to appear, his appraisement may be impeached.—Robertson v. Frank Brothers Co. (132 U. S., 17).

(a) R. S. 2930, 2931, 3011 are to be construed together, and the decision of the proper officer, after appeal and without fraud, as to the dutiable value of imports, is final and conclusive against the importer.—Stewart & Co. v. Merritt (2 Fed. Rep., 531).

(b) The valuation of imported merchandise by designated officials is conclusive, in the absence of fraud, when the official has power to make it.—Muser v. Magone (155 U. S., 240).

(c) In case of disagreement between the appraiser and the merchant appraiser in regard to the true market value of imported goods the decision of the collector is final and fixes valuation.—Id.

(d) In this case the appraisers evidently considered that the market value of the goods could be satisfactorily ascertained by the method which they pursued, and their determination, in the absence of fraud, can not be impeached by requiring them to disclose the reasons which impelled their conclusions or proving remarks made by them.—Muser v. Magone (155 U. S., 240).

(e) In an action to recover duties paid under protest the appraisement, though conclusive in respect to errors of judgment and mistaken ideas of quality or value or the elements entering into the cost of manufacture, may yet be inquired into in respect to any alleged illegality in the action of the appraisers, such as adding illegal items to make up increased value or proceeding upon principles of valuation which the statute condemns. Sustaining the Circuit Court.—Magone v. Origet (C. C. A.), (70 Fed. Rep., 778).

(f) The official appraisal not appealed from is conclusive as to the dutiable value of goods when the protest does not point out any violation of law in making the appraisement.—Roller v. Maxwell (3 Blathof., 142; 20 Fed. Cas., 1136).

(g) Although the appraisement by customs officers is not ordinarily open to judicial review, that rule does not apply when the value is determined by a classification made by the officer.—Erhardt v. Schroder (155 U. S., 124).

(h) The statute gives the collector the right to order the appraisers to make a reappraisement. The appraisement determines the value of the importation. The collector determines the rate of duty fixed by law and assesses it upon the value as found by the appraisement. The collector can not substitute his own appraisement in lieu of the one found by the appraisers.—Wills v. Russell (Holmes, 228; 30 Fed. Cas., 70).

(i) At a port where there are no appraisers a deputy collector may examine goods entered for warehousing to ascertain their dutiable value, as well as the collector.—Spring v. Russell (1 Lowell, 258; 8 Int. Rev. Rec., 193; 22 Fed. Cas., 989).

(j) The official appraisers may make a demand for papers even after their own decision has been made.—Bartlett v. Kane (Taney, 186; 2 Fed. Cas., 971).

(k) Where the merchant appraisers did not agree the collector was justified in adopting the report of the local appraiser and discarding that of the merchant appraisers.—T. D. 10761, G. A. 314.

(l) In an action to recover duties illegally exacted it appeared that the importation consisted of goods obtained by barter on the west coast of Africa in March, 1849, for which the master, who had no invoice, made one after his arrival in port, which invoice was received by the customs officers. The deputy appraiser, from his knowledge of the articles imported, but without instructions, added more than 10 per cent to the invoice value, and a penalty of 20 per cent was consequently added and exacted. The deputy sent the invoice to the regular appraisers, two of whom sanctioned it by indorsement, and in this condition it was returned to the collector, who assessd the duties and imposed the penalty. Held, that the appralsal was void, as being the act of the deputy and not that of the principal appraisers.—Barker v. Lawrence (Betts, Scr. Bk., 258; 2 Fed. Cas., 816).

(a) A collector is not bound to take the invoice value of goods, supported by the owner's oath on entry, as their dutiable value.—Focke v. Lawrence (2 Blatchf., 508; 9 Fed. Cas., 329).

(b) The law requires the best evidence to be given of any fact. A series of sales, or a single sale in the ordinary course of trade, is one of the best evidences of market value. Offers by merchants and manufacturers to sell their goods, in the usual course of trade, are among the best evidences of their market value.—Six Cases of Silk Ribbons (22 Fed. Cas., 247).

(c) It is presumed that appraisers acted at the request of the collector if he levied the duty in conformity with their act, and if there was no such request his adoption of their act would be equivalent to such request.—Rankin v. Hoyt (4 How., 327).

(d) Appraisers have not authority to fix weight or quantities, only valuation.—Marriott v. Brune (9 How., 619, 634).

(e) Under sections 16 and 17 of the act of 1842 (5 Stat., 548, 563) the power of the Government appraisers was not terminated by returning an appraisement to the collector. When they found it was questioned they had a right to reconsider it, and for this purpose to call on the importer to produce his correspondence, and he could not by taking an appeal exempt himself from the duty of producing it.—Bartlett v. Kane (16 How., 263).

(f) The appraisers are appointed with powers, by all reasonable ways and means, to appraise, estimate and ascertain the true and actual market value and wholesale price of the importation. The exercise of these powers involves knowledge, judgment, and discretion. We hold that where jurisdiction is delegated to any public officer or tribunal over a subject matter and its exercise is confided to his or their discretion the acts done are in general binding and valid as to the subject matter. The only questions which can arise between an individual and the public or any person denying their validity are power in the officer and fraud in the party. All other questions are settled by the decision made or the act done by the tribunal or officer, whether executive, legislative, judicial, or special, unless an appeal or other revision is provided for by some appellate or supervisory tribunal prescribed by law.—Belcher v. Linn (24 How., 508, 522).

(g) Section 11 of the act of April 20, 1818, is constitutional, but it has not changed the basis of valuation on which duties are ordinarily to be estimated. The "actual cost" is still the true basis, and an appraisement under this section is never to be ordered by the collector unless he personally suspects that the invoice is undervalued, for this section applies only to fraudulent invoices.—Tappan v. United States (2 Mason, 395; 23 Fed. Cas., 690).

(h) If the proceedings of the Government appraisers are not in conformity with law, the importer may refuse to pay by reason of such defects, pointing them out in his protest; but if he claims an appeal to merchant appraisers, and their proceedings are regular, the defects in the proceedings of the Government appraisers are immaterial.—Burgess v. Converse (2 Curt., 216; 4 Fed. Cas., 726).

(i) Values of imported goods subject to specific duty are by section 8 of the act of February 10, 1820 (3 Stat., 541), ascertained in the same manner as those subject to ad valorem duty, but the requirement is for statistical purposes different from those described in the acts making provision for the appraisement of articles subject to ad valorem duty.—Bailey v. Goodrich (2 Cliff., 597; 2 Fed. Cas., 369).

(a) Where a portion only of the public appraisers act in making an appraisement, their action when not objected to by protest for that reason is equivalent to the concurrent action of all the appraisers. It is only necessary that those who certify to the appraisal should have actually made it.—McCall v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 360; 15 Fed. Cas., 1234).

(b) The appraisers are not bound by prior appraisals of the value of goods of the same kind imported by the same party.—Goodsell v. Briggs (Holmes, 299; 10 Fed. Cas., 616).

(c) The Circuit Court has no authority to enjoin the appraisers from taking evidence anywhere as to the value of an importation.—Goodsell v. Briggs (Holmes, 299; 10 Fed. Cas., 616).

(d) The court refuses to enjoin the appraisers of gloves from carrying out of the district samples of the gloves for the purpose of obtaining evidence as to their value.—Id.

(e) Under the act of March 3, 1851, where the liability of the merchandise to duty depends upon the value of a given quantity or parcel of the same, there is no necessity for a preliminary appraisement in order to ascertain whether it is subject to duty at all or entitled to free entry before it is appraised as required by law to ascertain its dutiable value.—Harding v. Whitney (4 Cliff., 96; 11 Int. Rev. Rec., 103; 11 Fed. Cas., 496).

(f) Section 17 of the act of 1842 must, since the act of 1851, be held to point out the mode and consequence of all appraisements, whether the goods were procured by purchase or not.—Forman v. Peaslee (21 Law Rep., 273; 9 Fed. Cas., 452).

(g) Section 16 of the act of 1842 is not repealed by the act of July 30, 1842, and still prescribes the rule for ascertaining the dutiable value of merchandise procured by purchase on which an ad valorem duty is imposed.—Barnard v. Morton (1 Curt., 404; 2 Fed. Cas., 837).

(h) Under the tariff act of March 2, 1833, the Government was authorized to collect duties upon goods imported after June 30, 1842, and the regulations for ascertaining the amount of duties provided by existing laws are to be applied so far as they are applicable to the collection of duties under said act of 1833, though the place in reference to which the value of goods was to be appraised is changed from the foreign country to the port of importation and no corresponding change is made in the instrumentalities for ascertaining the home value.—Aldridge v. Williams (3 How., 1).

(i) Sections 2931 and 3011, R. S., do not relate to alleged errors in the appraisement of goods, but to the rate and amount of duties imposed upon them after appraisement.—Hilton v. Merritt (110 U. S., 97).

(j) Under statutes conferring a general discretionary power without qualification, the exercise of the officers' discretion is limited by legal construction to the evident purposes of the act and to what is known as a sound and legal discretion, excluding all arbitrary, capricious, inquisitorial, and oppressive proceedings.—United States v. Doherty (27 Fed. Rep., 730).

(k) Though the acts of special tribunals can not be in general reviewed except as provided by law, they may be examined collaterally as respects their jurisdiction and as regards acts in excess of power, and as to such acts their proceedings will be held unauthorized and void.—Id.

(a) Defendants contracted at Lyons, France, with manufacturers to deliver at his store in New York certain goods, free of all charges, at a certain price in dollars indicated by certain cipher marks. The manufacturers subsequently imported the goods, and upon appraisement the defendant was examined as a witness and required to state the price in dollars indicated by the cipher marks, which he declined to do, as prejudicial to his interests. There was no evidence of any concealment or fraud in the importation or of the absence of the ordinary means of ascertaining the market value of the goods in the principal markets of France, which was the only ultimate question for the appraisers' determination. Held, that the discretion of the appraisers in putting inquiries is not unlimited, but restricted by the purposes of the act—by the limitation of R. S. 2902—to "reasonable ways and means" and the exercise of a sound and fair judgment of what was material to the ascertainment of the market value in the principal markets of the country of exportation; that the inquiry as to the contract price for the future delivery of goods at a store in New York, free of all charges, was prima facie incompetent, because too remote and uncertain as evidence of foreign value, and resort to such evidence was justifiable only upon the failure of the ordinary and appropriate proofs; that to compel such disclosures, without necessity, from a stranger to the importation, when such disclosure would be prejudicial to his business interests, was not within the reasonable ways and means prescribed by the statute nor the exercise of a sound and reasonable discretion, and was therefore in excess of the appraisers' lawful power in the absence of special reasons to justify it; and that no penalty, therefore, was legally incurred (R. S. 2923).—United States v. Doherty (27 Fed. Rep., 730).

(b) It seems that the proper construction of section 67, act of 1799, requires that each package shall be examined by a custom-house officer in the presence of two merchants and that to constitute such presence the merchant must be in such a situation as to witness such examination and to see and testify to a part, at least, of the contents of each package.—United States v. One Thousand Three Hundred and Sixty Three Bags of Merchandise (2 Spr., 85; 25 Law Rep., 600; 27 Fed. Cas., 340).

(c) An appraisement of a cargo of sugar based solely upon samples taken from a part of the cargo after most of it had been sold and delivered to purchasers held insufficient.—United States v. McKean (New York Times, Dec. 22, 1857; 26 Fed. Cas., 1100).

(d) The principal appraisers must act in person and upon their own inspection in every case, and an appraisal made by them upon an inspection and certificate of a deputy appraiser only is inoperative and void.—Barker v. Lawrence (Betts' Scr. Book, 258; 2 Fed. Cas., 816).

(e) Both the Government appraiser and the merchant appraiser are required to open and examine at least one package in every ten, and if the jury find that this was not in substance and effect done the appraisement is void.—Burgess v. Converse (2 Curt., 216; 4 Fed. Cas., 726).

(f) Under a protest which alleges that "the goods were not fairly and faithfully examined" the importer may rely upon the failure of the appraiser to examine one package in every ten.—Id.

(g) R. S. 2901 was intended for the benefit of the Government, is not mandatory, and official acts are not invalidated for want of strict compliance therewith.—Erhardt v. Schroeder (155 U. S., 124, 125); Origet v. Hedden (155 U. S., 228); United States v. Ranlett & Stone (172 U. S., 133, 142).

(a) An examination of goods by the appraisers is indispensable.—Gibb v. Washington (1 McAll, 430; 10 Fed. Cas., 288).

(b) The official report of the appraiser is prima facie evidence of the examination. An appraiser is a quasi judge. His acts as such are not purely ministerial. If such an office has been colorably created and one commissioned under it who has discharged de facto its duties, his acts, so far as the public or third parties are concerned, are as valid as those of one acting de jure would be.—Id.

(c) Where sugar was appraised by samples which were drawn from the packages by the person called the sampler and were delivered by him to the local appraisers, and the examination was made by them without having seen the packages, held, in the absence of any objection by the importers as to the manner of drawing the samples or to their identification, that it was a substantial compliance with the requirements of Congress authorizing the appraisal in such a case to be made by samples.—Yznaga v. Peaslee (1 Cliff., 493; 30 Fed. Cas., 900).

(d) And where, upon appeal to merchant appraisers, the samples were, after the decision of the local appraisers, placed in the depository in the appraisers' department and were there kept until the meeting of the merchant appraisers and were then produced by one of the local appraisers, and no objection to the identity of the samples being then made by the importers, held that all objections which might have been taken to the appraisement were waived by the importers.—Id.

(e) If the samples are fairly selected from one in ten of the packages and are fully identified, it is of no importance whether they were drawn from the packages by the appraisers themselves or by the official sampler of the appraisers' department.—Id.

(f) Plaintiff imported in 1853, from Liverpool, 1,360 boxes of tin plates of four different kinds and of different value, and one box of each kind, being four boxes in all, were designated by the appraiser for examination and appraisal, and on appraisal increased duties and a penalty were imposed. There was no waiver of the requirement that one box in every ten be examined. Held, that this statute requires that the collector shall designate one package in every ten for examination and there must in substance and effect be a faithful personal examination by the reappraisers of the number of packages which are required to be examined and appraised or such an examination of the samples drawn from such packages as is equivalent to an examination of the packages themselves. If such examination is not had, the reappraisal is invalid, and the excess of duty or the penalty that is imposed by reason of any increased valuations above those stated in the invoice is illegally imposed.—Ystalifera Iron Co. v. Redfield (23 Fed. Rep., 650).

(g) An appraisement can be lawfully made only after a personal examination by the appraisers.—Greely v. Thompson (10 How., 225, 238, 239).

(h) The act of 1846 requires the collector to designate on the invoice at least one package of every invoice and at least one package of every ten of goods, should he or the appraisers deem it necessary, to be opened and examined by the appraisers. This was not done in this case.—Converse v. Burgess (18 How., 413).

(i) Proof was admissible in an action to recover duties improperly assessed that the appraisers did not examine or see any of the original packages, but only samples (of sugar) which had been taken out several weeks before and which could not afford a true criterion of their value.—Id.

(a) While it may be conceded that the judgment of the appraisers is conclusive if made upon a sufficient examination, the proof of failure to examine one in ten, or even any of the packages as the law requires, destroys the conclusiveness of their appraisement.—Id.

(b) When the examination of hemp by the appraiser was such as is usually made in buying and selling the article, the importer can not show that it was insufficient.—Sampson v. Peaslee (20 How., 571, 580).

(c) Under R. S. 2930 the merchant appraiser must be a person familiar with the character and value of the goods, and under R. S. 2901 he must open, examine, and appraise the packages designated by the collector and ordered to be sent to the public stores for examination.—Oelberman v. Merritt (123 U. S., 356, 366); Mustin v. Cadwalader (id., 369).

(d) In a suit to recover, the importer has a right to show that these provisions were not complied with.—Id.

(e) An importer whose goods, in several packages, were sent by the collector to the public store and there examined can not take advantage of the fact that the appraisers in making up their opinion did not examine every case, unless it also appears that they were directed by the collector to make such examination of all and failed to do so.—Origet v. Hedden (155 U. S., 228, 239).

(f) Under the revenue system of the United States the question of dutiable value of imported articles is not to be tried before the appraisers as if it were an issue in a suit in a judicial proceeding. Such is not the intention of the statutes. The practice has been to the contrary from the earliest history of the Government, and the provisions of the statute in this behalf are open to no constitutional objection. It appeared in this case that the merchant appraiser examined the goods sufficiently to satisfy him that they were the same order or goods that his firm imported. Held, that this established the familiarity required by the statute and placed his qualifications as an expert beyond a reasonable doubt.—Origet v. Hedden (155 U. S., 228, 238).

(g) Where goods are imported into a port of entry and warehoused there, and are intended to be and are transported to another port, in bond for rewarehousing, the entry is to be completed at the former port, and the collector at the second port has no authority to levy the penal duty on such goods by virtue of a new appraisement made under his own direction.—Spring v. Russell (1 Lowell, 258; 8 Int. Rev. Rec., 193; 22 Fed. Cas., 989).

(h) Articles 460 and 463, Treasury Regulations, require a report to the Treasury Department in such a case, but there appears to be no law or regulation which authorizes a new levy or duties.—Id.

(i) Nor can the collector at the original port of entry make an addition to the invoice value upon mere hearsay information derived from the collector at the second port, and without notice to the importer, and after the goods have left the first port.—Id.

(j) Where the consignee of a quantity of corks (in 1856) imported from France presented on their entry an invoice and entry, both of which were erroneous through mistake and not through fraud, and immediately discovered the error and notified the collector of it and sent to France for a corrected invoice, delivered it to the collector, and requested permission to correct the error, which was refused, and the collector imposed duties on the value as stated in the true invoice and a penalty for undervaluation, without any appraisal of the goods, held that the penalty was illegally exacted.—Carnes v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 420; 5 Fed. Cas., 90).

(a) Where a fraud was committed on an importer of cigars by the manufacturer by invoicing them erroneously as to their grades, and the duties were deposited on the valuation in the invoice, and the appraisers decided that a fraud had been committed and that the invoice should be reduced, but the collector refused to permit the reduction, because the Secretary would not authorize it, and exacted duties on the invoice value, and the entries were liquidated under a protest setting forth the error in grades, held that the collector ought to have allowed the error to be corrected and that the protest was sufficient and made made in time.—Lillie v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 41; 15 Fed. Cas., 538).

(b) A manufacturer living in an inland town of a foreign country might, under section 66, act of 1799, and before the act of April 20, 1818, invoice any article, manufactured by him and exported to this country, at the actual cost of the raw material and the price or value of the labor employed in its manufacture, adding the expense of transportation to the seaport whence it was shipped. This is the cost at the place of exportation within the meaning of the law.—Ninety Five Bales of Paper v. United States (1 Paine, 149; 18 Fed. Cas., 266).

(c) The phrase "actual cost" in the revenue act of 1799 means the actual price paid in a bona fide purchase and not the market value.—Alfonso v. United States (2 Story, 421; 1 Fed. Cas., 395).

(d) Where goods subject to an ad valorem duty are purchased in a foreign place and exported to the United States, a true valuation in the invoice is the actual cost at which they were purchased.—United States v. Twelve Casks of Cudbear (Gilp., 507; 28 Fed. Cas., 236).

(e) If the collector forms an opinion that there are just grounds to suspect the invoice does not truly state the actual cost of the goods and directs an appraisement, no inquiry can be made as to the grounds of that opinion.—United States v. Tappan (11 Wheat., 419).

(f) Where goods are imported from the country of their production, they must, for the purpose of fixing their dutiable value, be appraised at their market value in that country at the time of their purchase.—Griswold v. Lawrence (1 Blatchf., 599; 11 Fed. Cas., 66).

(g) The collector is justified, in the absence of written notice of a different state of facts, in assuming the place of the shipment of the goods, as stated in the entry invoice, to be the place of their purchase, and the date of the invoice as the time of their purchase.—Focke v. Lawrence (2 Blatchf., 508; 9 Fed. Cas., 329).

(h) The valuation of the goods, under instructions of the Secretary of date May 15, 1845, as of the time of their exportation, instead of as of the time of their purchase, was illegal.—Maillard v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 378; 16 Fed. Cas., 501).

(i) Where iron was purchased in Wales and sent to Liverpool, and was afterwards shipped from Liverpool to New York, held that the appraisement of the iron at its market value in Liverpool at the time of its shipment from that port was proper, Liverpool being a principal market of the country of the production of the iron.—Goddard v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 131; 10 Fed. Cas., 510).

(j) Under this section the collector is justified in taking the time of the shipment from abroad of goods as the time of the purchase, unless he is notified by the entry or invoice, or protest, or in some other way, that some other time was the time of their purchase, and should be taken as the time of their appraisal.—Crowley v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 401; 6 Fed. Cas., 915).

(a) The value of the merchandise at the time of its procurement is to be ascertained, not its value at the time of exportation.—Greely v. Thompson (10 How., 225, 235, 238).

(b) Where orders for goods are accepted by foreign vendors at the ruling market price, but the price advances greatly before the goods are delivered for shipment and the invoices made out, the purchase is to be considered as made, within the meaning of the tariff acts, at the date of the invoice and not at the date the orders are accepted, and the appraisers may raise the valuation accordingly.—Wilson v. Lawrence (2 Blatchf., 514; 30 Fed. Cas., 138).

(c) This act changes the period of valuation from the time of purchase to the time of exportation.—Morris v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 143; 17 Fed. Cas., 824).

(d) This act only varies the provision of section 8, act of July 30, 1846, so far as concerns the period of time in reference to which the valuation of imports is to be made and does not affect the question of the imposition of extra duties because of undervaluation.—Id.

(e) Under this act all goods subject to an ad valorem duty are to be appraised at the period of exportation, and this includes goods obtained otherwise than by purchase.—Forman v. Peaslee (21 Law Rep., 273; 9 Fed. Cas., 452).

(f) The plaintiff entered into a contract with T. & Co. for the transportation of iron from Wales to the United States, in pursuance of which T. & Co. employed coasting vessels to bring it from Wales to Liverpool, where it was transshipped on board their packets for Boston. Held, that the "period of exportation," at which the market value was to be ascertained, was the time when the goods left Liverpool for the United States.—Id.

(g) As of what date should the appraisers estimate the value of the articles? The date of the sailing of the vessel.—Sampson v. Peaslee (20 How., 571, 576).

(h) Some collectors had made estimate at the date of the purchase; others the date of shipment. Mr. Secretary Walker, on July 6, 1847, directed the valuation to be "at the date of shipment;" Secretary Meredith, on July 5, 1850, declares "that the period of the exportation of the merchandise is the time at which the value of any article is to be fixed by the appraisers." That in ordinary cases the date of the bill of lading may be regarded as the "period of exportation."—Id., 577.

(i) The value at the port of export is to be ascertained by the day of the sailing of the vessel and not by her clearance or other papers.—Sampson v. Peaslee (20 How., 571, 576).

(j) The duties on foreign merchandise is to be computed on their value on the day of sailing from the foreign port whence they are imported, and the value for such purpose is the wholesale market price there on that day.—Irvine v. Redfield (23 How., 170).

(k) The market value at the time of manufacture is the proper value to be stated by the manufacturer in his invoice instead of the value at the time of the shipment.—United States v. Eighteen Bales of Blankets (7 Int. Rev. Rec., 69; 25 Fed. Cas., 985).

(l) The appraisement of a cargo of sugar should be based upon the market value at the date of the actual loading of the cargo and not at the date of the sailing of the ship.—United States v. McKean (New York Times, Dec. 22, 1857; 26 Fed. Cas., 1100).

(m) Under section 17, act of 1842, the appraisement determines the dutiable value.—Morris v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 143; 17 Fed. Cas., 824).

(a) Under section 16, act of 1842, and section 8, act of July 30, 1846, it is the duty of a collector to assess duties upon the appraised value of the goods imported by their manufacturer, notwithstanding there is an invoice sworn to by their owner. These sections are not confined to goods imported by a purchaser.—Thomson v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 385; 23 Fed. Cas., 1100).

(b) Where goods subject to ad valorem duty are manufactured in a foreign country and exported to the United States by the manufacturer, a true valuation in the invoice is the market value or value at the place of exportation.—United States v. Twelve Casks of Cudbear (Gilp., 507; 28 Fed. Cas., 236).

(c) The words "true value," in the act of April 20, 1818, section 11, mean the actual cost thereof to the importer at the place whence the goods were imported, and the collector had not the right to direct an appraisement because he suspected or because in fact the goods were invoiced below their current market value, at the place whence they were exported.—United States v. Tappan (11 Wheat., 419).

(d) Actual market value is the price at which the owner or manufacturer of goods holds them for sale in the ordinary course of trade.—Twelve Hundred and Nine Quarter Casks of Wine, etc. (2 Ben., 249; 7 Int. Rev. Rec., 114; 24 Fed. Cas., 398).

(e) In cases of the importation of goods by the manufacturer, the value at which he is required to invoice them is the actual market value at the time and place of manufacture.—United States v. Sixteen Cases of Silk Ribbons (12 Int. Rev. Rec., 175; 27 Fed. Cas., 1099).

(f) By "market value" is meant the price at which the manufacturer holds them for sale, the price at which he freely offers them in the market, the price which he is willing to receive, the purchasers are willing to pay, in the ordinary course of trade.—Id.

(g) Among the best evidences of market value would be a series of sales, general in their character, not accompanied by any exceptional circumstances tending to make one or more of such sales higher or lower than it would otherwise be; also a single sale, if made in the ordinary course of trade. Other evidence would be offers by merchants or manufacturers to sell to persons supposed by them to come in good faith as buyers, such offers being made in the usual course of trade and under such circumstances as generally attend the sale of merchandise.—Id.

(h) It is only in cases where such evidence as the foregoing is wanting that it becomes proper to resort to such inferior evidence as the actual cost of raw materials to the manufacturer with the addition of a manufacturer's profit. Even in such cases this cost is not to be received as market value, but only as a substitute for market value.—Id.

(i) In cases where such inferior evidence is resorted to, the cost of the raw materials is not to be based upon the actual price paid for them by the manufacturer, if he purchased them long prior to making them up and at a time of depression in the market, but rather upon the actual price of raw material at the time when the manufacture of the goods was completed.—Id.

(j) Appraisers must determine what are the principal markets of the country from which the goods are imported in order to determine what is the actual market value or wholesale price there at the period of exportation, but their powers do not authorize them to extend their inquiries beyond what is necessary to enable them to appraise the value, as required by law.—United States v. Nash (4 Cliff., 107; 27 Fed. Cas., 75).

(a) The word "country," in the act of July 30, 1846, section 8, includes all of the dominions of a country like Great Britain; and the decision of the appraiser that the principal markets of that country for a particular class of goods are London and Liverpool is valid, though the importation was directly from Halifax.—Stairs v. Peaslee (18 How., 521).

(b) Under the act of 1846 where goods were imported from countries other than that of their production or manufacture, their dutiable value was to be determined by that of the principal markets of the country from which they were imported into the United States.—Id.

(c) The provisions of the act of 1863 that when foreign goods brought or sent into the United States are sent otherwise than by purchase they shall be invoiced "at the actual market value thereof at the time and place when and where the same were procured or manufactured," does not mean any locality more limited than the country where the goods are bought or manufactured. The standard to be applied is their value in the principal markets of that country. The commerce into which they enter is international, and the language of the statute must be construed in a large and liberal spirit. Proof of the value of the wines at Paris, if there was no other evidence upon the subject, was sufficient to enable the jury to arrive at a proper conclusion.—Cliquot's Champagne (3 Wallace, 114, 142, 143).

(d) Section 9 of the act of 1883 provides only for cases where articles made in a foreign country are not sold there, but are brought to the United States for sale.—Muser v. Magone (C. C.), (41 Fed. Rep., 877).

(e) This section does not require a determination as to the cost of each specific bale, or cask, or bag of goods. It requires only a determination, estimation, or ascertainment of what the value of the goods of the kind imported was in the places whence they came at the time of exportation.—Id.

(f) In ascertaining the expense of manufacturing, there must be included not only the expense of the various processes of manufacture, but also general expenses, such as interest on capital invested, cost of insurance, salaries of employees, etc.—Id.

(g) In determining the value of goods, "profit" should be considered as an element of value only so far as it enters into the selling price of the goods in the markets of the foreign country from which they were imported.—Id.

(h) The dutiable market value of goods is to be determined by their general market value without regard to special advantages which the importer may enjoy, and in ascertaining that value it is proper in some instances to consider the cost of production, including such items of expense as designs, salary of buyer, clerk hire, rent, interest, and percentage on aggregate cost of the business.—Muser v. Magone (155 U. S., 240).

(i) A deputy or acting collector has power to appoint a merchant appraiser on a reappraisement and to administer the oath to him.—Falleck v. Barney (5 Blatchf., 38; 8 Fed. Cas., 974).

(j) All objections to the qualifications of the merchant appraiser must be made at the time of the reappraisement. If not so made they will be deemed to have been waived.—Id.

(k) A collector has power, with the sanction of the Secretary, to appoint as many deputies as may be necessary, and such deputies, unless restricted, are necessarily clothed with the power which their principal has. Whenever an oath is required to be administered by a collector, a deputy collector may administer it. (In this case the protest stated that "the reappralsers were not sworn by you.")—Schmaire v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 408; 21 Fed. Cas., 700).

(a) A merchant appraiser is a quasi judicial officer and will not be permitted to testify to his own neglect of duty. To permit the awards of the important tribunal which Congress has established to appraise imported merchandise to be overthrown on the assertion of one of its members years afterwards is clearly against public policy. It is putting a premium upon incompetency, inaccuracy, and fraud.—Oelbermann v. Merritt (19 Fed. Rep., 408).

(b) The merchant appraiser must be a person familiar with the character and value of the goods.—Oelbermann v. Merritt (123 U. S., 356, 366).

(c) The merchant appraiser is not an "officer" within the meaning of article 2, section 2, of the Constitution.—Auffmordt v. Hedden (30 Fed. Rep., 360).

(d) A merchant appraiser is an expert selected as emergency arises. His appointment is not one to be classified under the civil-service law; he is not to be appointed upon a competitive examination, nor does he fall within the provisions of the civil-service law. He is not a "clerk," nor an "agent," nor a "person employed" in the customs department, within the meaning of the civil-service act; nor is he an officer of the United States required to be appointed by the President, or a court of law, or the head of a department. * * * The statute does not use the word "appoint," but uses the word "select." His position is without tenure, duration, continuing emolument, or continuous duties, and he acts only occasionally and temporarily. Therefore, he is not an "officer" within the meaning of section 2, article 2, of the Constitution.—Auffmordt v. Hedden (137 U. S., 310, 326, 327).

(e) Neither the collector nor the Secretary can remove a merchant appraiser, duly appointed and qualified, except for misconduct.—Greely v. Thompson (10 How., 225, 240).

(f) A merchant appraiser is not an officer within the meaning of the Constitution.—T. D. 10679, G. A. 263.

(g) The fact that the merchant appraisers were manufacturers of the article under appraisement did not disqualify them.—T. D. 10761, G. A. 314.

(h) Where the collector, under the provisions of R. S. 2930, selected a merchant appraiser, there was a presumption that the latter possessed the statutory qualifications, and evidence creating a mere uncertainty on that point is insufficient to rebut such presumption.—Erhardt v. Ballin (150 Fed. Rep., 529; T. D. 27720).

(i) An appraisement by merchant appraisers appointed by the collector to appraise and value goods, in case of dissatisfaction of the importer with the official appraisement, is final and must be deemed and taken to be the true value of the goods, and the duties must be levied upon them accordingly. The law does not require that the appraisement of the merchant appraisers should have all the formalities and precision of a common-law award, nor is it necessary to set forth in it the principles upon which they acted nor the evidence by which they were governed. If it could even be proved that there was evidence before them sufficient to show that their decision was against the weight of evidence, yet their judgment could not on that account be reversed; there is no tribunal authorized to review it; the law makes it final as to the question of value. The appraisement must speak for itself and be construed by its own language; if its validity is to be impeached by anything outside of the award, it must be by testimony showing that the question referred was not decided or that there was some misconduct on the part of the appraisers.—Tucker v. Kane (Taney, 146; 24 Fed. Cas., 268.)

(j) Testimony tending to show that merchant appraisers had not complied with the law in respect to examining one package of every ten was held admissible.—Greeley's Administrators v. Burgess (18 How., 413).

(a) No examination of the goods on reappraisement is necessary where the only question is as to an alleged false discount.—United States v. McDowell (21 Fed. Rep., 563).

(b) The remedy of an importer on a question of valuation is to call for a reappraisement; though, if his contention is that a jurisdictional question exists, he may make his protest, pointing out the defect, and stand upon it as the ground for the refusal to pay the increased duties.—Origet v. Hedden (155 U. S., 228, 234).

(c) Reappraisers may be sworn by the deputy collector.—Lehmaier v. Maxwell (N. Y. Times, Jan. 28, 1856; 15 Fed. Cas., 250).

(d) The reappraisement was illegal and void, because the merchant appraiser was sworn by the official appraiser.—Vaccari v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 368; 28 Fed. Cas., 862).

(e) The rule that the acts of a de facto public officer are valid in regard to third persons and can not be questioned collaterally, although he has to give a bond and take an oath when required, is restricted to those who hold office under some degree of notoriety, or are in the exercise of continuous official acts, or are in the possession of a place which has the character of a public office.—Id.

(f) Appraisers appointed under R. S. 2930 to reappraise goods constitute a quasi judicial tribunal, whose action within its discretion, when that discretion is not abused, is final.—Earnshaw v. United States (146 U. S., 60).

(g) Where appraisers have fixed a time for a hearing and given notice thereof to the parties interested, the refusal to postpone the hearing at the request of one of the parties is within their discretion, and the court will not interfere.—United States v. Earnshaw (30 Fed. Rep., 672).

(h) Where, under T. D. 3633, a merchant leaves a sum of money with the collector instead of the goods, and an examination is made by the appraisers and the importer binds himself to abide by the result of the appraisement "the same as if the goods had been retained," neither party can take advantage of the delivery as changing the rights of the other.—Porter v. Beard (15 Fed. Rep., 380).

(i) The importer was bound to offer the appraisers fees for reappraisement in order to put the collector in the wrong for not ordering one, and therefore the appraisement by the official appraisers was conclusive as to value.—Fielden v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 120; 9 Fed. Cas., 27).

(j) The importer upon giving notice of dissatisfaction with an appraisement paid to the collector upon filing such notice a fee of $10 which had been long required as a condition of proceeding with the reappraisement, in accordance with Article 472, Regulations, 1884. The deposit was for the purpose of paying the merchant appraiser for his services, such portion as was not used for that service being afterwards returned. Held, (1) that such deposit as a condition of proceeding with the reappraisement was illegal, and if done with the collector's knowledge and sanction was a violation of R. S. 2636; (2) that if paid in pursuance of a well-known and settled requirement and usage, it was not a voluntary payment; (3) that the importers were entitled to prosecute the collector in their own name.—Iselin v. Hedden (28 Fed. Rep., 416).

(k) Upon notice by an importer of his dissatisfaction with the appraiser's valuation of goods, a reappraisement by a merchant appraiser is one of the ordinary means of ascertaining the value of the goods for the purpose of determining the duty, and no charge for that service can be imposed upon the importer, directly or indirectly, in the absence of any authority of law. Article

472, Regulations, 1884, is to that extent illegal and void.—Iselin v. Hedden (28 Fed. Rep., 416).

(a) To charge the importer with the fees of the merchant appraiser is an unlawful exaction. The expense of reappraisement must be borne by the Government.—Hedden v. Iselin (C. C.), (31 Fed. Rep., 266).

(b) R. S. 2725 has no application to ports where there is a stated appraiser. Semble, in such case compensation is provided by R. S. 2733.—Iselin v. Hedden (28 Fed. Rep., 416).

(c) A notice that the appraisement is not satisfactory and that the importers will give evidence "if desired" is not sufficient to entitle them to a reappraisement.—Lehmaier v. Maxwell (N. Y. Times, Jan. 28, 1856; 15 Fed. Cas., 250).

(d) Where the invoice value of iron was raised by the official appraisers, and duty on the increase in value and a penalty for undervaluation were imposed, and the importer served on the collector a written notice protesting "against the said increased appraisement and against the exaction of said increased duty and penalty," but was at the same time asked if he desired an appraisement by merchant appraisers, under section 17, act of August 30, 1842, answered that he did not, or did not ask one, and did not offer the fees for a reappraisement, held that if the protest might have amounted to notice of dissatisfaction with the appraisement under said section, had the notice been delivered without qualification, yet the assertion of the importer at the time that he did not ask a reappraisement took from it that effect.—Fielden v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 120; 9 Fed. Cas., 27).

(e) There can not be a reappraisement, on appeal, of imported goods, unless there has been an entry of the goods. Therefore, where, on the trial of an action to forfeit goods for alleged undervaluation, no invoice or entry of the goods was proved, but it appeared that papers purporting to be an invoice and entry had been in the possession of the district attorney, but had disappeared, and it also appeared that the goods had been appraised, but the papers on such appraisement had also disappeared, and that an appeal was taken from that appraisement, on which appeal a reappraisement was had, the papers on which were proved, held that it was not error for the court to tell the jury that they had a right to presume from the evidence that there was an entry of the goods.—Twenty-Eight Cases of Wine (2 Ben., 63; 7 Int. Rev. Rec., 4; 1 Am. Law T. Rep. U. S. Cts., 15; 24 Fed. Cas., 415).

(f) An appeal from the decision of the official appraisers to that of the merchant appraisers was made by the importers; but on the official appraisers demanding of them the production of all documents connected with the importation they refused to comply with the demand, withdrew the appeal, and paid the duties under protest. Held, that the parties by withdrawing their appeal and refusing to produce the papers called for had fixed the correctness of the appraisement.—Bartlett v. Kane (Taney, 186; 2 Fed. Cas., 971).

(g) The appraisers had the right to call for these papers, whether with the view of correcting their own judgment, if erroneous, or of laying them before the merchant appraisers in the event of a prosecution of the appeal.—Id.

(h) The refusal to produce papers admitted to be in a party's possession raises the strongest inference that the papers, if produced, would operate against the person holding them.—Id.

(i) The act of August 30, 1842, section 17, makes it in such a case as this conclusive proof that the papers when produced would be demonstrative against the pretensions of the party having them in his possession.—Id.

(a) The act of March 3, 1851 (9 Stat., 629), section 3, in regard to reappraisals of imported goods, applies to all goods, as well as those imported by their manufacturer as those imported by their purchaser.—Bannendahl v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 223; 2 Fed. Cas., 763).

(b) In the invoice and entry the importer claimed that a certain discount had been allowed upon the goods. The discount was allowed and duty paid accordingly. Afterwards the United States claimed that the discount was fraudulently claimed and that no such discount was in fact allowed. In such a case a reappraisement may be made without a reexamination of the goods, the correction of the alleged false discount not being dependent on any inspection of the goods.—United States v. McDowell (21 Fed. Rep., 563).

(c) The importer has a right to be present when the reappraisers view his goods, to see that they are his goods, to illustrate them and exhibit them in any manner he sees fit, and to present to the appraisers any views he has.—Auffmordt v. Hedden (30 Fed. Rep., 360).

(d) The reappraisement is an appraisal on view, and the reappraisers have the power to ascertain the value of the merchandise by reasonable ways and means and to determine what witnesses, if any, it is proper for them to examine.—Id.

(e) Heavy goods were appraised upon the wharf and delivered to the importer upon the payment of the duties as invoiced and the execution of a bond to return the goods, if required, within ten days, no samples being retained and no demand being made within the ten days. Afterwards the valuation was raised and an additional duty was assessed upon the goods by the appraisers return and the importer notified thereof, who made a demand for reappraisement. A merchant appraiser having been appointed and not reporting, and the General Appraiser having stated that, owing to the lack of samples, a reappraisement was impossible, a liquidation was made in accordance with the original return. Held, that the liquidation was invalid and no suit was maintainable for the balance shown thereby.—United States v. Phillips (D. C.), (46 Fed. Rep., 466).

(f) Reappraisers may avail themselves of clerical assistance to average appraisements given by different experts when it appears that it was for their guidance only.—Origet v. Hedden (155 U. S., 228, 236).

(g) If the importer is afforded such notice of a reappraisement and hearing as enables him to give his views and make his contention in respect to the value of the goods, he can not complain even though he be not allowed to be present throughout the proceedings on the reappraisement, or to hear and examine all the testimony, or to cross-examine the witnesses.—Origet v. Hedden (155 U. S., 228, 236, 238).

(h) On a reappraisement by a merchant appraiser and a General Appraiser under R. S. 2930, the valuation of goods entered in March, 1886, was raised and the importer paid additional duties, for which he sued after protest and appeal. At the trial the plaintiff put in evidence chapter 3, part 3, articles 447 to 506, and chapter 5, part 8, articles 1339 to 1410, and 1415 to 1417, of Treasury Regulations of 1885, being instructions of June 9 and 10, 1885. The importer had asked for the reappraisement, and the collector selected the merchant appraiser. He took the prescribed oath. The defendant had a verdict in respect to the additional duties under the direction of the court, and the importer had a judgment in respect of another matter. On a writ of error held (1) that the Treasury instructions gave the importer all the rights to which he was entitled and were not repugnant to the provisions of R. S. 2902 and 2930, which required the use of all reasonable ways and means in appraising, and the proper rights of the importer were accorded to him in this case; (2) the question of the dutiable value of the merchandise was not to be tried before the appraisers as if it were an issue in a suit in a judicial tribunal; (3) in a suit to recover duties paid under protest the valuation of the merchandise made by the appraisers is, in the absence of fraud, conclusive on the importer, and the question as to the actual value of the merchandise can not be tried; (4) the merchant appraiser was not an officer within the meaning of article 2, section 2, of the Constitution, so as to require him to be appointed by the President, or a court of law, or the head of a Department; (5) R. S. 2930, making the decision of the appraisers final, is not unconstitutional.—Auffmordt v. Hedden (137 U. S., 310).

(a) While the goods remain in the ownership of the importer the collector has a reasonable time to fix their dutiable value, and his right to reappraise them under the act of May 28, 1830, in any case where, from neglect or want of evidence on the part of the appraisers, the appraisement has been under the proper dutiable value is not lost merely because they have gone through one form of appraisement and been delivered to the importer with a memorandum on the invoice that the entry was "right;" but the court expresses no opinion on the case where the goods had passed beyond the reach of the collecter.—Iasigi et al. v. The Collector (1 Wallace, 375).

(b) A reappraisement of imported merchandise when properly conducted is binding.—Earnshaw v. United States (146 U. S., 60).

(c) When the facts are undisputed in an action to recover money on such reappraisement, the reasonableness of the notice to the importer of the time and place appointed for the reappraisement is a question of law for the court.—Id.

(d) An importer appealed from an appraisement in 1882. A day in June was fixed for hearing the appeal. The Government not being ready, an adjournment was granted without fixing a day and the importer was informed that he would be notified when the case would be heard. March 19, 1884, notice was sent by letter to him at his residence in Philadelphia that the appraisement would take place at New York on the following day. His clerk replied that the importer was absent in Cuba, not to return before the beginning of May, and asked a postponement until that time. The appraisers replied by telegram that the appraisement was adjourned until March 25. On that day the case was disposed of in the absence of the importer or of any person representing him. Held, (1) that the notice of the meeting in March was sufficient; (2) that in view of the neglect of the importer to make any provision for the case being taken up during his absence, and of his clerk to appear and ask a further postponement of the hearing, the court could not say that the appraisers acted unreasonably in proceeding ex parte and in imposing additional duties without waiting his return.—Earnshaw v. United States (146 U. S., 60).

(e) An appraisement is conclusive upon the fact whether the appraisement of the goods imported was or was not made, as the act of March 3, 1851, section 1, directs that it shall be "as of the actual market value or wholesale price thereof in the principal markets of the country from which the same shall have been imported." If the importer alleges that it was not so made, and is dissatisfied, his remedy is by appeal to the merchant appraisers. He can not use the fact in a suit to recover the money paid as duties under protest.—Iasigi et al. v. The Collector (1 Wallace, 375).

Sec. 14. That the decision of the collector as to the rate and amount of duties chargeable upon imported merchandise, including all dutiable costs and charges, and as to all fees and exactions of whatever character (except duties on tonnage), shall be final and conclusive against all persons interested therein, unless the owner, importer, consignee or agent of such merchandise, or the person paying such fees, charges and exactions other than duties, shall, within ten days after but not before such ascertainment and liquidation of duties, as well in cases of merchandise entered in bond as for consumption, or within ten days after the payment of such fees, charges and exactions, if dissatisfied with such decision, give notice in writing to the collector, setting forth therein distinctly and specifically, and in respect to each entry or payment, the reasons for his objections thereto, and if the merchandise is entered for consumption shall pay the full amount of the duties and charges ascertained to be due thereon. Upon such notice and payment the collector shall transmit the invoice and all the papers and exhibits connected therewith to the board of three general appraisers, which shall be on duty at the port of New York, or to a board of three general appraisers who may be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury for such duty at that port or at any other port, which board shall examine and decide the case thus submitted, and their decision, or that of a majority of them, shall be final and conclusive upon all persons interested therein, and the record shall be transmitted to the proper collector or person acting as such, who shall liquidate the entry accordingly, except in cases where an application shall be filed in the Circuit Court within the time and in the manner provided for in section 15 of this act.

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 14, ACT OF JUNE 10, 1890.

(a) Where merchandise is alleged not to have been imported at all, but to have been brought from one domestic port to another, the Board of General Appraisers has no jurisdiction and an action for money had and received will lie against the collector to recover back duties assessed upon such property and paid under protest. This ruling has reference to goods imported into the United States from Porto Rico during the period between the ratification of the treaty of peace with Spain, April 11, 1899, and May 1, 1900, the date when the Foraker Act, so called, took effect.—De Lima v. Bidwell (182 U. S., 1); Goetze v. United States (id., 221); "The Insular Cases."

(b) The same ruling applied to merchandise from the Hawaiian Islands.—Crossman v. United States (182 U. S., 221); "The Insular Cases."

(c) To constitute a payment of duties upon any particular consignment of goods, there must be an intent, both on the part of the importer and of the collector, to apply the money to that consignment. Held, therefore, that where a check was given by the importer to an employee with directions to pay the duties upon a particular consignment, but he absconded with the same, and it afterwards came into the hands of the collector and was applied by him to the payment of duties upon a different importation, this was not a payment of the duties upon the former consignment. T. D. 14815, G. A. 2498, reversed.—Hendricks v. Schmidt (C. C. A.), (68 Fed. Rep., 425).

(d) The payment of the ascertained duties within ten days is not a condition precedent to jurisdiction by the Board.—T. D. 18724, G. A. 4037; T. D. 10500, G. A. 150; T. D. 16722, G. A. 3310; United States v. Goldenberg (168 U. S., 95).

(e) The Board has no jurisdiction of a protest filed prior to August 1, 1890.—T. D. 10228, G. A. 6.

(f) The Board has no jurisdiction of a protest made against suing on a bond (Customs Regulations, 1892, art. 1009).—T. D. 16572, G. A. 3268.

(g) On application to the Board to review its decision, held that the law does not confer upon the Board power to reverse its decision, such power being vested exclusively in the Circuit Court.—T. D. 11881, G. A. 872.

(a) The Board has no jurisdiction of the question of the disallowance of drawback.—T. D. 14522, G. A. 2333.

(b) The Board has no jurisdiction of a claim for an abatement or refund of duties on goods lost in a warehouse (R. S. 2984).—T. D. 12210, G. A. 1024.

(c) Goods in bonded warehouse stolen. Duties accrued on original liquidation September 27, 1893, and the protest against paying duty on stolen goods was filed April 23, 1894. Held, that the Board has no power to grant relief.—T. D. 15377, G. A. 2771.

(d) The Board has no jurisdiction of a claim for an allowance for damage to goods in warehouse under R. S. 2984.—T. D. 15519, G. A. 2829.

(e) Importers are authorized to file protests only against fees and exactions paid to the Government through the collector. It does not authorize protests against payments made to the owners of private bonded warehouses, for the refunding of which the Government is not responsible.—T. D. 13057, G. A. 1562.

(f) The Board has no jurisdiction of protests against the exaction of head money tax on passengers.—T. D. 15525, G. A. 2835.

(g) The Board has no jurisdiction to review the returns made according to law by the United States weighers, gaugers, or measurers acting within the line of authority conferred upon them by R. S. 2890.—T. D. 16637, G. A. 3282.

(h) The protest was not filed in duplicate, as required by article 930, Regulations, 1892. Held, without deciding whether the regulation would be conclusive against an importer if the collector refused to accept the protest, the acceptance of the same by the collector operates as a waiver.—T. D. 14457, G. A. 2303.

(i) The Revue Elegant Journal de Modes, lithographed and colored fashion plates imported by mail, assessed for duty under paragraph 420, act of 1890, and claimed to be free under paragraph 657 as a periodical. Held, that importations by mail being prohibited by law except when made under postal treaties and conventions, and being subject to a fine equal to the duty (art. 305, Reg. 1892), the Board has no jurisdiction.—T. D. 15327, G. A. 2761.

(j) An electric launch claimed to be a part of the necessary equipment of the steam pleasure yacht Hermione was sent from Scotland in advance of the yacht and invoiced and entered for duty. It was assessed as a manufacture of metal and claimed not to be imported merchandise, but necessary equipment. Held, that the queston is substantially the same as that raised in Ex parte Fassett (142 U. S., 479), in which it was decided that the jurisdiction of the Board does not extend to the question whether or not an article is imported merchandise within the meaning of the tariff laws, and that the Board has no jurisdiction.—T. D. 17405, G. A. 3596.

(k) The jurisdiction of the Board of Classification extends only to the review of the decision of the collector as to the rate and amount of duties, etc. It does not include a case where the collector reliquidates the entry under order from the Secretary by virtue of some special legislative authority empowering the Secretary to make such an order. In such case the collector is the mere agent of the Secretary, and the decision reached is not the decision of the collector, but of the Secretary. (This was a case of reliquidation under the proviso to section 25, act of 1894).—T. D. 20134, G. A. 4288.

(l) The jurisdiction of the Board of General Appraisers does not extend to cases coming within the purview of R. S. 2984, the jurisdiction conferred upon the Secretary by that statute being exclusive.—T. D. 22689, G. A. 4830.

(a) The determination of what constitutes excessive sea stores rests entirely within the judgment of the collector, in conjunction with the naval officer where there is one. His decision is not reviewable by the courts or the Board of Classificaion.—T. D. 21324, G. A. 4464, see An Ullage Box of Sugar (1 Ware (350) 355; 24 Fed. Cas., 504).

(b) The Board has no jurisdiction to review the action of the collector in exacting from the purchaser of cigarettes at a public sale of unclaimed merchandise the expense of stamping such cigarettes under R. S. 3402.—T. D. 17851, G. A. 3785.

(c) The action of the collector in requiring payment of unlading-officers' charges (under articles 1057 and 1058 of the regulations made under authority of R. S. 251) and expenses (under authority of T. D. 12765, following section 29, act of June 26, 1884) is not subject to review by the Board.—T. D. 17852, G. A. 3786.

(d) Under the act of March 2, 1897, the question of the standards of tea is not committed to the Board, but to a tea commission. The Board is limited to the finding of fact whether the tea is up to the standard prescribed.—T. D. 18416, G. A. 3973.

(e) So-called liquidations of entries made under instructions from the Secretary (Circular No. 61, T. D. 17978, dated April 5, 1897) were designed to be mere provisional or tentative liquidations and do not constitute such final decisions as are made subjects of protest and of decision on appeal to the board.—T. D. 18634, G. A. 4032.

(f) The Board of Classification, being charged with the duty of examining and deciding all cases properly before it, acts judicially and is not at liberty to affirm pro forma a decision of a collector in a doubtful case and cast on the courts the sole responsibility of construing an ambiguous statute. It is not only the right, but also the duty, of the members of the Board to decide all issues according to their sound judgment and discretion and the rules of legal construction as settled by the courts.—Marine v. Lyon (65 Fed. Rep., 992) and In re Van Blankensteyn (56 Fed. Rep., 475) followed; T. D. 18915, G. A. 4072.

(g) The action of a collector in requiring that an internal-revenue stamp be affixed to an entry of imported merchandise does not raise a question cognizable by the Board of Classification.—T. D. 20129, G. A. 4283.

(h) The board has no jurisdiction of protests against the exaction of tonnage duties.—T. D. 22507, G. A. 4773.

(i) The board is without authority to entertain an appeal against charges incurred where the goods are held under seizure or proceedings for forfeiture.—T. D. 18411, G. A. 3968.

(j) The Board has no jurisdiction of a protest against the seizure of articles seized in condemnation proceedings under section 10, act of August 28, 1894.—T. D. 16299, G. A. 3128.

(k) Goods seized for forfeiture, delivered to importers under R. S. 938, when the Secretary granted a conditional warrant of remission on the payment of lawful duties and costs. The importer paid and protested against the amount. Held, that the Board has no jurisdiction.—T. D. 15520, G. A. 2830.

(l) The jurisdiction conferred on the Board to review the decision of the collector as to the rate and amount of duties extends only to merchandise lawfully entered and regularly invoiced and appraised, and they have not jurisdiction, in the case of goods seized and libeled for forfeiture, to review the determination of the collector as to the duties to be paid thereon, as required by R. S.

938, in order to secure the delivery of the goods to the claimant. T. D. 11049, G. A. 492, reversed.—In re Chichester (C. C.), (48 Fed. Rep., 281).

(a) The invoice was in Austrian florins and the entry was liquidated as of the value of 2 crowns, or 40.6 cents, in accordance with the value as fixed by the Director of the Mint. The importer claimed that the currency should be based on the value of the Austrian standard florin, which is claimed to be silver, and not the gold standard proclaimed by the Secretary. Held, that the Board is without jurisdiction.—T. D. 15223, G. A. 2716.

(b) The Board will not consider the propriety of a reliquidation made under a Department order by authority vested in the Secretary by the proviso to section 25, act of 1894, relating to the value of foreign coins, and authorizing the assumption of values therefor different from those estimated by the Director of the Mint.—T. D. 20134, G. A. 4288.

(c) Invoice made out in paper florins of Austria-Hungary. No consular certificate giving the value of the florin accompanied the invoice. In reducing the invoice currency to United States gold the collector estimated the florin at $0.482, the value of the gold florin as proclaimed by the Secretary. The importer claimed that the collector should have adopted the silver florin as the standard value, as proclaimed by the Secretary, which was thirty-two cents. Held, that the action of the collector in adopting the value of the gold florin was not subject to review by the Board.—United States v. Klingenberg (153 U. S., 93).

(d) Silver-lead ore was seized by the collector on the ground that the importers were attempting to defraud the revenues by bringing in ores from several mines so mixed as to give the ore a high content of silver, and a libel of forfeiture was filed. The ore was released on bond being given and duties paid. The collector claimed that the Board had no jurisdiction. Held, that the Board had jurisdiction and that there is nothing in the tariff act to warrant a discrimination against bringing in mixed ores.—T. D. 11049, G. A. 492; reversed, In re Chichester (C. C.), (48 Fed. Rep., 281).

(e) Certain goods invoiced as silk wearing apparel, but classified as wool wearing apparel. It was found to be dutiable as silk wearing apparel. The collector claimed that the Board should not consider the case, because the importer did not return the goods to the collector and demand a reexamination. Held, that as the collector did not demand a return of the goods the importer has done all that is required of him to give the Board jurisdiction.—T. D. 13664, G. A. 1902.

(f) The Board has jurisdiction of a protest against the exaction of a penalty accruing through a clerical error. Clerical error corrected.—T. D. 14946, G. A. 2575.

(g) The Board has authority to pass on the legal validity of regulations issued by the Secretary and designed for the convenient administration of the tariff laws, and this jurisdiction is commensurate with that of the courts.—T. D. 20990, G. A. 4408.

(h) Brandies imported on which duties under paragraph 339, act of 1890, were $12,438.75. The importer drew checks payable to the order of the collector showing on their face that they were for the payment of duties, which they sent to the collector by their clerk. The clerk delivered the checks for all except $715.25 of the amount of duties; which checks for said sum he converted to his own use and sold to other parties who paid duties with them. The liquidation was on January 12, 1891, and the excess of duties $715.25 was paid

November 18, 1893, and protest filed same day. Held, that the Board has jurisdiction.—T. D. 14815, G. A. 2498.

(a) Steel billets invoiced and entered at £6 9s. per ton. Corrected invoice shows value £6 8s., 1 shilling in the original having been "cartage by rail," a nondutiable charge. The appraised value was final in the absence of an appeal for reappraisement when the corrected invoice might have been produced, and we can not now inquire into value. There does not appear to be a manifest clerical error in the invoice entry or appraisement.—T. D. 16961, G. A. 3389.

(b) The Board has jurisdiction to examine and decide protests arising upon decisions of collectors in Porto Rico.—T. D. 22410, G. A. 4739.

(c) The Board has jurisdiction of protests relating to light dues.—T. D. 22507, G. A. 4773.

(d) The Board of General Appraisers has jurisdiction to determine the legality of a Treasury regulation (T. D. 20178) making charges for the supervision of such marking of packages as it "relates to dealings with imported merchandise in the regular course of passing the same through the customhouse" and does not affect the "lawful entry, regular invoice, or appraisement" of the goods.—T. D. 22496, G. A. 4767.

(e) The Board of Classification has authority within its discretion to apply to a given case testimony taken in a previous case, where the issues in the two cases are substantially the same.—T. D. 21408, G. A. 4494.

(f) The collector classified certain window and other glass under paragraph 112, act of 1890, and the importer protested, claiming that on the voyage part of the glass was broken into pieces which could not be used without remanufacture and was therefore exempt from duty under paragraph 590. Before the Board the importer offered to prove the number of pounds of broken glass, but the Board refused the offer, deciding that the claim was in legal effect one for the reduction of duties on account of damage to part of the goods, and that such a claim was inadmissible under section 23, act of June 10, 1890. The facts were undisputed, and the Board found as a fact that part of the glass was broken on the voyage. Held, that the proceeding before the Board was in the nature of a demurrer by the collector to the protest; that the Board had authority to determine the question of law thus presented without admitting the evidence, and that on an appeal from its decision the Circuit Court had authority to review and reverse the same, notwithstanding the absence of evidence from the record to support the finding as to the broken glass.—In re Bache (54 Fed. Rep., 371), reversed in 59 id., 762.

(g) The importer claimed to have filed protests. Alleged copies were filed. Held, that the Board has the same power which belongs to a court to allow the substitution of a copy of the original of a document forming part of the record of a case submitted to it, when such original is proved to have been lost.—Marine v. Lyons (C. C. A.), (65 Fed. Rep., 992).

(h) The manifest, bill of lading, invoice, and entry called for eight cases (31,000) cigars. The examiner reported and the appraiser returned the cigars, 1,100 short. The protest raised this question of shortage, and it was one affecting the amount of duties on which an appeal lies to the Board. Sustaining the Board.—United States v. Park (C. C.), (77 Fed. Rep., 608).

(i) The Board has jurisdiction to review the action of the collector in regard to the date at which the value of foreign coin is to be estimated in determining dutiable value.—Wood v. United States (C. C.), (72 Fed. Rep., 254).

(a) The Board of Classification has jurisdiction to review the action of a collector in regard to the date at which the value of foreign coins is to be estimated.—T. D. 20448, G. A. 4319.

(b) The action of a collector in declining to accept the proclaimed value of foreign standard coin and in adopting another standard, thereby increasing the amount of duty, does not relate to a disputed appraisement, but to the amount of duties, and is reviewable on protest of the importer by the Board and the Circuit Court.—United States v J. Allston Newhall & Co. (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 525.

(c) The action of the collector in declining to accept the proclaimed value of foreign standard coin and in adopting the value declared in the consular certificate, thereby increasing the amount of duties, although approved by the Secretary, is reviewable, on protest, by the Board and by the Circuit Court. T. D. 21423, G. A. 4498, affirmed.—United States v. Beebe (C. C.), (103 Fed. Rep., 785).

(d) The board of general appraisers has jurisdiction to correct a mistake in the appraisement arising from a clerical error in invoicing the goods as worth so many marks instead of so many pfennigs. Sustaining the Board.—United States v. Benjamin (C. C.), (72 Fed. Rep., 51).

(e) In proceedings before the Board under protest, the Board has jurisdiction to inquire into and impeach the dutiable valuation reported to the collector by the appraiser, upon which the collector assessed the rate of duty to which the merchandise was subject.—United States v. Passavant (169 U. S., 16).

(f) A board of three general appraisers, sitting as a Board of Classification, has jurisdiction coextensive with that conferred on the courts by section 15, act of June 10, 1890, to review, upon protest, the regularity and pass upon the validity of an appraisement made by a board of three general appraisers, acting under section 13.—T. D. 21498, G. A. 4521.

(g) Such a board of three general appraisers, sometimes called a Board of Reappraisement, is a statutory tribunal with limited powers and jurisdiction, and any decision made by it transcending its jurisdiction is null and void.—Id.

(h) The Board of Classification has the power which belongs to a court to allow the substitution of a copy for the original of a document forming part of the record of a case before it, when such original is proved to have been lost.—T. D. 23167, G. A. 4957.

(i) The jurisdiction of the Board does not extend to the action of a collector in exacting duties on goods brought from Porto Rico after the proclamation of the treaty of peace with Spain, when the sole question involved is whether Porto Rico is a foreign country within the meaning of the tariff laws.—T. D. 23191, G. A. 4967.

(j) The Board of Classification has jurisdiction to examine and decide protest cases arising upon decisions of the collectors of customs of Porto Rico as to the rate and amount of duties upon merchandise imported into that island from foreign countries.—T. D. 23269, G. A. 4988.

(k) Coverings for cigar holders and tobacco pipes were assessed at 100 per cent under the act of 1883, section 7, and claimed to be dutiable at 30 per cent under paragraph 463, as manufactures of leather, or at 35 per cent under paragraph 410, by assimilation to cardcases, pocketbooks, etc., or at 70 per cent under paragraph 476, as smokers' articles. Protest held not to be sufficiently specific and that alternative claims are not authorized.—T. D. 10224, G. A. 2; reversed, T. D. 10487, G. A. 137.

(a) Alternative claims may be made iu a protest.—T. D. 10487, G. A. 137.

(b) Two sets of protests one by the agent at the port of entry and the other forwarded by the principal. Both entertained and considered as alternative protests.—T. D. 14922, G. A. 2551.

(c) An importer may protest against a classification on alternative grounds, where the proper classification is doubtful, and the fact that his protest is sustained ou one of the grounds does not estop him from appealing on the ground that the other states the correct classification.—Koechl v. United States (C. C. A.), (91 Fed. Rep., 110).

(d) A protest as to the questiou of weight did not reopen the question as to the rate of duty.—T. D. 13550, G. A. 1822.

(e) The usual coverings in which oranges were imported in August, 1894. were boxes or barrels and not baskets, hence a protest claiming such baskets to be free will be overruled without passing on the correctness of the decision assessing them by similtude as boxes.—T. D. 18605, G. A. 4003.

(f) Two protests filed neither marked "original" or "duplicate." They were not duplicates but the collector so treated them and forwarded one only to the Board of Geueral Appraisers, the one so forwarded not setting forth all the claims made by the imported. Held, that the importer is not restricted as to the number of protests.—T. D. 15815, G. A. 2915.

(g) A reliquidation ordered by the Secretary remitting penal duties under R. S. 5293 confers no new right of protest.—T. D. 17940, G. A. 3815.

(h) The collector's reliquidation of an entry pursuant to the decision of the Board of General Appraisers, being res adjudicata, can not be challenged by a second protest.—T. D. 17948, G. A. 3823.

(i) Protests sustained and entries liquidated in accordance with claim of importers. They afterwards filed a second protest. Held, that the only remedy of the importers was by appeal to the Circuit Court and that the second protest is invalid.—T. D. 13079, G. A. 1584.

(j) Where an entry was reliquidated in accordance with the protest the importers are estopped from making further claim in a second protest.—T. D. 13492, G. A. 1794.

(k) Importers are confined to such grounds of objection as are distinctly and specifically set forth in their protests.—In re Austin (C. C.), (47 Fed. Rep., 873).

(l) The collector classified merchandise under paragraph 373, act of 1890, as textile fabrics embroidered by hand or machinery and the importer protested that it was dutiable under paragraph 346 as cotton cloth. The Board found it to be dutiable under paragraph 355 as a manufacture of cotton and ordered a reliquidation. Held, that the Board of General Appraisers can not go outside of the protest and find that the goods are dutiable as a class other than that specified in the protest.—49 Fed. Rep., 224, affirmed.—In re Collector of Customs (Sherman, importer) (C. C. A.), (55 Fed. Rep., 276).

(m) An importer is bound by his protest.—United States v. Curley (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 720).

(n) An importer must stand on the objections made in his protest and can not vary from nor enlarge them on the trial. When an article was classified as a medicinal preparation in the preparation of which alcohol was used (paragraph 67), and the only ground of protest was that, conceding it to be such preparation, it was not dutiable as such, but as chemical compound, the importer can not insist, in proceedings to review the action of the Board, that the classification was incorrect because it does not appear that alcohol was used in the preparation of this particular article, which might have been prepared otherwise.—Battle & Co., Chemists, Corp. v. United States (C. C.), (108 Fed. Rep., 216).

(a) The protest need not specify the particular cases containing the merchandise, but when it is restricted to goods contained in certain cases it is not incumbent on the collector or the Board to give consideration to articles contained in other cases.—T. D. 14076, G. A. 2127.

(b) To entitle an importer to the benefit of the similitude clause that clause must be claimed in the protest.—T. D. 22161, G. A. 4699.

(c) The rule of the Board with regard to the suspension of cases is well established and to this effect: That appellants must show that the case in which the rule is invoked involves an issue at the time under appeal and pending in some court having a right to review the decisions of the Board.—T. D. 16847, G. A. 3366.

(d) When importers have been duly and reasonably notified to appear before the Board and they have failed to do so the reasonable presumption is that they have abandoned their protest.—T. D. 17156, G. A. 3473.

(e) It seems that if an importer who has appealed to the Board of Appraisers from the decision of the collector fails to appear pursuant to the notification of the Board to show cause why the action of the collector should not be affirmed, the Board is entirely justified in affirming the decision of the collector without regard to its correctness.—United States v. China and Japan Trading Co. (C. C. A.), (71 Fed. Rep., 864).

(f) Importers are bound to take notice of the decisions of the Board of General Appraisers without being formally advised when a decision is made.—T. D. 10754, G. A. 307.

(g) There is nothing in the law governing the Board of General Appraisers which requires that there should be original testimony heard by them on appeal and such testimony is unnecessary where the record and exhibits sent up by the collector furnish sufficient basis for their decision.—In re Hempstead (C. C.), (95 Fed. Rep., 967).

(h) Certain importers appeared before the Board in support of their protests against the decisions of the collector, but as to one of said protests they offered no evidence before the Board. Held, that they had a right to appeal to the Circuit Court and that the right to bring new evidence was coextensive with the right of appeal.—Lesser v. United States (C. C.), (89 Fed. Rep., 197).

(i) On appeal from a decision of the collector the burden of proof is on the importer to prove that his contention is right, and if he fails the action of the collector stands, even though the collector also has selected the wrong paragraph.—Tiffany v. United States (C. C.), (105 Fed. Rep., 766).

(j) Protest against the classification of leaf tobacco overruled because the importer did not produce the tobacco.—T. D. 14376, G. A. 2260.

(k) Goods delivered to importer from vessel in compliance with paragraphs 281, 282 (1892). Importer applied for reconsideration and notified to produce the goods in accordance with his bond, with which notice he failed to comply. Protest overruled.—T. D. 17265, G. A. 3527.

(l) The merchandise having gone into consumption, the decision of the collector as to the capacity of lemon boxes is conclusive.—T. D. 11044, G. A. 487.

(a) Collectors should forward with protests the invoice and entries covering the merchandise, also samples, if the goods are sampleable, together with a full and accurate description of the merchandise, and all reports, testimony, and facts in their possession that may be of service to the Board.—T. D. 10928, G. A. 423.

(b) Goods entered, returned, and classified as coal-tar colors, and it was afterwards claimed that there was a mistake in the entry and that the goods were water colors. Held, that samples are necessary in such a case.—T. D. 12133, G. A. 995.

(c) Importers must prove their cases.—T. D. 13169, G. A. 1590.

(d) Protest overruled because of carelessness and negligence on the part of the protesters.—T. D. 12910, G. A. 1461.

(e) A special hearing will not ordinarily be granted by the Board where a protest raises only questions of law which have already been adjudicated and settled, especially when the hearing applied for must be held at a distant port.—T. D. 23111, G. A 4940

(f) A protest filed by apparent strangers to the goods, without any intimation that the act was done for the person who swore in the invoice that he was the owner, is ineffectual; nor will the fact that the owner is connected with one of the departments of the establishment of the person making the protest authorize the inference that they were agents of the goods.—Abegg v. United States (C. C.), (71 Fed. Rep., 960).

(g) A protest drawn and signed by attorneys at the request of a customs broker who had no authority from the importer to employ the attorneys is an unauthorized protest and is void.—T. D. 17631, G. A. 3679.

(h) Duty assessed on sheet steel under paragraph 114 (1894), and the importer claimed that it was dutiable at two-tenths of a cent per pound but did not give paragraph or act. Protest overruled and assessment affirmed. Collector applied for revision because of the insufficiency of the protest. Held, that the correct duty being assessed and no one wronged, complaining or to complain, this would seem to be enough.—United States v. Pilditch (C. C.), (99 Fed. Rep., 938).

(i) A protest filed by an agent of the importer is in law made by his principal.—T. D. 23006, G. A. 4918.

(j) A protest not signed held not to be a legal protest.—T. D. 14233, G. A. 2197.

(k) An unsigned protest is not "notice in writing" and is a nullity.—T. D. 17822, G. A. 3756.

(l) A protest not made by owner, importer, consignee, or agent is not valid.—T. D. 10225, G. A. 3.

(m) Protest overruled because it did not appear that the person filing it is the owner, importer, agent, or consignee or has any interest in the goods which would justify a protest by him.—T. D. 12255, G. A. 1069; T. D. 12443, G. A. 1181.

(n) Declaration was made that the goods were purchased by Adams & Howe. They were consigned to Adams & Howe, who made the entry, and M. L. Orcutt, a member of the firm, made the owner's oath. The protest was signed by J. M. Keane, who would seem to be the resident agent of the shipper. Protest unauthorized.—T. D. 17629, G. A. 3677.

(o) The protest must be filed within ten days after liquidation at the first port of entry.—T. D. 10407, G. A. 98.

(a) A protest must be filed within ten days after liquidation and not after payment.—T. D. 11024, G. A. 467.

(b) Protest filed on the 15th and before liquidation, which was on the 16th, held to have been prematurely filed.—T. D. 13606, G. A. 1878.

(c) Protest filed before liquidation or more than ten days after liquidation held invalid.—T. D. 10477, G. A. 127.

(d) The ten days commences from the date of liquidation without regard to notice.—T. D. 10400, G. A. 91.

(e) A protest made within ten days can not, after the expiration of that time, be amended.—In re Sherman (C. C.), (49 Fed. Rep., 224).

(f) Where the ten days expires on Sunday a protest filed on Monday is too late.—T. D. 16723, G. A. 3311; T. D. 21628, G. A. 4563.

(g) The filing of a protest on Sunday, like the service of other civil process on that day, is illegal. A protest can not be officially received by a collector on Sunday, and if in fact so received can at most be considered only as officially in his hands when Sunday has expired. A protest lodged with the collector on Sunday, that day being the tenth day after liquidation, is void.—T. D. 21628, G. A. 4563.

(h) A protest filed within ten days after the reliquidation under a decision of the Board, but long after the original liquidation, is not filed in time.—T. D. 13546, G. A. 1818.

(i) Maple sugar imported July 9 and duties liquidated August 11, 1890. Withdrawn under section 50, act of October 1, 1890, and duties paid October 29. Protest filed October 31, 1890, held valid and in time.—T. D. 10530, G. A. 180.

(j) Where goods are withdrawn from the warehouse a protest against the assessment of duties on the weight at the time of the entry rather than at the time of withdrawal (sec. 50, act of Oct. 1, 1890), filed within ten days from the date of liquidation, is in time.—T. D. 12374, G. A. 1146.

(k) Where goods are entered for warehouse and transportation the protest must be filed at the original port of entry and within ten days.—T. D. 13584, G. A. 1856.

(l) Protest must be made within ten days from the liquidation of the warehouse entry where the final liquidation makes no change in the amount of duties.—T. D. 16419, G. A. 3208.

(m) Goods imported at New York in March, 1894, and on October 2, 1894, the goods were entered for warehouse and transportation to Boston, where a combined entry for rewarehouse and withdrawal was made on October 26. Protest was made against this entry. The protest held insufficient because: (1) The entry was complete at the original port; (2) the liquidation is part and parcel of the entry, and hence (3) the act complained of being that of the collector of the original port the protest must run to and against him.—T. D. 15671, G. A. 2852.

(n) Filing a protest with the Secretary of the Treasury which does not come into the hands of the collector until after the lapse of ten days from liquidation is not a compliance with law.—T. D. 16658, G. A. 3303.

(o) Duties liquidated November 6 and protest mailed by registered letter at Hartford, which reached St. Albans November 16, but did not come into the hands of the collector until the 17th. Held, not in time.—T. D. 13204, G. A. 1625.

(a) Entry liquidated and duties paid May 17. On May 27 the collector received a telegram stating that protest had been mailed that day. Protest received May 30. Held, that a protest sent by mail received more than ten days after liquidation is not in time.—T. D. 13367, G. A. 1747.

(b) When the practice at the custom-house permits the giving of notice by leaving the protest in a certain office and such protest is left in the proper place, after business hours, on the last day but one for giving notice, the last day being a holiday (election day), on which the custom-house is closed by special order though not by law, and the notice remains in the office during such last day, it is in time and entitled to consideration. T. D. 13865, G. A. 2018, reversed.—Frankenburg v. United States (77 Fed. Rep., 606).

(c) Protest dated June 6 and the importer testifies that he deposited it on the desk of the protest clerk a few minutes before 4 o'clock on that day. The record shows it was not filed until the 8th. Held, not to have been filed on the 6th.—T. D. 14855, G. A. 2538.

(d) Liquidation filed October 7 and protest filed October 17, which was in time, but the increased duties were not paid until October 19. Protest overruled because the increased duties were not paid until more than ten days after the stamped date of liquidation.—T. D. 13219, G. A. 1640.

(e) The importer is not entitled to any special notice of the fact that the collector has made a liquidation of duties, and a protest filed more than ten days after liquidation but within ten days after the importer had notice of the decision of the collector is too late.—T. D. 17059, G. A. 3440.

(f) A protest stated: "We reserve ourselves the right to make further protest." Held, that the right to protest is limited to a period of ten days from the date of liquidation, after the expiration of which time protests can not be filed nor can one on file be amended or changed in any respect.—T. D. 11095, G. A. 538.

(g) Protest on January 28, 1893, and an additional duty found due which was not paid and the liquidation canceled and abandoned by the collector. On February 27, 1893, the collector voluntarily reliquidated the entry against which protest was lodged March 3. Held, that the final liquidation was on February 27 and that the ten days run from that date.—T. D. 15309, G. A. 2743.

(h) Protests against liquidations on pro forma invoices are subject to the conditions and exactions imposed by this section and must be filed within ten days after the ascertainment and liquidation of duties.—T. D. 13208, G. A. 1629.

(i) Rug imported January 14, 1896, and assessed. Same rug invoiced by mistake December 10, 1895. Duty paid twice. Protest filed February 11, 1896, claiming an allowance for deficiency under both entries. Protest overruled because not filed in time.—T. D. 17853, G. A. 3787.

(j) Entry liquidated October 24, 1890, on a basis of 9 per cent advance and no dissatisfaction expressed. Clerical error discovered in the liquidation and that the advance exceeded 10 per cent. Entry reliquidated and additional duty imposed. Appeal for reappraisement, but before action it was withdrawn. The appraiser then reduced value on certain items and returned the invoice December 10. Entry reliquidated January 19, 1891, and protest filed January 27. Held, that the reliquidation of January 19, not having changed the status of the invoice but having placed the importers in the position they occupied under the liquidation of October 24, such reliquidation did not restore the right of protest which had expired.—T. D. 11563, G. A. 738.

(a) Theatrical properties imported October 27, 1894, which were accorded the privilege of paragraph 596, act of 1894. Entry liquidated May 3, 1895. Goods not exported at the expiration of six months and the Secretary extended the time six months under the authority conferred by paragraph 596. Liquidated duties paid October 30, 1895, and goods taken by importer a bond having been given. Protest filed November 1, 1895, more than ten days after liquidation of entry, but within ten days after payment and delivery of the goods. Held, that the protest was filed too late.—T. D. 17411, G. A. 3602.

(b) A paper is said to be filed when it is delivered to a clerk or other officer to be kept by him with the other papers in the case.—T. D. 23279, G. A. 4990.

(c) The date of the "liquidation and ascertainment of duties" within ten days after, but not before which, protests must be filed, is the date of final liquidation stamped on the entry by the collector after the statement of the duties has been certified by the naval officer to be correct (art. 1416, Reg. 1899), and it is not the date of the original estimation of duties which (art. 410) is tentatively made at the time of entry, before examination and appraisement of the merchandise. Accordingly a protest filed with the collector within ten days after such original estimate, but before the final liquidation, is invalid as being made prematurely.—T. D. 22698, G. A. 4833.

(d) When a change in the rate of duties occurs while the goods are in bond the law requires the collector of his own motion to reliquidate all entries on the basis of the new rate. He may do this at or before the time of the withdrawal of the goods from bond. The failure or refusal of the collector to make such reliquidation and adjustment before final withdrawal from bond is equivalent to a decision by him that the original liquidation was correct; and a protest [illegible]le within ten days from the date of such withdrawal is seasonably filed [illegible]ied will entitle the importer to an adjudication of his claim that the new rates are applicable to his goods.—T. D. 22805, G. A. 4865.

(e) When a protest is lodged with the collector within ten days from the time the new rates of duty became operative, but before the collector has reliquidated the entry to conform therewith, and before the goods have been withdrawn from bond, such protest is premature and not entitled to consideration on its merits.—T. D. 22805, G. A. 4865.

(f) The right of protest must be availed of at the time of the liquidation of the entry and in the case of withdrawal of goods from bond there is no new right of protest after the lapse of ten days from the date of liquidation unless between the date of such liquidation and of withdrawal there has been a change in the law and the collector has refused or neglected to reclassify the goods.—T. D. 23074, G. A. 4930.

(g) Custom-house brokers apply to the Secretary of the Treasury for relief. Letter transmitted to the collector. The collector forwarded the letter to the Board with this indorsement: "By order of the Department in its letter of March 26, 1895, this paper is received as a protest lodged nunc pro tunc, i. e., although received at his office on March 27, 1895, is received as if lodged on March 11, 1895, the date that it was forwarded to the Department." Held, (1) that the brokers were not lawfully authorized to file a protest; (2) that the paper is not in form and substance a sufficient and valid protest; (3) that if it is sufficient it was not given to the collector within the time required by law; (4) that the time limit within which a protest must be filed can not be extended.—T. D. 17390, G. A. 3581.

(h) The giving of notice of dissatisfaction to a collector is equivalent to filing a protest with the collector.—T. D. 23279, G. A. 4990.

(a) The sending of a letter to a Treasury official at Washington complaining of an assessment of duty is not such notice of dissatisfaction as is contemplated by section 14 of the administrative act; neither does the transmission of such letter by the Department to the collector for "report and return" constitute such notice.—T. D. 23279, G. A. 4990.

(b) When the Treasury Department transmits such letter to the collector instructing him to accept it as due notice of dissatisfaction the Department may be deemed to have voluntarily constituted itself the agent of the importer for filing his protest; and the letter may, perhaps, be treated as a valid protest if placed in the collector's hands within ten days after liquidation.—T. D. 23279, G. A. 4990.

(c) Payment of duties is a condition precedent to the right of protest.—T. D. 10255, G. A. 33; T. D. 12221, G. A. 1035, reversed. (See United States v. Goldenberg) (post).

(d) Payment of duties is not a condition precedent to protest.—T. D. 10500, G. A. 150.

(e) Protests should not be transmitted to the Board until duties are paid.—T. D. 10536, G. A. 186.

(f) The payment of the ascertained duties within ten days is not a necessary precedent condition to jurisdiction by the Board.—T. D. 18724, G. A. 4037.

(g) A protest is effective as to goods not advanced in value regardless of the nonpayment of increased duties on other goods in the same entry.—T. D. 16722, G. A. 3310.

(h) Where imported foreign goods are entered at a custom-house for consumption the payment by the importer of the full amount of [illegible] ascertained to be due upon the liquidation of the entry, as well as giving notice of dissatisfaction or protest, within ten days after the liquidation of such duties is not necessary in order to enable a protesting importer to have the exaction and classification reviewed by a Board of General Appraisers and by the courts. Congress has not specifically provided that payment shall be made within ten days as one of the conditions of challenging the action of the collector and hence there is no warrant for enforcing any such condition.—United States v. Goldenberg (168 U. S., 95, 103).

(i) As to the right of protest under reliquidation.—T. D. 14645, G. A. 2403.

(j) The appraiser resorted to section 11, act of June 10, 1890, to ascertain the cost of production of St. Gall embroideries. The importer claimed that the appraisers could have ascertained the market value under section 10. Held, that the valuation returned by the appraiser could not be reviewed on protest.—T. D. 12996, G. A. 1547.

(k) Section 14, act of June 10, 1890, authorizes importers to file protests only against fees and exactions paid to the Government through the collector. It does not authorize protests against payments made to the owners of private bonded warehouses for refunding of which the Government is not responsible.—T. D. 13057, G. A. 1562.

(l) The action of the collector in stating, in his return to the Board of Appraisers, that the requirements of the law have been complied with by the importer does not operate as a waiver of objections on the ground of an insufficient protest. The protest being a statutory necessity, it is beyond the power of the collector to waive it.—United States v. Schefer (C. C.), (71 Fed. Rep., 959).

(a) Upon an importation of ginger ale in bottles the collector added the value of the bottles to that of the ale for the purpose of assessing the duty. Held, that the question of the propriety of such action was one of classification not of valuation and was properly raised by protest, not by notice of dissatisfaction.—Dickson v. United States (C. C.), (68 Fed. Rep., 534).

(b) Protest claimed that goods were dutiable as "toys not composed of rubber, china, porcelain, etc., not specially provided for," at 35 per cent under paragraph 453, act of 1897. Paragraph 453 relates to musical instruments, but the protest held sufficient as a claim under paragraph 418.—T. D. 21695, G. A. 4582.

(c) Lenses of glass, polished, were assessed at 60 per cent. The protest was against the assessment of duty at 45 per cent instead of 60 per cent. Held, that this inadvertence did not render the protest invalid.—T. D. 12020, G. A. 933.

(d) Protest intended to claim that the article was dutiable under section 4, act of 1890. It referred to paragraph 773 B when there is no such paragraph. The importer was misled by Heyl's Digest, which gives section 4 as paragraph 773–B. Held sufficient.—T. D. 13298, G. A. 1678.

(e) The protest is against the "liquidation and assessment of duty upon one case containing plated ware composed of metal and pressed glass" and claims that it is dutiable under paragraph 215 as manufactures of metal not specially provided for, at 45 per cent and not at 60 per cent under paragraph 105; also that it is dutiable under paragraph 210, act of 1883. China cups and saucers decorated with silver, etc., assessed under paragraph 100 were the only articles assessed at 60 per cent. Protest held sufficiently definite.—T. D. 13868, G. A. 2021.

(f) The protest claimed of a silk fabric that "said goods are dutiable under paragraph 415, schedule L, act of October 1, 1890, at the rate of 50 per cent ad valorem because they are manufactures of silk not otherwise provided for." Held, that the reference to paragraph 415 instead of 414 was an error that became apparent when we consider that paragraph 415 is not in schedule L and does not provide for silk manufactures and that the protest is sufficiently specific.—T. D. 14133, G. A. 2132.

(g) The protest reads: "I hereby protest against your assessment of duty at the rate of 50 per cent ad valorem on certain enameled ironware contained in cases 615, 616, 617, 8–13, etc." Held sufficient.—T. D. 14645, G. A. 2403.

(h) Protest claimed certain earthenware to be dutiable at 55 per cent under the act of 1890, but did not specify the paragraph. Only two paragraphs provide a rate of 55 per cent for earthenware. Held sufficiently specific.—T. D. 14932, G. A. 2561.

(i) A valid claim as to goods includes a claim as to coverings.—T. D. 14949, G. A. 2578.

(j) Protest filed by Robert F. Thompson, while the entry was made by Robert M. Thompson. Held sufficient as the law recognizes only one Christian name.—T. D. 15968, G. A. 2992.

(k) The validity of a protest is not affected by extraneous statements.—T. D. 16811, G. A. 3330.

(l) A protest which clearly points out the facts and reasons why certain goods should be admitted free of duty is not bad because it refers to a statute not in existence at the time, and such reference does not relieve the collector from proceedings under existing laws.—Boussod Valadon Co. v. United States (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 718).

(a) P. & Co. imported a quantity of moss, which was classified as dyed moss, dutiable under section 4, act of 1890, as a nonenumerated manufactured article. P. & Co. filed a protest claiming that teh moss should be subject either to a duty of 10 per cent under paragraph 24 or free under paragraph 653, as they were unable to detect that the moss had undergone any process of manufacture. Held, that if the moss was free either under paragraph 653 or paragraph 560 the protest was sufficiently definite and precise. Sustaining the Board.—Shaw v. Prior (C. C.), (68 Fed. Rep., 421).

(b) The collector having classified certain glass jars containing preserves as "vials" under paragraph 88, act of 1894, the importer protested that under said paragraph there was no duty on any filled bottles, or on "bottles," exceeding three-fourths of a cent a pound. Our bottles are not vials. They are not merchandise, but the envelopes of merchandise, and pay no separate duty." Held, that this was a sufficient protest.—Smith v. United States (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 757).

(c) A protest by an importer, addressed to the collector and signed by the importer, saying, "I do hereby protest against the rate of 50 per cent assessed upon chocolate imported by me, Str. La Bretagne, June 23/91, import entry 96656—M. S. No. 52/53, I claiming that the said goods, under existing laws, are dutiable at 2 cents per pound and the exaction of a higher rate is unjust and illegal. I pay the duty demanded, to obtain possession of the goods, and claim to have the amount unjustly exacted, refunded," is in the form and substance a sufficient compliance with this section.—United States v. Salambier (170 U. S., 621).

(d) Protest was filed within ten days and was lost by the Government officer whose duty it was to receive it. The importers thereupon filed a copy. Held sufficient.—T. D. 16018, G. A. 3042.

(e) Protest claimed article to be free as waste under paragraph 463 (1897), which paragraph imposes a duty of 10 per cent on waste. Construed as a claim for 10 per cent.—T. D. 22602, G. A. 4806.

(f) Where the only question of difference between an importer and the collector, with reference to duty on goods entered on July 24, 1897, was as to whether they were dutiable under the act of 1894 or the act of 1897, they having been first appraised under the former and afterwards reclassified under the latter, a protest which distinctly claims that they should have been assessed under the act of 1894 is sufficient although it does not specify the particular provisions of either act which were held or claimed to be applicable.—In re Hagop, Bogigian Co. (104 Fed. Rep., 75).

(g) A protest in accordance with R. S. 2911 raises a question as to the construction of the law and the facts respecting the classification of merchandise and the rate of duty imposed under such classification.—In re Schefer (C. C.), (49 Fed. Rep., 216).

(h) When an importer protests that his invoices are dutiable under a certain paragraph, he is not concluded, so as to prevent the Board of Appraisers from adjudging that a part of the invoices are dutiable under that paragraph and a part under the classification adopted by the collector. Davies v. Arthur (96 U. S., 148) distinguished.—In re Crowley (C. C. A.), (55 Fed. Rep., 283).

(i) Where the objection to the collector's action is so distinctly and specifically set forth that there can be no reasonable doubt as to the paragraph which the importer relies on, a mistake in citing the number of the paragraph will not invalidate the protest.—T. D. 23165, G. A. 4955.

(a) One case containing one bottle of still wine was assessed for duty at $1.60, as containing not less than 1 dozen bottles, under paragraph 336, act of 1890. The importer claimed free entry as a sample, or that it should be assessed as one-twelfth of a dozen bottles. Held, that the importation of wine in packages of less than 1 dozen bottles is prohibited and that a protest based on a violation of a statute is invalid.—T. D. 15212, G. A. 2705.

(b) The oath for free entry of a turner's workbench claims that it is the tool of trade of Kernisch, while the protest claims that it is the property of Becker. The workbench did not arrive on the same steamer with Kernisch. Protest overruled.—T. D. 12199, G. A. 1013.

(c) Protest against currency valuation and appraisement held to be invalid.—T. D. 17184, G. A. 3501.

(d) Merchandise appraised and reappraised and protest made. Held not tenable.—T. D. 15069, G. A. 2622.

(e) Protests against reappraised values are invalid.—T. D. 17663, G. A. 3711.

(f) Protest that the act of June 10, 1890, is unconstitutional is not specific.—T. D. 10254, G. A. 32.

(g) In one paragraph the importer claims that the merchandise is dutiable under the act of 1890 and in another that it is dutiable under the act of 1883, and that the act of 1890 is unconstitutional. In view of the conflicting and repugnant claims the protest is rejected.—T. D. 11066, G. A. 509.

(h) Protest is against the sums exacted "for reasons stated in our letter of the 23rd inst." Held, not sufficient.—T. D. 12975, G. A. 1526.

(i) Protest filed August 27, 1894, claiming under the act of 1894, which went into effect August 28. Held invalid as filed under a nonexistent law.—T. D. 15385, G. A. 2779.

(j) A gong imported September 27, 1890, and assessed under paragraph 216, act of 1883. This protest claimed it to be free as church regalia "under the provisions of the existing tariff now (November 24) in vogue." Held, that the protest must claim relief under the act in force at the time of entry.—T. D. 11051, G. A. 494.

(k) Protest held insufficient as to goods not specified.—T. D. 15151, G. A. 2677.

(l) Protest is "against your decision, liquidation, and rate and amount of duties assessed by you on our importation of jute canvas, per corean, entered February 20, 1893, entry No. 30374, entry liquidated April 7, 1893, C. N. 1183 and others." Held sufficient as to C. N. 1183, but not sufficient as to the other items of the invoice.—T. D. 14458, G. A. 2304.

(m) Protest held to be indefinite and multifarious.—T. D. 13202, G. A. 1623.

(n) Owls composed of paper, pulp, and feathers assessed under paragraph 443 and claimed to be dutiable under paragraph 425. Held to be toys and protest overruled because proper rate of duty not claimed.—T. D. 10906, G. A. 401.

(o) Strawboard lined, one side white, was assessed as cardboard under paragraph 420, act of 1890, and claimed to be dutiable under paragraph 425 as pasteboard manufactured of paper. Found to be pasteboard and paper not specially provided for (par. 422), and protest overruled as not making proper claim.—T. D. 11595, G. A. 770.

(p) Glass bottles with rubber stoppers assessed under paragraphs 103 and 106. The protest claimed that the duty should be 1 cent a pound, and the Board found that the merchandise was dutiable at 1½ cents a pound. Held, that the protest must claim the correct rate, and that having claimed 1 cent a pound to be the rate under paragraph 103, when the articles are dutiable at 1½ cents a pound, the action of the collector must stand.—T. D. 12707, G. A. 1356.

(a) Cotton braids known as feather-stitched braids claimed to be dutiable under paragraph 355 as manufactures of cotton. The importer claimed that this was an error, the intention being to claim under paragraph 354. Held, that a protest claiming under the wrong paragraph, though correct rate, can not be allowed.—T. D. 14247, G. A. 2211.

(b) Protest claimed exemption for guns under paragraph 516, act of 1890, as household effects. Held, that guns are personal effects and not household effects, and this paragraph not providing for personal effects the protest is overruled.—T. D. 15315, G. A. 2749.

(c) Molleton Blanchi, a bleached cottou, was assessed under paragraph 328 as ornamental feathers. The protest claimed it to be dutiable under paragraph 252, while it is found to be dutiable under paragraph 253. Both paragraphs 252 and 253 provide for countable cotton. Protest held not sufficieut.—T. D. 18146, G. A. 3903.

(d) Mechanical singing birds in gilt cages, composed of metal, were assessed as manufactures of metal. The protest reads: "We claim that the merchandise contained in S. Co. 1 is dutiable at 25 per cent ad valorem, under section 366½ of the tariff act." There is no such section. The protest held insufficient.—T. D. 17050, G. A. 3431.

(e) Where an importer mixes en masse two kinds of goods, and it is impracticable or impossible to separate them, a protest the claim in which covers the entire importation must be overruled, even though some of the goods might be subjected to classification as claimed.—T. D. 18616, G. A. 4014.

(f) The protest claimed "that the above-described merchandise is burlaps, is commercially known as such, is bought and sold as burlaps, and only dutiable as such at the rate of 35 per cent ad valorem, under the act of March 3, 1883." Neither of the two paragraphs relative to burlaps imposes duty at 35 per cent. The importer having failed to designate under which paragraph he seeks relief, his protest is held not to be sufficiently specific.—T. D. 10649, G. A. 233.

(g) Where the protest relates to and describes goods different in statutory particulars from those the subject of said protest, and where the protestant relies upon a paragraph or portion of a paragraph inapplicable to the merchandise, the protest will be overruled. "The importer must prevail, if at all, only upon the grounds stated in his protest."—In re Austin (47 Fed. Rep., 873), Chung Yune v. Kelly (14 Fed. Rep., 639), followed; T. D. 22482, G. A. 4763.

(h) Where neither the classification made by the collector nor that claimed by the importer is the correct classification, a decision of the Board of General Appraisers classifying the merchandise under a third provision will be reversed and the decision of the collector affirmed, even though the rate of duty prescribed by such third paragraph be the same as that claimed in the protest. (In this case Swiss spots and sprigs were classified by the collector under paragraph 373, act of 1890, the importer claimed them to be dutiable under paragraph 346, and the Board found that the goods were dutiable under paragraph 355.) See T. D. 11027, G. A. 470.—In re Sherman (C. C.), (49 Fed. Rep., 224).

(i). A protest against the assessment of duty on an importation of glass under paragraph 95, act of 1894, with 10 per cent added under paragraph 97 on account of the glass being beveled—the ground of objection being that the glass, which was described in the protest as cylinder and crown glass, was only dutiable under paragraph 92—is insufficient to raise the question, on review, whether the additional duty under paragraph 97 was correctly imposed, conceding the importation to have been dutiable under paragraph 95, on the claim that it should have been classified thereunder as "looking-glass plate." Sustaining the Board of General Appraisers.—Hempstead v. United States (C. C.), (94 Fed. Rep., 484).

(a) Hats of wool assessed at 35 cents a pound and 40 per cent. Protest claimed the goods to be dutiable at 30 per cent under schedule N, for "sundries" (act of 1883). Held not specific.—T. D. 10529, G. A. 179.

(b) Regularity of appraisements is not to be attacked by vague and indefinite allegations in the protest.—T. D. 10528, G. A. 178.

(c) Protest that the liquidation and assessment were illegal, contrary to law, and contrary to the Constitution of the United States held not specific.—T. D. 10531, G. A. 181.

(d) A protest which claimed that Canadian hay and straw was intended for feed and bedding for Canadian cattle in bond en route for Liverpool, and therefore free, held to be indefinite.—T. D. 11543, G. A. 718.

(e) A protest claiming that certain siphon bottles "are glass bottles, and specially provided for as such at 40 per cent ad valorem," held to be indefinite and vague.—T. D. 11682, G. A. 787.

(f) Embroidered silk banners were imported and assessed under paragraph 413. The importer protested and asked a refund because imported for a benevolent society, but did not state in terms that the banner was free nor under what paragraph he claims. Held not sufficiently specific.—T. D. 12423, G. A. 1161.

(g) Protest states "that the dutiable value was stated in the invoice, and that by liquidating the entry, with the addition made by the appraiser, you have failed to comply with the requirements of section 13, act of June 10, 1890." Held to be too vague and indefinite.—T. D. 12534, G. A. 1218.

(h) Merchandise invoiced as toluidin sulfosaure, while the protest refers to it as "thio chromogen." Held, that the collector is not required to look outside of the protest, and it does not furnish sufficient information.—T. D. 13567, G. A. 1839.

(i) The protests describe the merchandise as consisting of satin panels, turkesas, portieres, scarfs, and doilies, which are claimed to be dutiable as manufactures of silk, and of paper ornaments, claimed to be dutiable as manufactures of paper, and the importers mention in their protests the wrong cases and numbers of entries. Held not sufficiently specific.—T. D. 13676, G. A. 1914.

(j) A protest which claims that certain flax is not dutiable under paragraph 358, act of 1890, as dressed line, without further specification, is not sufficient.—T. D. 15865, G. A. 2965.

(k) Protest read: "I claim that these goods should have been entered free under the tariff act of 1897." Held insufficient.—T. D. 18744, G. A. 4057; but see 104 Fed. Rep., 75.

(l) "I hereby wish to protest against a rate of 25 per cent for duty being put on my entries of horn strips, which have been coming into the port of Boston for some months past," held defective.—T. D. 17734, G. A. 3720.

(m) Dry smoked fish assessed under paragraph 211, act of 1894. The importer protested, "I claim that said goods are smoked fish," not indicating the paragraph under which he claims that the fish should be assessed. Held insufficient.—T. D. 18417, G. A. 3974.

(a) A protest containing the claim that the goods in question, "being chiefly composed of cotton, are dutiable at the various rates prescribed in schedule I" is insufficient, as it is too vague to designate, even in substance, the provision under which the importer insists the goods are dutiable.—T. D. 21640, G. A. 4566.

(b) Paintings and frames imported. The appraiser noted: "Add for goods in excess of invoice" and "Add manufactures of wood." The additional duty was on frames. The protest was against the assessment of duties on frames, on the ground that "the value of same was included in the invoice amount as entered." "We therefore respectfully request that the appraiser may reconsider his classification, we claiming that the same is erroneous as returned by him." The Board held that the question was one of value and the remedy an appeal for reappraisement. Held, that a protest which fails to show whether the objection is to the valuation or the classification is not sufficiently definite.—Cottier v. United States (C. C.), (101 Fed. Rep., 423).

(c) When an importer intends to rely upon the similitude clause for the purpose of identifying his merchandise with some enumerated article, and means to place his objection upon the ground that the collector has not given due effect to that provision, he should state the fact in his protest, and if he fails to do so his objection is not stated distinctly and specifically within the meaning of the statute. A protest claiming that the articles are dutiable under the provisions imposing a duty on precious stones is insufficient to raise the question whether the articles should have been classified as precious stones by force of the similitude clause. Sustaining the Circuit Court.—Hahn v. Erhardt (C. C. A.), (78 Fed. Rep., 620).

(d) Sweetened chocolate manufactured from crude cocoa was assessed for duty at 50 per cent under paragraph 239, act of 1890, as "chocolate confectionery" or assimilated thereto. The importer claimed that it was dutiable under paragraph 318 as "chocolate," or under section 4 as a nonenumerated article. The protest did not mention paragraph 319. The article found to be dutiable under paragraph 319, but protest not sufficient.—In re Austin (47 Fed. Rep., 873).

(e) A protest filed before the ascertainment and liquidation of the duties is in contravention of the terms of the statute and can not be considered.—In re Bailey et al. (112 Fed. Rep., 413).

(f) Where a reference to three paragraphs of the tariff was necessary to ascertain the rate of duty applicable to leather gloves, a protest that enumerated only the first paragraph, but mentioned the correct rate of duty assessable, was held to be sufficient.—In re Claflin (113 Fed. Rep., 944).

(g) A protest enumerating the wrong paragraph and the wrong classification of the goods, but claiming the correct rate, held sufficient.—United States v. Shea (114 Fed. Rep., 38).

(h) Duties voluntarily paid can not be refunded in the absence of protest, notwithstanding that it subsequently appeared that the goods were not dutiable as imports.—Dewell v. Mix (116 Fed. Rep., 664).

(i) A protest properly describing the goods and claiming correctly that they were free of duty was held sufficient, notwithstanding that it cited paragraph 646, tariff act of 1894, instead of paragraph 677, tariff act of 1897. Goods were entered for warehouse under the former act and withdrawn for consumption under the latter.—Shaw v. United States (122 Fed. Rep., 444), reversing 117 id., 366.

(a) In an action to recover duties paid on a cargo of sugar from the Philippine Islands, the plaintiff's demurrer to the defendant's answer that the duties were paid voluntarily and without protest was overruled.—Flint v. Bidwell (123 Fed. Rep., 200).

(b) A protest which claimed the goods to be dutiable as manufacture of paper under one paragraph, when their proper classification was paper not specially provided for under a different paragraph, was held sufficient, the rate of duty being the same in both.—United States v. Hunter (124 Fed. Rep., 1005).

(c) A protest claiming goods free of duty under two different paragraphs, neither of which covered them, was held to be sufficient, the goods being free of duty by virtue of a third paragraph not named in the protest.—Weil v. United States (124 Fed. Rep., 1006).

(d) It is the duty of the Board of General Appraisers and the courts to pass upon the correctness of the allegations of the protest rather than on the merits of the case, even when the merits are perfectly apparent and gross injustice will be done by failure to correct the action of the collector. A protest can not be sustained unless the importer points out specifically, in substance or effect, the error made and the section, clause, or subdivision of the law under which the assessment ought to have been made.—In re Solvay Process Company (134 Fed. Rep., 678; T. D. 26039).

(e) Duties are a personal debt or a charge upon the importer, and the Government is not restricted to the summary proceedings in rem against imported goods provided in this and other provisions of the law, but may bring a civil action for the collection of duties whenever by accident, mistake, or fraud no duties have been paid.—United States v. National Fibre Board Company (133 Fed. Rep., 596; T. D. 26073).

(f) Under this act no new rule obtains with respect to the terms of protests against the assessment of duty, and the procedure thereunder does not contemplate that the Board of General Appraisers may disregard matters or mistakes in protests which may have misled the collector, and allow them to be corrected upon review of his decision.—United States v. Fleitmann (137 Fed. Rep., 476; T. D. 26118).

(g) Silk ribbons upon which duty was assessed at 60 per cent under paragraph 390, tariff act of 1897, and which are properly dutiable as manufactures of silk at 50 per cent under paragraph 391, were claimed to be dutiable "only at the rate of 50 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 389." The protest was insufficient.—Ibid.

(h) A protest which claims that merchandise is free of duty under a certain paragraph of the tariff act, though, as a matter of fact, it is free of duty under another paragraph of the same act which is not mentioned in the protest, the same is insufficient.—United States v. Knowles (126 Fed. Rep., 727; T. D. 24922), reversing 122 id., 971, and affirming T. D. 14459, G. A. 2305; United States v. Bayersdorfer (126 Fed. Rep., 732; T. D. 24923), reversing 122 id., 968.

(i) The circumstance that the Board of General Appraisers had before it several protests relating to the classification of certain merchandise, one of which made a particular claim—the correct one—which was not mentioned in the other protests, is of no moment as affecting the construction of the latter protests.—United States v. Bayersdorfer (126 Fed. Rep., 732; T. D. 24923), reversing 122 id., 968.

(a) Protest under this section is the proper remedy of the importer where the local appraiser has made an illegal appraisement by advancing the entered value without having the goods or sufficient samples thereof before him.—United States v. Beer (150 Fed. Rep., 566; T. D. 27753), affirming 142 id., 199; T. D. 26880 and T. D. 26354, G. A. 6035.

(b) A protest filed on the eleventh day after liquidation is in time if the tenth day was a local holiday not established by law, such as Bunker Hill day in Boston, and the custom-house was not open.—Frost v. Saltonstall (129 Fed. Rep., 481; T. D. 25040).

(c) An entry was reliquidated for the purpose only of making a certain damage allowance. Within ten days after the reliquidation the importers filed a protest in the matter of certain charges which were not affected in any way by the reliquidation. It was held that the protest was valid and in time, notwithstanding that no protest was filed against the original liquidation.—Sgobel v. Robertson (126 Fed. Rep., 577; T. D. 25048).

(d) Under the authority given to it in this section "to examine and decide the case" submitted to it by the collector, the Board of General Appraisers is required first of all to determine its jurisdiction over the case.—United States v. Brown (127 Fed. Rep., 793; T. D. 25074).

(e) In exercising the powers of review vested in the Board of General Appraisers by law, the Board is not a subordinate division of the Treasury Department. The members of the Board are appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and, acting within its jurisdiction, the Board is an independent tribunal, empowered by law to pass upon certain controversies between the Government and the importer, and in this respect the Board is no more subordinate to the Treasury Department than is any other court.—Stone v. Whitridge (129 Fed. Rep., 33; T. D. 25154).

(f) The provision in section 14 of the customs administrative act of June 10, 1890, that the Board of General Appraisers "shall" decide cases submitted by collectors of customs, is mandatory and confers exclusive jurisdiction upon the Board, and a protest pending before the Board will not ordinarily be returned to the collector for reconsideration on the request of the protestants.—T. D. 23388, G. A. 5037.

(g) The Board of General Appraisers has no jurisdiction in the matter of an appeal from a decision of the collector of customs on goods imported from the Philippine Islands when the preliminary question is whether those places were foreign countries within the meaning of the tariff laws. The Insular Cases (182 U. S.; 21 Sup. Ct. Rep.) followed; In re Goetze (G. A. 4658) and In re Crossman (G. A. 4735) overruled; T. D. 23417, G. A. 5042.

(h) There is some doubt as to whether a protest that objects to the free entry of the goods and claims that they are dutiable can properly be entertained at all, for it may be seriously questioned whether a party importing goods which are admitted to entry free of duty can legally take exception to the action of a Government officer which presumptively does him no injury.—T. D. 23471, G. A. 5063.

(i) A protest will lie when the market value of the merchandise is fixed by adding an item that is manifestly not part of the market value.—T. D. 23558, G. A. 5090.

(j) The Board of General Appraisers has no jurisdiction in a case relating to the dutiability of a cargo of merchandise brought from the Hawaiian Islands to San Francisco after the passage of the act providing a government for the Territory of Hawaii, approved April 30, 1900 (31 U. S. Stat., 141). (Insular Tariff Cases (182 U. S., 221) followed). Fischer, G. A., dissenting, holds 1. That where the sole question raised in a protest is as to whether or not the merchandise has been imported the Board of General Appraisers has no jurisdiction. 2. That where two questions are raised, one as to whether the merchandise has been imported and the other as to the value of the goods, or as to the rate and amount of duty assessable thereon, the Board has jurisdiction. The reason for this distinction is that if the only question raised by a protest be whether or not the merchandise has been imported the Board will have no subject-matter to act on whether the question be answered in the affirmative or in the negative. If it be answered in the negative, then there is no imported merchandise as to which the Board can act, while if it be answered in the affirmative, there being no question of value or classification raised, the Board is still without subject-matter for its jurisdiction.—T. D. 23560, G. A. 5092.

(a) The jurisdiction of the Board of General Appraisers extends to the determination of the question whether merchandise that has been brought into a port of the United States comes from a foreign country or from another United States port; but if the Board finds the latter alternative to be true it must dismiss the case for want of jurisdiction. Where merchandise is invoiced at Glasgow, Scotland, for Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands, via New York, and such invoice is certified before a consul of the Hawaiian Republic, and not before a United States consul, the entire voyage from Glasgow to Honolulu is to be treated as one transaction, and the importation is to be deemed as made from Scotland into Honolulu. The mere landing of the goods at New York in bond to await transshipment in a vessel bound for Honolulu does not constitute an importation into New York. Fischer, G. A., dissenting on question of jurisdiction for the reasons given by him in G. A. 5092 supra.—T. D. 23588, G. A. 5097.

(b) Protests may not be amended more than ten days after the liquidation of the cutries to which they refer.—In re Sherman (49 Fed. Rep., 224) followed; T. D. 23630, G. A. 5108.

(c) The Board of General Appraisers has no jurisdiction in the matter of an importation of tobacco from the Philippine Islands made after the signing of the treaty of Paris on December 10, 1898, but before the exchange of ratifications, for the reason that on the signing of the treaty the Philippine Islands ceased to be foreign territory. Since the passage of the Philippine act of March 8, 1902, expressly extending the provisions of the customs administrative act of June 10, 1890, to all articles coming into the United States from the Philippine Archipelago, the Board has such jurisdiction. As between the contracting sovereigns, a treaty when ratified relates back to the time of signing, although in respect to private rights the treaty does not take effect until the exchange of ratifications.—Ex parte Ortiz (100 Fed. Rep., 955, 962); T. D. 23638, G. A. 5116.

(d) The provision in this section that the decision of the collector "shall be final and conclusive against all persons interested therein," in the absence of a protest by the importer within ten days after liquidation, is a limitation upon the importer and not upon the collector. Merchandise may, without reexamination, be reclassified at a different rate of duty and the entry reliquidated accordingly, even where the merchandise has passed from customs custody and no protest has been made.—T. D. 23655, G. A. 5118.

(e) The mere fact that an action for the forfeiture of imported merchandise is pending in a United States district court does not operate to oust the jurisdiction of the Board of Classification over a protest, duly filed, against the liquidation of the entry by the collector and the ascertainment of the rate and amount of duty accruing on such merchandise. Where it is made to appear that, in any case pending before this Board, the decision of the cause will involve directly or collaterally the determination of some issue in a suit for forfeiture pending in a United States district court, the Board will continue the case until the final judgment of the court is ascertained. The forfeiture and sale by the United States of imported merchandise for undervaluation under the provisions of section 7 of the customs administrative act of 1890, does not relieve the importer from the liability for duties thereon. The obligation to pay the duty is incurred by the act of importation, and the importer is not relieved from such obligation by the violation of a different provision of the customs law, although he thereby incurs as a penalty a forfeiture of the entire importation.—United States v. One Case of Paintings (99 Fed. Rep., 426) and Gray v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 213) followed; T. D. 23749, G. A. 5147.

(a) Where a protest against the decision of a collector of customs as to the rate and amount of duty on imported merchandise raises a question as to the jurisdiction of the Board of United States General Appraisers, the decision of such question can only be properly made by the Board itself and the Federal courts on appeal; and it is the duty of the collector to transmit the papers to the Board for decision, irrespective of his opinion as to whether or not the jurisdiction of the Board extends to such a controversy.—T. D. 23791, G. A. 5159.

(b) Protests must be filed with the collector who is legally authorized to make the ascertainment and liquidation of duty, although the payment of duty may be made at a different port.—T. D. 24072, G. A. 5234.

(c) Protests relating to goods entered under the provisions of the act of June 10, 1890, for immediate transportation to a port other than that of arrival, should be filed at the port of ultimate destination, the collector of such port being the officer who is authorized to ascertain and liquidate the duties.—T. D. 24153, G. A. 5255.

(d) The liquidation against which a protest will lie is a final liquidation, not a merely tentative one. A liquidation on an entry followed by the words "Subject to change of rates if required by law" held not to be the final liquidation from which the ten days' limitation commenced to run.—United States v. Franklin (137 Fed. Rep., 677; T. D. 26316), affirming T. D. 24266, G. A. 5294.

(e) The Board of General Appraisers has the power, and the practice is usually followed, to allow testimony taken in one case to be applied in another when the merchandise in both cases is of the same character.—T. D. 24715, G. A. 5437.

(f) Whether a protest that claims the merchandise should be dutiable at a higher rate than that assessed can properly be entertained, in view of the fact that the importer has suffered no injury, query.—T. D. 23471, G. A. 5063, and T. D. 24723, G. A. 5445.

(g) Where a protest relates to subject-matter which is not, in contemplation of law, "imported merchandise." the case will be dismissed for want of jurisdiction, irrespective of the correctness of the collector's action.—T. D. 24002, G. A. 5208.

(h) The jurisdiction of the Board of Classification does not extend to a case involving the dutiability of merchandise which has been smuggled or otherwise introduced surreptitiously into the country without entry at any custom-house. It is the duty of a collector of customs to transmit all protest cases arising before him to the Board, irrespective of his opinion as to the jurisdiction of the Board over the case.—T. D. 24014, G. A. 5211.

(a) Under section 8, act of March 8, 1902, jurisdiction of the Board of General Appraisers is extended to all cases involving the assessment of duty on articles imported into the United States from the Philippine Islands.—T. D. 24051, G. A. 5226.

(b) When a protest refers to specified cases or items, it can not be construed as relating in addition to any other items or cases.—T. D. 24136, G. A. 5250.

(c) A protest describing the merchandise and claiming it to be waste, without specifying the rate or provision under which it is properly dutiable, held sufficient as a claim under paragraph 463 of the tariff act of 1897.—T. D. 24244, G. A. 5283.

(d) Reliquidation by a collector otherwise than in accordance with a decision made by the Board of General Appraisers as to the issues raised by the protest is null and void.—T. D. 24459, G. A. 5346.

(e) In construing this section, which requires that protests must be made within ten days after liquidation of the entry covering the merchandise to which the protest relates, held that a voluntary reliquidation of an entry by a collector which results in a change in the rate or the amount of duty is for the purpose of filing protests to be considered as an abandonment of any earlier liquidation and as reopening the whole entry, so that protest can legally be made against the decision of the collector in any particular, even though his decision passed unchallenged by protest when the entry was previously liquidated.—T. D. 24623, G. A. 5406.

(f) The jurisdiction conferred on the Board of General Appraisers by this section does not extend to protests against the exaction of the so-called head-money tax on passengers arriving in the United States.—T. D. 24625, G. A. 5408.

(g) Protests involving merchandise imported from Cuba will not be suspended by the Board on the mere possibility that a treaty may be ratified providing for the free entry of Cuban goods.—T. D. 24654, G. A. 5415.

(h) An affidavit by an importer in support of his protest against the classification of a collector of customs which fails to show that he has any personal knowledge whatever as to the matter held insufficient to rebut the legal presumption that the collector's classification is correct.—T. D. 24703, G. A. 5433.

(i) Protests must be filed within ten days after the liquidation of the entry. They can not be amended or corrected after the expiration of that time. A protest left on the desk of the deputy collector within the ten days, but subsequently withdrawn for amendment and correction and then filed more than ten days after the liquidation of the entry, comes too late for consideration.—T. D. 24786, G. A. 5478.

(j) The collector is without authority to waive the statutory requirement that a protest must be filed within ten days after but not before the liquidation of the entry.—In re Guggenheim (112 Fed. Rep., 517) followed; T. D. 24846, G. A. 5512.

(k) The words "or at the appropriate rate and under the proper paragraph, according to the component material of chief value," printed on a protest, are not sufficient to sustain a recovery of excessive duties in the absence of a specific claim under the correct paragraph of the tariff.—T. D. 24907, G. A. 5537.

(a) A protest relating to goods within both paragraphs 307 and 313 is sufficient if claim is made under the former, the latter paragraph being but a counterpart of or conjoint provision with the former as to goods covered by both.—T. D. 25108, G. A. 5613.

(b) The jurisdiction of the Board of United States General Appraisers as conferred by this section does not extend to vessels which have been assessed for duty by a collector of customs. The owner of the vessel should seek relief by libel in admiralty.—T. D. 25238, G. A. 5659.

(c) A protest must show upon its face the reasons for the importer's objection to the payment of duties. A reference to another and separate statement of such reasons alleged to have been made elsewhere is not a compliance with this section, and the Board of General Appraisers will not review the case.—T. D. 25297, G. A. 5683.

(d) The jurisdiction of the Board of General Appraisers in cases of reappraisement extends only to those items on the invoice as to which an appeal has been prosecuted. If they appraise other items not appealed on, their action is null and void and may be challenged by protest.—T. D. 25336, G. A. 5694.

(e) The Board of United States General Appraisers, by virtue of its statutory power to examine and decide all cases properly before it, has power to correct clerical errors or mistakes in an invoice when the same is necessary to a just administration of the customs law. This power is not derived from section 7 as amended by section 32, act of 1897, and hence it is not necessary that the error should be a clerical one or manifest from the papers. That it is satisfactorily established before the Board is sufficient.—Gillespie v. United States (124 Fed. Rep., 106) cited; T. D. 25890, G. A. 5877.

(f) The claim in a protest that merchandise is dutiable "at the appropriate rate and under the proper paragraph according to the component material of chief value" is not sufficient compliance with the requirements of this section.—T. D. 26098, G. A. 5951.

(g) A reliquidation made by order of the Secretary of the Treasury remitting penal duties does not open the original liquidation made by the collector so as to confer a new right to protest on the importer, such reliquidation being made by the collector merely as the agent of the Secretary of the Treasury and not being a decision of the collector from which an apppeal may be taken.—T. D. 26216, G. A. 5991.

(h) Many of the various claims or demands which may arise from a single liquidation of an entry by a collector are severable causes of action and may be made the subject of separate protests, which may be considered at different times. A decision of the Board sustaining a protest is not a bar to further proceedings under another pending protest against the same liquidation and covering the same and other merchandise, but raising a question which was neither expressly nor necessarily determined in the decision of the former case. A reliquidation of an entry by a collector to execute an order of the Board of General Appraisers sustaining an importer's protest is not a "decision of the collector" within the meaning of this section. It will give no new right of protest nor invalidate another protest filed against the original liquidation.—T. D. 26385, G. A. 6050.

(i) It is mandatory on the collector to forward the protest and all papers and exhibits connected therewith to the Board of General Appraisers, without regard to any opinion which he may entertain as to the jurisdiction of the Board.—T. D. 26414, G. A. 6055.

(a) In computing the time within which a protest is required to be filed, Sundays are to be included, and if the tenth day falls on a Sunday a protest filed on the Monday following comes too late. A local statute of the State of New York providing for the exclusion of Sundays in such cases has no bearing on the construction of Federal statutes, which must be governed by the decisions of Federal courts.—T. D. 26414, G. A. 6055.

(b) The jurisdiction of the Board of General Appraisers does not extend to appeals from the decision of the collector assessing duties on tonnage.—T. D. 26444, G. A. 6062.

(c) A protest which claims an article to be free of duty as a "glue-stock" without enumerating the number of the paragraph is sufficient.—T. D. 26680, G. A. 6140.

(d) A protest that claims the correct rate of duty, but omits the paragraph number under which the claim is made and cites an inapplicable provision of the tariff act, is insufficient.—T. D. 26807, G. A. 6179.

(e) Where a superior appellate court has passed on a question of customs law on appeal from the Board of Classification, on the same issue being raised a second time, especially by the same litigant, without any material change in the evidence, it is incumbent on the Board to follow this decision under the doctrine of stare decisis.—T. D. 26368, G. A. 6039.

(f) A protest which claimed the correct rate of duty and mentioned the correct number of the paragraph, but which gave a description of the goods which would make them dutiable under a different subdivision of said paragraph from that mentioned in the protest, is insufficient.—T. D. 26835, G. A. 6193.

(g) Where an original protest is filed specifying particularly certain goods by marks and numbers, and is sustained by the Board of General Appraisers, and the collector reliquidates the entry in accordance with such decision, the importer is debarred subsequently from enlarging another or second protest by including other merchandise outside of that specified in the original protest. In carrying out the mandate of the Board by the reliquidation of an entry in accordance with its decision, the collector acts in a ministerial, and not in an administrative or judicial, capacity, and no appeal will lie from such decision under the provisions of the customs administrative act of 1890.—T. D. 26848, G. A. 6200.

(h) Where an importer has been duly notified of a day set for the hearing of his protest before the Board of General Appraisers and fails to appear, he will be defaulted, and the default will not be opened or the case further continued unless a proper excuse be rendered, based on reasonable grounds.—T. D. 26864, G. A. 6211.

(i) The collector's power to make a reliquidation, which will amount to a new decision respecting any merchandise covered by a protest, is suspended while the protest is pending, except in so far as the collector may exercise that power to comply with the demands of the protest while it is still in his hands. A voluntary reliquidation of an entry by a collector, changing the rate or amount of duty upon the merchandise, if made while a protest against the original liquidation is pending, is unauthorized and void in so far as its effect will be to invalidate the protest and thus divest the importer of the right to have the decision complained of reviewed by the Board and the courts.—T. D. 26898, G. A. 6224.

(j) The words "all fees and exactions" relate only to such fees and exactions as may be imposed by the collector of customs and give no jurisdiction to the Board of General Appraisers to pass upon or decide the legality of a fee exacted by an inspector appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture to inspect imported birds.—T. D. 26936, G. A. 6242; affirmed by consent, T. D. 27773.

(a) The Board of General Appraisers has jurisdiction to review the action of the collector in assessing duties on the cost of repairs of vessels under section 3114, Revised Statutes.—United States v. George Hall Coal Company (142 Fed. Rep., 1039; T. D. 27068), affirming 134 id., 1003; T. D. 26038, followed; T. D. 27154, G. A. 6295.

(b) Where an importer intends to make the contention that his merchandise is dutiable by virtue of the similitude clause, it is necessary that he should state the fact in his protest. A protest claiming an article to be dutiable under the proper paragraph of the tariff act, but which fails to refer to the similitude clause, is insufficient to raise the question whether the article should have been classified under the paragraph cited by virtue of the similitude clause.—United States v. Dearberg (143 Fed. Rep., 472; T. D. 27008), reversing 135 id., 245; T. D. 25782, followed; T. D. 27252, G. A. 6327.

(c) A protest claiming "a refund of duty on skins" held to be sufficient as directing the collector's attention to paragraph 664 of the tariff which provides for free admission of skins of all kinds, raw.—United States v. Helmrath (145 Fed. Rep., 36; T. D. 27117), affirming 135 id., 912; T. D. 25900, followed; T. D. 27294, G. A. 6344.

(d) An entry, made by a professional lecturer, of works of art imported for temporary use, in bond, without payment of duty, under paragraph 701, tariff act of 1897, may be liquidated by the collector at any time after entry and before the expiration of the time named in the bond. A protest objecting to the classification made by the collector under such liquidation, which is filed within ten days thereafter and before the expiration of the bond, is valid, and the questions raised may be considered and decided by the Board of General Appraisers, before the expiration of such period, irrespective of whether any duties have been or may be collected.—T. D. 27302, G. A. 6346.

(e) The well-established rule by which the sufficiency of a protest is measured, adopted and followed by the courts for over a century, is as follows: It must be so distinct and specific as to show that the objection taken at the trial was, at the time the protest was made, in the mind of the importer, and that it was sufficient to notify the collector of its true nature and character. The following requirements have been established in pursuance to the above rule: 1. The protest must point out the paragraph and the portion of the paragraph applicable to the goods where there are different rates applicable to differentiated goods provided for in the same paragraph. 2. The protest must correctly describe the goods. 3. The protest must correctly set forth the rate of duty applicable. 4. Where the goods are described eo nomine in the tariff act, it will be sufficient to so describe them in the protest. 5. Where a genus and species are both named in the tariff act, it will not suffice in the protest to rely upon that relationship and allege the merchandise to be other than of the name to be counted upon for judgment. 6. The reasons for the objections to the decision of the collector must be distinctly and specifically set forth in the protest. Review of authorities.—T. D. 27328, G. A. 6360.

(f) Certain wire assessed for duty at 45 per cent under paragraph 137, tariff act of 1897. The only claim in the protest was that the goods are "properly dutiable under the provision of paragraph 137." The protests were held insufficient.—Boker v. United States (145 Fed. Rep., 1022; T. D. 27192), affirming 140 id., 115; T. D. 26451, and T. D. 25892, G. A. 5879, followed; T. D. 27329, G. A. 6361.

(a) Where in a protest an importer specifically designates a provision in a paragraph of the tariff law which contains more than one distinct provision as the law under which he claims the right to enter his merchandise, he is restricted to this provision and relief can not be granted under another distinct and separate clause of the same paragraph.—T. D. 27421, G. A. 6381.

(b) A protest claiming goods dutiable "under paragraph 302 at the appropriate rate according to number and condition" held to be insufficient as not setting forth distinctly and specifically the reasons for the objection of the importer to the decision of the collector.—T. D. 27442, G. A. 6387.

(c) A protest can not properly be filed before the cause of action of the importer arises, and a protest claiming that goods in a bonded warehouse are dutiable according to their weight on withdrawal is premature, if filed before withdrawal. If upon withdrawal it should appear that there was a change in the weight of the hides, and the collector should refuse to reconsider his previous action or to acquiesce in the claim of the importer, such refusal would constitute a definite and final ascertainment and liquidation of duties against which a protest might be filed thereafter, but not before.—American Cigar Company v. United States (146 Fed. Rep., 484; T. D. 27036), affirming 145 id., 574; T. D. 25976, and T. D. 25353, G. A. 5695, followed; T. D. 27486, G. A. 6396.

(d) The reliquidation of an entry by a collector, made to execute the mandate of the Board of General Appraisers, which conforms to such mandate, will confer on the importer no new right of protest. Neither the Board nor the courts, however, in passing on the classification of imported merchandise, can make their mandate for reliquidation extend beyond the issues specifically raised by the protest under consideration; and any action by a collector of customs in violation of this principle would properly be subject to a new protest and appeal to the Board for correction.—T. D. 27538, G. A. 6408.

(e) A protest which does not point out distinctly and specifically the provision of law relied upon by the protestant, nor the rate of duty applicable to the particular merchandise, and which assigns no reasons why the particular alleged rate is applicable, or any such reasons, but which alleges a rate of duty inapplicable to the merchandise in question, is insufficient.—T. D. 27631, G. A. 6447.

(f) A protest which counts upon a description of merchandise contained in but one provision of the tariff law is in effect an eo nomine designation and is sufficient, although it does not mention the paragraph or tariff law.—T. D. 27662, G. A. 6460.

(g) The jurisdiction conferred on the Board of General Appraisers to review the decision of the collector as to the rate and amount of duties on imported merchandise extends only to merchandise lawfully entered and regularly invoiced and appraised, and where an importer files a protest against the action of the collector in assessing duty on merchandise for which, on importation, the same importer had declined to make entry, with the result that the goods were placed in "general order" and subsequently sold as unclaimed merchandise and purchased by the importer for a trivial sum, the Board will decline jurisdiction of the goods under the rules settled in In re Chichester (48 Fed., 281) and will dismiss the protest without passing on the merits of the case.—T. D. 27680, G A. 6468.

(h) A protest relating to goods upon which duty had been assessed as manufactures of metal under paragraph 193, tariff act of 1897, and which were found to be dutiable properly under paragraph 135 of said act as steel plates, with an additional duty of 1 cent per pound under paragraph 141 for polishing, which claimed that the goods were dutiable under paragraph 135 only, is unsufficient.—T. D. 27684, G. A. 6472.

(a) Protests against an action of the collector in rejecting certain teas do not come within the jurisdiction of the Board of United States General Appraisers as conferred by this section, but should be dealt with in accordance with the rules and regulations laid down in section 6 of the tea-inspection act of March 2, 1897 (T. D. 17995).—T. D. 27702, G. A. 6474.

(b) A protest which describes the goods and specifies the correct designation under which they are made dutiable in the tariff law is sufficient, although it does not mention the number of the paragraph under which the claim is made.—T. D. 27704, G. A. 6476.

(c) A protest assailing a reappraisement simply on the ground that no lawful reappraisement was made by the Board is too vague and uncertain to comply with the requirements of this section. Such protest is defective in failing to state in what particular the alleged irregularity and illegality consisted—T. D. 27717, G. A. 6480.

(d) A protest claiming that fishhooks made from round iron or steel wire upon which duty has been assessed at the rate of 40 per cent ad valorem and 1¼ cents per pound under the provision of paragraph 137, act of 1897, "should be dutiable at the rates provided for wire, according to gauge, valued at under 4 cents per pound, under paragraph 137 of the above act," held to be insufficient, (1) because under the rule in the case of Boker v. United States (140 Fed. Rep., 115; T. D. 26451; affirmed without opinion, T. D. 27192) it fails to state the ground of objection or the rate of duty which is claimed; (2) because articles made from wire are denominatively provided for in paragraph 137 at rates different from that prescribed in said paragraph for wire.—T. D. 25892, G. A. 5879, affirmed in the Boker case (supra), cited and followed; T. D. 27763, G. A. 6493; affirmed by consent, T. D. 28210.

(e) If the collector in reliquidating an entry pursuant to a decision of the Board of General Appraisers does not conform to such decision, his action may be challenged by a protest if filed within ten days after such reliquidation.—United States v. Dickson (139 Fed. Rep., 251; T. D. 26422), affirming 131 id., 573; T. D. 25339.

(f) A protest relating to an entry that covered three invoices, only one of the three of which is specified in the protest, and that one on which the goods were correctly assessed instead of the one on which an incorrect classification was made, is insufficient.—United States v. Hartley (140 Fed. Rep., 969; T. D. 26640).

(g) The Board of General Appraisers has jurisdiction to review the action of a collector in assessing duties on the cost of repairs of vessels under R. S. 3114.—United States v. George Hall Coal Company (142 Fed. Rep., 1039; T. D. 27068), affirming 134 id., 1003; T. D. 26038.

(h) A protest claiming a "refund of duty on these 99 skins," no provision of law being mentioned, was held sufficient to justify a reliquidation under paragraph 664 providing for "skins of all kinds."—United States v. Helmrath (145 Fed. Rep., 36; T. D. 27117), affirming 135 id., 912; T. D. 25900.

(i) Merchandise which was the subject of proceedings in the Circuit Court under the law which was superseded by the act of June 10, 1890, was covered by a protest against a liquidation made by the collector in pursuance of a judgment rendered in the Circuit Court. It was held that the court having passed on the entire controversy, it had become res adjudicata, and the importer was precluded from further recovery.—United States v. Johnson (145 Fed. Rep., 1018; T. D. 27120).

(a) A protest claiming that the "merchandise is dutiable at the appropriate rate and under the proper paragraph according to the component material of chief value" is insufficient.—Rosenberg v. United States (146 Fed. Rep., 84; T. D. 27183).

(b) Within one year after the entry of certain goods the collector reliquidated the entry at an increased rate of duty. No protest was made or appeal taken from this reliquidation, and, on suit being brought by the United States for the additional amount, the importer filed an answer on the merits, which answer was demurred to. It was held that a defense on the merits was not available to the importer; that the remedy given him by this section, in the event of dissatisfaction with the decision of the collector, of protesting within ten days after the liquidation or ascertainment of duties, was exclusive, and that his failure so to protest made the decision of the collector final and conclusive.—Louisville Pillow Company v. United States (144 Fed. Rep., 386; T. D. 27260).

(c) A reliquidation has all the validity of an original liquidation, and, when made, becomes the liquidation in lieu of the original and must be treated as such for the purposes of this section.—Ibid.

(d) Sapphires which were found to be dutiable at 10 per cent under paragraph 435, tariff act of 1897, as precious stones, and had been assessed as articles of mineral substance, were claimed to be dutiable at 10 per cent under paragraph 191 as watch jewels. The protest was sufficient.—United States v. American Express Company (147 Fed. Rep., 894; T. D. 25808).

(e) The presumption is that the classification, by the collector, of imported merchandise is correct.—Vandiver v. United States (156 Fed. Rep., 961; T. D. 28521).

(f) Section 14, act of June 10, 1890, made a radical change in the entire subject of customs administration by wholly eliminating juries as triers of the facts in controversies as to classification of imported articles for duty and by creating a special tribunal, the Board of General Appraisers, to deal with all such questions. Exclusive jurisdiction thereof (subject to review by the courts) is thus conferred on the Board. Unless the importer secures a review of the collector's liquidation, as provided for herein, the decision of the collector remains final and conclusive; and it is essential to the securing of such review that the owner, importer, etc., "shall pay the full amount of the duties and charges ascertained to be due."—Tiffany v. United States (151 Fed. Rep., 473; T. D. 27754), reversing 137 id., 971; T. D. 26313.

(g) An entry of pearls which was originally liquidated at 10 per cent was reliquidated within a year at 60 per cent. The importers duly filed a protest against the reliquidation, but declined to pay the additional amount demanded, and in an action brought by the United States for the unpaid duties it was held that the defense that the duties were illegally assessed was not open to the importers. The only remedy of the importer in such a case is to pay the amount demanded and have the action of the collector reviewed by the Board of General Appraisers under the provisions of this section. (United States v. Tiffany (151 Fed. Rep., 473; T. D. 27754), reversing 137 id., 971; T. D. 26313). Application to serve and file a supplemental answer denied as unnecessary, the Circuit Court having ample power to grant such relief and to suspend the trial until the importer, by payment of the duties assessed, may put itself in position to try the question as to classification before the Board of General Appraisers. (Tiffany v.

United States, 153 Fed. Rep., 969; T. D. 28057). Motion to stay the trial of the action in the Circuit Court so that the importer may have an opportunity to pay the duties to the collector and have the legality of the assessment reviewed by the Board of General Appraisers granted, and an order issued by the Circuit Court providing that if the importer fails to tender the amount liquidated, with interest, to the collector, and to request that the papers be trasnmitted to the Board, within ten days after the issuance of the order, the stay may, on application by the plaintiff (collector), be vacated. (United States v. Tiffany, 154 Fed. Rep., 740; T. D. 28107).

(a) A protest read in part, "protest is hereby made against * * * your decision assessing duty at 35 per cent ad valorem, or other rate or rates, on lithographic prints, krippen, mechanical cards, etc., covered by entries below named. * * * This protest is intended to apply separately and collectively to every part of goods assessed under paragraph 418, as well as to all other goods assessed at 35 per cent ad valorem." The entry referred to did not cover any merchandise assessed at the rate of 35 per cent ad valorem or under said paragraph 418, but did cover lithographic prints and booklets assessed under paragraph 400. Held, that the protest might be construed as relating to those articles and not as limited to goods assessed at 35 per cent. Fuld v. United States (152 Fed. Rep., 165; T. D. 27878), reversing 143 id., 920; T. D. 27134.

(b) Silk goods which were properly classifiable under the first subdivision of paragraph 387, tariff act of 1897, as "in the gum," at the rate of 50 cents per pound, were asserted in the protest to be classifiable as "dyed," at "60 cents per pound," provided for in the second subdivision of that paragraph. It was held that the protest was a sufficient reference to the provision for goods in the gum.—Leerburger v. United States (155 Fed. Rep., 146; T. D. 28262).

(c) A protest objecting to the assessment of 1 cent per pound additional duty under paragraph 141 on common or black finished strips, claiming that the proper duty is that upon common or black finished strips, was held sufficient to warrant a reversal of the decision assessing the additional duty, it being shown that the goods were not polished or brightened within the meaning of paragraph 141, notwithstanding that there is no provision in the tariff for common or black finished strips.—McCoy v. United States (T. D. 28283).

(d) Certain merchandise which was properly free of duty under paragraph 392½, tariff act of 1894, was claimed to be free of duty under paragraph 424½ of the same act as burlaps. The protest was held insufficient.—Corbitt v. United States (153 Fed. Rep., 648; T. D. 28059).

(e) When a collector makes a reliquidation within one year from the time of entry and the importers fail to file a notice of dissatisfaction within ten days thereafter, the reliquidation becomes final and conclusive against them, and they will not be heard to question its correctness in proceedings to collect the amount becoming due under the reliquidation.—United States v. Mexican International Railroad Company (151 Fed. Rep., 545; T. D. 28182).

(f) Importers contended in their protest that the collector should have assessed duty on the basis of the appraised value of the goods, and that the exaction of duty on the basis of a gross sum added to the invoice value on entry to make market value was illegal. The protest was held sufficiently distinct and specific to raise the question of whether a deduction for nondutiable charges should be made from said gross sum.—Woodruff v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 861; T. D. 28207).

(g) The Board of General Appraisers has jurisdiction under this section to hear and decide a protest against the action of the collector in charging the importer a fee in connection with the administration of the packed package act of May 1, 1876, though the merchandise covered by the protest was never regularly entered. In re Chichester (48 Fed. Rep., 281) distinguished.—United States v. American Express Company (154 Fed. Rep., 996; T. D. 28285), affirming without opinion, T. D. 27962, G. A. 6552.

(a) A "blanket" protest against all rates assessed, containing irreconcilable allegations of fact and claiming the goods dutiable under 24 different provisions of the tariff act of 1897 that prescribe over 50 different rates of duty, held not to comply with the requirements of this section that the protest shall set forth therein distinctly and specifically the reasons for the objection of the importer to the collector's decision.—T. D. 27885, G. A. 6534.

(b) The jurisdiction of the Board of General Appraisers does not extend to the review of the question whether an article has been imported or not, or whether or not it was brought from a foreign country.—T. D. 27912, G. A. 6541.

(c) A protest against the rate assessed on "lithographic prints, or other merchandise," and claiming that the goods are dutiable under paragraph 400, without specifying what rate of duty is claimed of the many provided in said paragraph, or under what portion of the paragraph they should be assessed, and containing no description of the goods, is defective, and, in the absence of a precise description of the goods in the entry or invoice, will be overruled as insufficient.—T. D. 27943, G. A. 6549; reversed in Hensel v. United States (160 Fed. Rep., 219; T. D. 28637).

(d) Cotton articles upon which duty had been assessed as manufactures of cotton and which, in accordance with T. D. 25580, G. A. 5790, are properly dutiable under the so-called countable provisions of the cotton schedule, with 2 cents per square yard additional under paragraph 313, were claimed to be "dutiable as cotton cloth (by virtue of paragraph 310, Schedule I, tariff act of 1897) at the appropriate rate according to the number of threads per square inch, the value per square yard, and the number of square yards to the pound, under paragraphs 304 to 309, inclusive, Schedule I, tariff act of 1897," no mention being made of paragraph 313. The protests were held to be insufficient in that they do not name the rate of duty or the particular paragraph of the law under which the goods should have been classified, and they are not sufficient to notify the collector of the nature and character of the objection sought to be raised by the protests. Authorities reviewed.—T. D. 28159, G. A. 6588.

(e) A protest making reasonable alternative claims, one of which specifies the applicable rate of duty and the paragraph of the law under which the goods should have been classified, is a sufficient compliance with the requirements of this section.—T. D. 28171, G. A. 6590.

(f) A protest which states that the reasons for the objection to the assessment made by the collector are that the goods are "more aptly and specifically provided for" under other provisions of the tariff which are specified is in form and substance a sufficient compliance with the requirement of the statute that the protest shall set forth therein distinctly and specifically the reason for the importer's objection to the collector's decision.—Ibid.

(g) The Board of General Appraisers sustained an importer's protests, holding the merchandise dutiable at the maximum rate provided on goods of that class, excepting those as to which it was ascertainable "from the invoices, samples, or records" that a lower rate was applicable. Held, that in reliquidating in accordance with this decision the collector was not required to consider any data not supplied by the record made before the Board.—United States v. Hunter (153 Fed. Rep., 873; T. D. 28077), reversing Hunter v. United States (T. D. 27510), and affirming T. D. 26210, G. A. 5985, followed; T. D. 28219, G. A. 6608.

(a) In the determination of the sufficiency or insufficiency of a protest, the same must be considered in connection with the record, and, if it can be ascertained from the invoice and protest when read together, the particulars of the merchandise, paragraph, rate of duty, etc., counted upon by the importer, such a protest is sufficient.—T.D. 28256, G. A. 6627.

(b) The Board of General Appraisers has no jurisdiction to pass upon a protest demanding relief from the payment of duty on the ground that as alleged the merchandise is spoiled and unfit and has been returned to the place whence it was exported.—T. D. 28290, G. A. 6632.

(c) A so-called protest lodged with the collector of customs against the assessment of duty on imported merchandise, but which is not signed either by the owner, importer, consignee, or agent of the merchandise, or by anyone else, is not the "notice in writing" required by this section and must be considered a nullity and of no effect.—T. D. 28322, G. A. 6644.

(d) It was held error for the Board of General Appraisers to admit as evidence in a case testimony which had been taken in another case relating to articles somewhat different, where counsel in the latter case had not participated in the former proceedings, had no opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses, and had objected to such admission.—Knauth v. United States (155 Fed. Rep., 144; T. D. 28184).

(e) A collector of customs liquidated duties at the exchange value of the rupee, and the importers protested under this section, contending that the pure metal value estimated by the Director of the Mint should have governed. The collector sustained the protest under instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury and reliquidated accordingly, but subsequently rereliquidated on the same basis as the original liquidation, under further instructions issued under section 25, tariff act of 1894, giving the Secretary the right to order reliquidation in certain cases of variation in currency values. Held, that this third liquidation was legal, the Secretary's right to exercise the powers conferred by said section not being impaired by his previous acquiescence in the protest.—Gulbenkian v. Stranahan (158 Fed. Rep., 836; T. D. 28451).

(f) Section 21, act of June 22, 1874 (18 Stat., 190), making final the liquidation and settlement of duties, "after the expiration of one year from the time of entry, in the absence of * * * protest," does not prohibit a reliquidation in an increased amount where a protest has been filed, even though that protest has been sustained and there remains pending no unsatisfied protest.—Ibid.

(g) A cause of action does not accrue against a collector of customs in favor of the importers, because his predecessor failed either to sustain or to forward to the Board of General Appraisers protests that had been filed by the importers under this section.—Ibid.

(h) Where there is a discrepancy between the date of liquidation, as stamped on the entry, and the date of liquidation, as given on the liquidation sheet posted in the custom-house for the information of importers in accordance with articles 1416 and 1460, Customs Regulations, 1899, the importer is bound by the latter date, and a protest filed more than ten days thereafter is not in time.—United States v. Wyman (156 Fed. Rep., 97; T. D. 28439).

(i) Under the operation of a rule adopted by the General Board of General Appraisers to prevent the promulgation of conflicting decisions, made in pursuance of article 1726, Customs Regulations, 1899, as amended by T. D. 24861, a protest which had been tried before a board of three General Appraisers who had formulated a decision thereon, but had not yet promulgated it, was transferred by a vote of the majority of the General Board to another board of three General Appraisers on the ground that in the opinion of said majority the proposed decision was in conflict with certain court rulings. This second board of three General Appraisers tried the case de novo and reached a conclusion contrary to that of the board which first had the case and sustained the collector's classification. On appeal by the importers it was held that the board of three General Appraisers which first had the case had duly acquired jurisdiction and that it was its duty, under the provisions of section 14, act of 1890, to examine and decide the case; that it may not legally surrender its jurisdiction to another board; that the transfer of the case to such other board was illegal; that the latter board had no jurisdiction, and that its decision should be vacated.—Prosser v. United States (158 Fed. Rep., 971; T. D. 28603), reversing, on the question of jurisdiction, 154 id., 721; T. D. 28001, which had affirmed T. D. 26477, G. A. 6069.

(a) Should the Board of General Appraisers refuse to "examine and decide" a case over which it had jurisdiction, as provided in this section, the proper court could be applied to for a mandamus to require the exercise of such jurisdiction.—Prosser v. United States (158 Fed. Rep., 971; T. D. 28603).

DECISIONS UNDER EARLIER STATUTES PERTAINING TO SAME SUBJECT MATTER.

(b) A protest is required to sustain an action to recover the additional duty of 20 per cent assessed by way of penalty under section 8 of the act of 1846.—Kriesler v. Morton (2 Curt., 239; 14 Fed. Cas., 865).

(c) Duties wrongly imposed, if paid by the importer voluntarily and without protest or remonstrance, can not be recovered from or set-off against the United States.—United States v. Clement (Crabbe, 499; 25 Fed. Cas., 461).

(d) Payment to a public officer, if unaccompanied by remonstrance or protest which need not be written, is a voluntary payment. (This case was decided in 1841, which was before the act of 1845 requiring written protest.)—Id.

(e) The provision of the act of 1842 that when an appraisement is made upon an increased valuation and not on that in the invoice, the appraiser shall view the property, and if he does not do so, and the importer pays the duty under protest, he can recover it, is intended for the benefit of the importer and is waived by failure to protest.—Boker v. Redfield (40 Hunt Mer. Mag., 705; 3 Fed. Cas., 808).

(f) The law requires that the importer shall specifically and distinctly state in his protest the ground of objection to payment, and a recovery can only be had on the ground stated.—Id.

(g) A written protest, signed by the party, with a statement of the definite grounds of objection to the duties demanded and paid, is a condition precedent to a right to sue in any court for their recovery.—Nichols v. United States (7 Wallace, 122).

(h) Persons importing merchandise are required to make their protests distinct and specific, in order to apprise the collector of the nature of their objection, before it is too late to remove it or to modify the exaction and that the proper officers of the Treasury may know what they have to meet.—Davies v. Arthur (96 U. S., 148, 149).

(i) Where the time of exportation is taken by the appraisers as the time of valuation, and the importer claims that the time of manufacture or production should be taken, he must make that a ground of protest.—Thomson v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf, 385; 23 Fed. Cas., 1100).

(a) After imported goods have been seized by a collector as having been entered below their value to defraud the revenue, and have been libeled for forfeiture and discharged on trial, and additioual duty imposed and paid, it can not be recovered back unless a proper protest is made at the time of payment.—Falleck v. Barney (5 Blatchf., 38; 8 Fed. Cas., 974).

(b) It is an indispensable item of proof to be made by the plaintiff that such a protest as the statute requires was made. Such proof may be made by producing the protest and showing when it was made, or by proving its contents and when it was made if it be lost, or by the admission and consent of the defendant in proper form in open court or otherwise that such a protest was made.—Greenleaf v. Schell (6 Blatchf., 225; 10 Fed. Cas., 1173).

(c) No written protest against the exaction of fees for constructive permits to land goods was necessary, as the act of February 26, 1845, requires such protest only in regard to duties actually paid.—Ogden v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 319; 18 Fed. Cas., 613).

(d) When the importer is not dissatisfied with the appraisement of his goods per se, but only with the addition to the entry of items for cartons and packing, his proper remedy is not to apply for a reappraisement, but to protest and appeal.—Oberteuffer v. Robertson (116 U. S., 499).

(e) A change in the ruling of the Treasury Department whereby merchandise in bond, such as is invoiced in this case, is held dutiable at a greatly reduced rate is of no aid to an importer who has not protested against the previous ruling.—Cadwalader v. Partridge (137 U. S., 553).

(f) When the collector has acquired jurisdiction of the assessment of duties through the importatiou of goods that are liable for duty, any irregularity in the appraisement and liquidation must first be reviewed by protest and appeal, pursuant to R. S. 2931, or they can not be raised in a collateral suit.—United States v. Earnshaw (12 Fed. Rep., 283).

(g) In an action to recover duties illegally exacted, protest and appeal are necessary as a condition precedent to recover, even when the United States are plaintiffs in an action to recover duties in excess of those already paid.—United States v. Schlesinger (14 Fed. Rep., 682).

(h) The 50 per cent penalty under the act of August 30, 1842, is an increase of duties, and a protest is necessary to recover it.—Maillard v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 378; 16 Fed. Cas., 501).

(i) Money deposited with the collector as security (additional to that of the importer's bonds) for the payment of duties, and actually applied to the payment of duties, can not be recovered back in the absence of a protest, even if the duties were wrongfully assessed.—Burroughs v. Erhardt (C. C. A.), (88 Fed. Rep., 256).

(j) While articles 384, 386, and 387 (1857), as to protests might, during the time they were in force, have controlled collectors or other officers, they could not have controlled an importer as to the manner in which he should have prepared his protests.—Fauche v. Schell (33 Fed. Rep., 336).

(k) The failure of a collector of customs to conform to a Treasury regulation requiring him to record protest ought not to prejudice the rights of the importer.—Schell's Executors v. Fauche (138 U. S., 562).

(l) R. S. 3011 provides that it is necessary for the plaintiff to have protested at or before the time of the payment of the duties. With regard to one entry there was only the naval office copy, and as to the other entry there was a copy of the collector's entry with a mark at the upper left hand corner, which looked as if at one time there might have been something attached. Held, that there was nothing to leave to the jury to prove that such a protest as the law requires was served.—Grandmange v. Schell (32 Fed. Rep., 655).

(a) When the evidence as to the usual course of business is sufficient to furnish a strong presumptive case in favor of the service upon the collector or other person authorized to receive the same, of a protest, the proof from the records of protests kept at the custom-house that the protest was recorded when received and that it stands of record as of a certain date is abundant to establish the fact that it was served upon the collector or other authorized person in time.—Fauche v. Schell (33 Fed. Rep., 336).

(b) Where no provision for the service of a protest is made by statutes, by Treasury regulations, or by the collector, but a particular mode of service has been in force and recognized for a considerable time, service in that mode is good service until some change has been announced.—Fauche v. Schell (33 Fed. Rep., 336).

(c) The evidence showed that the protest was signed by the firm name, but there was nothing to prove the handwriting or the authority of the person who wrote the signature. Verdict directed for the defendant.—Grandmange v. Schell (32 Fed. Rep., 655).

(d) The acceptance of the protest by the collector was no waiver, as he was under no obligation to inquire into the authority of the person protesting before he received the protest.—Id.

(e) Where an importer, before delivery to him of the goods, paid in cash as prescribed by section 12, act of 1842, the full amount of duties required by law and delivered to the collector a ten-day bond as prescribed by section 4, act of May 28, 1830, or where, having in accordance with the same acts paid to the collector the estimated amount of the duties and delivered such bond, he received a portion of his importation, and subsequently and before he received the other portion paid a sufficiently additional amount of duties assessable on the entire importation, such payment or payments was to obtain possession of the goods.—Fauche v. Schell (33 Fed. Rep., 336).

(f) The words "payment under protest," in R. S. 3011 as amended, must by reason of the reference in the latter part to section 2931, which defines a protest, be construed to include a payment in connection with a protest; that is, a payment preceded by, accompanied with, or followed by a protest, whichever is permitted by section 2931.—Saltonstall v. Birtwell (C. C. A.). (66 Fed. Rep., 969).

(g) Where a bond was given on a warehouse entry, and it turned out that some of the goods covered by the bond were not imported, and a remission of the duties on those goods was refused by the Treasury Department because the application was not made within a year after the importation, and the importer then paid, under protest, the duties on the missing goods to avoid a suit on the bond, held that he could not recover.—Marshall v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 221; 40 Hunt Mer. Mag., 195; 2 Weekly Law Gaz., 296; 16 Fed. Cas., 848).

(h) The payment was voluntary and was not made in order to obtain possession of the goods.—Id.

(i) The reference to section 2931 contained in section 3011, R. S., is to the time as well as the form of the protest, and hence it need not be made before or at the time of the payment of the duties, but is good if made within ten days.—Birtwell v. Saltonstall (C. C.), (63 Fed. Rep., 1004).

(a) Where gross estimates of duties were made prior to liquidation, in accordance with R. S. 2869, and were paid in order to obtain possession of the goods, no protest was then required, but it was sufficient if the protest was filed within ten days after the date of final liquidation. 63 Fed. Rep., 1004, affirmed.—Saltonstall v. Birtwell (C. C. A.), (66 Fed. Rep., 969).

(b) There is no new liquidation of duties when goods imported for warehousing are withdrawn from bond, and consequently the ten days allowed for filing a protest must be computed from the date of the original liquidation, which is made at the same time and in the same manner as when the entry is for immediate consumption.—Foster v. Simmons (9 Fed. Cas., 573).

(c) Under R. S. 2931 and 3011, as amended by the act of February 27, 1877, if, at the first port of entry, not being one of the ports at which the statutes authorizes goods to be imported and shipped through without appraisement, goods imported by sea are entered for warehousing and immediate transportation by the same vessel to another port and are transported accordingly, and the duties thereon are assessed by the collector at the first port and again by the collector at the second port and paid by the importers to the second collector to obtain possession of the goods, no part of the duties can be recovered, unless due protest is made within ten days after the decision of the first collector as to the rate and amount of duties.—Saltonstall v. Russell (152 U. S., 628).

(d) The ten days allowed for protest begin to run upon their ascertainment and liquidation.—Merritt v. Cameron (137 U. S., 542).

(e) The protest is not required to be made before the payment of what are called the estimated duties, for this payment is necessarily estimated by the invoice quantity as well as the invoice price.—Brune v. Marriott (Taney, 132; 4 Fed. Cas., 475).

(f) The protest is legally made when the duties are finally determined and the amount assessed by the collector, and a protest before or at that time is sufficient.—Id.

(g) The payment of money upon estimated duties is rather in the nature of a pledge or deposit than a payment, for it remains in the hands of the proper officer, subject to the final assessment of the duties, and if more has been paid than is due, the surplus belongs to the importer and is returned to him.—Id.

(h) Where a bond was given on a warehouse entry, and it turned out that some of the goods covered by the entry were not imported, and a remission of the duties on those goods was refused by the Treasury Department because the application was not made within a year after the importation, and the importer then paid, under protest, the duties on the missing goods to avoid a suit on the bond, held that he could not recover.—Marshall v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 221; 40 Hunt Mer. Mag., 195; 2 Wkly. Law Gaz., 296; 16 Fed. Cas., 848).

(i) The payment was voluntary and was not made to obtain possession of the goods.—Id.

(j) In computing the time within which a protest must be served upon the collector, if the tenth day falls on Sunday that day can not be excluded, and service on Monday following is not a sufficient compliance with the requirements of this section.—Shefer v. Magone (47 Fed. Rep., 872).

(k) A protest within ten days after the collector has liquidated the duties, and an appeal within thirty days thereafter, is valid as to time, although the liquidation is subsequently revised.—Keyser v. Arthur (14 Fed. Cas., 442).

(a) This act applies to the payment of unascertained and estimated duties which are to be afterwards liquidated, and the protest may be made at the time of the final liquidation.—Moke v. Barney (5 Blatchf., 274; 2 Int. Rev. Rec., 157; 17 Fed. Cas., 574).

(b) The fact that the collector exacts duties in violation of instructions does not supply the want of a protest.—Id.

(c) When a sum of money has been paid for duties as estimated at the time of the entry, and subsequently the duties are liquidated at higher rates in case of some importations and lower in case of others, but at a less sum than the sum already paid, a protest made after such payment and before the liquidation is made before payment within the terms of this section.—Strange v. Barney (35 Fed. Rep., 196).

(d) Under this act the right of action was made to depend upon a protest which gave the officer notice, which protest must be made at or before the payment on the duties.—Curtis v. Fiedler (2 Black, 461).

(e) A protest made before duties are finally adjusted and closed is in season, although moneys had been previously advanced on account of duties.—Marriott v. Brune (9 How., 619, 636).

(f) A protest in order to be available for the recovery of duties must be made at or before their actual payment, and when the importer deposits with the collector an amount supposed to be sufficient to pay the duties, subject to future liquidation, and receives the goods, and on such liquidation an amount is found to be due the importer as overpayment and is refuuded to him, a protest made after the deposit and receipt of the goods, but before liquidation, is too late and is of no avail.—Barney v. Rickard (157 U. S., 352).

(g) This act continued in force until the passage of the act of June 30, 1864 (13 Stat., 202).—Barney v. Watson (92 U. S., 449).

(h) Where duties are paid before protest is made the duties can not be recovered.—Crocker v. Bedfield (4 Blatchf., 378; 18 How. Pr., 85; 6 Fed. Cas., 835).

(i) And where money is deposited with a collector wherewith to pay the duties when they shall be ascertained, and the duties are afterwards ascertained, and then a protest is made against the payment, the protest is too late, the money not having been paid compulsorily in order to get possession of the goods.—Id.

(j) Under this section the entry of goods within ten days after which notice of dissatisfaction with the decision of the collector must be given to him by the inspector or his agent in order to authorize a subsequent suit to recover back an excess of duties paid under protest is, in the case of goods entered for warehousing, the entry for the withdrawal of the goods and not the entry for warehousing.—Iselin v. Barney (5 Blatchf., 185; 13 Fed. Cas., 166).

(k) The right of the importer to complain or appeal begins with the date of the liquidation, whenever that is made.—Westray v. United States (18 Wallace, 322).

(l) The notice of dissatisfaction with the decision of the collector as to the rate and amount of duties on imported goods may be given at any time after the entry of the goods and the collector's original estimate of the amount of duties and before the final ascertainment and liquidation of the duties as stamped upon the entry.—Davies v. Miller (130 U. S., 284).

(m) A protest in the following terms: "Having been informed that it is the intention of the Secretary of the Treasury not to make allowance on the pay-nent of duties on such articles as may reach here less in quantity from loss in weight or leakage than at the time of shipment (for instance, sugar, molasses, etc.), and on which a duty ad valorem of the invoice is exacted, we hereby protest against the payment of such entire amount of duty, being of opinion that the law at present in force authorizes an allowance for actual loss in weight or gauge, as shown by the difference in the invoice and the returns of the weighers or gaugers or such cargoes, after delivery in this port. We desire that this present protest should extend to all our importations of sugar and molasses since the operation of the present tariff, viz," etc. Held not to apply to duties previously paid, but to apply to all duties exacted after the protest, and that a particular protest in each case was not required by law.—Brune v. Marriott (Taney, 32; 4 Fed. Cas., 475).

(a) Where an importer protested in proper form against the exaction of 25 per cent duty on a particular importation of thread laces, claiming that it was liable only to 20 per cent duty under a specified schedule of the tariff act then in force, and added in the same protest: "I mean this protest to apply to all like exactions heretofore paid and to all future, and shall claim a return thereof." Held, that that was a sufficient protest under this act against the exaction when made on any future importation by the same party without the repetition of the protest on each importation.—Steegman v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 365; 22 Fed. Cas., 1198).

(b) A clause in these words, "and hereby protest on all futnre entries of the same goods," added at the end of a protest can not have any effect as a prospective protest to aid an insufficient specific protest subsequently made.—Baxter v. Maxwell (4 Blatchf., 32; 2 Fed. Cas., 1054).

(c) Whether such a sweeping prospective protest ought to be held good in respect to entries at such a port as New York under the act of February 26, 1845, query.—Id.

(d) Where the articles in the entry in which such prospective protest was made were described therein as "linens," "hemp covering," and "jute rove," held that such prospective protest could not apply to a subsequent entry, without protest, of the same articles as "linens," or as "hemp carpet coverings," or as "hemp carpeting," but that it was sufficient to cover a subsequent entry, without protest, of the same articles as "jute rove," the two importations being within three weeks of each other and no protest having been made on any intermediate importation of the article.—Id.

(e) Where, after such prospective protest was made, five successive importations of the same article were made and entered, with specific protests, some of which were sufficient and some insufficient, and afterwards importations on it were made without protests, held that such prospective protests could not extend to such last importations.—Id.

(f) A specific protest which does not refer to or affirm a prior prospective protest must be regarded as evidence of the abandonment of all grounds of objections.—Id.

(g) Expenses of transportation from Paris to Havre and from Havre to London, en route to New York, and also commissions, were added to the dutible charges. The protest closed as follows: "You are hereby notified that we desire and intend this protest to apply to all future similar importations made by us." This did not dispense with the necessity of a protest with reference to such subsequent importations.—Warren v. Peaslee (2 Curt., 231; 29 Fed. Cas., 280).

(a) A valid prospective protest made on a particular importation and expressing the intention of the importer that the protest shall apply to all future similar importations made by him is valid as to subsequent importations of similar merchandise on which like duties are exacted by the same collector.—Fauche v. Schell (33 Fed. Rep., 336).

(b) Such prospective protest is not invalidated as to any such future similar importations by the same importer's intervening specific protests are the same in form with the body of such prospective protest and differ from it only in the omission of the prospective clause therein.—Fauche v. Schell (33 Fed. Rep., 336).

(c) A protest consisting of two originally distinct pieces of paper—one a white paper containing an unsigned printed form of one of such specific protests and the other a blue paper pasted to the white paper and containing a signed printed form of a prospective protest against the exactions of duties on certain commissions—is a valid protest under the rule applied by the courts to the construction of protests against the exaction of duties. The prospective clause of the commission's protest covers everything in such composite protest from the beginning to the end so far as its form is concerned, and such composite protest is as far reaching as any prospective protest.—Id.

(d) The act of 1857 does not require a protest to be attached to each particular entry, but allows them to be prospective and coutinuous.—Benkard v. Schell (5 Int. Rev. Rec. (1867), 3; 3 Fed. Cas., 192).

(e) H. Herman, doing business in his own name as importer, gave notice by what was known as a prospective protest to the collector of customs. He afterwards took a partner, when the firm name became H. Herman & Co., and the firm continued to import the same class of goods. Held, that the notice of protest given in the name of H. Herman was sufficient to cover duties subsequently levied upon importations made by the firm.—Herman v. Schell (18 Fed. Rep., 891).

(f) A valid prospective protest against the payment of duties made on a particular importation of merchandise and expressing the intention of the importer that the protest shall apply to all future importations made by him is valid as to subsequent importations of similar merchandise on which the duties are exacted as respects not only future exactions of like duties from the protesting party by the same collector, but as respects future exactions of like duties from him by a succeeding collector.—Wetter v. Schell (11 Blatchf., 193; 29 Fed. Cas., 845).

(g) A valid prospective protest made on a particular importation of merchandise and expressing the intention that the protest shall apply to all future similar importations made by the importer is valid as to subsequent importations of similar merchandise on which like duties are exacted.—Hutton v. Schell (6 Blatchf., 48; 7 Int. Rev. Rec., 84; 12 Fed. Cas., 1095).

(h) The importer on paying duties January 10, 1871, added to a protest then filed by him with the collector in respect to the exaction of duties thereon these words: "I intend this protest to apply to all future similar importations by me." On January 21, 1871, the importer entered for warehousing like goods, and on June 20, 1871, the collector exacted duties thereon on a withdrawal entry at the same rate as protested against. In a suit to recover back the alleged excess of duties, hedr that a prospective protest or continuing protest is not valid under the laws now existing.—Ullman v. Murphy (11 Blatchf., 354; 18 Int. Rev. Rec., 156; 24 Fed. Cas., 506).

(a) The words "in the absence of protest" in the act of June 22, 1874, section 21, mean in the absence of any existing protest pending and in force at the reliquidation, not a protest which has become spent through a previous liquidation of duties in accordance with it.—United States v. Leng (18 Fed. Rep., 15).

(b) The act of June 30, 1864 (13 Stat., 202), section 14, applies not only where the collector errs in judgment as to the proper rate and amount of duties, but also where there are informalities on the part of the customs officers respecting the appraisal of the merchandise, such as would enable the importer to recover his money back if he had duly protested, appealed, and brought suit.—United States v. Chase (25 Int. Rev. Rec., 161; 25 Fed. Cas., 410).

(c) The right of action to recover duties is purely statutory. A stipulation made between the importer and the deputy collector, after due protest and appeal in the case of one entry, that the duties and charges in succeeding entries should be controlled by the decision of the Secretary therein, is not a substantial compliance with the requirements of the statute, and the importer can not maintain suit after a decision in his favor by the Secretary and the refusal of the Secretary to abide by the stipulation.—Haynes v. Brewster (D. C.), (46 Fed. Rep., 471).

(d) A verbal protest against the illegal exaction of duties is sufficient. (This decision was before the act of February 26, 1845.)—Swartwout v. Gihon (3 How., 110).

(e) A protest is not required to be made with technical precision, but is sufficient if it show fairly that the objection afterwards made at the trial was in the mind of the party and was brought to the knowledge of the collector, so as to secure to the Government the practical advantage which this act was designed to secure.—Burgess v. Converse (2 Curt., 216; 4 Fed. Cas., 726).

(f) Under a protest which alleges that "the goods were not fairly and faithfully examined" the importer may rely on the failure of the appraiser to examine one package in every ten.—Id.

(g) It is a condition precedent to a right of action against a collector for the return of duties paid under protest that the claimant shall in his protest point out to the collector by positive and direct notice every particular of fact and law which he relies upon as protecting his goods from the duties demanded.—Thomson v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 385; 23 Fed. Cas., 1100).

(h) Where a protest is written on an entry, they compose, in effect, one paper, and it is unnecessary to repeat in the protest the description given of the goods in the entry.—Id.

(i) Goods were invoiced and entered in florins at their specie value. The appraisers valued the goods according to nominal value of the florin in paper currency. A protest against the additional valuation found on such appraisement and a claim to enter the goods according to the invoice and actual cost is a sufficient protest without a specification as to how the appraisement was made to exceed true value.—Lowenstein v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 401; 15 Fed. Cas., 784).

(j) The protest is a mercantile and not a legal instrument, and when its meaning is unmistakably plain its phraseology will not be scrupulously criticised by the courts.—Vaccari v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 368; 28 Fed. Cas., 862).

(k) The invoice and entry may ordinarily be regarded as connected with and forming part of the protest, being the things out of which the protest arises and to which it relates.—Id.

(a) A clause in the protest "that the merchant appraiser was not legally sworn in," when considered in connection with the oath annexed to the appraisal, which was before the collector and showed that the merchant appraiser was sworn by an official appraiser, was a sufficient protest to raise the question as to the legality of such oath.—Id.

(b) A protest "that no penal duty of 20 per cent under section 8 of the act of 1846 can be exacted except where the importer has added to his invoice price or entry" is a sufficient protest to raise the question whether the collector is authorized to impose the penalty appointed by section 8 of the act of July 30, 1846 (9 Stat., 43), where no addition has been made by the importer to the value of his entry.—Id.

(c) Where an invoice of lemons, though dated at Genoa, the place of departure of the vessel, stated the value of the lemons free on board at San Remo, which was a port 70 miles from Genoa and on the track of the vessel to New York and the chief market of the country for lemons, and added 2 per cent commissions, and the lemons were taken on board at San Remo and bills of lading were there signed, and the lemons were entered at New York as embarked from San Remo, and the invoice showed the true price of the lemons at Genoa and San Remo, and the public appraisers and also appraisers on appeal raised the invoice value by adding the freight on the lemons from San Remo to Genoa, and also by increasing the charge for commissions, and, these additions increasing the invoice value by more than 10 per cent, an additional duty or penalty of 20 per cent was imposed under section 8, act of July 30, 1846, which was paid under protest "that the expenses of transportation from the place of original shipment to Genoa are not dutiable charges, that the reappraisement is illegal, because the price is made to include charges, and that no penalty can be exacted for addition of charges," Held that the protest was, in connection with the invoice, a sufficient protest under this section to notify the collector that the valuation by the appraisers of the charges of transportation between Genoa and San Remo was complained of.—Id.

(d) As the Treasury instructions were given to the appraisers by the collector to govern them in making the valuation as of the time of exportation, this fact, in connection with the protest, made the protest sufficient to raise the objection that the goods were erroneously valued as of the time of their exportation instead of as of the time of their purchase.—Maillard v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 378; 16 Fed. Cas., 501).

(e) Where on several importations of gin the quantity which arrived was, through leakage, less than the quantity stated in the invoice, and the collector exacted duties on the quantity stated in the invoice, which were paid under the following protests, written on the face of the entries, "The actual gauge and 2 per cent claimed for leakage," "The actual gauge and 2 per cent claimed for wantage and leakage," "The actual gauge and 2 per cent for leakage claimed on this entry," held that these protests were sufficient.—Schuchardt v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 397; 21 Fed. Cas., 747).

(f) A protest made in the case of this merchandise stating the rate of duty only that it is claimed should be imposed thereon, but especially referring for the grounds of the claim to a Treasury circular (circular of March 1, 1858), in which it was held by the Secretary that other merchandise therein mentioned was dutiable at that rate as being a manufacture of certain material enumerated in the tariff act as such manufacture, is to be taken, together with such circular, as constituting the claimant's entire protest, and is, with such circular, sufficient if they prove that the merchandise covered by the protest is such manufacture.—Smith v. Schell (27 Fed. Rep., 648).

(a) When a protest is in proper form and attached to the invoice, an omission of date is immaterial.—Schell's Executors v. Fauche (138 U. S., 562).

(b) A protest is sufficient if it indicate to an intelligent man the ground of the importer's objection.—Id.

(c) Two papers attached together by a wafer and signed on the bottom of the lower one, which when read together make a protest against two exactions of duties, are to be treated as a unit.—Id.

(d) Where a protest claimed a discount on the value of paper currency stated in the invoice, "as per consul's certificate," and the invoice stated the fair market value of the goods at its date at the foreign port in paper currency, and also the correct rate of discount for specie value, held that the statement in the protest amounted to an averment that the proper consul's certificate was presented to the collector with the invoice, or at least that the importer had one or was able and offered to procure it.—Craig v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 545; 6 Fed. Cas., 728).

(e) The act of February 26, 1845, relating to protests was repealed by the act of June 30, 1864, which substituted for the common-law action against the collector a statutory remedy and regulated its incidents. The provisions of both acts were incorporated into the Revised Statutes, approved June 22, 1874; those of the act of 1864, as R. S. 2931, and those of the act of 1845, as R. S. 3011. Held, that the provisions of the act of 1845 did not affect the rights of an importer which accrued between December 1, 1873, and June 22, 1874, and that if the protest was made in the manner prescribed by the act of 1864 it was valid.—Dieckerhoff v. Miller (C. C. A.), 93 Fed. Rep., 651).

(f) Where a fraud was committed on an importer of cigars by the manufacturer by invoicing them erroneously as to their grades, and the duties were deposited on the valuation in the invoice, and the appraiser decided that a fraud had been committed and that the invoice should be reduced, but the collector refused to permit the reduction because the Secretary would not authorize it and exacted duties on the invoice value, and the entries were liquidated under a protest setting forth the error in the grades, held that the collector ought to have allowed the error to be corrected and that the protest was sufficient and was made in time.—Lillie v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 41; 15 Fed. Cas., 538).

(g) Gloves made of cotton and silk, of which cotton was the material of chief value, imported in January, 1874, were assessed at 60 per cent, that rate being chargeable only on silk gloves, under the act of June 30, 1864, and on ready-made clothing, etc., under the act of March 3, 1865. The importer protested and appealed and brought suit. His protest stated that the goods were only liable to a duty of 35 per cent, less 10 per cent, "being composed of cotton and silk (cotton chief part), the duty of 60 per cent being only legal where silk is the chief part." The goods were made on frames. Held, (1) that the protest set forth distinctly and specifically the grounds of the objection of the importer to the decision of the collector and was sufficient; (2) it was immaterial that the protest did not specify that the gloves were made on frames.—Heinze v. Arthur's Executors (144 U. S., 28).

(h) A protest "against any greater rate of duty being charged upon hay shipped to or by us from Canada to the United States, entered with you or at the custom-house at Rouse's Point, than at the rate of 10 per centum ad valorem, for the reason and on the ground that no higher rate than 10 per centum can lawfully or properly be charged on hay imported under the laws of the United States concerning duties on imports," is sufficient.—Frazee v. Moffitt (18 Fed. Rep., 584).

(a) A protest is sufficiently distinct and specific, notwithstanding it contains a number of different and inconsistent claims.—Legg v. Hedden (37 Fed. Rep., 861).

(b) An importer can not recover on any ground not distinctly and fully set forth in his protest.—Id.

(c) A protest made in the case of this merchandise, stating the rate of duty only that it is claimed should be imposed thereon, but especially referring for the grounds of the claim to a Treasury circular (circular of March 1, 1858), in which it was held by the Secretary that other merchandise therein mentioned was dutiable at that rate as being manufactured of certain material enumerated in the tariff act as such manufacture, is to be taken together with such circular as constituting the claimant's entire protest, and is, with such circular, sufficient under the act of February 26, 1845, if they prove that the merchandise covered by the protest is such manufacture.—Smith v. Schell (27 Fed. Rep., 648).

(d) But if this merchandise is shown to be a manufacture of a material bearing another name than the material of which the manufacture named in the protest is composed, and the tariff act makes a clear and positive distinction between these materials by imposing thereon eo nomine, different rates of duty, the court, in considering the tariff act, will make the same distinction, although the name of the second material is the name of the genus, and the name of the first is the name of the species thereof, and the claimants are not entitled to recover.—Id.

(e) A protest is not required to be made with technical precision, but is sufficient if it shows fairly that the objection afterwards made at the trial was in the mind of the party and was brought to the knowledge of the collector, so as to secure to the Government the practical advantage which the statute was designed to secure.—Arthur v. Morgan (112 U. S., 495, 501).

(f) A protest against paying 35 per cent duty on the carriage, which states that the carriage is "personal effects" and has been used over a year (as shown by affidavit), and that under R. S. 2505 "personal effects of actual use" are free from duty, is a sufficient protest, on which the amount paid can be recovered on the ground that the carriage was free as "household effects" under the same section.—Id.

(g) A protest is a commercial document, and if it is sufficiently formal and accurate to inform the collector distinctly and unequivocally of the position of the importer the object of the statute requiring it is accomplished. It is not intended that it shall possess all the technical precision of legal documents.—Hermann v. Schell (18 Fed. Rep., 891).

(h) An entry or protest made by an agent is in law made by his principal. A protest signed, not by the claimant personally, but by his agent, is sufficient.—Gray v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 117; 10 Fed. Cas., 1031).

(i) A protest against the payment of 25 per cent duty charged on thread laces, claiming that the laces are liable to a duty of only 20 per cent, is sufficient.—Steegman v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 365; 22 Fed. Cas., 1198).

(j) The protest was against paying duty on "rosewood furniture." Rosewood furniture is a well-known and specific term, and the protest can not be extended beyond what is specifically embraced in it. Furniture of other woods, silk and worsted goods, and furniture of rosewood and common wood together, or rosewood and mahogany together, must be excluded.—Pousot v. Lawrence (N. Y. Times, April 29, 1857; 19 Fed. Cas., 1209).

(a) A protest "against paying 40 per cent duty on rosewood furniture, believing it should pay 30 per cent as cabinet furniture," can not be extended to embrace other articles, or furniture of other woods, or furniture of rosewood and other woods combined, where such other woods form so large and so conspicuous a part of the furniture as to require it to be classed, in commercial transactions, by some other name than merely "rosewood."—Ponsot v. Maxwell (4 Blatchf., 43; 19 Fed. Cas., 986).

(b) No substantive ground of objection not contained in the protest can be taken at the trial.—Kriesler v. Morton (1 Curt., 413; 14 Fed. Cas., 863).

(c) A protest having stated only that the invoice value was correct, the plaintiff was not allowed to show that the the appraisement was not made in conformity to law.—Id.

(d) The fact that the deputy collector dictated the form of the protest does not estop the collector from denying its efficiency for a purpose which does not appear to have been brought to the notice of the deputy.—Id.

(e) In a suit to recover duties levied on a reappraisement of goods under the act of May 30, 1830, section 2, and paid under protest—one ground of the suit being that the reappraisement was not made by the person authorized by the act to make it—it is necessary that the objection be specified in the protest; otherwise it will not be heard here.—Iasagi et al v. The Collector (1 Wallace, 375).

(f) The merchant paid duties upon commissions under protest, and the protest set forth that the merchant "pays no such commission." Held, that the protest was insufficient and that, consequently, the action could not be maintained.—Norcross v. Greely (1 Curt., 114; 15 Law Rep., 149; 29 Hunt Mer. Mag., 203; 18 Fed. Cas., 301).

(g) The merchant in his suit to recover duties paid under protest must be confined to such grounds as his protest contains.—Id.

(h) A protest against the payment of duties must set forth the specific objections of the party and refer the collector distinctly to the facts; otherwise the party can not avail himself of them in an action to recover.—Cornett v. Lawrence (2 Blatchf., 512; 6 Fed. Cas., 575).

(i) Where a protest stated "that under existing laws said amount is unjustly added and is not liable to duty, because the said invoice and the said entry exhibited the true market value of said iron at Liverpool, from whence said iron was imported," held that the only point raised by the protest was the correspondence of the invoice value with the value at the place of export at the date of the invoice and that the importer could not, under the protest, show that the invoice value was the actual purchase price.—Id.

(j) In an action to recover duties the importer can not avail himself of any objections to the actions of the customs officers except those specified in the protest.—Wilson v. Lawrence (2 Blatchf., 514; 30 Fed. Cas., 138).

(k) An importer having set forth in his written protest the grounds of his objection to the payment of the duties exacted by the collector can not in his suit recover them upon any ground other than that set forth.—Davies v. Arthur (96 U. S., 148).

(l) The merchant paid duties upon commissions under protest, and the protest set forth that the merchant "paid no such commissions." Held, that the protest was insufficient and that, consequently, the action could not be maintained.—Norcross v. Greely (1 Curt., 114; 15 Law Rep., 149; 29 Hunt Mer. Mag, 203; 18 Fed. Cas., 301).

(a) The merchant in his suit to recover duties paid under protest must be confined to such grounds as his protest contains.—Id.

(b) A protest objecting in general terms to the additional duties exacted, but assigning no reasons for the objection, will not warrant the institution of a suit to recover back the duties objected to, even though such duties were illegally exacted.—Mason v. Kane (Taney, 173; 24 Hunt Mer. Mag., 717; 16 Fed. Cas., 1044).

(c) Where a protest was in these words, "We protest against paying additional duty and penalty on" [describing the goods], "they being appraised too high. We claim to have refunded" [naming the amount], "being amount paid for additional duty and penalty," held that the person making such protest could not in an action to recover the amount so paid raise any objection to the regularity of the appraisal proceedings.—Thomson v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 385; 23 Fed. Cas., 1100).

(d) In an action to recover duties no ground of objection to the payment of the duties can be taken which was not specifically and distinctly stated in a protest made at the time of the payment of the duties.—Durand v. Lawrence (2 Blatchf., 396; 8 Fed. Cas., 113).

(e) Where the protest merely protested against the payment of the additional duties, but stated no ground of objection, held that in an action to recover the plaintiff could not question the validity or accuracy of the appraisement on which the duties were paid.—Id.

(f) The protest is "against the payment of duties on" [the increased valuation specified], "added to the entry value by the appraisers, because the original entry was the actual cost and full value at the time of the purchase." The protest designates no time of purchase different from that given in the invoice, and the importer can not set up a different and long antecedent period of purchase, nor can he impugn the appraisement by giving proofs of irregularity in the appraisement.—Piersou v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 507; 19 Fed. Cas., 681).

(g) The protest did not comply with the act of 1845, and as it did not set forth distinctly the omission of the collector to order a reappraisement, or that the appraisers valued the iron at the time of the shipment and not at the time of purchase, as grounds of objection to the payment of the duties imposed, the importer could not raise those objections in an action to recover.—Fielden v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 120; 9 Fed. Cas., 27).

(h) Where on an appraisal both by official appraisers and merchant appraisers the invoice value of goods was raised and duties on the increase were paid under protest, which objected "that the appraisals and reappraisals were not fairly, impartially, or legally made, nor by persons unprejudiced and duly qualified to make them," held that no action to recover could be maintained either on account of irregularity in selecting or qualifying the appraisers or otherwise, because the protest did not set forth distinctly the grounds of objection to the regularity and legality of the appraisements made or wherein the appraisers were prejudiced or not duly qualified.—Christ v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 129; 5 Fed. Cas., 652).

(i) The plaintiff is not authorized to except to the competency of the reappraisers either for the reason that the General Appraiser was one of them or that the merchant appraiser was sworn by a custom-house appraiser, because by his protest he did not set forth distinctly and specifically the particulars constituting their disqualification.—Goddard v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 131; 10 Fed. Cas., 510).

(a) The protest must state in plain and direct terms the objections to the additions made to the invoice, and it is not enough to use general expressions which may include the objections to be raised.—Sadler v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 134; 21 Fed. Cas., 136).

(b) Where a protest against the imposition of duties after appraisal protested "against the payment of 15 per cent advance and the penalty therefor accruing on velvets contained in the entries, because we are fully satisfied that they are fully indorsed by the manufacturers," held that if the importers had the right to contest the price fixed by the appraisers the protest does not point out the particulars in which there was an overvaluation and is insufficient.—Hertz v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 137; 12 Fed. Cas., 59).

(c) Goods imported from Amposia in a Spanish vessel. Discriminating duties imposed under act of August 30, 1842, section 11. The protest asserted that the discriminating duty was illegally imposed because the act of July 30, 1846, establishes rates repuguant to those established by the act of 1842. By section 3, act of 1846, all discriminating duties in respect to Spanish vessels, except those coming from Cuba or Porto Rico, are repealed. The protest is insufficient because it did not state that this vessel did not come from Cuba or Porto Rico and did come from Spain.—Stalker v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 138; 22 Fed. Cas., 1041).

(d) Where a protest by a consignee of goods claimed that they were invoiced at their fair market value, and also protested against the payment of a penalty for undervalnation, and described the goods thus, "These goods consigned to me by the manufacturer thereof, maintaining that they are not liable to a penalty under the laws for the reasons stated," held that the consignee could not under the protest prove that the goods were owned and imported by the manufacturer, and so not liable to the penalty.—Warburg v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 382; 29 Fed. Cas., 157).

(e) Where goods were invoiced and entered at their market value at the time of their purchase, and their value had increased between that time and the time of their exportation, and under instructions from the Treasury Department they were appraised at their value at the time of their exportation, and duties were assessed on that valuation and also an additional duty of 50 per cent under section 17, act of August 30, 1842, and were paid under a protest "against the demand of the duties charged upon the merchandise specified in the within entry," which said "the difference between the sum so charged and what ought to have been levied upon the prices mentioned in the invoice we shall claim to recover back, and we also protest against the penalty of 50 per cent in addition to the duties charged, because the invoice was fair and the said last-mentioned sum is levied without the process of law," held that under such protest it could not be objected that the collector did not under section 17, act of August 30, 1842, order a reappraisement or that one of the examiners was partial and hostile to the importer.—Maillard v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 378; 16 Fed. Cas., 501).

(f) A protest which merely claims that an appraisement was illegal, but does not state in what the illegality consisted, is insufficient.—Crowley v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 401; 6 Fed. Cas., 915).

(g) Where a protest against the payment of duties and of a penalty for undervaluation, after appraisement and reappraisement, on an invoice of needles, only claimed that the invoice stated the fair value of the needles when procured abroad, and neither the protest, nor the invoice, nor the entry stated when the needles were procured or that they had been purchased, and the appraisements were based on the value of the needles when shipped and exceeded the invoice value, held that although the needles were procured by purchase some time before they were shipped, and the price paid for them was the value stated in the invoice and was their fair market value abroad at the time of their purchase, yet under the protest the importer could not claim that the needles were procnred at any other period than the date of their shipment, and the appraisements were regular.—Crowley v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 401; 6 Fed. Cas., 915).

(a) No exception can be taken to an appraisement which does not appear on the face of it, unless the exception is distinctly and specifically pointed out in the protest.—Schmaire v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 408; 21 Fed. Cas., 700).

(b) Where 30 per cent duties were charged on an article under schedule C, of the act of 1846, as being "carpeting" and, on the payment of the duties a protest was made claiming that the article was nonenumerated and subject to a duty of 20 per cent, and, on a trial of a suit to recover the excess, the jury found that the article was a "manufacture of hemp" on which, under schedule E, the duty was 20 per cent, held that as the jury fonnd that the article was an enumerated one the protest was insufficient.—Baxter et al. v. Maxwell (4 Blatchf., 32; 2 Fed. Cas., 1054).

(c) A protest that the appraisers had not used or employed sufficient means or made sufficient examination of the articles to determine their value, may be sufficient under Converse v. Burgess (18 How., 413), as a foundation for proof that the appraisers did not examine samples from the statute number of packages and did not at all examine either packages or samples, hut it offers little information to the collector as to the real ground of objection.—Boker v. Bronson (4 Blatchf., 472; 44 Hunt, Mer. Mag., 74; 3 Fed. Cas., 807).

(d) The importer protested upon the ground that the collector fixed upon the value without notice to the collector or hearing any evidence; that the papers did not show that the merchant appraiser was a discreet and proper person and a citizen of the United States; and that the 20 per cent was calculated not only on the appraised value hut upon the amount of commissions also. The judge directed the jury to find a verdict for the defendant.—Scheerdt v. Schell (N. Y. Times, Jan. 18, 1859; 21 Fed. Cas., 657).

(e) A protest made in the case of merchandise not enumerated eo nomine in the act in force at the time of the importation and stating only that the same is dutiable at a rate of duty which is imposed upon upward of fifty articles especially enumerated therein is insufficient.—Fauche v. Schell (33 Fed. Rep., 336).

(f) A protest must be signed by the importer and must set forth distinctly and specifically the grounds, and the importer is confined to those grounds. In this case the protest was signed Brown & Winchester, and it was not alleged or proved that they are the Robert D. Brown and James Winchester who are claimants. Held insufficient.—Brown v. United States (1 C. Cls. R., 377).

(g) The importer must at least indicate in his protest distinctly and definitely the ground of his complaint, and his design to make it the foundation of a claim against the Government.—Curtis v. Fielder (2 Black, 461; 480).

(h) Such a protest was designed to inform the officers that the claim would be asserted against them for the excessive duty and of the reasons for which it was supposed to be an improper levy, and if it did not do this it was insufficient.—Curtis v. Fielder (2 Black, 461).

(i) Therefore where a protest was made against duties on hemp and iron both in one entry because "there exists no law authorizing the exaction of such duty," when in fact it was only the amount of duty on the hemp which was in controversy, the protest is insufficient and the action can not be sustained.—Id.

(a) A protest must point out specifically the particular omissions or irregularity complained of, or it will not be available. In this case the importer subjoined to each entry a written protest. On one "claiming to enter the iron at actual and invoice cost," on the other "claiming to enter it according to the sworn invoice."—Focke v. Lawrence (2 Blatchf., 508; 9 Fed. Cas., 329).

(b) The protest did not embrace the question of the value of the currency in which the invoice was made out; it related exclusively to the foreign market value.—Roller v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 142; 20 Fed. Cas., 1136).

(c) Under a protest against the payment of duties and penalty which only set out "that the said invoice as originally presented by us is in all respects correct and just" and that "no legal forfeiture or penalty has been incurred," the invoice value of the goods having been increased on an appraisement, no question can be raised in an action to recover back the duties and penalty except as to the difference between the appraised and market value of the goods at the place of shipment at the date of the invoice nor can it be shown that the invoice value was the actual purchase price.—Tucker v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 517; 24 Fed. Cas., 275).

(d) A protest against paying duties on 2½ per cent commission because no commission was paid is insufficient, it being immaterial whether any commission was paid or not.—Hutton v. Schell (6 Blatchf., 48; 7 Int. Rev. Rec., 84; 12 Fed. Cas., 1095),

(e) A protest against paying duties on costs and charges because the goods were invoiced "free on board" is insufficient, unless the words "free on board" are found in the invoice.—Id.

(f) A protest made in the case of merchandise not enumerated eo nomine in the tariff act in force at the time of its importation and stating only that the same is claimed to be dutiable at a rate of duty which is imposed upon upward of two hundred and fifty articles specially enumerated, and also upon all articles not enumerated therein, is insufficient.—Smith v. Schell (27 Fed. Rep., 648).

(g) General allegations in a protest that the appraisers were prejudiced or incompetent need not be regarded by the collector when the particulars constituting the disqualifications charged are not set forth specifically.—Bangs et al. v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 135; 2 Fed. Cas., 595).

(h) Merchandise imported as silk ties. Duty assessed at 60 per cent under the act of 1864, section 8, as silk scarfs. The importer protested on the ground that the merchandise was "articles worn by men, women, and children, and wearing apparel, and should only pay duty at 35 per cent ad valorem, under section 22, act of March 2, 1861, and section 13, act of July 14, 1862, and are neither scarfs nor ready made clothing in fact, or as shown in trade or commerce." The merchandise was in fact dutiable at 50 per cent as a manufactnre of silk, not otherwise provided for, under the last clause of section 8. Held, that the protest was insufficient because it did not set forth distinctly and specifically the ground of objection to the amount claimed and failed to state the true ground of objection to the duty exacted.—Davies v. Arthur (13 Blatchf., 34; 21 Int. Rev. Rec., 205; 7 Fed. Cas., 43); affirmed 96 U. S., 148.

(i) Duty assessed on bichromate of soda at 3 cents a pound. The protest stated that the importation should pay "a duty of 25 per cent, not 3 cents per pound." It did not specify under what schedule, section, clause, or paragraph of the tariff act, or under what name in said act the same is claimed to be dutiable. Held, that where there is more than one clause or paragraph in an act imposing the same rate of duty, and where the imported merchandise is not specifically designated in the act by the same name as that stated in the protest, such a protest is invalid and insufficient.—Cummins v. Robertson (27 Fed. Rep., 654).

(a) An importer can not recover on any ground not distinctly and fully set forth in his protest.—Legg v. Hedden (37 Fed. Rep., 861).

(b) Where an importer claims in his protest that his goods are dutiable as nonenumerated manufactured articles under R. S. 2513, but also makes statements and allegations of fact which are calculated to mislead the collector and relying upon which the collector finds the articles to be enumerated by virtue of R. S. 2499, for articles composed of two or more materials, he can not recover by proving facts which, while they tend to show that the articles are nonenumerated, are inconsistent with and in contradiction of the allegations of the protest.—Legg v. Hedden (37 Fed. Rep., 861).

(c) Where an importer has alleged in his protest that his articles are "composed of crude feathers or downs (feathers the component material of chief value)" and dutiable at 25 per cent under R. S. 2499, and schedule N, act of 1883, as a manufacture of which crude feathers or downs are the component materials of chief value, and has also claimed them to be dutiable at 20 per cent as nonenumerated manufactured articles under R. S. 2513, and it appears upon the trial that down is the component material of chief value, the importer can not recover upon the ground that down, the component material of chief value, is on the free list, and his articles are therefore nonenumerated, as that claim is inconsistent with the allegations of his protest.—Id.

(d) Where duties are paid under a protest made on the sole ground that the goods should have been classified under paragraph 448, as "material for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets, etc.," instead of being classed as beads, it can not be objected that the goods might more properly have been classed as jet or imitation of jet. The protest should have been in the alternative.—Fisk v. Seeberger (D. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 718).

(e) Where duties are paid under protest, on the single ground that the goods should have been classified as material for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets, etc., and not otherwise provided for, it can not be objected to defeat the classification that the goods might more properly have been put into some specific class other than that designated by the collector.—Walker v. Seeberger (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 724).

(f) Action to recover duties paid on merchandise entered as sago flour taxed as starch against a protest that the article was sago flour and free. Held, that the plaintiff must recover, if at all, upon the ground stated in his protest, and therefore he could not recover although upon the trial it appeared that the article was not flour and not dutiable.—Chung Yune v. Kelly (14 Fed. Rep., 639).

(g) Goods impored in 1881, being classified under the first clause of R. S. 2499, as bearing a similitude to manufactures composed wholly or in part of the hair of the alpaca, goat, or other like animals, and duty assessed at 50 cents a pound and 35 per cent ad valorem. The importer protested that the goods were composed of hair and cotton only, and as such should pay a duty of 35 per cent ad valorem as a nonenumerated article under the second half of R. S. 2499, being the highest rate which any of the component materials pay. In an action to recover, held that this protest was defective in that it failed to point out or suggest in any way the provision which actually controlled, and in effect only raised the question which of two clauses, under one or the other of which it was assumed that the importation came, should govern as being most applicable.—Herrman v. Robertson (152 U. S., 521).

Sec. 15. That if the owner, importer, consignee, or agent of any imported merchandise, or the collector, or the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be dissatisfied with the decision of the Board of General Appraisers, as provided for in section 14 of this act, as to the construction of the law and the facts respecting the classification of such merchandise and the rate of duty imposed thereon under such classification, they, or either of them, may, within thirty days next after such decision, and not afterward, apply to the Circuit Court of the United States within the district in which the matter arises, for a review of the questions of law and fact involved in such decision. Such application shall be made by filing in the office of the clerk of said Circuit Court a coucise statement of the errors of law and fact complained of, and a copy of such statement shall be served on the collector, or on the importer, owner, consignee, or agent, as the case may be. Thereupon the court shall order the board of appraisers to return to said Circuit Court the record and the evidence taken by them together with a certified statement of the facts involved in the case and their decisions thereon; and all the evidence taken by and before said appraisers shall be competent evidence before said Circuit Court; and within twenty days after the aforesaid return is made the court may, upon the application of the Secretary of the Treasury, the collector of the port, or the importer, owner, consignee, or agent, as the case may be, refer it to one of said general appraisers, as an officer of the court, to take and return to the court such further evidence as may be offered by the Secretary of the Treasury, collector, importer, owner, consignee, or agent, within sixty days thereafter, in such order and under such rules as the court may prescribe; and such further evidence with the aforesaid return shall constitute the record upon which said Circuit Court shall give priority to and proceed to hear and determine the questions of law and fact involved in such decision, respecting the classification of such merchandise and the rate of duty imposed thereon under such classification, and the decision of such court shall be final, and the proper collector, or person acting as such, shall liquidate the entry accordingly, unless such court shall be of opinion that the question involved is of such importance as to require a review of such decision by the Supreme Court of the United States, in which case said Circuit Court, or the judge making the decision, may, within thirty days thereafter, allow an appeal to said Supreme Court; but an appeal shall be allowed on the part of the United States whenever the Attorney-General shall apply for it within thirty days after the reudition of such decision. On such original application and on any such appeal, security for damages and costs shall be given as in the case of other appeals in cases in which the United States is a party.[a] Said Supreme Court shall have jurisdiction and power to review such decision, and shall give priority to such cases, and may affirm, modify or reverse such decision of such Circuit Court, and remand the case with such orders as may seem to it proper in the premises, which shall be executed accordingly. All final judgments, when in favor of the importer, shall be satisfied and paid by the Secretary of the Treasury from the permanent indefinite appropriation provided for in section twenty-four of this act. For the purposes of this section the Circuit Courts of the United States shall be deemed always open, and said Circuit Courts respectively may establish, and from time to time alter, rules and regulations not inconsistent herewith for the procedure in such cases as they shall deem proper.

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 15, ACT OF JUNE 10, 1890.

(a) The Supreme Court has no jurisdiction to review on appeal a judgment of a Circuit Court of Appeals affirming a decree of a Circuit Court overruling a decision of the Board of General Appraisers and which sustains as valid duties collected.—Anglo-California Bank v. United States (175 U. S., 37).

(b) The fact that section 15 of the act of June 10, 1890, authorizes the Circuit Court when it deems the question of special importance to allow an appeal to the Supreme Court, can not be construed as having "otherwise provided by law," as such construction would extend the direct appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court beyond the classes of cases specially enumerated in section 5 of the act creating the Circuit Court of Appeals and would in fact deprive the latter court of appellate jurisdiction, for prior to that act there was "provision by law" in respect to appeals or writs of error in all cases.—Louisville Public Warehouse Co. v. Collector of Customs (C. C. A.), (49 Fed. Rep., 561).

(a) Section 5 of the act creating the Circuit Court of Appeals gives that court jurisdiction of an appeal from a judgment rendered by a Circuit Court in reviewing a decision of the Board of General Appraisers.—Id.

(b) An appeal by the United States from the judgment of the Circuit Court can only be allowed on the application and in the name of the Attorney-General when the record does not show that the court is of opinion that the question involved is of such importance as to require an appeal. But where such an appeal is irregularly taken in the name of the collector by the district attorney and the parties admit, in the Circuit Court of Appeals, that the same was in fact taken by direction of the Attorney-General and consent that the petition for appeal may be amended by substituting his name for that of the collector, the Circuit Court of Appeals has jurisdiction to allow such amendment.—United States v. Hopewell (C. C. A.), (51 Fed. Rep., 798).

(c) A judgment of the Circuit Court on an appeal from the Board is reviewable not by the Supreme Court but by the Circuit Court of Appeals, the case being "one arising under the revenue laws."—Id.

(d) It is not within the province of a Circuit Court of Appeals to grant to or withhold from an importer leave to apply to an officer of customs for a remission of duties or if a judgment rendered in a case arising under this act by a Circuit Court be affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals to direct or suggest the action of such Circuit Court in regard to a new trial upon newly discovered evidence or newly ascertained facts.—In re Marquand (C. C. A.), (57 Fed. Rep., 189).

(e) The appellate jurisdiction given to the Supreme Court in this section was, by the act of March 3, 1891, creating the Circuit Court of Appeals, transferred to such courts, but the method and system of review remained unaltered. The decision of the Circuit Court can be reviewed only by appeal and not by writ of error.—United States v. Diamond Match Co. (115 Fed. Rep., 288).

(f) The act of June 10, 1890, confers no jurisdiction upon Circuit Courts on the application of dissatisfied importers to review and reverse a decision of a Board of General Appraisers ascertaining and fixing the dutiable value of goods when such Board has acted in pursuance of law and without fraud or other misconduct from which bad faith could be implied.—Passavant v. United States (148 U. S., 214).

(g) Invoice made out in paper florins in Austria-Hungary. No consular certificate giving the value of the paper florin accompanied the invoice. In reducing the invoice currency to United States money the collector estimated the florin at the value of the gold florin as proclaimed by the Secretary. The importer claimed that the collector should have adopted the silver florin as the standard of value, as proclaimed by the Secretary. Held, (1) that the action of the collector was correct; (2) that his action was not subject to review by the Board; (3) that a Circuit Court has jurisdiction to review the action of a Board of General Appraisers in entertaining such an appeal and in reversing the action of the collector in that respect.—United States v. Klingenberg (153 U. S., 93).

(h) The Circuit Courts have jurisdiction, regardless of amount, of actions against a collector of customs for duties exacted and paid under protest upon merchandise alleged not to have been imported.—Downes v. Bidwell (182 U. S., 244); "The insular cases."

(a) An appeal to or review by the Circuit Court is restricted to questions of law and fact involved in the decision of the appraisers respecting the classification of merchandise and the rate of duty imposed thereon under such classification.—In re Passavant (C. C.), (50 Fed. Rep., 788).

(b) Where a board of three general appraisers, acting under section 13 of the act of June 10, 1890, on reappraisement, reappraised the value of merchandise more than 10 per cent above that declared in the entry and the additional duties provided for in section 7 of said act thereupon accrued and were exacted by the collector, no appeal from or review of the decision of the collector in assessing such additional duties is provided for in this act.—Id.

(c) Whether or not any relief can be secured by an importer where there has been a fundamental error in fixing the value none is to be found under this act by appeal or review in the Circuit Court.—Id.

(d) The act of June 10, 1890, confers no jurisdiction upon Circuit Courts on the application of a dissatisfied collector to review and reverse a decision of a Board of General Appraisers involving neither the classification nor the rate of duty, but only the value of the paper florin of Austria-Hungary, the currency in which the merchandise was invoiced.—In re Klingenberg (C. C.), (57 Fed. Rep., 195).

(e) An appeal from a decision of the Board sustaining the claim of an importer of burlaps for a deduction of the excess of weight caused by the goods being wet is not an appeal from a decision respecting the classification of such merchandise and the rate of duty imposed thereon under such classification within the meaning of this act.—Foster v. Vocke (C. C.), (60 Fed. Rep., 745).

(f) A Circuit Court has jurisdiction to hear and determine on appeal the questions of law and of fact involved in a decision of the Board sustaining the action of the collector in exacting a charge for gauging molasses under R. S. 3023.—United States v. Jahn (155 U. S., 109).

(g) The jurisdiction indicated in section 15, act of June 10, 1890, is vested in the Circuit Court for the district where the port of entry is situated and not in that of the district where the Board of Appraisers meets.—In re Wyman (C. C.), (45 Fed. Rep., 469).

(h) In a proceeding to review the decision of the Board the award of the Circuit Court is not limited to giving a mere certificate showing the amount due the claimant, but its duty is to hear, determine, and adjudge, under the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat., 505), and a judgment that the petitioner recover is not erroneous.—United States v. Davis (C. C. A.), (54 Fed. Rep., 147).

(i) Certain importers appeared before the Board in support of their protests against the decisions of the collector, but as to one of said protests they offered no evidence before the Board. Held, that they had a right to appeal to the Circuit Court and that the right to bring new evidence was coextensive with the right of appeal.—Lesser v. United States (C. C.), (89 Fed. Rep., 197).

(j) Certain merchandise consisting of metal polish was imported in 1892. The collector declined to admit it to entry on the ground that he had received from the Secretary fac similes of a certain trade-mark filed in the Treasury Department by the Meyers-Putz Pomade Company, which fac similes were duly recorded in the New York custom-house pursuant to instructions contained in a circular of October 31, 1890, and that said collector had decided that the trade-mark borne by the goods attempted to be entered simulated or copied the trade-mark so filed and recorded. On an application for a mandamus to compel the collector to take evideuce as to the validity of the trade-mark filed by the Meyers-Putz Pomade Company in Washington, and the right of the importers to use the trade-mark upon their goods, held that the Circuit Court had no jurisdiction to grant a mandamus and that the question whether the decision of the proper customs officers that any particular import was within the prohibition of the statute was reviewable by the courts and, if so, in what way, was not before the court in this proceeding.—In re Vintschger (C. C.), (50 Fed. Rep., 459).

(a) The Court of Claims has not jurisdiction to hear and determine cases arising under the revenue laws, that is to say where the action is brought to recover taxes on imports which have been paid into the Treasury; for the revenue laws constitute a system which provides not only the manner of collection but also the only remedy by which errors of collection can be corrected.—Nicoll v. United States (7 C. Cls. R., 36), overruling Schlesinger v. United States (1 C. Cls. R., 16).

(b) Where a claim for duties illegally exacted by a collector is referred to this court by order of the Senate under the provisions of the act of February 24, 1855, section 1 (R. S. 1059), it is not yet determined whether the court acquires jurisdiction of the subject-matter.—De Celis v. United States (13 C. Cls. R., 117).

(c) This court has jurisdiction of the following from or connected with the revenue laws: (1) When the Secretary transmits (under R. S. 1063) a claim which arose under the revenue laws; (2) where the law declares that upon a party's doing some defined act he shall be entitled to money, and the right thereto is not dependent upon the action of an executive officer, but is complete upon the doing of an act; (3) where the right of a party to money is dependent upon some such decision or action and the same has been rendered or taken in the party's favor.—Campbell v. United States (13 C. Cls. R., 470).

(d) The general jurisdiction of the Court of Claims does not attach to claims for the recovery back of taxes and duties illegally assessed for which special provisions are made by statute giving jurisdiction to other tribunals and other courts.—Kaufman v. United States (11 C. Cls. R., 659); Winnisimmit Company v. Same (12 Id., 319); Boughton v. Same (Id., 330); Walker v. Same (Id., 408); De Celis v. Same (13 Id., 117).

(e) Cases arising under the revenue laws are not within the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims.—Nichols v. United States (7 Wallace, 122).

(f) The Court of Claims and the Circuit Courts, acting as such, have jurisdiction of actions for the recovery of duties illegally exacted upon merchandise alleged not to have been imported from a foreign country.—Dooley v. United States (182 U. S., 222); Armstrong v. United States (id., 243); "The insular cases."

(g) A return of the Board of General Appraisers in which the only fact certified is that "silk is the component material of chief value" is insufficient, and will be sent back for a further description of the articles.—In re Dieckerhoff (C. C.), (45 Fed. Rep., 235).

(h) The return of the Board of General Appraisers stated that all the facts involved in the case were contained in its annexed opinion and decision, but the opinion merely confirmed the collector's assessment of duty, stating that for certain reasons "it was not deemed advisable to enter into the merits" of the question involved in the protest. Held, that the return is not sufficient and it should be sent back to the Board to be conformed to the requirements of section 15, act of June 10, 1890.—In re Blumlein; In re Rosenwald; In re Cullmans; In re Schubart (45 Fed. Rep., 236).

(a) The collector assessed a duty of 100 per cent on coverings for pipes, cigar holders, opera glasses, and mathematical instruments, as being designed to evade duties thereon. The importers protested that they were usual and necessary coverings of such articles and, as such, free, or else that they should pay duty according to certain enumerations mentioned in the protest. The Board sustained the collector. The only facts certified in the return to the Circuit Court were that the coverings were entered free and that the protests were rejected as not being sufficiently specific. Held, that the return would be sent back as not being a "certified statement of the facts involved in the case."—In re Downing; In re Demuth; In re Kaufman; In re Zimmern (C. C.), (45 Fed. Rep., 412).

(b) The fact that the return was not signed by the members who took the evidence does not overcome the presumption that the appraisers who heard the case decided it.—Mexican Onyx and Trading Co. v. United States (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 732).

(c) The return of the Board should contain, in addition to the record and the evidence taken by them and their decision on the question of law, a certified statement of the facts involved in the case; and it is the duty of the Board to pass upon the questions of fact raised by the protest.—In re Sternbach (C. C.), (44 Fed. Rep., 413).

(d) When the decision of the Board of General Appraisers is made the subject of review in the Circuit Court, the return made by the Board must embody all the evidence which was considered by them in reaching their decision, and it would seem that, as they act judicially, they can not act as witnesses.—In re Van Blankensteyn (C. C. A.), (56 Fed. Rep., 474).

(e) On a review of the decision of the Board of General Appraisers a motion to strike out testimony taken before the Board will be denied, although the record, as certified, states the facts were found "from evidence and common knowledge" and included evidence taken in other cases in which the importers were not concerned and had had no opportunity to answer or controvert the same.—In re Muser (C. C.), (49 Fed. Rep., 831).

(f) It is clearly the intention of the act of June 10, 1890, as shown by the proceedings in Congress leading to its passage, that the Board of General Appraisers shall possess expert knowledge of their own and that their decision should be based upon such knowledge and evidence submitted or upon no evidence at all or in the absence of the importer and his witnesses.—Id.

(g) All evidence taken before the Board of General Appraisers is competent before the Circuit Court on review, but the importer is then entitled to controvert it under the ordinary rules of evidence.—In re Muser (C. C.), (49 Fed. Rep., 831).

(h) To entitle an importer to a reversal of the decision of the Board of General Appraisers it must be proved that the classification contended for by him is right, not merely that the collector's classification is wrong.—In re Gerdau (54 Fed. Rep., 143).

(i) Where the Board of General Appraisers sustained a protest in one particular and in all others affirmed the decision of the collector and the importer has thereupon applied to the Circuit Court for a review, no statement of errors being filed by the Government, the court can not, upon the importer conceding that there was no error in the decision of the Board of General Appraisers, proceed to review that decision so far as favorable to the importer, but must affirm it as it stands.—United States v. Lies (C. C. A.), (74 Fed. Rep., 546); Same v. Same (170 U. S., 628).

(a) A decision of the Board of General Appraisers as to the classification of goods is subject to review in the Circuit Court on an application in behalf of the United States, which application may be made by the collector without first obtaining authority from the Secretary. Zante currants.—In re Wise, collector (C. C.), (73 Fed. Rep., 183).

(b) The decision of the Board of General Appraisers as to the issues raised by a protest is final and conclusive except when an application for review is made in the manner provided by this section.—T. D. 24459, G. A. 5346.

(c) The Circuit Court has no power to issue a commission to take testimony of a foreign witness in cases pending on an appeal from a decision of the Board of General Appraisers.—Bartram v. United States; Howell v. Same; American Sugar Refining Co. v. Same (C. C.), (106 Fed. Rep., 878).

(d) A finding by the Board of General Appraisers that an article is or is not similar to another article within the similitude clause is a conclusion of law rather than one purely of fact and is therefore reviewable by the courts.—Dana v. United States (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 522).

(e) Findings of fact by the Board of General Appraisers, based upon conflicting testimony as to the commercial designation of an article, can not be reviewed by the courts.—Belcher v. United States (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 975).

(f) Where upon a conflict of evidence before the Board of General Appraisers, arising chiefly upon the commercial meaning of the term "marble" (par. 123, act of 1890), there is sufficient proof to sutain their findings, such findings will not be disturbed.—Mexican Onyx and Trading Co. v. United States (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 732).

(g) A decision of the Board of General Appraisers of a question of fact involved in great conflict of testimony, which is affirmed by the Circuit Court upon a like conflict of testimony, should not be disturbed by the Circuit Court of Appeals.—White v. United States (C. C. A.), (72 Fed. Rep., 251).

(h) The rule stated in some cases that the court will not reverse the Board, even if against the weight of evidence, where there is sufficient evidence to warrant its finding, has little if any application to cases in which additional testimony of an important character is taken in the Circuit Court and where the ultimate and decisive question is as much one of law as one of fact.—In re Wise (C. C.), (73 Fed. Rep., 183).

(i) The decision of the Board of Appraisers on evidence produced before it in respect to a question of fact, such as whether a given substance (natural gas) is or is not a mineral (par. 651, act of 1890), should not be disturbed by the court if fairly sustained by the evidence, even if the court were inclined to a different opinion.—In re Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. (C. C.), (73 Fed. Rep., 191).

(j) The Circuit Court of Appeals will not review a finding of facts by the Board of General Appraisers, not controverted by new evidence in the Circuit Court, unless manifestly unsupported by the evidence or clearly against its weight.—Apgar v. United States (C. C. A), (78 Fed. Rep., 332).

(k) Where a finding of the Board of General Appraisers is wholly without evidence to support it the court will disregard it.—Morris European and American Express Co. v. United States (C. C.), (94 Fed. Rep., 643).

(l) A finding upon a question of fact by the Board of General Appraisers in the absence of any further or different testimony than that returned to the Court by the Board will not be disturbed, but will be affirmed by the Circuit Court.—In re Kursheedt Manufacturing Co. (C. C.), (49 Fed. Rep., 633).

(a) The decisions of the Board of General Appraisers on disputed evidence as to the facts will not be disturbed by the court.—In re White (C. C.), (53 Fed. Rep., 787).

(b) In the Circuit Court the return of the Board is to be considered substantially in the same manner as the report of the master in an equity suit, or as the record, including the opinion of the court in an equity or admiralty suit, is considered in an appellate court. The Circuit Court, therefore, should not disturb the findings of the Board upon doubtful questions of fact, especially questions which turn on the intelligence and credibility of witnesses; but when a finding of fact is wholly without evidence to support it, or where it is clearly contrary to the weight of evidence, it is the duty of the court to disregard it.—In re Van Blankensteyn (C. C. A.), (56 Fed. Rep., 474).

(c) A finding by the Board of General Appraisers not sustained by sufficient proof will be disregarded by the court.—Boussod, Valedon Co. v. United States (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 718).

(d) The court will not disturb the findings of fact of the Board of General Appraisers as to the nature of goods, even if against the weight of evidence, where the Board has sufficient evidence to warrant their findings.—In re Bing (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 727).

(e) The court will not disturb a finding of the Board of General Appraisers on a question of fact where there is evidence to sustain it.—Leerburger v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 976).

(f) There being ample evidence to sustain a finding of the Board of General Appraisers as to a question of fact, the court refused to disturb it.—United States v. Jackson (113 Fed. Rep., 1000).

(g) The court will not interfere with findings of fact by the Board of General Appraisers unless they are unsupported by proof or clearly against the weight of evidence.—Page v. United States (113 Fed. Rep., 1006).

(h) The decision of the Board of General Appraisers will not be disturbed when the only evidence placed before them by the importer consisted of two affidavits which they apparently did not accept and no evidence was taken upon the appeal.—Bailey v. United States (122 Fed. Rep., 751).

(i) When testimony as to commercial designation is not only conflicting but so closely balanced as to make it difficult to say on which side lies the weight of evidence the finding of the Board of General Appraisers will not be disturbed.—Gabriel v. United States (123 Fed. Rep., 296).

(j) Though findings of fact made by the Board of General Appraisers upon conflicting evidence will not as a rule be reviewed by the courts, an exception is made in a case where the decision is made by General Appraisers who did not hear the evidence, all of which was taken before another General Appraiser who did not sign the opinion.—Neresheimer v. United States (136 Fed. Rep., 86; T. D. 25876).

(k) Findings of the Board of General Appraisers, unless unsupported, against the weight of evidence, or where additional evidence is before the court, will not be disturbed on appeal. Vandiver v. United States (156 Fed. Rep., 961; T. D. 28521).

(l) Through inadvertence the importer failed to appear before the Board of General Appraisers and he was defaulted, the decision of the collector being affirmed. Subsequently, on appeal, he obtained an order from the Circuit Court directing the taking of further testimony. The Government made no objection to the granting of the order, did not seek to have it set aside, and appeared at a hearing held in pursuance thereof and cross-examined witnesses. At a subsequent hearing, counsel for the Government, for the first time, raised an objection to the taking of further testimony on the ground that the importers were concluded by their failure to appear before the Board and offer testimony. It was held that it was then too late to raise the question and that the Government had waived its right to object and that the Circuit Court has power, on appeal, to direct additional testimony to be taken, notwithstanding that the importer defaulted before the Board, where such default has been waived.—In re Myers (123 Fed. Rep., 952).

(a) If the failure to present evidence before the Board of General Appraisers in support of a protest is not due to the fault of the importer, the Circuit Court will permit him to introduce evidence on appeal.—Cowl v. United States (124 Fed. Rep., 475).

(b) The decision of the Board of General Appraisers will be affirmed if, after due notice, the importers failed to appear and offer evidence before the Board.—Donat v. United States (124 Fed. Rep., 463).

(c) On appeal from a decision of the Board of General Appraisers an importer set forth in his petition a claim based on a paragraph of the tariff act not referred to in the protest filed with the collector and passed on by the Board. It was held that this is not permissible under the provisions of section 14 of the administrative act, which makes the decision of the collector final and conclusive, unless the importer shall, within ten days thereafter, file a protest with the collector setting forth therein the reasons for his objection to the assessment.—United States v. Bayersdorfer (126 Fed. Rep., 732; T. D. 24923), reversing 122 id., 968.

(d) Where importers appeared before the Board of General Appraisers and submitted their protests without submitting any evidence in support thereof, they will not be allowed to introduce any evidence in the Circuit Court on appeal.—Allen v. United States (127 Fed. Rep., 777; T. D. 25052).

(e) Subsequent to a reliquidation by the collector the importers filed a protest affecting goods that were not the subject of the reliquidation, nor of any prior protest. This was more than ten days after the original liquidation. The collector in his letter transmitting the protest to the Board of General Appraisers alleged that it did not fulfill the requirements of section 14, act of June 10, 1890, but on appeal by the United States from the decision of the Board sustaining the protest no assignment of error was made by the appellant in regard to the sufficiency of the protest on which the proceedings before the Board were based. It was held that the failure to raise this issue by an assignment of error constituted a waiver of the alleged defect in the protest and that the court could not properly consider the question of whether the Board had jurisdiction to decide the protest on its merits.—United States v. Brown (127 Fed. Rep., 793; T. D. 25074), affirming 121 Fed. Rep., 605.

(f) General assignments of error on appeals from decisions of the Board of General Appraisers, such as that the "Board erred as a matter of law," etc., will be taken as referring only to the particular assignments of error, if there are any, which precede them, and not as raising any unrelated question. Assignments so general in form are not in compliance with the requirement that applications for review shall consist of "a concise statement of the errors of law and fact complained of."—Ibid.

(a) On review of a decision of a collector of customs as to the classification of imported merchandise where it does not appear that any testimony was produced before him his findings of fact may be reversed by the Board of General Appraisers or the courts without any additional evidence. The collector, the Board, and the courts are all equally entitled to avail themselves of such information as may be derived from an inspection of the articles in connection with the facts of common knowledge and experience of which judicial notice may be taken. In determining the question whether or not ping-pong balls are articles for the amusement of children or "toys," the court will take judicial notice that the game of ping-pong is ordinarily played on a table which is of such height that it would be difficult for children to play the game; that it is indulged in by adults and requires a degree of skill not ordinarily possessed by children and that ping-pong balls are sold in stores where athletic goods which are not toys are dealt in.—United States v. Strauss (136 Fed. Rep., 185; T. D. 25995).

(b) An informal acknowledgment made by a merchant in a foreign country is not competent to overthrow the finding of the Board of General Appraisers upon legitimate evidence.—Baldwin v. United States (139 Fed. Rep., 1005; T. D. 26453).

(c) The words "further evidence" herein impliedly refer to evidence in addition to such as is introduced before the Board of General Appraisers.—T. D. 26614, G. A. 6117.

(d) The Circuit Court of Appeals has authority to review the findings of the Board of General Appraisers on matters of fact, especially so where the Board and Circuit Court made different decisions. Where the Circuit Court of Appeals finds that the original assessment of duty, which was reversed by the Circuit Court, was wrong, the judgment of the latter court will be affirmed without any inquiry into its correctness.—United States v. Proctor (145 Fed. Rep., 126; T. D. 27115).

(e) The deposition of an importer that he ordered cordials from France through an agency in New York and that the goods were consigned to him direct from the French manufacturers and billed to him as purchaser and consignee is insufficient evidence, on appeal from a decision of the Board of General Appraisers, to prove that the cordials were manufactured in and exported from France so as to be entitled to the reduced rate of duty provided for in the reciprocity agreement with France.—Migliavacca v. United States (148 Fed. Rep., 142; T. D. 26777).

(f) On appeal from a decision of the Board of General Appraisers a finding of fact by them will not be reversed where the evidence was such that if the finding had been made by a jury it would not have been set aside as unwarranted by the evidence.—Ralli v. United States (T. D. 26821), affirming T. D. 11858, G. A. 849.

(g) The presumption that the findings of fact and the conclusions of the Board of General Appraisers are correct must prevail where, on appeal from a Board decision, the record returned to the Circuit Court was incomplete by reason of the loss of evidence on which the Board's findings were based. Cases on presumptions reviewed.—Schoellkopf v. United States (147 Fed. Rep., 855; T. D. 27638).

(h) An importer contended that the merchandise under protest was the same substance as that on which previous rulings favorable to the importer had been made. In absence of proof that such was the case it was held that it would not be assumed that a substance bearing the same name is always and everywhere the same.—Ibid.

(a) The rule that findings of fact by General Appraisers should not be disturbed by the courts does not apply to a case where neither the samples nor the testimony sustain such finding.—Gallenkamp v. Wyman (T. D. 27651).

(b) Where an importer appeared at a hearing before the Board of General Appraisers and offered in support of his protest merely an ex parte affidavit it was held that on appeal from the Board's decision he should be allowed to introduce further evidence in the Circuit Court, the rule announced in United States v. China and Japan Trading Company (71 Fed. Rep., 864) being held not applicable in such a case.—Mendelson v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 33; T. D. 27898), reversing 146 id., 78 (T. D. 27088).

(c) The failure of an importer to introduce any evidence before the Board of General Appraisers or on appeal from the Board's decision is not reason for dismissing his appeal. If he desires to submit his case on the facts certified to the Board by the collector the case may properly be heard without any further evidence.—Lehigh Company v. United States (153 Fed. Rep., 596; T. D. 28055).

(d) Through misunderstanding the collector failed to forward to the Board of General Appraisers a protest relating to a certain importation of sugar until several years after the protest was filed. In the meantime the Government's samples had disappeared. The importer's samples were incomplete and their value as illustrating the color of the sugar had become impaired. The testimony offered by the importer not being sufficient in itself to show that the classification complained of was wrong, it was held that the failure of the customs officers to forward the protest without undue delay or to preserve the official samples did not constitute a sufficient reason for reversing the assessment of duty.—Franklin Sugar Refining Co. v. United States (153 Fed. Rep., 653; T. D. 28056).

(e) An official report made by a chemist in the customs service to the Board of General Appraisers was held to be incompetent evidence, being regarded as an ex parte statement not under oath and not subject to cross-examination.—United States v. Hempstead (153 Fed. Rep., 483; T. D. 28076).

(f) Certain merchandise which was claimed in the protest to be either free of duty or dutiable at a rate less than that assessed was held by the Board of General Appraisers to be free of duty. On appeal by the Government from that decision the Circuit Court decided that the merchandise was dutiable at one of the alternative rates claimed in the protest, although the Government's assignment of errors on appeal did not specifically suggest that classification.—United States v. Hatters' Fur Exchange (153 Fed. Rep., 595; T. D. 27971).

(g) The evidence of importers or their employees who are familiar with the importations and with the invoice descriptions thereof and whose testimony was based upon their recollection of the goods as represented by the invoice items was held sufficient to show the character of the merchandise although no samples thereof were produced.—United States v. Herrmann et al. (154 Fed. Rep., 196; T. D. 27981), affirming 145 id., 843 (T. D. 27136).

(h) The customs administrative act was intended to provide the importer with a convenient and expeditious method of disposing of his controversies in the payment of duties upon importations, and the Board of General Appraisers is the tribunal before whom the importer is required to submit his case. All the evidence he may have and can produce should be laid before this tribunal for its consideration in determining the right in each particular controversy and, upon an appeal to the Circuit Court, little weight should be given to additional cumulative evidence which could easily have been submitted to the Board of General Appraisers for its consideration.—Bromley v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 399; T. D. 28051).

(a) The action of the collector in classifying merchandise should not be disturbed because on appeal from the decision of the Board of General Appraisers affirming the collector the officer who examined the goods thought he might have made an error in finding the component material of chief value, but who, in the absence of an analysis of the goods, was not certain that he had erred.—Thorpe v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 864; T. D. 28146).

(b) Ex parte affidavits are not admissible before a General Appraiser taking further evidence in the Circuit Court under the provisions in this section.—White v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 175; T. D. 28147).

[NOTE.—No appeal was taken from this decision. For further authorities on this question see Mendelson v. United States (T. D. 27898), in which the Circuit Court of Appeals, second circuit, held that an ex parte affidavit made by a person in a foreign country was evidence within the meaning of section 15 of the customs administrative act of 1890; also United States v. Downing (146 Fed. Rep., 56, 60; T. D. 27025), in which the same court gave controlling weight to a sworn statement by the manufacturer or shipper, which accompanied the goods. By reference to the printed records in these cases it appears that at the hearings before the Board of General Appraisers there was no objection to the introduction of the affidavit in the Mendelson case, but that in the Downing case the Board admitted the shippers' statement over the objection of counsel for the Government. Note, also, United States v. Hempstead (T. D. 28076), in which the Circuit Court for the eastern district of Pennsylvania held that a report by a Government officer was incompetent, because ex parte, not under oath and not subject to cross-examination. In this case the report was procured and admitted by the Board on its own motion without notice to counsel on either side.]

(c) On appeal to the Circuit Court under the provision of this section importers will not be permitted to offer evidence in respect to items of merchandise as to which they offered no evidence before the Board of General Appraisers.—Plummer v. United States (160 Fed. Rep., 284; T. D. 28635).

(d) On appeal to the Circuit Court, as provided in this section, an importer may not introduce any evidence where his failure to offer evidence before the Board of General Appraisers was due to the fact that he had received no notice of a hearing before the Board, his failure to receive such notice being due entirely to his own neglect.—Maurer v. United States (160 Fed. Rep., 228; T. D. 28636).

(e) Though section 15, act of June 10, 1890, requires security for costs, and the practice of the courts conforms thereto, an application filed when the statute was new and there was no express rule of the court defining what the security should be, and prosecuted in good faith by counsel, who did not understand that the statute required security at the outset, will not be dismissed because security was not given when the application was made, if the ordinary cost bond is filed within the time named in the ruling on the motion to dismiss.—In re Certain Merchandise (C. C.), (64 Fed. Rep., 576).

(f) In a proceeding to review the decision of the Board of General Appraisers costs are recoverable against the United States, since the purpose of the act was merely to "simplify the laws" and change the procedure, not to take away the previously existing right of the importer to costs (in his action against the collector); and, where the United States are appellants and decision is against them, the costs should be paid out of the proper fund according to R. S. 1001.—United States v. Davis (C. C. A.), (54 Fed. Rep., 147).

(a) The provision requiring appeals within thirty days applies only to appeals from the Board of Appraisers and to the rulings of the Circuit Court thereon. It does not apply to a decree of the Circuit Court upon a question of costs and interest made after a reversal of a former decree in the Circuit Court of Appeals and a remand of the case. An appeal from such a decree is governed by the general rule. Reversing the Circuit Court (55 Fed. Rep., 964).—Marine v. Lyon (C. C. A.), (62 Fed. Rep., 153).

(b) Costs do not, as a matter of common right, go with a judgment against the Government; and a party suing the United States can not recover costs unless he shows by the act under which he sues that the United States has consented to pay costs. Neither in cases appealed from the Board of General Appraisers to the Circuit Court nor to the Circuit Court of Appeals are costs recoverable against the United States.—Marine v. Lyon (C. C. A.), (62 Fed. Rep., 153).

(c) On a review in the Circuit Court of a decision of the Board of General Appraisers no interest or costs can be recovered against the United States in the absence of special statutory provision.—In re Chase (C. C.), (50 Fed. Rep., 695).

(d) Though evidence taken before the Board of General Appraisers and admitted by them is competent evidence on appeal to the Circuit Court, the court may nevertheless give such evidence very slight weight.—Knauth v. United States (155 Fed. Rep., 144; T. D. 28184).

(e) Where an importer in applying for review of a decision of the Board of General Appraisers fails to specify in his assignment of errors the provision of law under which the goods are properly classifiable, the petition is not a "concise statement of the errors of law and fact complained of" and the omission is not remedied by the circumstance that the protest passed on by the Board contained the correct contention nor by the general assignment in the petition that "the protest should be sustained and the collector's decision reversed."—Vandegrift v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 923; T. D. 28209).

(f) Duties due from an importer to the United States constitute a personal charge against him, for which an action of debt lies in favor of the United States, and where such debt exists unpaid the United States is entitled to interest on the amount due as damages for illegal detention. In cases of reliquidation of duties at a higher rate interest on the amount due should be computed from the date of demand on the importer for payment of the increased duties.—United States v. Mexican International Railroad Company (154 Fed. Rep., 519; T. D. 28326); United States v. Urmston (154 Fed. Rep., 522; T. D. 28327).

(g) An importer appeared before the Board of General Appraisers and submitted his case on the record and the official sample without introducing any evidence in support of his contention. Held, that evidence as to the circumstances connected with this submission was admissible in the Circuit Court on appeal from the Board, but that evidence on the merits of the main question was inadmissible.—Crawford v. United States (Fed. Rep.,), T. D. 28539.

Sec. 16. That the general appraisers, or any of them, are hereby authorized to administer oaths, and said general appraisers, the boards of general appraisers, the local appraisers or the collectors, as the case may be, may cite to appear before them, and examine upon oath any owner, importer, agent, consignee or other person touching any matter or thing which they or either of them may deem material respecting any imported merchandise, in ascertaining the dutiable value or classification thereof; and they or either of them may require the production of any letters, accounts or invoices relating to said merchandise, and may require such testimony to be reduced to writing, and when so taken it shall be filed in the office of the collector, and preserved for use or reference until the final decision of the collector or said board of appraisers shall be made respecting the valuation or classification of said merchandise, as the case may be.

Sec. 17. That if any person so cited to appear shall neglect or refuse to attend or shall decline to answer, or shall refuse to answer in writing any interrogatories, and subscribe his name to his deposition, or to produce such papers when so required by a general appraiser, or a board of general appraisers, or a local appraiser, or a collector, he shall be liable to a penalty of $100; and if such person be the owner, importer or consignee, the appraisement which the general appraiser, or board of general appraisers, or local appraiser, or collector where there is no appraiser, may make of the merchandise shall be final and conclusive and any person who shall willfully and corruptly swear falsely on an examination before any general appraiser, or board of general appraisers, or local appraiser, or collector, shall be deemed guilty of perjury; and if he is the owner, importer or consignee, the merchandise shall be forfeited.

Sec. 18. That all decisions of the general appraisers and of the boards of general appraisers, respecting values and rates of duty, shall be preserved and filed, and shall be open to inspection under proper regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. All decisions of the general appraisers shall be reported forthwith to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the board of general appraisers on duty at the port of New York, and the report to the board shall be accompanied, whenever practicable, by samples of the merchandise in question, and it shall be the duty of the said board, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, to cause an abstract to be made and published of such decisions of the appraisers as they may deem important, and of the decisions of each of the general appraisers and boards of general appraisers, which abstract shall contain a general description of the merchandise in question and of the value and rate of duty fixed in each case, with reference, whenever practicable, by number or other designation, to samples deposited in the place of samples at New York, and such abstract shall be issued from time to time, at least once in each week, for the information of customs officers and the public.

Sec. 19. That whenever imported merchandise is subject to an ad valorem rate of duty, or to a duty based upon or regulated in any manner by the value thereof, the duty shall be assessed upon the actual market value or wholesale price of such merchandise, as bought and sold in usual wholesale quantities, at the time of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country from whence imported, and in the condition in which such merchandise is there bought and sold for exportation to the United States, or consigned to the United States for sale, including the value of all cartons, cases, crates, boxes, sacks and coverings of any kind, and all other costs, charges and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition, packed ready for shipment to the United States, and if there be used for covering or holding imported merchandise, whether dutiable or free, any unusual article or form designed for use otherwise than in the bona fide transportation of such merchandise to the United States, additional duty shall be levied and collected upon such material or article at the rate to which the same would be subject if separately imported. That the words "value" or "actual market value" whenever used in this act or in any law relating to the appraisement of imported merchandise shall be construed to be the actual market value or wholesale price as defined in this section.

[NOTE.—The foregoing supersedes section 7 of the tariff act of March 3, 1883. The latter section, with citations of decisions under it and citations of decisions under earlier statutes pertaining to same subject matter, are here inserted for purposes of comparison.]

SEC. 7. That sections twenty-nine hundred and seven and twenty-nine hundred and eight of the Revised Statutes of the United States and section fourteen of the act entitled "An act to amend the customs revenue laws, and to repeal moieties," approved June twenty-second, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, be, and the same are hereby, repealed, and hereafter none of the charges imposed by said sections or any other provisions of existing law shall be estimated in ascertaining the value of goods to be imported, nor shall the value of the usual and necessary sacks, crates, boxes, or covering, of any kind be estimated as part of their value in determining the amount of duties for which they are liable: Provided, That if any packages, sacks, crates, boxes, or coverings of any kind shall be of any material or form designed to evade duties thereon, or designed for use otherwise, than in the bona fide transportation of goods to the United States, the same shall be subject to a duty of one hundred per centum ad valorem upon the actual value of the same.

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 19, ACT OF JUNE 10, 1890.

(a) The "German duty," which is a tax imposed by the German Government on merchandise when sold by manufacturers for consumption or sale in the markets of Germany, but is remitted by that Government when the goods are purchased in bond or consigned while in bond for exportation to a foreign country, was lawfully included by the appraiser in his estimate of the dutiable value of the importation in question in this case.—United States v. Passavant (169 U. S., 16), T. D. 13181, G. A. 1602 reversed.

(b) By the laws of this country the assessment of duty proceeds upon the market value in the exporting country and not upon the market value less such remission or amelioration as that country chooses to allow in accordance with its own views of public policy.—Id.

(c) The use of the word "bonification" does not change the character of the German export duty. It is a special advantage extended by the German Government in aid of manufacture and trade, having the same effect as a bonus or drawback.—Id.

(d) The stamp tax on cigars imposed by Cuba should be included in dutiable value in the absence of satisfactory evidence that the market value is unaffected by the tax.—T. D. 10403, G. A. 94.

(e) The stamp tax imposed on Havana cigars, which accrues immediately on the manufacture of the cigars and has to be paid before they can be offered for sale in the Havana market, is dutiable value.—T. D. 10783, G. A. 336.

(f) The Chinese export tax imposed on wool is not a cost, charge, or expense incident to placing the merchandise in a condition packed ready for shipment and is not a dutiable charge.—T. D. 13955, G. A. 2060.

(g) The so-called "lekin tax" of China is an export tax, levied by the "Lekin board" of Chinese officials, and is imposed on all exported firecrackers, being paid by native manufacturers and merchants before the goods can be exported. It is not, therefore, an element of the dutiable of such goods in China.—T. D. 18950, G. A. 4075.

(h) Silk laces purchased in France in 1894. The importer claims a deduction as an allowance for drawback made by the French Government on the exportation of the goods from that country. Held, that the price paid for the goods prima facie includes the item of drawback, that the right of drawback is a separate and distinct claim of the exporter against the French Government, accruing after purchase and only in case of exportation and can not be deducted from the price actually paid by the vendee.—T. D. 17386, G. A. 3577.

(i) The amount of drawback allowed by the French Government on certain laces and by the Italian Government on macaroni, when such goods are exported from the respective countries, is a dutiable item and should be included in the market value.—T. D. 18980, G. A. 4078.

(j) In ascertaining the market value and wholesale price of goods in Germany, the country of exportation, it is proper to include the German duty, which, in effect, is a bonus, drawback, or remission of taxes by the German Government on goods manufactured in Germany in bond and withdrawn for export, but which would have been payable if the goods had been withdrawn for sale in the open market of Germany.—T. D. 18949, G. A. 4074.

(a) The amount of drawback allowed by Italy and France on exported articles is a dutiable item of market value.—T. D. 21939, G. A. 4638.

(b) The French "general internal revenue tax" on alcohol is a part of the dutiable value of same.—T. D. 20761, G. A. 4368.

(c) The French special local taxes on alcohol, designated as "droit de ville" and "octroi," are not part of the dutiable value.—T. D. 20761, G. A. 4368.

(d) Brokerage not dutiable.—T. D. 10242, G. A. 20.

(e) Brokerage on wool shipped from Aleppo, Turkey, held to be a dutiable charge.—T. D. 13072, G. A. 1577.

(f) Brokerage and lot money on an importation of tanned skins bought at public auction in London held to be part of the dutiable value. These charges are a part of the cost of handling the skins and of classifying and assorting them so as to be put in proper condition for sale. Lot money and brokerage charges always accrue by this method of sale.—T. D. 13205, G. A. 1626.

(g) Brokerage charges on wool accrued before the merchandise was packed ready for shipment held not to form part of the dutiable value.—T. D. 13812, G. A. 2006.

(h) Royalty on books is a part of foreign market value.—T. D. 11832, G. A. 823; T. D. 11578, G. A. 753.

(i) A royalty fee, paid by a purchaser of tires for bicycle wheels for the right to sell them, is properly included as a part of the market value, constituting a part of the cost to the maker or vender and a factor in the selling price.—T. D. 21655, G. A. 4572.

(j) Where machinery subject to letters patent in the United States and Great Britain has been manufactured in England and sold there to the importer the royalty fee for its use in this country being paid by the purchaser from the importer, which formed no part of the price in England, is not a part of its dutiable value.—United States v. Leigh (C. C.), (39 Fed. Rep., 764).

(k) Transportation of steel blooms from Motherwell to Glasgow held not to be dutiable charges.—T. D. 10237, G. A. 15.

(l) Stockholm tar shipped from Stockholm to Hamburg, sold there and shipped to the United States. The price paid at Hamburg embraced the freight from Stockholm as shown on the invoice. Held, that this is not inland transportation abolished by the act of June 10, 1890, section 19.—T. D. 10470, G. A. 120.

(m) Goods invoiced entered and appraised at a certain price. The importer afterwards presented what he claimed was a correct invoice, showing a less value and claiming that the cost of inland transportation from London to Liverpool was included in the original invoice. Held, that the error, if there was one, was due to the failure of the vendor to state that inland transportation, a nondutiable charge, was included in the invoice and that his was not a clerical error.—T. D. 11679, G. A. 784.

(n) Protest against the action of the appraisers in adding to the invoice price, to make market value, alleged charges for inland freight from Manchester to Liverpool overruled because not separately specified in the invoice and entry.—T. D. 13555, G. A. 1827.

(o) The addition of invoice of the charges of transportation of ore from the interior of Syria to Ourmelia to a point on the Sea of Marmora held to have been under duress.—T. D. 13889, G. A. 2042.

(a) The cost of transporting Turkish ore from the mines in the interior of Syria to Ourmelia, a shipping port on the Sea of Marmora, held not to be dutiable charges.—T. D. 13889, G. A. 2042.

(b) Transportation charges from Dundee to Glasgow added to the entry because the collector refused to permit the importer to deduct such transportation. Held, that the consignee by reason of duress is not bound by the entered value.—T. D. 14554, G. A. 2346.

(c) Additions to entered value of the cost of transportation from Nottingham to Liverpool made under duress.—T. D. 14555, G. A. 2347.

(d) Claim for deduction for cost of transportation from Paisley to Glasgow, Scotland, refused because not separately stated on invoice.—T. D. 12465, G. A. 1203.

(e) Cartage to store, being the expense of hauling loose wool to store to be baled for transportation, from Aleppo, Turkey, is a dutiable charge.—T. D. 13072, G. A. 1577.

(f) Inland transportation from Nottingham to Liverpool is not a dutiable charge.—T. D. 13184, G. A. 1605.

(g) Inland transportation charges on rugs to Smyrna held to be dutiable. Smyrna is one of the principal markets of Turkey and the dutiable value of the goods is their value at Smyrna.—T. D. 13514, G. A. 1816.

(h) Commissions not dutiable.—T. D. 10227, G. A. 5; T. D. 10242, G. A. 20; T. D. 10388, G. A. 79.

(i) An item called commissions, but which was paid for taking care of fur skins while they were undergoing the process of dressing, dyeing, and finishing, is dutiable.—T. D. 11845, G. A. 836.

(j) Deductions made from market value of the goods in favor of the manufacturer for the purchase of goods from himself are not commissions to be deducted.—T. D. 12008, G. A. 921.

(k) By the term "commissions" we are to understand a consideration bona fide paid or allowed for services of the person making the charge for it.—T. D. 12008, G. A. 921.

(l) Agent's commission, a special allowance or concession made by the consignors, the manufacturers, to the importer, either for selling the goods for them or for buying the goods direct from them instead of through an agent, is not a commission within the meaning of this section.—T. D. 12375, G. A. 1147.

(m) Where an item does not appear on the invoice as commissions but as part of the actual price of the goods the importer can not deduct such item as commissions.—T. D. 12444, G. A. 1182.

(n) The inclusion of nondutiable items (commissions) on consigned goods would be an addition to entered value and such additions can not be made.—T. D. 12461, G. A. 1199.

(o) The collector deducted the commissions on consigned goods which increased the additional duty under section 7. The protest claims that this commission was manufacturers' profit and should not have been deducted. Protest overruled.—T. D. 12461, G. A. 1199.

(p) The invoice specifies a discount of 2½ per cent, but the importer claims that the discount was 5 per cent. Held, that the statement on the invoice operates as an admission that the discount was 2½ per cent and also held that the remedy was by asking for a reappraisement.—T. D. 12463, G. A. 1201.

(a) Commissions allowed by the manufacturers to their American agents are not commissions to be deducted.—T. D. 12464, G. A. 1202.

(b) The appraiser noted on invoice "add to entered value the amount improperly deducted as commission 2½ per cent." The custom is to note on invoice "add to make market value," but there is no law requiring the use of this form.—T. D. 12639, G. A. 1288.

(c) Raw skins bought on the order of the importer by the shipper who dressed them and charged a commission for purchasing the raw skins. When purchased the raw skins were free but they were subsequently converted into dutiable merchandise. Held, that the commission which was stated on the invoice was a part of the dutiable value of the finished article.—T. D. 14601, G. A. 2359.

(d) Commission added not to make market value, but because the goods were consigned. Held to have been erroneously added.—T. D. 14641, G. A. 2399.

(e) The appraisers may disallow so-called commissions to make market value.—T. D. 16531, G. A. 3249.

(f) An addition made to the invoice by disallowing commissions claimed, which was done to make market value, cannot be construed as disallowing a nondutiable commission.—T. D. 16646, G. A. 3291.

(g) Where the appraiser, in order to make market value, disallows a certain discount claimed to be a commission, it must be assumed that it was not arbitrarily rejected but was taken as the amount of advance deemed necessary to make market value.—T. D. 20683, G. A. 4354.

(h) It is the right and duty of appraising officers to inquire into the real nature of so-called commissions or other charges claimed by the importer to be nondutiable.—T. D. 20683, G. A. 4354.

(i) Vessel arrived within the district of New Orleans July 29, 1890, and was detained in quarantine five days, so that the goods were entered after the act of June 10, 1890, went into effect, and duties on charges were imposed under section 19, of that act. Held, that the State had the right to enact and enforce quarantine laws and this caused the detention and duties on charges were properly assessed.—T. D. 12377, G. A. 1149.

(j) Charges for press packing and weighing wool at Shanghai, which was purchased at Tientsin, held to be dutiable charges.—T. D. 12974, G. A. 1525.

(k) Where the importer declares in writing in the entry that all charges mentioned in the invoice were included in the market value of the goods, it would seem that those making it should not be permitted to claim to the contrary at the time of filing the protest.—T. D. 17063, G. A. 3444.

(l) Italian cloths assessed under paragraph 394, act of 1890. The appraised value included the value of the cases which were of American manufacture returned. Held, that this section requires the appraiser to include all costs and charges.—T. D. 14929, G. A. 2558.

(m) Oriental rugs invoiced at Shanghai and authenticated there. The invoice covered charges at Peking for duty on freight to Tientsin and Shanghai, fire insurance, postages, petties, shipping off boat, commission; and at Shanghai packing, fire insurance, go-down, freight, consular fee, shipping off, postages, petties, bill brokerage, and commission. Held, that the Peking charges were part of the "cost, charges, and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition for shipment" and were dutiable charges.—T. D. 12532, G. A. 1216.

(a) Charges incurred in weighing, porterage, labor of pressing canvas and hoops held to be dutiable charges.—T. D. 13194, G. A. 1615.

(b) Lighterage is a nondutiable charge, but where embraced in the gross invoice value the importer is debarred from making the objection. The law does not contemplate that nondutiable charges shall be included in the declared per se value of the goods and a deduction therefor be afterwards claimed.—T. D. 13239, G. A. 1660.

(c) Where hosiery (dutiable under paragraph 353, act of 1890) was invoiced at different values it was held that the charges should be prorated according to value and not according to the dozen pair.—T. D. 13292, G. A. 1672.

(d) The cost of putting up or knocking down machinery is not a dutiable charge.—T. D. 13504, G. A. 1806.

(e) Charge for the expense incurred in shaking the dirt out of wool is dutiable value.—T. D. 13755, G. A. 1949.

(f) Charges on wool for "bringing into go-downs," which means the expense of carrying the merchandise into the warehouse after purchase and prior to exportation, is not a dutiable charge.—T. D. 13755, G. A. 1949.

(g) The invoice included certain charges which accrued after the merchandise was packed ready for shipment to the United States. Held, that the collector should have permitted the importer to deduct such charges to make dutiable value.—T. D. 14713, G. A. 2435.

(h) Sugar imported and invoice price given as 2½ cents, which included ocean freight, cost of packages, export duty, brokerage of one-half of 1 per cent, lighterage, weighing and receiving, insurance, storage, petties, and commissions 2½ per cent. The importers deducted ocean freight, export duty, lighterage, and petties. The collector compelled them to deduct brokerage, weighing and receiving, storage, insurance and commissions. The appraised value then exceeded the entered value by 10 per cent. Duty was then assessed at 40 per cent under paragraphs 1821, 1822, act of 1894, and 24 per cent additional on account of difference between entered and appraised value. Held, that the items of brokerage, weighing and receiving, storage, insurance and commissions, are nondutiable items; that what is forbidden by law to be done directly can not be done indirectly, and that the inclusion of nondutiable items in the entered value would come within the prohibition.—T. D. 16953, G. A. 3381.

(i) No packing charges were specified nor was there any separation or specification of costs, charges, and expenses, incident to placing the merchandise in condition ready for shipment. Protest against duty on packing charges added by appraiser overruled.—T. D. 10555, G. A. 205.

(j) Tillots and casings for Italian cloths are dutiable charges.—T. D. 10952, G. A. 447.

(k) Emballeur, the expense of opening and closing each bale of wool for examination subsequent to purchase, is a dutiable charge.—T. D. 11226, G. A. 585.

(l) Royalty on books is a part of the foreign market value.—T. D. 11832, G. A. 823; T. D. 11578, G. A. 753.

(m) Fees for legalization of invoices are not dutiable charges.—T. D. 12004, G. A. 917.

(n) Cost of winding, hanking, and packing worsted yarn, held to be dutiable.—T. D. 12017, G. A. 930.

(o) Goods shipped from Apt, France, via Havre, invoiced at the former place at their respective prices per kilo the sum total, including consular fee, being

4,272.30 francs. Following the footing is a statement of items of expense consisting of transportation to Havre 210 francs, commissions 6 per cent, 256.30 francs. The importer claimed that these items should have been deducted as nondutiable charges. Held, that the freight, etc., should have been separately stated on the invoice as charges to be added to and not deducted from the price and stated value of the goods per se; that it was impracticable for the appraiser to apportion the freight to the various kinds of goods; that the goods having been purchased from the manufacturers who made the invoice, they could not make a charge for commissions paid to themselves nor deduct the same from the value.—T. D. 12464, G. A. 1202.

(a) It is immaterial whether the coverings were or were not necessary for the transportation of the merchandise to its destination or were put about the goods at the request of the importer or at the instance of the shipper. It is sufficient that they were used and arrived with the goods.—T. D. 11232, G. A. 591.

(b) Charges for boxes, making up, paper twine, wrappers, tape, etc., are dutiable. It is not necessary that such items have a value independent of the goods.—T. D. 10226, G. A. 4.

(c) Paper boxes containing fans, silk goods, etc.; paper boxes and folding tickets containing cotton laces; paper boxes and strings containing toys; boards, paper, strings, and tickets on dress goods; and charges for cutting out and ornamenting, in embroidered muslins, should be included as dutiable value.—T. D. 10398, G. A. 89.

(d) Strips or forms of steel valued at less than 3 cents a pound, dutiable under paragraph 146, act of 1890, were packed in coal-oil barrels of American manufacture (free under paragraph 493), for transportation to the United States. The cost of the barrels and packing charges added to the value of the steel made the total cost more than 3 cents a pound, when duty was assessed at 1.6 cents a pound. Held, that there was no error in adding the invoice value of the barrels and the packing charges to the value of the steel.—T. D. 13512, G. A. 1814.

(e) Paintings and frames invoiced at prices or values specified and certain other frames invoiced with no prices specified but with a statement that they were furnished gratuitously in the nature of a bonification. Held, that the value of the goods as specified in the invoice must be taken, that gratuitous importations are dutiable, and that the frames invoiced without value are dutiable at their appraised value.—T. D. 14558, G. A. 2350.

(f) Spun silk beamed or warped imported. The beams are wooden cylinders centered with iron journal bearings, to be set in looms (wood being chief value) and are not coverings.—T. D. 14559, G. A. 2351.

(g) The usual coverings in which oranges were commonly imported on and prior to August 28, 1894, were boxes or barrels and not baskets, hence a protest claiming such baskets to be free will be overruled without passing on the correctness of the collector's decision assessing them, under paragraph 216, act of 1894, by similitude as boxes.—T. D. 18605, G. A. 4003.

(h) Italian cloths assessed under paragraph 394, act of 1890. The appraised value included the value of the cases which were of American manufacture returned. Held, that this section requires the appraiser to include all costs and charges.—T. D. 14929, G. A. 2558.

(i) Furniture or luggage vans containing household effects are not like vessels or cars, subject to special laws which exempt them from the provisions of the tariff laws, and a protest claiming their free entry on that ground is overruled without deciding whether they are dutiable as unusual coverings or as manufactures of wood.—T. D. 21893, G. A. 4622.

(a) Oats were imported in sacks made of burlap. Held, that in determining the value of an article purchased abroad in the usual coverings, such as oats in bags, this section requires that the value of the article as a whole, including the coverings, shall be taken, though the covering if separately imported would be free. Sustaining the collector and reversing the Board of General Appraisers.—United States v. Wood (85 Fed. Rep., 212).

(b) Packing charges and cases when used as coverings and not specifically exempted should be added to the price paid per yard in ascertaining the dutiable value of woven cloth per yard. Both items constitute the purchase price and market value of the merchandise and form the basis of ad valorem assessment of duty.—United States v. Wood (85 Fed. Rep., 212) and United States v. Keene (84 Fed. Rep., 330), followed; T. D. 22469, G. A. 4759.

(c) To entitle a covering to be considered usual and necessary it must accompany and inclose the specific imported article which is intended to be put in it for its use and transportation.—T. D. 21858, G. A. 4614.

(d) Coverings that are usual and ordinary are not considered as part of entireties for the purpose of affecting the classification of the articles they contain, and even though of greater value than their contents are subject to the same rate of duty as their contents.—T. D. 21961, G. A. 4649.

(e) In finding the value of goods for the purpose of ascertaining their value per pound or other unit of value, in cases where the rate of duty is dependent upon their value per such unit, the same value shall be taken as that which is found to be their dutiable value. Therefore, where the coverings are free as being of American origin, their value should not be included in finding the value per unit.—T. D. 22462, G. A. 4757.

(f) Sugar imported in hogsheads. Original invoice showed only the value of the merchandise including the value of the coverings without stating the separate value of the coverings. The importer afterwards filed proper certificates under paragraph 287, act of 1894, and corrected invoices showing the value of the hogsheads. These invoices were rejected. Held, that where an importer voluntarily enters merchandise on an invoice known to be imperfect, failing to specify the value of nondutiable coverings the Board will not, under its authority to correct clerical errors, reverse the decision of the collector rejecting corrected invoice.—T. D. 18409, G. A. 3966.

(g) Fancy boxes with hinges, covered with silk plush, the covers nickel plated and with a small mirror in the center of the top, are unusual coverings for linen handkerchiefs.—T. D. 10467, G. A. 117.

(h) Enameled boxes 5 inches broad, 7 inches long, and 2 inches thick, with a metallic handle and a lock and mirror on the inside of the top, are unusual coverings for linen handkerchiefs.—T. D. 10467, G. A. 117.

(i) To be subject to additional duty two conditions must exist: (1) The coverings must be made of some unusual material or in some unusual form or shape so as to constitute an article not ordinarily used for the transportation of like merchandise to the United States; (2) the nature of the coverings must be such as to justify the inference that they were "designed for use otherwise than in the bona fide transportation of such merchandise to the United States.—T. D. 10467, G. A. 117; T. D. 21961, G. A. 4649.

(j) Metal boxes for mourning pins are unusual coverings.—T. D. 12114, G. A. 976; reversed T. D. 15860, G. A. 2960.

(a) Small metal boxes each containing one dozen bone collar buttons, held dutiable as manufactures of metal and not free as usual coverings.—T. D. 11994, G. A. 907.

(b) Match boxes with prepared surfaces upon which the matches are ignited are not free as usual coverings.—T. D. 11869, G. A. 860; reversed T. D. 12563, G. A. 1247.

(c) Metal match boxes of elaborate design and stamped with a rough surface upon which the matches are to be lighted are not free as usual coverings.—T. D. 11869, G. A. 860; T. D. 12563, G. A. 1247.

(d) Metal match boxes containing matches are not free as usual coverings for matches dutiable under paragraph 441, act of 1890.—T. D. 11081, G. A. 524; T. D. 12567, G. A. 1251; reversed T. D. 15463, G. A. 2812 (59 Fed. Rep., 450).

(e) Decorated chinaware jars containing tea are not free as usual coverings.—T. D. 12368, G. A. 1140.

(f) Bamboo baskets containing tea, the baskets having handles and adapted for use as lunch baskets and for other purposes, held not free as usual coverings.—T. D. 12564, G. A. 1248.

(g) Grass satchels with handles suitable for use as handbags are not free as usual coverings for the tea contained therein.—T. D. 12564, G. A. 1248.

(h) Fancy straw baskets containing glace fruits held to be unusual coverings.—T. D. 15076, G. A. 2629; T. D. 15519, G. A. 2829.

(i) Straw baskets holding bottles containing liquor held to be dutiable as manufactures of straw and not free as usual coverings.—T. D. 13077, G. A. 1582.

(j) Fancy cases containing violin strings, the cases composed of pasteboard and glass (glass chief value), held to be unusual coverings.—T. D. 13076, G. A. 1581.

(k) A passenger's trunk containing dutiable wearing apparel is dutiable as a covering and its value was properly added to the value of the contents.—T. D. 13753, G. A. 1947.

(l) Needle cases of leather, paper, or metal, furnished with needles, are not usual coverings.—T. D. 12107, G. A. 969.

(m) Coverings or cases made of silk, leather, or paper, and containing needles, such cases being ornamental articles, arranged as permanent receptacles for the needles, the needles being free under paragraph 656, act of 1890, are dutiable as manufactures of silk, of paper, or of leather, according to the component material of chief value, and are not free as usual coverings. Reversing the Circuit Court (Matthews v. United States) (72 Fed. Rep., 43).—United States v. Matthews (C. C. A.), (78 Fed. Rep., 345).

(n) Paper boxes of the kind ordinarily in use for razors are not usual coverings for razor blanks.—T. D. 21858, G. A. 4614.

(o) Japanned tin cans with a screw top, having a label pasted thereon indicating the quantity and nature of the contents, are unusual coverings for bronze powder and are subject to an additional duty of 45 per cent under this section and paragraph 193 as manufactures of metal.—T. D. 21757, G. A. 4597; reversed, T. D. 22361, G. A. 4725.

(p) The usual coverings in which oranges were commonly imported on and prior to August 28, 1894, were boxes or barrels and not baskets; hence a protest claiming such baskets to be free will be overruled without passing on the correctness of the collector's decision assessing them under paragraph 216, act of 1894, by similitude as boxes.—T. D. 18605, G. A. 4003.

(a) The collector added to the invoice value returned correct by the appraiser the value of cartons and proportionate share of packing cases containing hose dutiable under paragraph 353 (1890). Held, that if the collector were dissatisfied with the value found by the appraiser he should have asked a reappraisement.—T. D. 12650, G. A. 1299.

(b) Match boxes of paper containing safety matches held to be usual coverings.—T. D. 12560, G. A. 1244.

(c) Match boxes of paper or of wood and paper, with prepared surfaces upon which the matches are ignited, are usual coverings.—T. D. 12563, G. A. 1247; T. D. 12567, G. A. 1251; T. D. 15463, G. A. 2812.

(d) Tin match boxes containing high-grade matches and used to protect them from dampness and accidental ignition are usual coverings.—T. D. 12567, G. A. 1251, reversed.—T. D. 15463, G. A. 2812; appeal by Slattery (C. C.), (59 Fed. Rep., 450).

(e) Boxes of metal containing violin rosin are the usual coverings and are dutiable, with their contents, as nonenumerated manufactured articles.—T. D. 21961, G. A. 4649.

(f) Wooden deal boxes, with cardboard subdivisions, in which bitters bottles of opal glass were packed, being usual packages for such bottles, are not subject to additional duty as unusual coverings or as designed for any other use than in the bona fide transportation of said bottles to the United States.—T. D. 14851, G. A. 2534; United States v. Richards (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 730).

(g) Leather cases for opera glasses are usual coverings.—T. D. 11213, G. A. 572; T. D. 11241, G. A. 600; T. D. 11412, G. A. 695; T. D. 13073, G. A. 1578.

(h) Silk bags for opera glasses are usual coverings.—T. D. 11213, G. A. 572.

(i) Violin cases of wood held to be usual coverings.—T. D. 10885, G. A. 380; T. D. 11392, G. A. 675.

(j) Bags containing muriate of potash (free under paragraph 685, act of 1890) are usual coverings and free.—T. D. 12108, G. A. 970.

(k) Bags in which pease (dutiable under paragraph 281, act of 1890) were imported held to be the usual coverings, free, and not dutiable as manufactures of cotton.—T. D. 15075, G. A. 2628.

(l) Bags containing gold and silver ore (free under paragraph 667, act of 1890) are free.—T. D. 13051, G. A. 1556.

(m) Bottles containing blacking are dutiable, though usual coverings.—T. D. 12113, G. A. 975.

(n) Bottles containing less than 1 pint and more than one-fourth of a pint, containing Angostura bitters (dutiable under paragraph 240, act of 1894) are free as usual coverings.—T. D. 15852, G. A. 2952.

(o) Cases containing ale and porter in bottles (the ale and porter dutiable under paragraph 316, act of 1883, and the bottles under paragraph 133) are free as usual coverings.—T. D. 10904, G. A. 399.

(p) Straw coverings for bottled malt extract are not unusual coverings and are not subject to additional duty.—T. D. 16568, G. A. 3264.

(q) Straw coverings containing empty bottles (for malt extract) are usual coverings.—T. D. 17961, G. A. 3836.

(r) Tin cans containing tea held free as usual coverings.—T. D. 12564, G. A. 1248.

(s) Tin lining in the form of a chest, in an outer wooden case, and used to protect tea in transportation, is free as usual covering.—T. D. 20702, G. A. 4358.

(a) Paper boxes with ornamental pictures held not to be unusual coverings for handkerchiefs.—T. D. 10467, G. A. 117.

(b) Tin boxes containing bronze powder, designed only for the bona fide transportation thereof and not fit or intended for other uses, are usual coverings. T. D. 21757, G. A. 4597, reversed, and T. D. 21961, G. A. 4649; T. D. 22241, G. A. 4711, and 59 Fed. Rep., 450; 84 id., 443; 96 id., 94, followed.—T. D. 22361, G. A. 4725.

(c) Decorated earthenware jars filled with fish paste, anchovy and other sauces, are not unusual coverings and are not subject to duty of 60 per cent. under paragraph 101, act of 1890, in addition to 45 per cent assessed on the jars with their contents.—T. D. 13513, G. A. 1815.

(d) Glass jars containing pickles and preserves are dutiable, at the rate applicable to their contents, as usual coverings and are not bottles nor vials dutiable under paragraph 88, act of 1894.—T. D. 16098, G. A. 3062.

(e) Glass jars containing preserves and holding 1 pint or less are not vials under paragraph 88, act of 1894, but are dutiable as part of the market value of the merchandise contained in them.—Smith v. United States (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 757).

(f) Small glass jars without necks, having straight inside walls and metal tops, are not unusual coverings for Roquefort cheese within the meaning of this paragraph; nor can they be classified as bottles or bottle glassware. Sustaining the Circuit Court.—United States v. Leggett (66 Fed. Rep., 300).

(g) Cardboard portfolios containing lithographic natural-history charts are free as usual coverings. The invoicing of the charts and portfolios as entireties is not controlling.—T. D. 22241, G. A. 4711.

(h) Earthenware jugs containing natural mineral waters (free under paragraph 650, act of 1890) are usual coverings and are free.—T. D. 10861, G. A. 356.

(i) Glass tubes in which chloride of ethyl, used by surgeons and dentists as a local anæsthetic, is imported are so made that the liquid, which is very volatile, can be directly applied therefrom, in the form of a spray or vapor, to the part to be treated, being volatilized by the warmth of the hand. After the contents are exhausted the tubes are worthless and are thrown away. Held, That the fact of such use does not render the tubes separately dutiable as unusual holdings or coverings designed for use otherwise than in the transportation of the liquid.—In re Hempstead (C. C.), (96 Fed. Rep., 94).

(j) The barrels in which calcined plaster is imported are usual coverings, and the weight of the barrels is not to be included in the dutiable weight.—T. D. 15678, G. A. 2859.

(k) Glass jars or cases with metal tops, filled with Roquefort cheese, are free as usual coverings for goods paying a specific duty.—T. D. 14219, G. A. 2183.

(l) Glass jars containing cheese and being the usual coverings for cheese are free.—T. D. 15819, G. A. 2919.

(m) So-called "autosprays," being small tubular forms of glass, with a narrow neck at each end, to which a metal tube is attached and closed with a metal screw tap, and which contain ether or ethyl chloride, are not unusual coverings and are dutiable at the ad valorem rates to which their contents may be subject or exempt from duty when the contents are assessed at a specific rate.—T. D. 22841, G. A. 4874.

(a) Leather cases are the usual and ordinary coverings of medicine tumblers and are accordingly dutiable at the same rate as their contents (under paragraph 100 as etched glassware).—T. D. 23056, G. A. 4926.

(b) Iron drums are and long have been the usual and necessary coverings of crude glycerin and are free.—T. D. 23131, G. A. 4947.

(c) The usual coverings of goods subject to a specific rate of duty are free unless made dutiable by some express provision of law.—T. D. 23131, G. A. 4947.

(d) Woolen cloths known as italians, dutiable under paragraph 283, act of 1894, imported in wooden cases of American manufacture. Excluding cases the goods were worth less than 50 cents per pound, but including cases they were worth more than 50 cents per pound. Held, that the provisions of paragraph 387, act of 1894, constitute an exception to section 19, act of 1890, which provides that the cost of the coverings shall be included in dutiable value.—T. D. 22462, G. A. 4757.

(e) In apportioning the cost of the outside cases containing merchandise of different kinds, that method must be adopted that seems most equitable and just, and it would appear that in making such apportionment of the charges for cases containing hosiery of different values it should proceed according to the number of dozen of each kind and not according to the value.—Rice v. United States (123 Fed. Rep., 195); T. D. 11082, G. A. 525, reversed.

(f) Glass bottles containing merchandise subject to ad valorem duties are not ejusdem generis with "cartons, cases, crates, * * * coverings of any kind," and do not come within the operation of this section. Such bottles are not "coverings" in the ordinary sense of the word and are specially provided for in the tariff acts.—United States v. Austin (186 U. S., 298).

(g) The special provision in the tariff for filled glass bottles exempts them from the operation of this section as coverings. Consequently, charges for corking, wiring, etc., should not be added to the value of the bottles. They are incident to the contents alone.—Hayes v. United States (150 Fed. Rep., 63; T. D. 27806).

(h) Where an importer claims that certain charges appearing on his invoice have been incorrectly apportioned by the collector in making his assessment of duty, it is incumbent upon such importer to make affirmative proof before the Board of Classification that the action of the collector was in violation of law or was otherwise inequitable and unjust, and if he fails to do so the collector's action will not be disturbed.—T. D. 23620, G. A. 5107.

(i) Furniture vans made of wood and containing household effects that are free of duty under paragraph 504, tariff act of 1897, are not free of duty as the usual coverings of such effects, but are dutiable as manufactures of wood under paragraph 208. Furniture vans are ejusdem generis with the articles indicated as coverings in this section.—T. D. 23817, G. A. 5164.

(j) Where items are illegally added to the invoice value of goods, either by an appraising or liquidating officer, for the purpose of making dutiable value, such addition may be objected to by protest, and the action of the customs officer may be reviewed by the Board of Classification and the courts. (Oberteuffer v. Robertson, 116 U. S., 499, 515–6; 6 Sup. Ct. Rep., 462.) Ocean freight is not properly an item in the dutiable value of imported merchandise under the provisions of the customs administrative act of June 10, 1890. (United States v. Zuricaldy, 71, Fed. Rep., 955.) Charges for transporting merchandise from the place of manufacture to the principal market of the country of production constitute a proper item of value in determining the market value of such merchandise in that principal market, and the finding of the appraising officer as to the principal market is final, but, generally speaking, the determination of whether or not an item is dutiable is the function of the liquidating rather than the appraising officer. (T. D. 23851, G. A. 5170.)

(a) Usual and necessary coverings of goods subject to specific rates of duty, or of goods that are free of duty, are themselves free of duty.—United States v. Leggett (66 Fed. Rep., 300); T. D. 23853, G. A. 5172.

(b) Wooden boxes, though found not to be usual coverings for Sumatra tobacco, are not subject to additional duty under this section, as they are not "designed for use otherwise than in the bona fide transportation of such merchandise to the United States."—Laverge v. United States (119 Fed. Rep., 481), reversing T. D. 21057, G. A. 4422 followed; T. D. 24190, G. A. 5268.

(c) Tea canisters composed of tin and paper, contained in wooden boxes, their dimensions being about 14 inches by 2 feet and holding from 80 to 100 pounds of tea, held to be usual coverings for tea.—Collector v. Jaques (T. D. 23040) followed; T. D. 24288, G. A. 5298.

(d) Tea canisters about 2 feet high and 16 or 18 inches square at the top and bottom, some with square tops opening on hinges and some with desk-shaped tops after the style of a roll-top desk, held to be unusual coverings for tea.—Jackson v. Siegfried (126 Fed. Rep., 837; T. D. 25114), reversing T. D. 20702, G. A. 4358, followed; T. D. 24289, G. A. 5299.

(e) Tea canisters such as were passed on in Nixon v. Jaques (unreported; see T. D. 23040), referred to in T. D. 24288, G. A. 5298, held to be usual and necessary coverings for tea.—Nixon v. Howland (T. D. 26877), affirming T. D. 25066, G. A. 5600.

(f) Bottles are not coverings within the meaning of this section.—United States v. Austin (186 U. S., 298); T. D. 24551, G. A. 5371.

(g) Glass jars not being ejusdem generis with the kinds of coverings enumerated in this section are not coverings within the meaning thereof.—T. D. 24578, G. A. 5383.

(h) Silk wearing apparel in a new leather trunk, the whole packed in a wooden packing case, was imported. Held, that additional duty should not have been assessed on the value of the trunk as an unusual covering.—T. D. 24622, G. A. 5405.

(i) The French general internal-revenue tax on alcohol, which is not collected on goods exported, is a part of the dutiable value of such goods when purchased in the markets of France; but local taxes, designated as "octroi" and "droit de ville," which vary with the locality, can not be properly considered as elements of market value.—Rheinstrom v. United States (118 Fed. Rep., 303), affirming T. D. 20761, G. A. 4368, followed; T. D. 24653, G. A. 5414.

(j) A carboy packed in straw in a basket having a lid attached, this basket being placed in a larger basket, is an uncovered carboy within the meaning of paragraph 99, tariff act of 1897, and is dutiable at the same rate as the merchandise with which it is filled, and the straw and baskets should be treated as packing.—T. D. 24706, G. A. 5436.

(k) The market value of furs exported from London is fixed by adding 5 per cent interest on the price of the furs at the last annual public sale prior to shipment for the period of time intervening between the date of such sale and the date of shipment.—T. D. 24765, G. A. 5464.

(l) Where an item of "commissions" is added by appraising officers to the per se value of merchandise in order to make up its foreign market value, such item can not be held to be nondutiable. T. D. 24780, G. A. 5472, distinguished.—T. D. 24828, G. A. 5504.

(a) The drawback allowed by the German Government on goods exported from Germany is a dutiable item and should be included in the market value of the merchandise.—T. D. 25103, G. A. 5608.

(b) A license fee paid to the patentee in France for the right to use a certain process for making soap is no part of the dutiable value of machinery imported to be used in connection with making soap by that process.—T. D. 25176, G. A. 5637.

(c) Earthenware jugs imported filled with whisky, in packages each containing not less than 1 dozen jugs, are free of duty as the usual coverings for such whisky. T. D. 25106, G. A. 5611, modified.—T. D. 25534, G. A. 5772.

(d) Where commissions appearing in an invoice form no part of the appraised value of the merchandise as returned by the appraising officer, the collector is without authority to include them in the invoice of dutiable value upon a mere inspection of the invoice, without further evidence or inquiry as to the real nature of such items.—United States v. Lahey (132 Fed. Rep., 181; T. D. 25393), affirming T. D. 24780, G. A. 5472, and United States v. Smith (132 Fed. Rep., 1007; T. D. 25394), affirming T. D. 24721, G. A. 5443, and in effect overruling T. D. 24037, G. A. 5221, followed; T. D. 25661, G. A. 5808.

(e) The date of the certification of an invoice by the United States consul is conclusive evidence of the time of exportation for the purpose of assessing duty upon imported merchandise by virtue of section 25, tariff act of 1894.—United States v. Lawrence (137 Fed. Rep., 466; T. D. 26121), reversing 127 id., 750; T. D. 25073.

(f) It is the final action of a duly authorized appraising officer which fixes the dutiable value of imported merchandise. The collector is as much bound by this action as are the importers. In liquidating an entry of merchandise subject to ad valorem duty, the collector must ascertain the amount of duty by applying the rate which the law provides to the value as stated in the invoice, unless the same is raised upon entry or by an appraisiug officer, and then to the value as stated in the entry or in the final appraisement. Certain imported merchandise subject to an ad valorem duty was entered at an invoice value of 400 lire and advanced by the local appraiser to a value of 600 lire. An appeal was taken to a general appraiser, who found that the value was that stated in the invoice, but reported that the price paid was 600 lire, and hence the invoice was fraudulent. The goods were seized, and released upon the payment of a fine equal to the amount of duty. Duty was then assessed upon the merchandise upon the value of 600 lire. Held, that 400 lire being the market value as found by the last appraisement duty should have been assessed upon this amount.—T. D. 25970, G. A. 5896.

(g) The customs administrative act places all questions respecting the value of imported merchandise and coverings and the ascertainment of the charges made dutiable by that act within the exclusive jurisdiction of appraising officers, and collectors or customs have no power under said act to vary the market value of imported merchandise as returned by the appraiser, either by way of adding so-called dutiable charges or otherwise, except that they may not assess duty upon less than the invoice or entered value. The power which the collector has to determine the invoice value of imported merchandise under section 7 of said act permits him to consider merely those items in the invoice which, according to their invoice description, are elements of dutiable value as defined by section 19 of said act, and does not involve the right to include items ostensibly nondutiable.—T. D. 26514, G. A. 6082.

(a) Taxes known in France as "droit de ville" and "octroi," which are special local taxes assessed on alcohol consumed in the markets of France, are nondutiable items and should not be added to make market value of goods containing alcohol exported from that country.—United States v. Godillot (139 Fed. Rep., 1; T. D. 26272), affirming 131 id., 653, followed; T. D. 26771, G. A. 6168.

(b) The words in this section, "in the condition in which such merchandise is bought and sold for exportation to the United States," have a general rather than a special significance and relate to the condition in which such merchandise is generally bought and sold in the country from whence that particular merchandise is exported, rather than the condition in which any particular merchandise is at the time it is exported. If imported merchandise increases in value between the date of exportation and the date of importation into the United States, the dutiable value is the value of the merchandise when it is imported.—T. D. 26956, G. A. 6247.

(c) When merchandise is imported contained in unusual coverings, the valuation of the coverings should be added to the value of the merchandise per se and duty at the rate applicable to the merchandise levied on this valuation. In addition, duty should be assessed on the coverings at the rate properly applicable thereto under the tariff law.—United States v. Park (152 Fed. Rep., 142; T. D. 27833), reversing 142 id., 202; T. D. 26973, and T. D. 26608, G. A. 6111.

(d) Where appraisers ascertain the market value of goods exported from a foreign country under the provisions of this section, such value is regulated by the price at which such goods are bought and sold in usual wholesale quantities for home consumption at the time of exportation and not by the export price of such goods where the two values differ.—United States v. Passavant (169 U. S., 16); T. D. 27204, G. A. 6309.

(e) The practice at the several ports for customs officers to ignore, as a matter of mutual consent, fractional parts of a dollar less than 50 cents in the invoice or entered value of goods and to count 50 cents and upward as a dollar in assessing duties on importations of merchandise is a reasonable and desirable one and would seem in the long run to operate as favorably to the importers as to the Government. Such practice is justified under the legal maxim de minimis non curat lex (the law does not notice or care for trifling matters).—T. D. 27716, G. A. 6479.

(f) Wooden cases equipped with iron hinges, hasps, and staples and prepared so as to admit of being locked are unusual coverings for bottles of wine and are subject to the same rate of duty as that with which they would be charged if separately imported.—T. D. 27797, G. A. 6509.

(g) An invoice item of "commission" which was shown to represent a charge by so-called converters for services to the importers in connection with receiving the goods from the manufacturer and preparing them for shipment to the United States, including dyeing and finishing, was held, so far as the item included the charge for dyeing and finishing, to be a part of the dutiable value, and that in the absence of satisfactory evidence as to the character of the other elements of the item it should be presumed that they also were properly included in the appraised value.—Erlanger v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 949; T. D. 28236), affirming 152 id., 576; T. D. 27874).

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 7, TARIFF ACT OF MARCH 3, 1883.

(h) This section did not take effect until July 1, 1883.—Babson v. Robertson (34 Fed. Rep., 203); overruled.

(a) This section took effect immediately upon the passage of the act.—Robertson v. Bradbury (132 U. S., 491).

(b) The plaintiff below entered an importation of goods upon the following invoice:

	Francs.
Bought	8,670.75
Discount for cash on gross amount 2 per cent, 8,760.60	175.30
	8,494.45

Terms cash; if not paid, interest to be added at the rate of 6 per cent. As cash had not been paid, the 2 per cent discount was disallowed by the appraisers. The collector thereupon fixed the value of the goods as of the invoice price of 8,670.75 francs and exacted duty thereon, although the actual market value of the goods in the country of exportation was 8,494.95 francs. Held, that the latter sum was also the invoice value and that the duty on the 2 per cent was improperly exacted.—Arthur v. Goddard (96 U. S., 145).

(c) Charges for "finishing and adornment" of cotton embroideries held dutiable.—T. D. 10680, G. A. 264.

(d) The agent of the importer bought at auction sealskins "undressed" or "in salt." He then dyed, dressed, "machined," insured, packed, and shipped them. The cost to the importer was the price paid for the green goods at auction, the auctioneer's commissions, the cost of dressing, dyeing, machining, fire insurance during the process of dressing, interest on the money advanced by the agent, his commissions, and the cost of packing. Held, that the brokerage, commissions, and packing are not dutiable value.—Glanz v. Spalding (24 Fed. Rep., 20).

(e) Prior to March 3, 1883, a collector of customs was required by law to ascertain the dutiable value of imported goods by adding to their cost at the place of production the cost of transporting them to the place of shipment to the United States and of the box or case in which they were shipped. This aggregate was called their price or value "free on board," which, in the absence of fraud, was taken to be their dutiable value. The act of March 3, 1883, repealed this provision. Shortly after this section took effect, and in ignorance of its passage, a shipment of goods produced in Switzerland was made at Antwerp, the consular invoice of which contained in detail the original cost of the goods in Switzerland, the cost of transportation separately stated, and the aggregate "free on board at Antwerp." On their arrival at the port of New York the consignee cabled for a new invoice to conform to the changed law. One was sent, but without a consular certificate. The consignee presented both invoices at the custom-house and asked to use the second as explanatory of the first and to enter the goods at their net value, charges off. The return of the weigher showed a less quantity of goods than that stated in the invoice. The custom-house officers required the importer to enter the goods at their dutiable value according to the first invoice and gave him to understand that that was all he could do. The collector decided, and the Secretary confirmed the decision, that the cost of transportation, etc., was not to be deducted from the dutiable value of the goods and that the duties were to be collected on the quantity as shown by the invoice. Held, (1) that the levy after March 3, 1883, on a valuation including the cost of transportation from the place of production to the place of shipment was contrary to law; (2) that under the circumstances the importer was not bound to ask for an appraisement under R. S. 2926; (3) that the collector was not entitled to exact a duty upon a deficiency in weight arising from loss of goods and not from shrinkage; (4) that the payment of duties under these circumstances was not voluntary.—Robertson v. Bradbury (132 U. S., 491).

(a) Rice was ground so as to make it dutiable as rice meal. The expense of changiug the goods from one condition to the other is a part of the dutiable value and is not one of the charges made nondutiable by this section.—Bullock v. Magone (39 Fed. Rep., 191).

(b) Under this section (referring to R. S. 2907) if skeining worsted or mohair yarns is necessary to make them merchantable yarns the cost of skeining is a part of the value of the goods and subject to duty. If skeining is necessary only for convenience in transportation from the producer to the consumer, it is a charge for putting up, preparing, and packing for shipment, and the extra cost of skeining is not to be added to the other cost in computing the duty.—Stephenson v. Cooper (C. C.), (44 Fed. Rep., 53).

(c) Increasing the valuation made by appraisers to cover the expense of ticketing, taping, or tying up pieces of cloth of the length ordered and placing them ready for shipment is in violation of this section, which repeals preexisting laws upon the subject and provides that certain charges theretofore entering into the computation of value could no longer be considered. Sustaining the Circuit Court.—Magone v. Origet (C. C. A.), (70 Fed. Rep., 778).

(d) A statute which requires the dutiable value of goods to be reached by adding to the market value of the goods the cost of transportation and other defined charges does not authorize the appraiser to reach the amount of such cost and charges by an estimate or percentage, and an importer who pays duties on an importation thus calculated may, in an action brought to recover such as were illegally exacted, show wherein such estimate or percentage was illegal and excessive.—Robertson v. Frank Brothers & Co. (132 U. S., 17).

(e) Where an importer has caused rice to be ground before shipment into granules of sufficient fineness to entitle it under the rulings of the Treasury Department to be entered at a lower rate of duty than unground rice, the cost of granulation forms part of the dutiable value of the article and can not be deducted by the importer.—Bullock v. Magone (C. C.), (39 Fed. Rep., 191).

(f) The cost of cutting cloth into lengths of 10, 15, and 20 yards is a proper element of dutiable value.—T. D. 10481, G. A. 131.

(g) Since this act duties can be exacted only upon an appraisement of the market value of the goods per se. Where on the invoice the gross value of the goods is stated, and a deduction made of specific packing charges, and the net amount is then carried out as the market value of the goods per se, an appraisement which simply disallows the charges and adds them again to make dutiable value, or states that they are to be added to the market value, is not an appraisement of the goods per se, but an addition of charges, and does not justify the collector in exacting duty on the value of the goods increased by the amount of such charges.—Morris v. Cadwalader (33 Fed. Rep., 243).

(h) The evidence showed that the manufacturers were accustomed to sell in a foreign market to others than commission men at a fixed price, including in the price an item which they called commission. The item so charged was the discount which the manufacturers were accustomed to allow commission merchants who purchased direct from them. There was evidence that in buying goods from a concern which was a manufacturer and also a commission house the price of the goods purchased of them was the same as for those of their own manufacture and for similar goods manufactured by others which they were selling on commission. Held, that the custom-house officers in appraising the goods should properly include as a part of the actual manufacturing price the entire sum paid by the importers to the commission men or the manufacturers, no part of which was properly chargeable as commission. 84 Fed. Rep., 151, reversed.—United States v. Herrman (C. C. A.), (91 Fed. Rep., 116).

(a) In determining the dutiable market value of imported merchandise it is within the authority of the designated officers to inquire into the origin of the disputed items claimed to be commissions and charges and to ascertain whether they are truly such or part of the wholesale price which the importers paid for the merchandise. 59 Fed. Rep., 570, reversed.—United States v. Kenworthy (C. C. A.), (68 Fed. Rep., 904).

(b) It appearing that certain wool purchased from M. & Son, of Glasgow, for importation by K. & Bro. had previously been sold by other persons to M. & Son and a commission paid by M. & Son upon their purchase, that the price paid by K. & Bro. included said commission, and that they also paid their brokers a commission on their purchase of the wool, the customs officials in determining the dutiable market value of the wool refused to treat the commissions paid by M. & Son in the prior and independent transaction as a "charge" within the meaning of this section and took into consideration the fact that that commission was a part of the price paid for the wool. Held, that in the absence of fraud their decision and valuation was final and conclusive. 59 Fed. Rep., 570, reversed.—United States v. Kenworthy (C. C. A.), (68 Fed. Rep., 904).

(c) Upon the facts so found the commission paid by M. & Son on their prior purchase was not a "charge" to be excluded in ascertaining value.—Id.

(d) Additions "prorated" on reappraisement on coverings.—T. D. 10721, G. A. 274.

(e) The purpose of this section was to relieve importers from the payment of duty upon the genuine means of preservation of merchandise in course of transportation by removing the duty upon the box, wrappings, or coverings that were usual or necessary in inclosing, protecting, and carrying the goods and imposing a duty amounting to a penalty on packages which were intended for subsequent use.—Winters v. Cadwalader (C. C.), (42 Fed. Rep., 405).

(f). The effect of this section was to exclude from the estimate of the amount of duties collectible upon imported goods the "charges" specified in R. S. 2907 and 2908, including the value of the usual and necessary sacks, crates, boxes, or coverings of any kind not composed of materials or made in any form designed to evade duties thereon, but used in the bona fide transportation of such goods to the United States. The duties, therefore, for which plaintiffs were liable in respect to the oranges they imported were to be ascertained with reference only to their true and actual market value. That the collector made a reduction of the invoice value of the charges is of no consequence, because such charges were not dutiable items. He did what the law did not authorize him to do, namely, increased the dutiable value of the oranges, although they were invoiced and entered at their true and market value.—Badger v. Cusimano (130 U. S., 39, 41).

(g) Leather cases containing tumblers and minims were assessed at 100 per cent as unusual coverings and claimed to be free as usual coverings. Held, that the cases form a part of the merchandise rather than coverings, and the importer having claimed that they were free the protest is overruled and the assessment stands.—T. D. 13166, G. A. 1587.

(h) This section not only repeals R. S. 2907, but positively prohibits the value of the coverings from being estimated as part of the dutiable value, and therefore the value of barrels in which Portland cement is imported can not be added to the wholesale price of the latter as an element of its dutiable value.—Meyers v. Shurtleff (23 Fed. Rep., 577).

(a) Firearms, caps, and wads were incased in boxes and coverings which were the usual and necessary coverings for them for transportation. The value of the boxes and coverings was included in the invoice value of the goods, and at the time of the entry the importer wrote on the invoice the separate value of the boxes and coverings. Held, that duty can not be exacted on the entire invoice value, but must be charged upon the entire invoice less the value of the boxes, coverings, etc.—Tryon v. Hartranft (31 Fed. Rep., 443).

(b) Cubical blocks capable of being arranged in a series of pictures were imported in a box which contained pictures from which the pictures into which the blocks were arranged, and a similar picture was on the top of the lid. Testimony was given that the picture was placed on the lid to save varnishing it. Held, that as the picture alone is used, and it differs in its use in no wise from the pictures contained in the box, the importer is not liable to 100 per cent.—Winters v. Cadwalader (C. C.), (42 Fed. Rep., 405).

(c) Cheap cups and saucers were imported in paper boxes closed by brass clasps, each box containing only a single pair, wrapped in tissue paper (entered as decorated china under paragraph 125). Held, that if said coverings were intended for use only in transportation and for no other use, and were not intended to enhance the value, increase the sale, or facilitate the selling, they were free; otherwise they were dutiable.—Meyer v. Cooper (C. C.), (44 Fed. Rep., 55).

(d) Where the cartons are of the usual kind known to the trade before the act of 1883 as customarily used for covering and transporting goods, and are intended to accompany them and remain with them in the hands of the retail dealer until the goods are sold to the customer, they are designed for use in the bona fide transportation of goods to the United States within the meaning of this act, and their cost or value is not dutiable.—Oberteuffer v. Robertson (116 U. S., 499), reversing 24 Fed. Rep., 852.

(e) Under this act the value of the paper cartons or boxes in which hosiery and gloves are packed in Germany, and the cost or value of the packing of the goods in cartons and of the cartons in an outer case, are not dutiable items, either by themselves or as part of the market value of the goods, unless the cartons are of a material or form designed to evade duties thereon or are designed for use other than in the bona fide transportation of the goods to the United States.—Oberteuffer v. Robertson (116 U. S., 499).

(f) Under this section the appraiser is forbidden to add the value of the usual or necessary boxes or coverings in fixing the value of the goods, provided such boxes or coverings are only designed for use in the transportation of goods to the United States. If the value of the boxes be added without finding other design, the appraisement and the liquidation based upon it will be void, and that defense will be available to the importer. "Use in the transportation to the United States" includes transportation to the consumer so long as the boxes are not broken. But the appraiser is authorized to inquire into the design of the boxes or coverings, and if he finds them designed for other than transportation uses his findings and the liquidation based upon it can not be reviewed in a suit to enforce the payment of the duties, but only in a suit by the importer against the collector to recover duties paid.—United States v. Thurber (28 Fed. Rep., 56).

(g) In no case is the value of the covering to be added to the value of the goods. If dutiable at all, the covering is dutiable at 100 per cent, without regard to the rate of duty on the goods.—Id.

(h) Safety matches were imported put up in small boxes, each having a prepared surface convenient for lighting the matches. The appraiser raised the invoice value of the goods by the amount of the value of the boxes "to make market value in marketable coudition," and duties on the whole were liquidated at 35 per cent, the rate on the matches. The importer had paid the correct amount on the matches as invoiced. This suit brought for the duty on the added value. The Government contended that the liquidation was final and conclusive and could not be questioned in this action. Held, that if the appraiser added the cost of the boxes to make market value of the matches and boxes together, without any inquiry or finding whether the boxes were for any other use than transportation to the United States, his act was contrary to the statute and in excess of power and the appraisement and liquidation were void. Under such instruction the jury found for the defendant.—United States v. Thurber (28 Fed. Rep., 56).

(a) Boxes containing safety matches and parlor matches, being of use in the bona fide transportation of the matches, are free although the boxes are put to a use otherwise than in the transportation. T. D. 11862, G. A. 853; T. D. 10333, G. A. 54, and 18 Opin. Atty. Gen., 510, overruled.—Rosenstein v. Magone (34 Fed. Rep., 120); Magone v. Rosenstein (142 U. S., 604).

(b) Paper violin cases invoiced separately from the violins, though packed together, are dutiable as paper boxes and are not subject to the additional duty of 100 per cent.—T. D. 10223, G. A. 1.

(c) Violin cases held to be usual coverings.—T. D. 10320, G. A. 41.

(d) Coverings for silk goods held not dutiable.—T. D. 10327, G. A. 48.

(e) Cases for barometers held to be usual coverings.—T. D. 11868, G. A. 859; T. D. 10325, G. A. 46.

(f) Boxes containing dominoes held to be usual coverings.—T. D. 11868, G. A. 859.

(g) Cases containing pipes held to be usual coverings.—T. D. 10248, G. A. 26.

(h) Boxes containing pencil leads held to be usual coverings.—T. D. 11867, G. A. 858.

(i) Coverings for telescopes held to be usual coverings.—T. D. 10325, G. A. 46; T. D. 11868, G. A. 859.

(j) Coverings for magic lanterns, reading glasses, and compasses held to be usual.—T. D. 10325, G. A. 46.

(k) Coverings for mathematical instruments held to be usual.—T. D. 10325, G. A. 46; T. D. 10327, G. A. 48.

(l) If coverings are dutiable at all, they are dutiable at 100 per cent, without regard to the rate levied on the goods.—T. D. 10574, G. A. 224.

(m) Cases for opera glasses held to be usual coverings.—T. D. 11868, G. A. 859; T. D. 11871, G. A. 862.

(n) Paraffin match boxes are usual coverings.—T. D. 11862, G. A. 853.

(o) Leather cases for opera glasses, telescopes, etc., held to be usual coverings.—T. D. 11697, G. A. 802.

(p) Leather cases containing watches held to be usual coverings.—T. D. 13171, G. A. 1592.

(q) Leather case for aneroids, Abney levels, and cliuometers held not to be usual coverings.—T. D. 12346, G. A. 1118.

(r) Leather cases for dissecting microscopes, wide-angle lenses, Ruhmkorff coils, railroad lenses, and pocket barometers held to be the usual but not necessary coverings and to be dutiable.—T. D. 12335, G. A. 1107.

(a) Leather cases containing combs are dutiable as coverings for use other than in the transportation of goods, at 100 per cent, and not at the rate for the combs.—T. D. 10574, G. A. 224.

(b) Certain violin cases held dutiable at 100 per cent.—T. D. 10251, G. A. 29.

(c) Violin cases worth from $17 to $22 each are prima facie extraordinary and unusual coverings.—T. D. 10488, G. A. 138.

(d) Confectionery boxes of bright metal about 1⅝ inches long, three-fourths of an inch wide, and three-eighths of an inch deep, with sliding top, the boxes equaling or exceeding the contents in value, are dutiable as unusual coverings.—T. D. 12320, G. A. 1092.

(e) Boxes for safety matches, safety flaming matches, and parlor paraffin matches are dutiable as unusual coverings at 100 per cent.—T. D. 10333, G. A. 54; T. D. 11862, G. A. 853; overruled, Rosenstein v. Magone (34 Fed. Rep., 120); Magone v. Rosenstein (141 U. S., 604).

(f) Bottles containing olive oil (dutiable under paragraph 44, act of 1890) are articles of imported merchandise and subject to the provisions of this section.—T. D. 12226, G. A. 1040.

(g) The customary packages in which biscuit were imported were in tin boxes on which it was not unusual to employ more or less ornamentation. The testimony was that crackers in ornamental boxes sold for more than those in plain. Held, that if ornamental boxes enhanced the value and increased the facilities for the sale of the crackers contained therein, then they had a use independent of their employment in the importation of merchandise and were dutiable at 100 per cent.—Martindale v. Cadwalader (C. C.), (42 Fed. Rep., 403).

(h) Tin cans containing lobsters imported from Prince Edward Island and from Halifax, Nova Scotia, are subject to duty under the act of February 8, 1875, section 4, clause 6 (18 Stat., 307). Section 7 of the act of 1883 has no reference to the special duty imposed upon tin cans containing fish.—Russell v. Worthington (23 Fed. Rep., 248).

(i) Glass bottles containing ale and porter advanced from 7 to 9 pence and additional duty assessed.—T. D. 10641, G. A. 225.

DECISIONS UNDER EARLIER STATUTES PERTAINING TO SAME SUBJECT-MATTER.

(j) Where wool was baled up before it was purchased the words "market value" in the act of 1842 include the cost of coverings as well as the goods.—Harding v. Whitney (4 Cliff., 96; 11 Int. Rev. Rec., 103; 11 Fed. Cas., 496).

(k) Where the price paid for the merchandise included the box, package, or covering, the appraisers ascertain the actual market value or wholesale price of the merchandise, in the condition as purchased at the time, in the principal markets of the country from which the same was imported. Charges for baling or covering in such cases are not added, because they are included in the purchase as part of the merchandise.—Id.

(l) The act of May 29, 1830 (4 Stat., 49), fixed the duty on molasses at 5 cents a gallon. Section 7 of the act of July 14, 1832 (4 Stat., 583, 591), directed that goods should be appraised at their actual value at the time of purchase and place of exportation. The compromise act of March 2, 1833 (4 Stat., 635), directed that in all cases where duties imposed on foreign imports should exceed 20 per cent on the value thereof one-tenth of such excess should be deducted biennially. Molasses having been imported under these acts the collector fixed the duty as follows:

Duty on 36,031 gallons at 5 cents per gallon		$1,801.55
Value including packages, etc	$6,309.00
Twenty per centum thereon	932.76
Excess at 5 cents per gallon	539.75
Deduct four-tenths of this excess		215.90
Net duty		1,585.65

The importer's method of calculation was as follows:

Duty on 36,031 gallons at 5 cents per gallon		$1,801.55
Value excluding packages, etc	$4,663.82
Twenty per centum thereon	932.76
Excess at 5 cents per gallon	868.79
Deduct four-tenths of this excess		347.51
Net duty		1,454.04

Held, that the cost of the packages in which the molasses was contained formed a proper item of its value on which to calculate the 20 per cent.—United States v. Clement (Crabbe, 499; 25 Fed. Cas., 461).

(a) But if, in addition to including the value of the packages in that of the molasses, a separate duty had been charged on them it would have been wrongly imposed.—Id.

(b) By a proper construction of section 17 of the act of August 30, 1842 (5 Stat., 548), and the act of March 3, 1851, a commission should in all cases be added to the invoice value, although in fact no commission was paid and although it is not customary for importers of the article in question to pay any commission.—Norcross v. Greeley (1 Curt., 114; 15 Law Rep., 149; 29 Hunt Mer. Mag., 203; 18 Fed. Cas., 301).

(c) Where the rate of commission added by the collector is that prescribed by the Secretary as the usual one, it is incumbent upon the merchant to show that it is higher than the rate usually paid when any commission is paid.—Id.

(d) The rate of commissions must be ascertained in the same manner as the value of the goods, and a collector has no authority, even under instructions from the Treasury Department, to charge an arbitrary rate of commissions (under act of 1842).—Munsell v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 364; 17 Fed. Cas., 999).

(e) Commissions on importations from continental Europe can not be charged for in excess of 2 per cent, except that commissions on importations from Paris may be charged at the rate of 3 per cent.—Benkard v. Schell (5 Int. Rev. Rec. (1867), 3; 3 Fed. Cas., 192).

(f) Where the usual charges for commissions on goods purchased in China was 2 per cent, it was erroneous for the custom-house to increase the charges for commissions.—Riess v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 381; 18 How. Prac., 87; 20 Fed. Cas., 774).

(g) A charge of commissions "at the usual rate" forms part of the dutiable value. This charge must be made whether the importer has paid any commissions or not, and a charge for commissions at a rate higher than the usual rate can not be made even though the importer has paid a higher rate.—Hutton v. Schell (6 Blatchf., 48; 7 Int. Rev. Rec., 84; 12 Fed. Cas., 1095).

(h) The market value at the port of exportation is (in 1859) to be taken as the price of the goods, and where a purchaser has had a discount allowed him on his purchase he is not entitled to have such discount deducted from the invoice value.—Riess v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 381; 18 How. Prac., 87; 20 Fed. Cas., 774).

(a) An invoice of Irish linens (1853) as entered carried out the prices in gross, with a credit underwritten, "Deduct discount allowed for cash, 7½ per cent." The invoice, with the allowance of such discount, gave the true market value of the linens. The appraisers found the invoice to be correct as made out and did not appraise the linens according to their judgment, but, in obedience to circular instructions from the Secretary of October 29, 1847, and August 7, 1848, valued them at the invoice price less a discount of 2½ per cent, and duties were exacted on the remaining 5 per cent. The usage of the trade was to make up invoice prices of linens at nominal prices and reduce those to the true market value by discounts and rebatements. Held, that under the usage proved the sum to which an invoice was reduced by the rebatement, and not its gross sum, must be regarded as representing the real invoice price.—Gray v. Lawrence (3 Blatchf., 117; 10 Fed. Cas., 1031).

(b) The Secretary had no legal power to direct the judgment of the appraisers in valuing goods or adding to or subtracting from the charges in the invoices for the purpose of determining market value, and the increase of the invoice in the manner in which it was done was without authority of law.—Id.

(c) The statement in an invoice of goods that 2½ per cent will be deducted for cash payment will not authorize a corresponding deduction in the valuation on which duties shall be assessed.—Ballard v. Thomas (19 How., 382).

(d) The plaintiff is not entitled to recover the duty levied on charges frais jusqu'à bord (charges and commissions to the merchant who received the merchandise at Havre and put it on board ship).—Bartels v. Schell (16 Fed. Rep., 341); Bartels v. Redfield (16 Fed. Rep., 336).

(e) Whether the commission, which is to be added as a dutiable charge, is to be cast on the foot of the invoice, with or without the addition of the charges, depends on usage and is not fixed by law.—Warren v. Peaslee (2 Curt., 231; 29 Fed. Cas., 280).

(f) The weight of boxes, cases, or packages in which goods are imported is not the subject of appraisement within the meaning of section 8, act of 1846.—Wilson v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 316; 30 Fed. Cas., 147).

(g) Where the appraisers did not raise the invoice value, but added thereto an arbitrary and fictitious charge for export duty at the port of exportation, such addition was erroneous.—Riess v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 381; 18 How. Prac., 87; 20 Fed. Cas., 774).

(h) Where the question was of the appraisement of concentrated molasses, the appraisers were right in assessing it at its market value where produced, as affected by an export duty, whether that duty was paid in this case or not.—Belcher v. Linn (24 How., 508).

(i) Lemons taken on board at San Remo, and the freight on them from San Remo to Genoa was added to the dutiable charges, increasing the invoice value more than 10 per cent, an additional duty of 20 per cent was imposed. The addition by the appraisers of the freight between San Remo and Genoa was, under the circumstances of this case, illegal.—Vaccari v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 368; 28 Fed. Cas., 862).

(j) Blankets were purchased at Leeds for less than 75 cents each, sent to Liverpool, and exported to the United States. The charges for transporting them to Liverpool, added to the original price, would make the cost at the place of shipment greater than 75 cents each. Held, that, under act of July 14, 1832 (4 Stat., 583), section 2, clause 2, the cost of transportation to Liverpool must be taken into account in estimating the value, and that the blankets are dutiable at 5 per cent.—Hoffman v. Williams (Taney, 69; 12 Fed. Cas., 306).

(a) Expenses of transportation from Paris to Havre to get the merchandise on shipboard are (in 1855) dutiable charges.—Warren v. Peaslee, (2 Curt., 231; 29 Fed. Cas., 280).

(b) Sugars transported from Cuba to Halifax and then imported. Held, that under the act of 1842 the duties were to be assessed upon the market value of the sugars in Cuba at the time they were shipped from Halifax, with the addition of the usual charges at Halifax. Freight from Cuba to Halifax is not to be added.—Barnard v. Morton (1 Spr., 186; 2 Fed. Cas., 840).

(c) The plaintiff entered into a contract with T. & Co. for the transportation of iron from Wales to the United States, in pursuance of which contract T. & Co. employed coasting vessels to bring it from Wales to Liverpool, where it was transshipped on board their packets to Boston. Held, that the cost of transportation from Wales to Liverpool is not a dutiable charge which can be added to the market price.—Forman v. Peaslee (21 Law Rep., 273; 9 Fed. Cas., 452).

(d) Where merchandise was shipped from Smyrna to the United States via Liverpool, where it was to be and was transferred to another vessel, it was held that an estimated freight from Smyrna to Liverpool could not be added to the market value and charges at Smyrna to make up the dutiable value under the act of March 3, 1851. In such a case Smyrna and not Liverpool is the place from whence the merchandise is imported into the United States.—Gant v. Peaslee (2 Curt., 250; 9 Fed. Cas., 1143).

(e) Where merchandise was shipped from Canton to the United States via Manila, where it was to be and was transshipped and a separate freight paid to Manila, the charge for freight could not be added to the market value at Canton as one of the dutiable charges, but all charges incurred at Manila (porterage, coolie hire, duties paid to the custom-house, and commissions to Manila forwarding agents) should be added as dutiable charges.—Millar v. Millar (2 Curt., 256; 17 Fed. Cas., 289).

(f) A cargo of goods was shipped from Canton to London, thence to New York. The freight from Canton to London was added as part of the dutiable value. Held, that this charge was not authorized.—Grinnell v. Lawrence (1 Blatchf., 346; 19 Hunt Mer. Mag., 533; 11 Fed. Cas., 54).

(g) Held, also, that even if this freight were a proper charge it would form no part of the "appraised value" of the goods and its addition would not authorize the imposition of the 20 per cent penalty under the act of July 30, 1846, section 8.—Id

(h) Additions to the market value of railroad iron of freight and transportation charges from Wales to London to Liverpool are illegal where it appears that the Welsh sales are free on board.—Bliss v. Redfield, Same v. Schell, Crook v. Bronson, Same v. Redfield (17 Leg. Int., 373; 3 Fed. Cas., 714).

(i) Sea freight is not a dutiable charge.—Id.

(j) Freight and transportation from the port of shipment is not a dutiable charge under the act of 1857.—Benkard v. Schell (5 Int. Rev. Rec. (1867), 3; 3 Fed. Cas., 192).

(k) The additional charges authorized to be added to the appraised value may be added by the appraisers with the sanction of the collector. Cost of transportation from the interior to the place of exportation is not included in charges under the act of March 3, 1851.—Gibb v. Washington (1 McAll, 430; 10 Fed. Cas., 288).

(a) Where wool the growth and product of Buenos Ayres was purchased there for transportation to New York, but on account of the blockade of Buenos Ayres was transported in lighters to Montevideo and shipped thence to New York, held that the costs and charges of such transportation from Buenos Ayres to Montevideo could not be added as a part of the dutiable value of the goods.—Wilbur v. Lawrence (2 Blatchf., 314; 29 Fed. Cas., 1188).

(b) There is nothing in the act of March 3, 1851 (9 Stat., 629), which justifies a collector in requiring an importer to add to his invoice, as forming part of the dutiable value, charges for inland or coastwise transportation, whether by land or water, from the place of its production or manufacture to another place, before it leaves its foreign port of shipment for the United States.—Hutton v. Schell (6 Blatchf., 48; 7 Int. Rev. Rec., 84; 12 Fed. Cas., 1095).

(c) When the railroad company hauled the property to its station free of charge, no forfeiture ensued for not adding (under R. S. 2907) the expense usually incurred for that service.—United States v. Two Thousand One Hundred and Seventeen Bushels of Malt (8 Fed. Rep., 224).

(d) Internal transportation charges for getting the goods from the place of manufacture to the place of shipment, even if not dutiable elements of market value, become a part of the entered value when they are included in the entry as a part of the market value, because that is thought to be the best way, without indicating that such inclusion was objected to. In such case the charges form an indisputable part of the entered value, which the collector can not reduce.—Vantine v. United States (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 519).

(e) Under R. S. 2907 and the act of June 22, 1874, section 14 (18 Stat., 186, 189), as construed by the Treasury Department for many years without any attempt to change it or until now to question its correctness, goods imported into the United States from one country, which in transportation to the port of shipment pass through another country, are not subject to have transportation charges in passing through that other country added to their original cost in order to determine their dutiable value.—Robertson v. Downing (127 U. S., 607).

(f) In calculating the duties under section 4, act of April 20, 1818, on ad valorem goods, the actual cost is to be taken, including all charges except commissions, outside packages, and insurance.—United States v. May (3 Mason, 98; 26 Fed. Cas., 1224).

(g) If the importer actually pays commissions, the charge is excepted.—Id.

(h) Nor is it any objection that an agent of the importer makes him debtor for the goods in the invoice as bought of the agent if in fact he has acted only as agent for the owner in the purchase.—Id.

(i) The expense of sacks in which salt is packed for importation from Liverpool is embraced under the words "all costs" and is to be added to the market value to ascertain dutiable value.—Barnard et al. v. Morton (1 Curt., 404; 2 Fed. Cas., 837).

(j) Where silks were shipped from China to New York by way of London, held that the value of the silks in the country of production, with the expenses of charges, commissions, etc., which accrued prior to their being put on shipboard at the place of exportation, constituted their dutiable value, and that the expense and freight of conveying the goods from China to London formed no part of such value.—Griswold v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 145; 11 Fed. Cas., 67).

(a) The actual market value or wholesale price of the merchandise subject to ad valorem duty, or where the duty was based upon or regulated by the value of the square yard or of any specific quantity of the same, was required to be ascertained as it was in the principal markets of the country from which it was imported and at the time it was purchased, and that there should be added thereto, as the true value upon which the duties should be assessed, all costs and charges except insurance, but including a charge for commissions.—Harding v. Whitney (4 Cliff., 96; 11 Int. Rev. Rec., 103; 11 Fed. Cas., 496).

(b) The same provision was incorporated in the act of March 3, 1851, except that the actual market value or wholesale price of the merchandise under the latter act was to be ascertained at the period and place of exportation.—Id.

(c) The additional charges authorized by law to be added to the appraised value may be made by the appraisers with the sanction of the collector.—Gibb v. Washington (1 McAll 430; 10 Fed. Cas., 288).

(d) A charge for "costs and charges" must include those actually paid aud nothing more, aud it is not lawful to insert an arbitrary estimate.—Hutton v. Schell (6 Blatchf., 48; 7 Int. Rev. Rec., 84; 12 Fed. Cas., 1095).

(e) Lemons and oranges were bought in bulk in Sicily at certain rates per thousand and afterwards wrapped one by one and packed in boxes furnished by the purchaser. Under this act the dutiable value of imported merchandise is the actual market value or wholesale price at the port of exportation in the principal markets of the country from which the same was exported, without any addition for commissions, brokerage, costs of transportation, or other like costs in placing the goods on shipboard.—Cobb v. Hamlin (3 Cliff., 191; 8 Int. Rev. Rec., 121; 5 Fed. Cas., 1128).

(f) Where goods are purchased in bulk and subsequently put into packages, boxes, or coverings by the buyer for convenience of preservation, a market value does not include such packing.—Id.

(g) Under the act of 1832 the charges and expenses at the place of exportation, which, by section 15, in computation of ad valorem rates of duty form no part of the actual value, are not to be taken in determining the value of wool with the view of ascertaining whether it is dutiable.—Armstrong v. Hoyt (5 Hunt Mer. Mag., 76; 1 Fed. Cas., 1142).

(h) Under the act of March 3, 1857, section 5, it is not necessary that the importer should appeal from the decision of the collector requiring the addition to the invoice of illegal charges for inland freight and commissions and costs and charges in order to prevent such decision from being final.—Hutton v. Schell (6 Blatchf., 48; 7 Int. Rev. Rec., 84; 12 Fed. Cas., 1095).

(i) It will be presumed in the absence of testimony that when an importation of wool was appraised at its invoice value such appraisement did uot include the charges on the wool at the port of exportation when the invoice contained the amount and cost of the wool separate from such charges.—Saxonville Mills v. Russell (1 Fed. Rep., 118).

Sec. 20. [As amended by the acts of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat., 567), and December 15, 1902 (32 Stat., 753).] Any merchandise deposited in bond in any public or private bonded warehouse may be withdrawn for consumption within three years from the date of original importation, on payment of the duties and charges to which it may be subject by law at the time of such withdrawal: Provided, That the same rate of duty shall be collected thereon as may be imposed by law upon like articles of merchandise imported at the time of the withdrawal: And provided further, That nothing herein shall affect or impair existing provisions of law in regard to the disposal of perishable or explosive articles.

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 20, ACT OF JUNE 10, 1890.

(a) The act of June 10, 1890, repeals R. S. 2970; and the duties on goods withdrawn after the act of June 10, 1890, went into effect, though deposited before, are those only which are imposed by section 20, act of June 10, 1890.—Schmid v. United States (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 744).

(b) By virtue of the proviso incorporated into this section by the act of December 15, 1902 (32 Stat., 753), sugars imported from Porto Rico and stored in bonded warehouse April 4, 1899, while Porto Rico was still the property of Spain, and withdrawn on May 6, 1899, after the island had been ceded to the United States, are free of duty.—Mosle v. Bidwell (130 Fed. Rep., 334; T. D. 25276), reversing 119 Fed. Rep., 480.

(c) The amendment to this section embodied in the act of December 15, 1902, held, after examining the history of the legislation of the committee of Congress having it in charge, to be declaratory of the meaning of the original statute.—Ibid.

(d) Sugars imported from Porto Rico after the cession of the island to the United States and placed in bonded warehouse prior to the enactment of the act of April 12, 1900 (31 State., 77), and not withdrawn until after said act took effect, are dutiable under its provisions, although they were nondutiable when they were imported.—De Pass v. Bidwell (124 Fed. Rep., 615).

(e) Merchandise from Porto Rico which was nondutiable when it was imported and placed in bonded warehouse in September, 1899, was not withdrawn until after the act of April 12, 1900, imposing duty on articles imported from Porto Rico, had taken effect. In this case the court held the goods to be free of duty.—Bidwell v. Levi (147 Fed. Rep., 225; T. D. 27411), affirming T. D. 26803.

(f) Imported merchandise in possession of the Government awaiting liquidation and prior to the issuance of a permit of delivery is constructively in a bonded warehouse within the meaning of this section, and while the right to duty attaches at the date of entry the rate of duty is that in effect on the day the Government's custody over the merchandise ceases and the importer's begins.—Hartranft v. Oliver (125 U. S., 525); T. D. 25860, G. A. 5870.

(g) The provision herein, as to merchandise withdrawn from bonded warehouse, that "the same rate of duty shall be imposed thereon as many be imposed by law upon like articles imported at the time of withdrawal," refers to the rate of duty rather than to the weight of the merchandise.—United States v. Falk (204 U. S., 143; T. D. 27832), reversing Falk v. United States (146 Fed. Rep., 484; T. D. 27036) and affirming 145 id., 574; T. D. 25976, and abstract 1616 (T. D. 25337) followed; T. D. 27933, G. A. 6545.

(h) The provision herein subjecting merchandise withdrawn from bonded warehouse to the rate of duty in force "at the time of such withdrawal" means the rate applicable when the withdrawal takes place and not that applicable at the time of the liquidation of the withdrawal entry. 144 Fed. Rep., 563 (T. D. 27261), and T. D. 25914, G. A. 5885, affirmed.—Franklin Sugar Refining Company v. United States (202 U. S., 580; T. D. 27412).

(i) In the matter of merchandise in bonded warehouse where duties are paid upon the merchandise and the permits issued for its removal have been delivered to the storekeeper, the merchandise is "withdrawn for consumption" within the meaning of this section and is subject to duties as of that time, regardless of whether it continued in the warehouse in the manual custody of the Government.—Ibid.

Sec. 21. That in all suits or informations brought, where any seizure has been made pursuant to any act providing for or regulating the collection of duties on imports or tonnage, if the property is claimed by any person, the burden of proof shall lie upon such claimant: Provided, That probable cause is shown for such prosecution, to be judged of by the court.

Sec. 22. That all fees exacted and oaths administered by officers of the customs, except as provided in this act, under or by virtue of existiug laws of the United States, upon the entry of imported goods and the passing thereof through the customs, and also upon all entries of domestic goods, wares, and merchandise for exportation, be, and the same are hereby, abolished; and in case of entry of merchandise for exportation, a declaration in lieu of an oath shall he filed, in such form and under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; and the penalties provided in the sixth section of this act for false statements in such declaration shall be applicable to declarations made under this section: Provided, That where such fees, under existing laws, constitute, in whole or in part, the compensation of any officer, such officer shall receive, from and after the passage of this act, a fixed sum for each year equal to the amount which he would have been entitled to receive as fees for such services during said year.

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 22, ACT OF JUNE 10, 1890, AND OTHER DECISIONS RELATIVE TO FEES AND CHARGES FOR SERVICES.

(a) Fees for permits, owners' oaths, certificates, etc., paid prior to August 1, 1890 (under R. S. 2654), are authorized.—T. D. 10328, G. A. 49.

(b) Charges for weighing and gauging under R. S. 2920 are not abolished by the act of June 10, 1890, section 22.—T. D. 10385, G. A. 76.

(c) Where the invoice or entry does not show the weight, or quantity, or measure of merchandise, and it is weighed, gauged, or measured under R. S. 2920, the fees therefor are not abolished.—T. D. 10503, G. A. 153.

(d) Imported merchandise is weighed to ascertain the duty to which it is subject according to its weight, and this is done at the expense of the Government. Merchandise exported is weighed to ascertain the amount of drawback, and this is done at the expense of the owner and for his benefit. Imported merchandise is gauged to ascertain the duty per gallon and at the expense of the Government. Exported merchandise is gauged to ascertain drawback, and this is for the benefit of the owner and at his expense. These fees are not abolished.—T. D. 10503, G. A. 153.

(e) Fees for gauging rum exported to Africa were properly exacted. The fact that the Government had no interest in it for drawback purposes is not material. R. S. 334, 335, and 3812, relating to statistics, is sufficient to show that the rum was gaugeable.—T. D. 13554, G. A. 1826.

(f) Weighers and gaugers fees are abolished.—T. D. 15968, G. A. 2992.

(g) Weighers and gaugers fees authorized by R. S. 3023 and 3024 are abolished.—T. D. 15998, G. A. 3022.

(h) The expense of measuring certain laces exacted under R. S. 2920 and article 49 held to have been properly exacted.—T. D. 13556, G. A. 1828.

(i) The charges for weighing and gauging merchandise entered for export originally provided by acts of July 26, 1866 (14 Stat., 289), and March 2, 1866 (14 Stat., 470), and afterwards embodied in sections 3023 and 3024, R. S., were fees, and as such were abrogated by section 22, act of 1890.—United States v. Jahn (65 Fed. Rep., 792), reversing T. D. 10246, G. A. 24.

(j) The fees for receiving manifests of each railroad car under R. S. 4382, paragraph 24, are abolished. T. D. 10247, G. A. 25, overruled.—T. D. 16292, G. A. 3121.

(a) Fees for certifying copy of outward manifest (20 cents) and for port certificate of domestic merchandise (20 cents) are abolished by section 22, act of June 10, 1890. Fees for clearing of foreign vessel for foreign port ($2.50), bill of health (20 cents), and charges for cording and sealing merchandise for transportation in bond across the United States under articles 444 and 445, Customs Regulations, 1892 (per package 8 cents), are not fees which are incidental to the entry of goods, or of domestic goods for exportation, or of passing same through the custom-house, and are not abolished.—T. D. 16581, G. A. 3277.

(b) Protest against the exaction of storage charges of 2 cents a box per month on 154 boxes of tin withdrawn from the Government warehouse in St. Louis overruled.—T. D. 14516, G. A. 2327.

(c) Reasonable charges for storage and labor at the port of New York are not prohibited by section 22, act of June 10, 1890. Two days, excluding legal holidays, is a reasonable time to allow importers to remove goods from warehouse.—T. D. 15476, G. A. 2825.

(d) Charges for storage, labor, and drayage incurred in handling merchandise entered on pro forma invoice and conveyed to the public store under R. S. 2926 are not abolished by section 22, act of June 10, 1890.—T. D. 16573, G. A. 3269.

(e) The merchandise was dutiable under paragraph 283, act of 1894, according to the value per pound. The invoice failed to specify weight. The protest was against the exaction of storage. Held, that same was properly exacted.—T. D. 17569, G. A. 3660.

(f) Where an importer chooses to enter goods of less value than $100, without a certified invoice, charges for cartage to the appraiser's stores and for storage and labor at such stores may properly be exacted.—Kennedy v. Magone (C. C.), (41 Fed. Rep., 768).

(g) A reasonable charge for the services of a competent analytical chemist in making a reexamination of imported opium to test the percentage of morphine may be exacted of the importer.—T. D. 18233, G. A. 3943.

(h) The charge of 20 cents for an official certificate given by the collector as to the weight of merchandise returned by the weigher, issued at the request and solely for the convenience of the applicant, is properly exacted under R. S. 2654 (ninth subdivision) and was not abolished.—T. D. 19946, G. A. 4242.

(i) A vessel enrolled and licensed for the coasting and foreign trade on the northern frontier (R. S. 4318–4319), which clears at an American port, touches at an intermediate Canadian port, and thence immediately enters at an American port of destination (both American ports being in the same collection district), is liable to pay the fee for entry provided by R. S. 4382, for vessels "direct from a foreign port."—T. D. 18230, G. A. 3940.

(j) Steamer bound to Philadelphia was towed into port at New York in distress and repaired, bond being given and hatches not opened. Held, that the charge of twenty-three days overtime for an inspector at $4 per day was not authorized.—T. D. 12973, G. A. 1524.

(k) Charges of overtime of discharging officers is limited to vessels laden with coal and salt, and the Secretary has no authority to include (article 127, Regulations of 1892) vessels laden with similar bulky articles.—T. D. 13891, G. A. 2044.

(l) Vessel permitted to discharge logwood at Flushing, Long Island, and importer charged, under act of June 26, 1884, section 29 (23 Stat., 59, 60), with mileage and per diem of inspector. Held, that the importer is chargeable with this expense.—T. D. 15577, G. A. 2837.

(a) The collector at Astoria, at which vessels bound for Portland are compelled to stop, can not charge the master for the expenses of an inspector placed on board where the cargo has been bonded and arrives under seal. Where, however, a vessel, although bonded, arrives at Astoria with open hatches and stores unsealed, the collector is authorized to place an inspector on board at the expense of the master.—T. D. 21818, G. A. 4610.

(b) The per diem charges of the Government inspectors for overtime in discharging vessels are properly computed upon the basis that the working days of a vessel (29 Stat., 115) are to run from the date of the entry of the vessel and not from the day of designating the final port of discharge (27 Stat., 41).—T. D. 18229, G. A. 3939.

(c) Lumber entered for rewarehouse and withdrawn for exportation. The collector kept it (T. D. 9732) at the expense of the owner. Held, that this expense was not an illegal exaction.—T. D. 15026, G. A. 2603.

(d) Reasonable charges for storage and labor at the port of New York are not prohibited by section 22, act of June 10, 1890. Two days, excluding legal holidays, is a reasonable time to allow importers to remove goods from warehouse.—T. D. 15476, G. A. 2825.

(e) Charges for storage, labor, and drayage incurred in handling merchandise entered on pro forma invoice and conveyed to the public stores under R. S. 2926 are not abolished by section 22, act of June 10, 1890.—T. D. 16573, G. A. 3269.

(f) Certain charges for storage held not authorized where the provisions for entry on pro forma invoice are followed.—T. D. 18738, G. A. 4051.

(g) An entry made in good faith and upon a straight invoice, i. e., an invoice describing the contents of each and every package, giving its value and all particulars (both invoice and entry complying with all formal requirements of law), is not made an incomplete entry or an entry without specifications of particulars within the meaning of R. S. 2926, by an undervaluation. Held, accordingly, that certain charges for drayage and storage on undervalued merchandise so entered were illegally exacted.—T. D. 22111, G. A. 4684.

(h) Certain storage charges at Laredo, Tex., on goods from New Orleans destined for Mexico held to be authorized under article 803 (1892).—T. D. 13695, G. A. 1933.

(i) The act of May 1, 1876 (19 U. S. Stat., 49), modifies all other acts with reference to the entry of packed packages and legalizes an otherwise incomplete entry when made in substantial compliance therewith. The fee charged by the collector of the port of New York upon the clearance of a packed package is not a charge for the removal or storage of merchandise, but is a fee charged for rendering special services incident to the administration of the act of May 1, 1876. There is no authority of law for charging this fee; hence the same is illegal. T. D. 27962, G. A. 6552, affirmed without opinion.—United States v. American Express Company (154 Fed. Rep., 996; T. D. 28285).

Sec. 23. [As amended by the act of May 17, 1898, 30 Stat., 417; T. D. 19381.] That no allowance for damage to goods, wares and merchandise imported into the United States shall hereafter be made in the estimation and liquidation of duties thereon, but the importer thereof may, within ten days after entry, abandon to the United States all or any portion of goods, wares and merchandise included in any invoice and be relieved from the payment of the duties on the portion so abandoned. Provided, that the portion so abandoned shall amount to 10 per cent or over of the total value or quantity of the invoice, and the property so abandoned shall be sold by public auction or otherwise disposed of for the account and credit of the United States under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe. All merchandise so abandoned by the importer thereof shall be delivered by such importer at such place within the port of arrival as the chief officer of customs may direct, and on the failure of the importer to comply with the directions of the collector in this respect the abandoned merchandise shall be disposed of by the collector at the expense of such importer.

DECISIONS UNDER SECTION 23, ACT OF JUNE 10, 1890.

(a) Damage allowance to tin refused.—T. D. 10415, G. A. 106.

(b) Damage allowed on almonds imported prior to August 1, 1890, under R. S. 2927.—T. D. 10463, G. A. 113.

(c) Window and polished plate glass imported and entry completed prior to July 31, 1890. Held, that this section has no application and damage should be allowed under R. S. 2927.—T. D. 10750, G. A. 303.

(d) No allowance can be made for damages on account of decayed oranges.—T. D. 11997, G. A. 910.

(e) One hundred head of cattle imported from Montreal, and that number embraced in warehouse and exportation entry at Boston and bond given for landing in Liverpool. Two were dead on arrival at Boston, 10 died while waiting shipment, 3 crippled were slaughtered, and only 85 shipped to Liverpool. No entry for consumption was made at Boston and no abandonment to the United States. The collector assessed duty on the fifteen head at $10 each under paragraph 248, act of 1890. Held, that his action was in accordance with law.—T. D 12325, G. A. 1097.

(f) Dried fish and anchovies were imported, the value being separately stated on the invoice. More than 10 per cent of the anchovies were damaged and worthless, but the damaged goods constituted less than 10 per cent of the total of the invoice. Held, that to entitle the importer to abandon the merchandise it must constitute 10 per cent or more of the total amount of the invoice.—T. D. 12448, G. A. 1186.

(g) No damage can be allowed for window glass broken on the voyage and rendered unfit for use except to be remanufactured, and such broken glass can not be admitted free under paragraph 590, act of 1890, as broken glass.—T. D. 12988, G. A. 1539.

(h) Claim for damage allowance under R. S. 2984 on tin plate resulting from shifting of cargo and shipping of sea during voyage overruled because this section provides only for damage by casualty after importation.—T. D. 13189, G. A. 1610.

(i) Damage allowance under R. S. 2984 is placed entirely within the discretion of the Secretary.—Id.

(j) Knitting machine imported in four separate cases when it was found that the contents of one case was damaged by breakage. Held, that no allowance can be made.—T. D. 14757, G. A. 2479.

(k) The package containing the goods having been opened by the importer in the absence of the customs officers and in violation of the terms of his bond, application for damage allowance and abandonment is refused.—T. D. 13486, G. A. 1788.

(l) Cocoanuts and pineapples imported in bulk when certain specified portions, less than 10 per cent of the cargoes, were rotten and totally worthless. Section 23, act of June 10, 1890, contemplates a case where there remains something to be abandoned in the sense of being impaired in value and is not applicable where there is no value attached to the items to be abandoned.—T. D. 17072, G. A. 3453.

(a) Damaged fruit seized and condemned by the board of health as unfit for food may be abandoned to the Government under section 23, act of June 10, 1890, without its actual delivery to the collector.—T. D. 17954, G. A. 3829.

(b) The destruction of 101 bags of quebracho out of a shipment of 491 bags caused by "heating, running, and adhering to the skin of the ship" is not damage within the meaning of this section. Duty should be assessed only on the quantity of merchandise actually landed and coming into the control of the officials.—T. D. 21761, G. A. 4601.

(c) When abandonment is made by an importer on account of damage, the portion abandoned must amount to at least 10 per cent of the total value or quantity of the invoice and not of the goods as discharged at the port of entry.—T. D. 22520, G. A. 4776.

(d) Pineapples, oranges, and limes imported and a portion lost through decay in the course of transportation, so as to be reduced to slush. Held, that when such loss amounts to less than 10 per cent no allowance for damage may be made. An importation in bulk included in a single invoice must be considered as a whole and the importer is entitled to no allowance for damage to or deterioration concerning the same and must pay duty on the entire invoice unless an appropriate portion is abandoned under this section.—T. D. 22520, G. A. 4776.

(e) Where cattle have been imported and entered in bond for exportation to Canada, the death of a steer after landing and before exportation does not present a question of damage allowance under section 23, act of June 10, 1890. That section relates only to damage occurring during the voyage of importation.—U. S. v. Bache (59 Fed. Rep., 762; 8 C. C. A., 258), affirming G. A. 1539; Shelton v. The Collector (5 Wallace, 113), affirming Shelton v. Austin (1 Cliff., 388; 21 Fed. Cas., 1247), followed; T. D. 22689, G. A. 4830.

(f) Window glass broken in transit prior to arrival in this country but which is fit for remanufacture at the time of such arrival is not to be treated as a nonimportation within the principle laid down in Lawder v. Stone (187 U. S., 281) merely because it got mixed with dirt and refuse in the warehouse of the importer after the cases containing it were unpacked. Such a mixing of the glass with refuse constitutes a damage within the principle settled in United States v. Bache (59 Fed. Rep., 762), affirming T. D. 12988, G. A. 1539.—T. D. 25477, G. A. 5741.

(g) A controversy growing out of an attempted abandonment of merchandise under this section, as amended by the act of May 17, 1898, presents a proper subject of protest. The proper administration of this section requires that the abandonment of merchandise under it must be in writing and the regulations of the Treasury Department contemplate that it should take the form of a written notice. It is held that papers and testimony both fail to show that the merchandise was abandoned to the United States within ten days after entry, as is required by this section.—T. D. 26308, G. A. 6022.

(h) The act of May 17, 1898, applies only to an invoice of goods imported in such condition as would have entitled the importer, under R. S. 2927, to claim an allowance for damaged goods; and an importer of goods not damaged can not, by an abandonment of such goods, after they have been seized by the Government for an attempted violation of the customs laws, relieve himself from liability for the duty thereon or recover the duty paid.—United States v. One Case of Paintings, Engravings, and Manufactures of Metal (99 Fed. Rep., 426).

(a) It is a condition precedent to the right of abandonment under this section, that the portion of the merchandise damaged shall amount to 10 per cent or over of the total value or quantity specified on the invoice and originally exported rather than to only 10 per cent of the amount of the merchandise actually landed or arriving in this country.—T. D. 28573, G. A. 6683.

(b) Section 23, relative to abandonment, applies only where the goods sought to be abandoned are of some value, and does not apply where they are totally destroyed or so entirely damaged as to be valueless.—T. D. 28651, G. A. 6700.

DECISIONS UNDER EARLIER STATUTES PERTAINING TO DAMAGED GOODS.

(c) The provisions of section 8, act of July 30, 1846 (9 Stat., 42), did not repeal the previous law which authorized allowance for deficiencies and damages incurred during the voyage; it applies to the value merely and not to the quantity of the articles imported.—Brune v. Marriott (Taney, 132; 4 Fed. Cas., 475.)

(d) No deduction is to be made for leakage from the quantity entered at the custom-house notwithstanding any deduction for appraisement.—Belcher v. Linn (24 How., 508).

(e) The damages must be ascertained before the goods are entered (act of March 1, 1823)—Shelton v. The Collector (5 Wallace, 113).

(f) Where merchandise received damage during a voyage, proof to ascertain the damage must be lodged at the custom-house of the port where the goods are landed within ten days after the landing (act of March 2, 1799, 1 Stat., 665, 666).—Id.

(g) If goods have received damage in the course of the voyage, the importer, in order to obtain a reduction of duties, must demand an appraisal before entry.—Shelton v. Austin (1 Cliff., 388; 21 Fed. Cas., 1247).

(h) If damaged goods are entered before an appraisal is demanded, the importer must pay duties assessed according to the invoice price and he is entitled to no reduction on account of damage to the goods in the course of the voyage.—Id.

(i) It is not necessary, in order to obtain an allowance for damage to part of a consignment of merchandise, that the claimant should make an affidavit that the entire importation was taken—United States v. Six Hundred and Sixty One Bales of Tobacco (24 Int. Rev. Rec., 77; 27 Fed. Cas., 1092).

(j) No act of Congress having (1843) designated any form or mode of proof to be made of damage to goods on the voyage, to lay the foundation for an appraisement, the collector is bound to order it on reasonable evidence of such damage. If he does not object to the form of proof when presented, he can not raise such objection at the time when sued for not calling such appraisement.—Wight v. Curtis (11 Hunt, Mer. Mag., 553; 29 Fed. Cas., 1170).

(k) A request to the collector to have an appraisement by merchants appointed pursuant to the act of 1799, section 52, is to be regarded as an application under the existing law (act of 1823).—Id.

(a) Section 52 of the act of 1799 does not require a survey of the goods damaged on the voyage to be made previous to an appraisement of damages for the purpose of an abatement of duties. If such survey is necessary, the master and wardens of the port are not "the proper officers" within the meaning of the act to make it.—Id.

(b) After a collector has ordered goods to a public store, because of damage on the voyage of importation, he has no authority to require a survey of such goods in order to their appraisement.—Id.

(c) When an appraisement is refused, the deterioration of the goods may be proved by witnesses; and the collector is liable, in an action for damages, to pay the difference between the duties exacted by him and those the goods ought to have been charged with.—Id.

(d) One entry was made of fruit imported in a vessel, which fruit belonged to several owners and was embraced in several invoices. The duties were estimated at $4,648, and deposited and the goods delivered. Afterwards a damage allowance for loss by decay on the voyage was applied for. The report showed that the damage sustained by various lots of fruit was more thau 25 per cent of the quantities in such lots but that the damage on all the fruit imported by the vessel was less than 25 per cent. The collector, by allowing the damage on the lots which were damaged more than 25 per cent liquidated the duties at $270.40 less than amount deposited and refunded the $270.40. Afterwards the collector reliquidated the duties at $4,648, refusing to allow any damage because it did not exceed 25 per cent of all the fruit covered by the entry. Suit brought for the $270.40. Verdict in the district court for the defendants. On writ of error held that under R. S. 2931 the first liquidation was not conclusive as to the United States.—United States v. Phelps (17 Blatchf., 312; 27 Fed. Cas., 521).

(e) The United States are entitled to recover according to the last liquidation.—Id.

(f) The defendants could not be allowed to give evidence to show that the decision of the collector in the last liquidation was erroneous.—Id.

(g) A claim for the appraisement of goods and the reduction of duty thereon by reason of the damage which they sustained during the voyage of importation may be allowed although not made until after they were entered at the custom-house at their full invoice value and the estimated duties paid thereon. R. S. 2928 has exclusive reference to goods taken from a wreck and does not affect the proceedings under R. S. 2927, a reenactment of section 52, act of 1799. Shelton v. The Collector (5 Wallace, 113), so far as it conflicts with this ruling, is overruled. United States v. Phelps (20 Blatchf., 129; 27 Fed. Cas., 523), reversed.—United States v. Phelps (107 U. S., 320).

Sec. 24. That whenever it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury that, in any case of unascertained or estimated duties, or payments made upon appeal, more money has been paid to or deposited with a collector of customs than, as has been ascertained by final liquidation thereof, the law required to be paid or deposited, the Secretary of the Treasury shall direct the Treasurer to refund and pay the same out of any mouey in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. The necessary moneys therefor are hereby appropriated, and this appropriation shall be deemed a permanent indefinite appropriation; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to correct manifest clerical errors in any entry or liquidation, for or against the United States at any time within one year of the date of such entry, but not afterward: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall in his annual report to Congress, give a detailed statement of the various sums of money refunded under the provisions of this act or of any other act of Congress relating to the revenue, together with copies of the rulings under which repayments were made.

Sec. 25. That from and after the taking effect of this act no collector or other officer of the customs shall be in any way liable to any owner, importer, consignee, or agent of merchandise, or any other person, for or on account of any rulings or decisions as to classification of said merchandise or the duties charged thereon, or the collection of any dues, charges, or duties on or on account of said merchandise, or any other matter or thing as to which said owner, importer, consignee, or agent of such merchandise might, under this act, be entitled to appeal from the decision of said collector or other officer, or from any board of appraisers provided for in this act.

Sec. 26. That any person who shall give, or offer to give or promise to give any money or thing of value, directly or indirectly, to any officer or employee of the United States in consideration of or for any act or omission contrary to law in connection with or pertaining to the importation, appraisement, entry, examination or inspection of goods, wares or merchandise, including herein any baggage, or of the liquidation of the entry thereof, or shall by threats or demands, or promises of any character, attempt to improperly influence or control any such officer or employee of the United States as to the performance of his official duties, shall on conviction thereof, be fined not exceeding $2,000, or be imprisoned at hard labor not more than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court; and evidence of such giving or offering, or promising to give, satisfactory to the court in which such trial is had, shall be regarded as prima facie evidence that such giving or offering or promising was contrary to law, and shall put upon the accused the burden of proving that such act was innocent, and not done with an unlawful intention.

Sec. 27. That any officer or employee of the United States who shall, excepting for lawful duties or fees, solicit, demand, exact, or receive from any person, directly or indirectly, any money or thing of value, in connection with or pertaining to the importation, appraisement, entry, examination, or inspection of goods, wares or merchandise, including herein any baggage, or liquidation of the entry thereof, on conviction thereof, shall be fined not exceeding $5,000, or be imprisoned at hard labor not more than two years, or both, in the discretion of the court. And evidence of such soliciting, demanding, exacting or receiving, satisfactory to the court in which such trial is had, shall be regarded as prima facie evidence, that such soliciting, demanding, exacting, or receiving was contrary to law, and shall put upon the accused the burden of proving that such act was innocent and not with an unlawful intention.

Sec. 28. That any baggage or personal effects arriving in the United States in transit to any foreign country may be delivered by the parties having it in charge to the collector of the proper district, to be by him retained, without the payment or exaction of any import duty, or to be forwarded by such collector to the collector of the port of departure, and to be delivered to such parties on their departure for their foreign destination, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Sec. 29. That sections 2,608, 2,838, 2,839, 2,841, 2,843, 2,845, 2,853, 2,854, 2,856, 2,858, 2,860, 2,900 and 2,902, 2,905, 2,907, 2,908, 2,909, 2,922, 2,923, 2,924, 2,927, 2,929, 2,930, 2,931, 2,932, 2,934, 2,945, 2,952, 3,011, 3,012, 3,012½, 3,013 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be and the same are hereby repealed, and sections 9, 10, 11, 12, 14 and 16 of an act entitled "An act to amend the customs revenue laws and to repeal moieties," approved June 22, 1874, and sections 7, 8 and 9 of the act entitled "An act to reduce internal revenue taxation, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1883, and all other acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act, are hereby repealed, but the repeal of existing laws or modifications thereof embraced in this act shall not affect any act done, or any right accruing or accrued, or any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil cause before the said repeal or modifications; but all rights and liabilities under said laws shall continue and may be enforced in the same manner as if said repeal or modifications had not been made. Any offenses committed and all penalties or forfeitures or liabilities incurred prior to the taking effect (passage) of this act under any statute embraced in or changed, modified or repealed by this act may be prosecuted and punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if this act had not been passed. All acts of limitation, whether applicable to civil causes and proceedings or the prosecution of offenses or for the recovery of penalties or forfeitures embraced in or modified, changed or repealed by this act shall not be affected thereby, and all suits, proceedings or prosecutions, whether civil or criminal, for causes arising or acts done or committed prior to the taking effect (passage) of this act may be commenced and prosecuted within the same time and with the same effect as if this act had not been passed. And provided further, That nothing in this act shall be construed to repeal the provisions of section three thousand and fifty-eight of the Revised Statutes as amended by the act approved February twenty-third, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, in respect to the abandonment of merchandise to underwriters or the salvors of property and the ascertainment of duties thereon.

Sec. 30. That this act shall take effect on the first day of August, eighteen hundred and ninety, except so much of section twelve as provides for the appointment of nine general appraisers, which shall take effect immediately.

DIGEST OF DECISIONS EMBODYING RULES OF STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION OF GENERAL APPLICATION, ALSO OF CASES ARISING UNDER VARIOUS STATUTES OF THE UNITED STATES OTHER THAN THE TARIFF ACTS AND CUSTOMS ADMINISTRATIVE ACT HEREINBEFORE SET FORTH IN DETAIL.

(a) Though it has been said that there is no common law of the United States it is still true that when acts of Congress use words which are familiar in the laws of England, they are supposed to be used with reference to their meaning in that law.—United States v. San Jacinto Tin. Co. (125 U. S., 273, 280).

(b) Revenue laws are not penal in the sense that requires them to be construed with great strictness in favor of the defendants. They are rather to be regarded as remedial in their character and intended to prevent fraud, suppress public wrong, and promote the public good, and they should be so construed as to carry out the intention of the legislature in passing them and most effectually accomplish these objects.—Twenty-eight cases of wine (2 Ben., 63; 7 Int. Rev. Rec., 4; 1 Am. Law T. Rep. U. S. Cts., 15; 24 Fed. Cas., 415).

(c) Revenue and duty acts are not in the sense of the law penal acts, and are not therefore to be construed strictly. Nor are they, on the other hand, acts in furtherance of private rights and liberty or remedial, and therefore to be construed with extraordinary liberality. They are to be construed according to the true import and meaning of their terms; and when the legislative intention is ascertained that, and that only, is to be our guide in interpreting them.—United States v. Breed (1 Sumn., 159; 24 Fed. Cas., 1222).

(d) Revenue laws are to be so construed as most effectually to accomplish the intention of the legislature in passing them, and do not fall within the rule that penal laws are to be construed strictly in favor of those who may be prosecuted under them.—United States v. Twenty-five Cases of Cloths (Crabbe, 356; 28 Fed. Cas., 257).

(e) Revenue laws are more remedial than penal in their nature. They are intended to prevent fraud, suppress public wrong, and to promote the public good, and should always be so construed as to effectually carry out the purposes and objects which they were intended to accomplish.—Anglo-Californian Bank v. Secretary of the Treasury (C. C. A.), (76 Fed. Rep., 742, 748).

(f) Revenue laws are not to be regarded as penal and therefore to be construed strictly. They are remedial in their character and therefore to be construed liberally to carry out the purposes of their enactment. What is implied is as much a part of a statute as what is expressed.—United States v. Hobson (10 Wallace, 395, 406).

(g) A well-known rule of construction remains in force until abolished by Congress.—Arthur v. Morrison (96 U. S., 108).

(h) The meaning of the legislature constitutes the law. A thing may be within the letter of a statute but not within its meaning, and within its meaning though not within its letter.—Raymond v. Thomas (91 U. S., 712, 715).

(a) According to the course of decisions in this court an exception contained in a proviso is a matter of defense and need not be negatived in a libel of information.—Two Hundred Chests of Tea (9 Wheat., 430).

(b) In construing a tariff revenue system consisting of numerous acts, enacted at different times, each alteration is to be regarded in connection with the system, and existing legislative rules of general application are not to be disturbed beyond the clear intention of Congress.—Saxonville Mills v. Russell (116 U. S., 13, 21).

(c) Unless it is impossible to avoid it a general revenue statute should never be declared inoperative in all its parts because a particular part relating to a distinct subject may be invalid.—Field v. Clark (143 U. S., 649, 696).

(d) It is a general rule that provisions in statutes imposing taxation, though not in terms mandatory, are to be regarded as such if necessary for the substantial protection of the taxpayer.—Erhardt v. Schroeder (155 U. S., 124).

(e) In construing section 8 of the act of June 30, 1864, imposing a duty on "all dress and piece silks, ribbons, and silk velvets, or velvets of which silk is the component of chief value," that clause must be construed in the same manner as if the word "ribbons" read "silk ribbons."—Chapon v. Smythe (11 Blatchf., 120; 5 Fed. Cas., 500).

(f) The act of August 2, 1813 (3 Stat., 75), releasing one-third of the duties accruing on goods captured and brought into the United States by any private armed vessel of the United States, did not apply to the case of a vessel captured and brought in before the passage of the act but not condemned until after its passage.—Prince v. United States (2 Gall., 204; 19 Fed. Cas., 1331).

(g) The expression "in lieu of the present duties" or "in lieu of the duties now imposed by law" is used when the intention is to repeal the duties previously in force. No language could more clearly express the intent of Congress; and these terms have come to be considered the peculiarly apt words of revenue repeal.—Washington Mills v. Russell (Holmes, 245; 18 Int. Rev. Rec., 203; 29 Fed. Cas., 366).

(h) The word "article" as used in tariff acts is not to be restricted to articles put in a condition for final use, but is used in a broad sense and covers equally things manufactured, things unmanufactured, and things partially manufactured.— Junge v. Hedden (37 Fed. Rep., 197).

(i) It is true that statutes relating to the same subject are to be construed together; but this rule does not go to the extent of controlling the language of subsequent statutes by any supposed policy of previous ones (Goodrich v. Russell, 42 New York, 177, 184). It is also true that where the words of a statute to be construed differ from the words of a former act upon the same subject it is an intimation, at least, that they are to have a different construction.—Grace v. Collector of Customs (C. C. A.), (79 Fed. Rep., 315).

(j) The multitude of articles upon which duty was imposed by the act of 1883 are grouped in that act under fourteen schedules, each with a different title, and all that was intended by those titles was a general suggestion as to the character of the articles within the particular schedule and not any technically accurate definition of them.—Hollander v. Magone (149 U. S., 586).

(k) The general purpose of the act of 1890, to protect and foster American industries, is not to override a plain provision contained therein, which, in a particular instance, fails to carry out such purpose or operates in contravention of it. The particular intent must prevail over the general intent.—In re Schallenberger (C. C.), (72 Fed. Rep., 491),

(a) Words and phrases are used in the statutes with different significations and different shades of meaning in different connections. Thus the word "revenue" has different meaning in the Constitution, in statutes relating to crimes, and in statutes relating to revenue officers.—Beckwith v. United States (16 C. Cls. R., 250).

(b) The words "not otherwise herein provided for" mean not otherwise provided for in that act.—Arthur v. Butterfield (125 U. S., 70, 75).

(c) The act of August 7, 1882, purports by its title to correct an error in R. S. 2504, but in the body of the act the clause to be corrected is quoted as part of "Schedule M of section 25." Section 25 contains no schedule M, and bears upon an entirely different subject, and the language quoted is found in schedule M, section 2504. Held, That the act corrects R. S. 2504.—Wilson v. Spaulding (19 Fed. Rep., 304).

(d) The title of an act may be resorted to by the court for the purpose of elucidating what is obscure in the provision.—Id.

(e) Lager beer is not spirituous liquors or wine within the meaning of those terms as used in R. S. 2139.—Sarlls v. United States (152 U. S., 570).

(f) The provision in section 61, act of 1894, providing for a rebate of tax on alcohol used in the arts, was not the case of a right granted in presenti to all persons who might after the passage of the law actually use alcohol in the arts, or in any medicinal or other like compounds, to a rebate or repayment of the tax paid on such alcohol, but that the grant of the right was conditional on use in compliance with regulations to be prescribed in the absence of which the right could not vest so as to create a cause of action by reason of the unregulated use.—Dunlap v. United States (173 U. S., 65, 76).

(g) The interpretation of doubtful and ambiguous words in a particular law are in revenue laws to be explained in subservience to the common policy of the country.—United States v. Whidden (3 Ware, 269; 28 Fed. Cas., 535).

(h) The term "component material of chief value" is more specific than "composed wholly or in part of."—T. D. 11030, G. A. 473.

(i) When two provisions apply to an imported article, the first of which is qualified by the phrase "not otherwise provided for," while the second contains no such qualifying phrase, the article is properly dutiable under the second provision and must be held to be therein "otherwise provided for," so as to take it out of the operation of the first provision.—Zucker & Levitt Chemical Co. v. Magone (37 Fed. Rep., 776).

(j) Contemporaneous construction by the Treasury Department of a repealing clause in the customs laws is entitled to weight in favor of importers.—Robertson v. Bradbury (132 U. S., 491).

(k) A regulation of a department can not repeal a statute, neither is a construction of a statute by a department charged with its execution to be held conclusive and binding upon the courts of the country unless such construction has been continuously in force for a long time.—Merritt v. Cameron (137 U. S., 542, 551, 552).

(l) In all cases of ambiguity not only the contemporaneous construction of the courts but of the departments and even of the officials whose duty it is to carry the law into effect is controlling.—Schell's Executors v. Fauche (138 U. S., 562).

(m) The construction given by a department charged with enforcing an act is material only in case of doubt.—United States v. Tanner (147 U. S., 661).

(a) The contemporaneous construction of an ambiguous law, followed uniformly for nine years by the Board of General Appraisers, the Treasury Department, and subordinate customs officials, without reversal by the courts, is of controlling authority.—T. D. 21592, G. A. 4552.

(b) As I understand the principle of fiscal legislation it is this: If the person sought to be taxed comes within the letter of the law, he must be taxed, however great the hardship may appear to the judicial mind to be. On the other hand, if the crown, seeking to recover the tax, can not bring the subject within the letter of the law, the subject is free, however apparently within the spirit of the law the case might otherwise appear to be. In other words, if there be admissible in any statute what is called an "equitable construction," certainly such construction is not admissible in a taxing statute where you can simply adhere to the words of the statute.—Lord Cairns in Partington v. Attorney-General (L. R. 4 H. L., 100, 122).

(c) In case of serious ambiguity in the language of a tariff act or doubtful classification of articles the construction must be in favor of the importer, as duties are never imposed upon vague or doubtful interpretation.—Powers v. Barney (5 Blatchf., 202; 19 Fed. Cas., 1234).

(d) It is a general rule in the interpretation of all statutes levying taxes or duties upon subjects or citizens not to extend their provisions by implication beyond the clear import of the language used or to enlarge operation so as to embrace matters not specifically pointed out, although standing upon a close analogy. In every case of doubt such statutes are construed most strongly against the Government and in favor of the subjects or citizens, because burdens are not to be imposed beyond what the statutes expressly and clearly import.—United States v. Wigglesworth (2 Story, 369; 28 Fed. Cas., 595).

(e) In case of serious ambiguity in a tariff act or doubtful classification of articles or vague or doubtful interpretation the construction of the act is to be in favor of the importer.—United States v. Ullman (4 Ben., 547; 13 Int. Rev. Rec., 68; 28 Fed. Cas., 323).

(f) Where a clause in a tariff act is ambiguous and no light for its interpretation can be derived from provisions of prior statutes relating to the same subject, that construction must be adopted which is most favorable to the importer.—McCoy v. Hedden (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 89).

(g) Revenue statutes, including those fixing duties on imports, are neither remedial laws nor laws founded upon any public policy and should be construed most strongly against the Government; for burdens should not be imposed beyond what such statutes expressly import.—Rice v. United States (C. C. A.), (53 Fed. Rep., 910).

(h) In cases of doubt as to the classification of an imported article the construction most favorable to the importer should be adopted.—United States v. Davis (C. C. A.), (54 Fed. Rep., 147).

(i) In cases of doubt in the construction of tariff laws the courts resolve the doubt in favor of the importer.—Matheson & Co. v. United States (C. C. A.), (71 Fed. Rep., 394).

(j) Questions of doubt should be resolved in favor of the importer, as duties are never imposed upon the citizen upon vague and doubtful interpretation.—Hartranft v. Weigmann (121 U. S., 609, 616).

(k) Laws imposing duties are not construed beyond the natural import of the language, and duties are never imposed upon the citizen upon doubtful interpretation.—Adams v. Bancroft (1 Fed. Cas., 84).

(a) Where, by amendment in the Senate, an article (sulphate of magnesia, or Epsom salts, paragraphs 24 and 542, act of 1894) which was placed on the free list in the bill passed by the House was also placed on the dutiable list and remained in both places as the act was finally passed, held that the case was one of patent ambiguity arising on the face of the act, which ambiguity must be resolved in favor of the importer and the goods admitted free.—United States v. Merck & Co. (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 639).

STATUTES—CONSTITUTIONALITY.

(b) The act of May 9, 1890 (26 Stat., 105), is constitutional.—T. D. 12691, G. A. 1340; T. D. 10336, G. A. 57.

(c) The act of June 10, 1890, is constitutional.—T. D. 12692, G. A. 1341; T. D. 12693, G. A. 1342.

(d) The Board of General Appraisers declines to consider the question of the constitutionality of the act from which it derives its existence.—T. D. 10350, G. A. 71.

(e) The act of October 1, 1890, is constitutional.—T. D. 12690, G. A. 1339; T. D. 12691, G. A. 1340; T. D. 12692, G. A. 1341; T. D. 12694, G. A. 1343; T. D. 14618, G. A. 2376. In re Sternbach (C. C.), (45 Fed. Rep., 175).

(f) The act of October 1, 1890, is constitutional and not void because of the omission of part of section 30 as the act passed from the engrossed bill as signed.—T. D. 10553, G. A. 203.

(g) The present tariff law vests in the administrative officers the power to fix the standard of quality of teas, which does not necessarily depend upon their purity and wholesomeness, and to determine finally the question whether an importation meets the requirements so fixed, and such provisions are a constitutional exercise of legislative power.—Buttfield v. Bidwell (94 Fed. Rep., 126).

(h) The provisions excluding from this country teas of an inferior quality and leaving the final determination of the question in respect thereto to the customs officers is a valid exercise of legislative power.—Cruikshank v. United States (C. C.), (86 Fed. Rep., 7).

(i) Under the act of March 2, 1897 (29 Stat., 604), tea was seized as inferior. Bill in equity for injunction to prevent destruction or marking as condemned, the bill claiming that the act is unconstitutional. Held, that the mere fact that a law is unconstitutional does not entitle a party to relief by injunction against proceedings in compliance therewith, but it must appear that he has no remedy by the ordinary processes of the law or that the case falls under some recognized head of equity jurisdiction; and in this case the averments of the bill did not justify such an interference with executive action. The seizure of importations of tea under this act and the establishment of regulations and standards thereunder, publicly promulgated and known, because falling below the standards prescribed, could inflict no other injury than what it must be presumed was anticipated, and the interposition of a court of equity can not properly be invoked under such circumstances to determine in advance whether complainants, if they imported teas of that character, could escape the consequences on the ground of the invalidity of the law.—Cruikshank v. Bidwell (176 U. S., 73).

(j) The tea act of March 2, 1897 (29 Stat., 604), designed to prevent the importation into this country of impure tea and providing for the destruction of such tea as should be found not to be of the standard of quality fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury is constitutional.—Buttfield v. Stranahan (192 U. S., 470; T. D. 25119).

STATUTES—REPEAL.

(a) The general rule is that a repeal of a repealing statute revives the original act. It could not be supposed that Congress would repeal the provision of the act of 1864, as to mohair, lastings, etc., if they had supposed that thereby the same provision in the act of 1862 would have been revived. It is the better opinion that by this repeal the manufactures in question became dutiable under the act of June 30, 1864, paragraph 6, section 5.—Butler v. Russell (3 Cliff., 251; 11 Int. Rev. Rec., 30; 4 Fed. Cas., 910).

(b) This question is settled by R. S. 12, which provides that "Whenever an act is repealed which repealed a former act such former act shall not thereby be revived unless it shall be expressly so provided." When a statute contains an absolute affirmative repeal of an antecedent statute, or part of it, then the expiration of the subsequent statute by its own limitation will not revive the repealed act.—United States v. Twenty Five Cases of Cloths (Crabbe, 356; 28 Fed. Cas., 257).

(c) The repeal of a statute does not release any penalty, forfeiture, or liability incurred unless the repealing act so provides.—United States v. Keokuk & H. Bridge Co. (D. C.), (45 Fed. Rep., 178).

(d) The act of May 9, 1890 (26 Stat., 105), was not a mere administrative regulation but an amendment to the existing tariff law (1883) changing the duty on worsteds (144 U. S., 1), and hence was superseded by the McKinley Act of 1890, which covered the entire field of wool and worsted manufactures.—United States v. Murphy (C. C. A.), (72 Fed. Rep., 1008).

(e) When a later statute is a complete revision of the subject to which the earlier statute related and the new legislation was manifestly intended as a substitute for the former legislation, the prior act must be held to have been repealed.—United States v. Ranlett & Stone (172 U. S., 133, 140).

(f) It is a general rule in the construction of revenue statutes that specific provisions for duties on a particular article are not repealed or affected by the general words of a subsequent statute although the language is sufficiently broad to cover the article first mentioned.—Movius v. Arthur (95 U. S., 144, 146).

(g) The fact that it was the intention of Congress in enacting the Revised Statutes to compile existing laws without altering them does not require the courts to give a particular section a construction in opposition to the positive provisions thereof in order to conform to the preexisting statute; but, if the two can not be reconciled, it is then to be presumed that Congress supposed and had reason to suppose that the prior statute had been changed and intended to adopt such change. Part of the act of June 6, 1872, having been embraced in the Revised Statutes, that act was consequently repealed on June 22, 1874, by the express provisions of R. S. 5596.—Dodge v. Arthur (22 Int. Rev. Rec., 402; 7 Fed. Cas., 789).

(h) R. S. 5597 saves all rights which have accrued under acts repealed by R S. 5596.—Bechtel v. United States (101 U. S., 597).

(i) As to causes of action falling within the terms of section 2, act of March 3, 1823 (3 Stat., 78), which arose after the passage of the act of July 18, 1866 (14 Stat., 179), and before the passage of the Revised Statutes, no suit can be maintained after the passage of the Revised Statutes.—United States v. Claflin (14 Blatchf., 55; 22 Int. Rev. Rec., 395; 25 Fed. Cas., 437).

(j) No recovery can be had under said section in respect to any act done after the enactment of the Revised Statutes.—Id.

(a) There must be a positive repugnancy between the new and the old to work a repeal by implication, and even then the old law is only repealed to the extent of the repugnancy.—Wood v. United States (16 Pet., 342, 363).

(b) Repeals by implication of revnue laws are not favored.—United States v. Sixty Seven Packages of Dry Goods (17 How., 85).

(c) Repeals by implication are never favored particularly as applied to revenue laws. A statute is never repealed by implication if the prior and subsequent statutes can be so construed as to stand together. The implication must be one of necessity, and it is not sufficient that the two acts should relate to the same subject-matter. There must be a positive repugnancy between them, and even then the repeal is only pro tanto of the prior statute as can not stand together with the subsequent act. All laws for the collection of the revenue are to be construed as auxiliary and cumulative.—United States v. The Cuba (2 Hughes, 489; 10 Int. Rev. Rec., 115; 2 Am. Law T. Rep. U. S. Cts., 121; 2 Balt. Law Trans., 743; 25 Fed. Cas., 716).

(d) A statute can be repealed only by an express provision of a subsequent law or by necessary implication. The two acts must be repugnant to each other, so much so that they can not stand together or be consistently reconciled with each other; then the latter, being the latest expression of the will of the lawmaker, must prevail.—Morlot v. Lawrence (1 Blatchf., 608; 17 Fed. Cas., 770).

(e) Repeals by implication of revenue and collection laws are not favored. In order to work a repeal by implication there must be a positive repugnancy between the provisions of the new and the old law.—Butler v. Russell (3 Cliff., 251; 11 Int. Rev. Rec., 30; 4 Fed. Cas., 910).

(f) Where the provisions of the old statute revived in the later and where the later was intended to prescribe the only rules upon the subject the subsequent is held to repeal the former statute.—Id.

(g) Where the revising statute covers the whole subject-matter of antecedent statutes, it virtually repeals the former enactment without any express provision to that effect.—Butler v. Russell (3 Cliff., 251; 11 Int. Rev. Rec., 30; 4 Fed. Cas., 910).

(h) Where some parts of the Revised Statutes are omitted in the new law, they are not, in general, to be regarded as left in operation if it clearly appear to have been the intention of the legislature to cover the whole subject by the revision.—Id.

(i) When a later act is a complete revision of the subject to which an earlier statute relates and is manifestly intended as a substitute for the former legislation the prior act must be considered as repealed.—Kent v. United States (C. C. A.), (73 Fed. Rep., 680).

(j) Although a former statute is impliedly repealed by a subsequent one plainly repugnant to it or so far as the later statute's making new provisions is plainly intended for a substitute for the earlier one, yet a repeal is not to be implied where the powers or directions under the later acts are such as may well subsist together with those under the earlier. Held on application of this principle that the act of July 20, 1868 (15 Stat., 156), sections 69 and 70, imposing taxes on distilled spirits and tobacco, did not repeal the proviso of section 25 of the act of March 2, 1867 (14 Stat., 483), which limits to twenty days the time for commencing proceedings to enforce forfeitures.—Henderson's Tobacco (11 Wallace, 652).

(k) Repeal by implication upon the ground that the subsequent provision upon the same subject is repugnant to the prior law is not favored in any case, and must always meet with disfavor where the attempt is made to apply the principle in the construction of the revenue laws of the United States.—Fabbri v. Murphy (95 U. S., 191, 196).

(a) To work a repeal of the old law by implication there must be a positive repugnancy between the new law and the old, and even then the old law is only repealed to the extent of the repugnancy.—Fabbri v. Murphy (95 U. S., 191); Arthur v. Homer (96 U. S., 137, 140).

(b) When a revising statute covers the whole subject-matter of antecedent statutes, the revising statute virtually repeals the antecedent enactments unless there is something in the nature of the subject-matter or the revising statute to indicate a contrary intention.—Kohlsaat v. Murphy (96 U. S., 153, 158).

(c) Whether a statute is repealed by a later one is a judicial not a legislative question, and even a declaratory act, or an act directing how a former act shall be construed, is inoperative on the past though controlling in the future.—United States v. Claflin (97 U. S., 546, 549).

(d) While repeals by implication are not favored, and while it is held that a statute is not repealed by a later one containing no repealing clause unless the later statute is positively repugnant to the former or is a plain substitue for it, supplying its provisions, it is still true that, repeal or no repeal, substitution or no substitution, is a question of legislative intention and there are acknowledged rules for ascertaning that intention.—United States v. Claflin (97 U. S., 546, 551).

(e) If a later statute again describes an offense created by a former statute and fixes a different punishment to it, varying the procedure, etc., the later operates by way of substitution, not cumulatively, and the former is repealed.—Mitchell v. Brown (1 El. & El., 267; Ex parte Baker, 2 H. & N., 219; Barry v. The Croydon Gas Co. (15 C. B. N. S., 568).

(f) As a general rule it is not open to controversy that where a new statute covers the whole subject-matter of an old one, adds offenses, and prescribes different penalties from those enumerated in the old law, the former is repealed by implication, as the provisions of both can not stand together.—United States v. Claflin (97 U. S., 546, 552).

(g) It is necessary to the implication of a repeal that the object of the two statutes are the same, in the absence of the repealing clause. Maxwell on the Interpretation of Statutes, 153.—United States v. Claflin (97 U. S., 546, 552).

(h) Where there are two acts on the same subject, the rule is to give effect to both if possible. But if the two are repugnant in any of their provisions, the latter act without any repealing clause operates to the extent of the repugnancy as a repeal of the first; and even where two acts are not, in express terms, repugnant, yet if the latter act covers the whole subject of the first and embraces new provisions plainly showing that it was intended as a substitute for the first act, it will operate as a repeal of that act.—District of Columbia v. Hutton (143 U. S., 18, 26, 27).

(i) Section 66, act of 1799, is not repealed by section 19 of the act of 1842 nor by section 8, act of 1846.—United States v. Sixty-seven Packages of Dry Goods (17 How., 85).

(j) Section 6 of the act of March 3, 1865 (13 Stat., 493), is repealed by section 1, act of March 2, 1867 (14 Stat., 559), and after the passage of this act only the duty specified in it can be assessed on imported wool.—Washington Mills v. Russell (Holmes, 245; 18 Int. Rev. Rec., 203; 29 Fed. Cas., 366).

(a) The act of December 24, 1861 (12 Stat., 330), repeals that part of section 5 of the act of August 5, 1861, which provides that "all goods, wares, and merchandise actually on shipboard and bound to the United States, * * * at the date of the passage of this act shall be subject to duties as provided by law before and at the time of the passage of this act," so far as it applies to goods mentioned in this act.—Gossler v. Goodrich (3 Cliff., 71; 10 Fed. Cas., 836).

(b) Section 7 of the act of February 8, 1875 (18 Stat., 307), has been repealed.—T. D. 14726, G. A. 2448; T. D. 15033, G. A. 2610; T. D. 15070, G. A. 2623; T. D. 17927, G. A. 3802; Kent v. United States (C. C.), (68 Fed. Rep., 536); Same v. Same (C. C. A.), 73 Fed. Rep., 680).

(c) The act of 1890 supersedes the act of 1883 and articles specifically enumerated in the act of 1883 and not so enumerated in the act of 1890 are dutiable under the latter act.—T. D. 11551, G. A. 726.

(d) R. S. 2902 is not affected by section 7, act of 1883, which repeals R. S. 2907, 2908, and section 14 of the act of June 22, 1874.—United States v. Gabriel (C. C.), (36 Fed. Rep., 888).

(e) R. S. 2911 is not repealed by the act of June 10, 1890.—T. D. 11539, G. A. 714. In re Schefer (C. C.), (49 Fed. Rep., 216).

(f) R. S. 2910 is not repealed by the act of June 10, 1890.—T. D. 12344, G. A. 1116.

STATUTES—REVENUE LAWS.

(g) Revenue laws are those laws only whose principal object is the raising of revenue, and not those under which revenue may incidentally arise. The act of July 4, 1864 (13 Stat., 390), is not a revenue law.—The Nashville (4 Biss., 188; 17 Fed. Cas., 1176).

(h) Such laws as are made for the direct and avowed purpose of creating revenue or public funds for the service of the Government are revenue laws.—Justice Story in United States v. Mayo (26 Fed. Cas., 530; 1 Gall., 396).

(i) The term "revenue law" when used in connection with the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States means a law imposing duties on imports or tonnage or a law providing in terms for revenue; that is to say, a law which is directly traceable to the power granted to Congress by section 8, article 1, of the Constitution, "to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises."—United States v. Hill (123 U. S., 681, 686).

(j) R. S. 844 is not a revenue law within the meaning of that clause of R. S. 699, which provides for a writ of error without regard to the sum or value in dispute "upon any final judgment of a Circuit Court * * * in any civil action brought by the United States for the enforcement of any revenue law."—Id.

(k) On the authority of United States v. Hill (123 U. S., 681) it is held that an action against sureties to recover on a bail bond conditioned for the appearance of the principal to answer to an indictment for making and forging checks against an assistant treasurer is not a case for the enforcement of a revenue law within the intent of R. S. 699.—United States v. Broadhead (127 U. S., 212).

(l) The act of July 18, 1866 (14 Stat., 184), is not an act relating to customs within the meaning of the act of March 2, 1867 (Id., 546).—The Monte Christo (6 Ben., 327; 17 Int. Rev. Rec., 31; 17 Fed. Cas., 608).

(a) The sole object of the laws of impost is the collection of duties; they are not intended for the punishment of crimes.—United States v. Twenty-eight Packages of Pins (Gilp., 306; 28 Fed. Cas., 244).

(b) Public policy, national purposes, and the regular operations of the Government, require that the revenue system should be faithfully observed and strictly executed.—Priestman v. United States (4 Dall., 28, 34).

CLASSIFICATION—GENERAL.

(c) The settled rules of classification are as follows:

(d) (1) Commercial designation, which must be "definite, uniform, and general, and not partial, local, or personal" (Maddock v. Magone, 152 U. S., 368); Sonn v. Magone, 159 U. S., 417. (2) Ordinary or proper designation, the more special or particular description predominating over those more general or less definite (Hedden v. Richard, 149 U. S., 343; Vietor v. Arthur, 104 U. S., 498). (3) In the classification of merchandise under enumerations by descriptive component materials the component material of chief value will govern the rate of duty (Liebenroth v. Robertson, 144 U. S., 35). (4) If governed by use (in the absence of specific provisions to the contrary), the chief or predominant use will generally govern (Magone v. Wiederer, 159 U. S., 555; 16 Sup. Ct., 122). (5) If none of the above rules apply, the next resort must be to the similitude class (Arthur v. Fox, 108 U. S., 125; Arthur v. Butterfield, 125 U. S., 71). (6) The last resort, after exhausting all others, is the general "catch all clause" of the tariff classification.—T. D. 17159, G. A. 3476.

(e) The classification of goods is to be determined by their chief value.—Hagedon v. Seeberger (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 401).

(f) The action of the customs officers in placing goods in a class other than that in which they were entered, in deciding that they were altered from the ordinary condition in which they were customarily imported in 1883, and that such alteration was made to evade duty, is prima facie evidence of each of these facts.—United States v. Patton (D. C.), (46 Fed. Rep., 461).

(g) The fact that articles in separate parts are invoiced as entireties is not controlling and will not prevent a separate classification when such classification is otherwise proper. 50 Fed. Rep., 465, affirmed.—In re Crowley (C. C. A.), (55 Fed. Rep., 283).

(h) Where an importer on the trial of an action to recover duties fails to introduce any competent evidence of one of the essential facts in relation to the goods alleged in his protest and on which he based his claim for a different classification, the presumption of the correct classification will prevail and the direction of the verdict for the defendant is proper. Sustaining the Circuit Court.—Davies v. Miller (C. C. A.), (91 Fed. Rep., 647).

(i) An article may be crude for the purposes of classification, by reason of the use to which it is applied, where it is crude in the sense that it is unrefined, although it may be the result of some manufacture.—Roessler & Hasslacher Chemical Co. v. United States (C. C.), (94 Fed. Rep., 822).

(j) The chief or predominant use to which an article is applied determines its classification, although it may be commonly, generally, and practically, and not merely exceptionally, used for other purposes. The chief or predominant use is that which, in ordinary language, is so called.—Meyer v. Cadwalader (C. C. A.), (89 Fed. Rep., 963). This case reversed the Circuit Court.

(k) The invoice is not a controlling factor in classification.—T. D. 21233, G. A. 4450.

(a) Where goods are seized and the forfeiture remitted under R. S. 5292, it must still be classified without regard to the remission proceedings.—T. D. 15311, G. A. 2745.

(b) A decision of the Board as to the classification of goods is subject to review in the Circuit Court on an application in behalf of the United States, which application may be made by the collector without first obtaining authority from the Secretary. Zante currants.—In re Wise, collector (C. C.), (73 Fed. Rep., 183).

(c) Articles grouped together are to be deemed of a kindred nature.—Adams v. Bancroft (1 Fed. Cas., 84).

(d) The charge of a specific duty upon an article in a particular form or vessel is a charge upon the whole article, as described, including the vessel or material described as containing it.—Karthaus v. Frick (Taney, 94; 14 Fed. Cas., 136).

(e) The words used in tariff act when not technical, either as having a special sense by commercial usage or as having a scientific meaning different from the popular meaning—in other words, when they are words of common speech—are within the judicial knowledge and their interpretation is a matter of law.—Toplitz v. Hedden (33 Fed. Rep., 617).

(f) Under the act of May 9, 1890, the Secretary must finally classify the merchandise therein named, and that power is vested in no other officer.—In re Ballin (C. C.), (45 Fed. Rep., 170).

(g) The fact that Congress before framing the tariff acts advises with manufacturing experts does not give rise to any rule of construction whereby words used therein may be interpreted according to the technical understanding of the manufacturers.—In re Herrmann (C. C.), (52 Fed. Rep., 941).

(h) Words of classification are, in general, to be construed either in their common or their commercial meaning, as opposed to their scientific sense.—United States v. Buffalo Natural Gas Fuel Co. (C. C. A.), (78 Fed. Rep., 110).

(i) The appraiser should decide doubtful points in favor of the Government, especially where the classification is dependent upon the interpretation of the language of the tariff, but this rule does not apply to questions exclusively of fact.—T. D. 14832, G. A. 2515.

(j) The test of predominant use as applied to the classification of an article is only resorted to where necessary to properly classify an article falling within two or more classifications, either of which, standing alone, would adequately describe it, and where the article is enumerated by reference to its use.—Smith v. United States (C. C. A.), (93 Fed. Rep., 194).

CLASSIFICATION—COMMERCIAL DESIGNATION.

(k) Tariff acts must be construed according to commercial usage and understanding.—Bacon v. Bancroft (1 Story, 341; 2 Fed. Cas., 325).

(l) Words in a tariff act are to be generally interpreted according to their meaning in trade and commerce at the time of the passage of the act.—McCoy v. Hedden (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 89).

(m) Where words have acquired among importers and large dealers a meaning different from that which they have in ordinary speech, such trade meaning is to be adopted in the interpretation of the law.—Sidenberg v. Robertson (C. C.), (41 Fed. Rep., 763).

(a) Tariff laws are addressed to the understanding of merchants and, as a general rule, the descriptive language in such laws is to be taken in a commercial sense.—In re John Hope & Sons Engraving and Manufacturing Co. (C. C.), (100 Fed. Rep., 286).

(b) The denomination of merchandise in a tariff act is to be understood in the sense in which the same terms are employed by merchants.—United States v. One Hundred and Twelve Casks of Sugar (8 Pet., 277).

(c) Revenue laws class substances according to their denomination acquired by general use in our own trade.—Two hundred Chests of Tea (9 Wheat., 430).

(d) In imposing duties Congress must be understood as describing the articles upon which duty is imposed according to the commercial understanding of the terms used in the law in our own markets.—Curtis v. Martin (3 How., 106, 109).

(e) Laws imposing duties on importations of goods are intended for practical use and application by men engaged in commerce, and hence it has become a settled rule in the interpretation of statutes of this description to construe the language adopted by the legislature, and particularly in the denomination of articles, according to the commercial understanding of the terms used. * * * Whether a particular article was designated by one name or another in the country of its origin or whether it were a simple or mixed substance was of no importance in the view of the legislature. It applied its attention to the description of the articles as they derive their appellations in our own markets, in our domestic as well as our foreign traffic, and it would have been as dangerous as useless to attempt any other classification than that derived from the actual business of human life.—Elliott v. Swartwout (10 Pet., 137, 151).

(f) The rule to be followed in the construction of revenue statutes in cases like this is well settled in this court. It is that the descriptive terms applied to articles of commerce shall be understood according to the acceptation given them by commercial men in our own ports at the time of the passage of the act in which they are found.—Arthur v. Cummings (91 U. S., 362, 363); Tyng v. Grinnell (92 U. S., 467, 470); Arthur v. Morrison (96 U. S., 108); Arthur v. Lahey (96 U. S., 112, 113); Arthur v. Butterfield (125 U. S., 70, 75).

(g) In the interpretation of customs laws nothing is better settled than that words are to receive their commercial meaning, and that goods of a particular kind, which would otherwise be comprehended in a class, are subject to a distinct rate of duty from that imposed upon the class generally they are taken out of that class for the purpose of the assessment of duties.—Seeberger v. Cahn (137 U. S., 95).

(h) Mercantile terms used in a law are to be taken in the sense intended, which is to be ascertained by the laws in pari materia.—United States v. Twenty-four Coils of Cordage (Baldwin, 502; 28 Fed. Cas., 276).

(i) The commercial designation, as we have frequently decided, is the first and most important designation to be ascertained in settling the meaning and application of the tariff laws. But if the commercial designation fails to give an article its proper place in the classifications of the law, then resort must necessarily be had to the common designation.—Robertson v. Salomon (130 U. S., 412, 415).

(j) The language of commerce when used in laws imposing duties and particularly when employed in the denomination of articles must be construed according to the commercial understanding of the terms employed.—Hedden v. Richard (149 U. S., 346, 348).

(a) This rule is equally applicable when a term is confined in its meaning not merely to commerce but to a particular trade, and in such case also the presumption is that the term was used in its trade signification.—Id.

(b) It has long been a settled rule of the interpretation of statutes imposing duties on imports that if words used therein to designate particular kinds or classes of goods have a well-known signification in our trade and commerce different from their ordinary meaning among the people, the commercial meaning is to prevail unless Congress has clearly manifested a contrary intention, and that is only when no commercial meaning is called for or proved that the common meaning of the words is to be adopted.—Cadwalader v. Zeh (151 U. S., 171, 176).

(c) When the terms employed in the tariff laws have a special restricted meaning, according to the general usage of the trade to which the articles appertain, it is to be presumed that Congress used them in such restricted sense; but the fact that they have such restricted meaning must be clearly established, otherwise they are to be interpreted according to their common popular signification.—Kennedy v. Hartranft (9 Fed. Rep., 18).

(d) Proof of the commercial designation of an article must go to show that the name of the goods in question is identical with the specific term used in the statute.—Jaffrey v. Murphy (19 Int. Rev. Rec., 143; 13 Fed. Cas., 285).

(e) When the terms used are general they include all the subordinate or special kinds of goods so generally described, notwithstanding that dealers and others, in speaking of a particular kind of such goods, commercially describe them usually by a specific name.—Id.

(f) Specific names when used in tariff acts are to be construed according to their general use in trade and commerce.—Id.

(g) Pieces of round iron cut in suitable lengths, some being straight and others curved or bent to a U shape, and which are adapted to be formed into links or cables, are properly invoiced as "straight, bent, and turned links," respectively, it appearing that they are known under those terms in trade and commerce.—United States v. Thirty-one Boxes (Betts' Scr. Bk., 163; 28 Fed. Cas., 56).

(h) If articles identical in use with the samples were not generally known, the question whether the diversities were material arises, and this may be a question of law when the facts are ascertained. Change which renders an article substantially different as an article of commerce and adapts it to all the uses of another article, on which a higher rate is levied, destroys its legal identity and is a material change.—Wilkinson v. Greely (1 Curt., 439; 29 Fed. Cas., 1259).

(i) When the question is whether goods bore a particular name in particular transactions, it is necessary they should have been so known generally and not in particular places, to the exclusion of others, or to particular persons only.—Wilkinson v. Greely (1 Curt., 439; 29 Fed. Cas., 1259).

(j) On this question negative evidence from those engaged in trade has much weight.—Id.

(k) Where an importer seeks by reason of a commercial designation to withdraw certain goods from the operation of terms of general description in a tariff act, which would in ordinary speech include them, he must show by a fair preponderance of evidence not only that the goods were, at the time of the passage of the act, known in trade and commerce by various trade names but also that the terms of general description then had in the parlance of trade and commerce a restricted meaning excluding the goods in question.—Claflin v. Robertson (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 92).

(a) To establish the fact that certain articles are not to be included under a general term which in its common acceptation is broad enough to include them, it is not sufficient to show that they are always bought and sold by certain specific names and that the general term used in the tariff is not used in such commercial transactions; this must be supplemented by proof that the general term used in the tariff has in trade a restricted meaning which would exclude the article in controversy.—Sidenberg v. Robertson (C. C.), (41 Fed. Rep., 763).

(b) In order to give a general term a specific trade meaning, to include only a particular class of articles, it must be shown that prior to the passage of the law such term was in commerce and trade at all ports and trade centers of the country a well-known, uniform, and universally accepted designation of such particular class.—Carson v. Nixon (C. C. A.), (90 Fed. Rep., 409); Field v. United States (C. C. A.), (Id., 412).

(c) Where the evidence as to the commercial designation of an article is conflicting, the ordinary name given it in common speech, when proper under the definition given by the dictionaries, will govern in making classification.—Bour v. United States (C. C.), (91 Fed. Rep., 533).

(d) Though generally the name by which an article is known in commerce is taken to include that article in a revenue law, yet by a course of legislation it may be made apparent that Congress did not intend to include a particular article under the name which among commercial men would include it.—De Forrest v. Lawrence (13 How., 274).

(e) Whether a particular article is designated by one name or another in the country of its origin, or whether it is a simple or mixed substance, is a matter of very little importance in the adjustment of our revenue laws, as those who frame such laws are chiefly governed by the appellation which the articles bear in our own markets and in our domestic and foreign trade.—Tyng v. Grinnell (92 U. S., 467, 470).

(f) When Congress has designated an article by a specific name, and by such name imposed a duty upon it, general terms in a subsequent act, or in a later part of the same act, although sufficiently broad to comprehend such articles, are not applicable.—Arthur v. Lahey (96 U. S., 112); Vietor v. Arthur (104 U. S., 498, 499); Robertson v. Glendenning (132 U. S., 158); Huttou v. Schell (25 Int. Rev. Rec., 168; 12 Fed. Cas., 1099); United States v. Davis (C. C. A.), (54 Fed. Rep., 147); In re Wise (C. C.), (73 Fed. Rep., 183).

(g) The rule that where words are used in an act imposing duties which have acquired by commercial use a meaning different from their ordinary, the latter may be controlled by the former, is not applicable when the language used in the statute is unequivocal.—Newman v. Arthur (109 U. S., 132).

(h) In construing a tariff act when it is claimed that the commercial use of a word or phrase differs from the ordinary signification of such word or phrase, in order that the former may prevail over the latter it must appear that the commercial designation is the result of established usage in commerce and trade and that at the date of the passage of the act the usage was definite, uniform, and general and not partial, local, or personal. In this case mugs, plates, cups, and saucers made of china, of small size, were decided to be subject to duty at 60 per cent under schedule B, act of 1883, and not under schedule N as toys.—Maddock v. Magone (152 U. S., 368).

(a) The above principle also laid down in Sonn v. Magone (159 U. S., 417, 420).

(b) An article may be bought and sold by the specific name which indicates that precise article, and still a group of such articles may be known to trade and commerce by a commercial term which includes them in a special group and which still never appears on the face of an invoice or bill of the goods when the articles are described, because they are always described by the same specific name which refers to the particular article.—In re Herrman (C. C.), (52 Fed. Rep., 941).

(c) In ascertaining the meaning of terms in a tariff act recourse is had to their meaning according to the commercial understanding of the terms in our markets at the time the act was passed, and where it does not appear from the act itself that some other certain fixed meaning is intended by the terms used they are to be understood according to the commercial meaning of the terms in our markets at the time the act was passed; but where it does appear by the act itself that a particular meaning was intended by the terms used that particular meaning must be adopted in giving a construction to the act, whatever the commercial meaning of the terms may have been.—Roosevelt v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 391; 20 Fed. Cas., 1155).

(d) It is not to be presumed that Congress, when it substituted the provisions of one tariff for those of another, intended to use terms in a sense different from that in which they were used in a prior act.—Id.

(e) The trade usage which is to determine the meaning of a word must be well known and general.—Dodge v. Hedden (C. C.), (42 Fed. Rep., 446).

(f) An article not commercially known in this country at the time of the passage of a tariff law, but subsequently imported, and which in fact comes within the proper definition of a similar article then known and provided for in the act, and which is so designated commercially, is entitled to be classified as such.—Matheson & Co. v. United States (C. C.), (90 Fed. Rep., 276).

(g) The commercial designation of an article, in order to control its classification, must be its designation as understood in the trade and commerce of the United States, and evidence of such designation elsewhere is inadmissible.—T. D. 18616, G. A. 4014.

(h) The denomination of articles is construed according to the commercial understanding of terms used and not with reference to the materials of which such articles are made or the use to which they may be applied.—May v. Simmons (4 Fed. Rep., 499).

(i) Undoubtedly the language of tariff acts is to be construed according to its commercial signification; but it will always be understood to have the same meaning in commerce that it has in the community at large unless the contrary is shown.—Swan v. Arthur (103 U. S., 597, 598); Schmieder v. Barney (113 U. S., 645, 648).

(j) The commercial designation established after the passage of a tariff act does not determine the classification of the articles in question.—Dennison Manufacturing Co. v. United States (C. C. A.), (72 Fed. Rep., 258).

(k) The fact that at the date of the passage of an act imposing duties goods of a certain kind had not been manufactured does not withdraw them from the class to which they belong when the language of the statute clearly and fairly includes them.—Newman v. Arthur (109 U. S., 132).

(l) In the absence of a settled designation of a cloth by merchants and importers, its designation as hair, silk, cotton, or wool for the purposes of revenue depends upon the predominance of such article in its composition and not upon the absence of any other material.—Arthur v. Butterfield (125 U. S., 70, 75).

(a) Where the words of a statute are not technical, either as having a special sense by commercial usage or as having a scientific meaning different from their common meaning, they are the words of common speech, and as such their interpretation is within the judicial knowledge, and therefore matter of law. In this case it was decided that tomatoes were vegetables and not fruit.—Nix. v. Hedden (C. C.), (39 Fed. Rep., 109).

(b) The legislature must be presumed to have chosen language with regard to those for whom it is designed to constitute a rule of commerce, viz, the community at large.—Id.

(c) The rule is well settled that in interpreting a name or expression applied to articles upon which duties are laid Congress uses such terms in their ordinary commercial sense rather than in their distinctive or technical sense.—In re Wise (C. C.), (73 Fed. Rep., 183).

(d) It is a cardinal rule of this court that in fixing the classification of goods for the payment of duties the name or designation of the goods is to be understood in its known commercial sense and that their denomination in the market when the law was passed will control their classification, without regard to their scientific designation, the material of which they are made, or the use to which they may be applied.—American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington (141 U. S., 468, 471).

(e) The commercial designation or denomination of an article in the markets of the country when the law was passed will control its classification, without regard to its scientific designation, and without regard to the material of which it may be made, and without regard to the use to which it may be destined or applied.—T. D. 22521, G. A. 4777.

(f) In the construction of laws relating to trade and commerce the vocabulary of merchants is to be adopted in preference to that of mechanics.—United States v. Sarchet (Gilp., 273; 27 Fed. Cas., 958).

(g) To authorize the admission of small pieces of bolt iron under the name of chain links, it must be proved that they have been previously known in commerce by that name.—Id.

(h) The trade and commerce of this country is the trade which buys and sells the particular article, whether it comes from abroad or is made here, and the trade and commerce which makes a designation is the trade and commerce between individuals where the buyer and seller are both engaged in that as their business; not where an individual retails to a consumer, but where both the parties to the transaction are tradesmen.—Dieckerhoff v. Robertson (C. C.), (44 Fed. Rep., 160).

(i) The trade which by its usage settles the commercial names of goods is the trade which is carried on between those why buy and sell at wholesale. where both the buyer and the seller are engaged in the traffic in those goods as the regular business of their lives. It is not the trade where an individual buys for his own personal consumption.—Lamb v. Robertson (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 716).

(j) The term "similar description" is not a commercial term, and the tariff acts do not contemplate that goods classed under it shall be in all respects the same.—Greenleaf v. Goodrich (101 U. S., 278).

(a) In order to determine the commercial meaning of a term it is not the meaning used in transactions between the retail dealer on the one side and the individual purchaser at retail on the other side that is to be considered, but the meaning used between parties who are, on both sides of the transaction, engaged in that particular occupation as the business of their lives.—Morrison v. Miller (37 Fed. Rep., 82).

(b) In the construction of tariff laws the ordinary meaning of the phrase in common speech is a question of law for the court; the commercial meaning is a question of fact for the jury.—Vom Cleff v. Magone (C. C.), (57 Fed. Rep., 198).

(c) The rule of law is well settled that whether an imported article is or is not known in commerce by the word or terms used in the tariff act is a question of fact for the jury and not a question of construction, and of course it must, in a case like the present, be determined by the court as a question of fact, the issue of fact as well as of law being submitted to the court.—Tyng v. Grinnell (92 U. S., 467, 470).

(d) The commercial designation of an article is not a matter of which the courts can take judicial knowledge, but is a fact to be proved.—Seeberger v. Schlesinger (152 U. S., 581, 585).

CUBAN RECIPROCITY TREATY (33 STAT., 2136; T. D. 24836).

(e) The reciprocity treaty between the United States and the Republic of Cuba did not go into effect until December 27, 1903, the date proclaimed by the Presidents of the United States and Cuba, and merchandise imported prior to that date was not entitled to the benefit of the reduced rates provided in the treaty. There is a presumption against retrospective legislation, and words in a statute ought not to have such operation unless they are so clear, strong, and imperative that no other meaning can be annexed to them or unless the intention of the legislature can not be otherwise satisfied. 136 Fed. Rep., 508 (T. D. 26194), reversed; T. D. 25255, G. A. 5665, affirmed.—United States v. American Sugar Refining Company (202 U. S., 563; T. D. 27410).

(f) There is a presumption against retrospective operation of statutes, and words ought not to have such operation "unless they are so clear, strong, and imperative that no other meaning can be annexed to them, or unless the intention of the legislature can not be otherwise satisfied." In respect to the Cuban treaty it can not be supposed that if Congress intended it to have retrospective operation words that expressed the contrary intention would have been chosen.—Ibid.

(g) Imports from Cuba are not entitled to the reduction of duties provided in the treaty until December 27, 1903, the date proclaimed by the President of the United States and the President of Cuba for the commencement of the operation of the treaty. 144 Fed. Rep., 563; T. D. 27261 and T. D. 25914, G. A. 5885, affirmed.—Franklin Sugar Refining Company v. United States (202 U. S., 580; T. D. 27412).

(h) The postponement for ten days of the time when the Cuban reciprocity treaty of December 17, 1903, should take effect, as proclaimed by the President, was valid, and merchandise imported after that day and before December 27, 1903, was not subject to the provisions of the treaty. T. D. 26214, G. A. 5989, reversed on this point.—United States v. Dalton (151 Fed. Rep., 144; T. D. 27973).

(i) The Cuban reciprocity treaty had no retroactive effect, and merchandise entered before the treaty took effect was not subject to its provisions. T. D.

26214, G. A. 5989, affirmed on this point.—Dalton v. United States (151 Fed. Rep., 143; T. D. 27974).

(a) Article II of this treaty, providing that the products of the soil or industry of Cuba imported into the United States shall be admitted at the reduced rate of duty therein named, has reference to the rates of duty prescribed by any general tariff law which may supersede the present Dingley Act and not to a special law like that governing our tariff relations with the Philippine Islands. (Act of March 8, 1902; T. D. 23583.) No sugar imported from the Republic of Cuba can be admitted into the United States at a reduction of duty greater than 20 per cent of the rates of duty provided thereon by the present tariff act of the United States, approved July 24, 1897. (T. D. 26189, G. A. 5980.)

(b) Tobacco produced in and exported from Cuba was placed in bonded warehouse and remained there over three years. While the tobacco was in warehouse, and prior to the expiration of the three years, the reciprocity treaty with Cuba became effective. It was held that the dutiable character of such tobacco is governed by the provisions of the treaty and that the rights and liabilities of both the Government and the importers were fixed at the time of the abandonment (R. S. 2971). A protest claiming that such tobacco is entitled to the reduced rate of duty under the provisions of said treaty will be sustained.—T. D. 26386, G. A. 6051.

(c) Tobacco produced in and exported from Cuba and entered for warehouse on September 25, 1900, remained in warehouse over three years, and consequently was regarded as abandoned to the Government under the provisions of R. S. 2971. The tobacco was subject to the rate of duty in force at the time of its abandonment, when the rights and liabilities of both the Government and the importer as to the question of duties are fixed, and the promulgation of the reciprocity treaty with Cuba subsequent to the date of the abandonment did not affect the duty on the importation, nor is it taken out of the operation of the general rule by an extension of time made by the Treasury Department within which such tobacco may be sold as abandoned property or within which such duties were to be paid.—T. D. 26991, G. A. 6259.

(d) Merchandise imported from Cuba, entered for warehouse, and withdrawn from warehouse prior to December 27, 1903, the date when the reciprocity treaty with Cuba took effect, is subject to the rate of duty in force at the time of its withdrawal from warehouse for consumption and not to the rate of duty in force at the time of the liquidating of the withdrawal entry. The treaty had no retrospective operation.—United States v. American Sugar Refining Company (202 U. S., 563; T. D. 27410) and Franklin Sugar Refining Company v. United States (202 U. S., 580; T. D. 27412) followed; T. D. 25427, G. A. 5724, affirmed in effect; T. D. 27555, G. A. 6415.

(e) The Philippine Archipelago is not an "other country" within the meaning of that phrase as used in Article VIII of this treaty, and commodities coming from Cuba are dutiable at 20 per cent less than the rates provided in the tariff act of 1897 and not at 20 per cent less than the rates provided for like commodities from the Philippines. Article II, being more specific in its terms, is not modified or controlled by the general provisions of Article VIII.—T. D. 27847, G. A. 6520; affirmed in Faber v. U. S. (T. D. 28542).

(f) Alcohol coming from Cuba is dutiable under the provisions of Article II of this treaty at 20 per cent less than the rate provided for alcohol by the act of 1897 and not at 20 per cent less than the rate provided therefor by the reciprocity agreement with France, Germany, Italy, and Portugal.—Ibid.

IMMEDIATE TRANSPORTATION ACT OF JUNE 10, 1880 (21 STAT., 173; U. S. COMP. STAT., 1901, P. 1962).

(a) It is not the official duty of the collector of customs to receive the freight due to carriers for transportation of merchandise in bond, in pursuance of the act of June 10, 1880 (21 Stat., 173), but if the collector agrees to receive such freight in lieu of giving notice to the carrier, as required by the statute, before delivering the goods to the consignee, he would be liable for any amount so received for the use of the carrier.—Cleveland, C. C. & I. Ry. Co. v. M'Clung (15 Fed. Rep., 905).

(b) The receipt of such freight not being an official duty, a deputy could not render the collector liable for his acts by reason simply of his official relations to his superior. The collector would not be liable for freights collected by a deputy unless he had in some way authorized his deputy so to act or unless he had so acted as to estop him from denying that the deputy was, in the matter complained of, acting by his authority for him.—Id.

(c) If the collector knew that his deputy was receiving freight for the carrier and permitted the carrier to receive the freight through his deputy, in the belief that he was acting for him, or by his acts or declarations held out his deputy as his agent in the matter to receive the freight due to the carrier, in lieu of the notice required by the statute, he would be liable to the carrier for any amount so paid to the deputy.—Id.

(d) The plaintiff not having alleged that the freight is unpaid, but, on the contrary, having alleged payment of the freight for his use and sued for its recovery, the carrier can not recover damages by reason of the failure of the collector to give notice before delivering the merchandise to the consignee.—Id.

(e) A collector of customs is not authorized by the act of 1880 to collect the freight upon the transported goods or to receive it for the lien holder, and if a deputy collector who acts as cashier for the collector does so collect or receive the freight his act is an unofficial act which entails no official responsibility upon the collector, his superior.—Cleveland, Columbus, &c., R. R. v. McClung (119 U. S., 454).

(f) This act does not require the importer to furnish the collector at the ports of arrival with two copies of the quadruplicate invoices, and a charge for storage incurred by reason of the failure of the importer to furnish two copies is not a legal charge against the importer.—T. D. 28156, G. A. 6585.

PHILIPPINE TARIFF ACT OF MARCH 8, 1902 (32 STAT., 54; T. D. 23583).

(g) To entitle a commodity which is the product of the Philippine Archipelago to admission to the ports of the United States at 75 per cent of the regular tariff duties, such commodity must be exported direct from the Philippine Islands, or, if through some other country, nothing more than transshipment must have taken place in such country. Where such commodity has been exported from the Philippine Islands to some other country, and there mingled with the commerce of that country, and from there exported to the United States, it is not entitled to the low rate provided for in section 2 of this act.—T. D. 25510, G. A. 5761.

PURE-FOOD LAW—ACT OF MARCH 3, 1903 (32 STAT., 1158).

(h) The expense attached to the administration of every Federal law, where there is no express provision to the contrary, is to be borne by the Government.

The expense for storage upon merchandise detained by the order of the Secretary of the Treasury pending an inspection and analysis by the Department of Agriculture, pursuant to the so-called pure-food law, being the act of March 3, 1903, can not legally be imposed upon the importer.—United States v. Acker et al. (133 Fed. Rep., 842; T. D. 25812), affirming without opinion T. D. 25331, G. A. 5689).

(a) The expense for cartage of merchandise in removing the same to a warehouse when detained by the order of the Secretary of the Treasury for inspection and examination by the Department of Agriculture under the so-called pure-food law can not be imposed upon the importer, but must be borne by the Government.—United States v. Acker et al. (133 Fed. Rep., 842; T. D. 25812) followed; T. D. 26244, G. A. 6005.

(b) Samples of imported merchandise consumed or destroyed by the Department of Agriculture in making the inspection and analysis authorized by the so-called pure-food law, as contained in a paragraph of the appropriation act of March 3, 1903, are dutiable, and the collector is required to levy and collect duty thereon the same as on the remainder of the importation.—T. D. 26839, G. A. 6197.

(c) Storage charges on imported merchandise detained for examination by the Department of Agriculture under the act of March 3, 1903, and permitted to remain in the public stores after due notice to remove the same has been received by him are properly assessable against the importer and may be collected from him.—T. D. 27381, G. A. 6373.

BOND FOR DELIVERY OF UNEXAMINED PACKAGES.

(d) In computing the ten days within which the order of the collector for return of goods to the public stores must be served upon the importer, if the tenth day falls on Sunday that day can not be excluded, and the service on Monday following is not sufficient. (In this case the notice was mailed on Saturday, the ten days expired on Sunday, and the notice was received by the importer on Monday. The collector refused to correct the classification because the goods were not returned within the ten days.)—Hermann v. United States (C. C.), (66 Fed. Rep., 721).

(e) The bond given by importers under R. S. 2899 to secure the possession of packages not ordered for examination, in double the value of the merchandise, entitles the Government, in the event of a breach of the bond, to the amount named as specific damages, and it is not under the necessity of proving actual damage.—Dieckerhoff v. United States (202 U. S., 302; T. D. 27366), affirming 136 Fed. Rep., 545; T. D. 26040.

COMMERCE WITH CONTIGUOUS COUNTRIES.

(f) The exceptions specified in R. S. 3095 do not apply to Brazos de Santiago nor the district in which it is situated, and which runs up the Rio Grande on the boundary line between the United States and Mexico and adjacent to Mexico, and the prohibition of the statute applies to all such vessels arrving by sea at the port of Brazos de Santiago from any foreign port, including the port of Tampico, Mexico. The said section must be read in connection with R. S. 3097.—United States v. The Sloop Theophile (11 Fed. Rep., 696).

(g) Canadian hay imported at Richford, Vt., and bond given for transportation and exportation via Boston. The hay was intended to be fed to Canadian cattle during voyage. Held not to be free, as the provision in R. S. 2866 only applies to bona fide exportations to foreign countries and not to supplies to be consumed on the voyage.—T. D. 12576, G. A. 1260.

ENTRY.

(a) R. S. 2785, providing for entry within fifteen days after the report of the master of the vessel, does not prevent entry of the goods before entry of the vessel. T. D. 21116, G. A. 4436, reversed.—United States v. Legg (C. C. A.), (105 Fed. Rep,. 930).

(b) An importer being required to make the entry required by R. S. 2785, when he presented himself to the collector, with his papers and money for duties, and offered to make entry and pay the duties, entry will be considered to have been made at that time, though the collector refused to receive or file the papers, and if such entry is presented, with offer to pay duties, before 4.06 p. m., July 24, 1897, duties are to be assessed under the act of 1894.—Id.

(c) The written entry required by R. S. 2785, and not the series of acts necessary to the entering of the goods, is the "entry" referred to in section 33, act of 1897.—Id.

(d) The provision of R. S. 2785 for the entry of merchandise within fifteen days after the report of the collector of the district of the master of the vessel in which the merchandise is imported fixes the date after which the importer may not make his entry, but not the date before which he may not do so. Accordingly, where importers on and prior to 4.06 p. m., July 24, 1897, tendered the collector a consumption entry, and were prepared to pay the estimated duty, on merchandise on a vessel which arrived within the limits of the port that morning, the merchandise is dutiable under the act of 1894. T. D. 21116, G. A. 4436, overruled and United States v. Legg (C. C. A.), (105 Fed. Rep., 930) followed.—T. D. 22870, G. A. 4881.

(e) In construing this section, allowing importers fifteen days within which to make entry of merchandise, and section 33, tariff act of 1897, providing that "merchandise previously imported, for which no entry has been made," shall be subject to the duties provided in said tariff act, held that the former section does not have the effect of giving importers fifteen days in which to enter under the tariff act preceding that of 1897 merchandise which reached port, but was not entered, while said preceding act, was in force.—United States v. Lumber Company, and Lumber Company v. United States (142 Fed. Rep., 432; T. D. 26826), reversing 128 id., 306; T. D. 25135, and affirming T. D. 24535, G. A. 5365.

(f) A charge by a collector for storage in a public store, for labor, and for cartage from the general-order warehouse to the public store, made upon uninvoiced and unclaimed goods under the value of $100 sent to the general-order warehouse and taken thence to a public store for examination on the application of the owner, is a valid charge authorized by law.—Kennedy v. Magone (158 U. S., 212).

(g) When an importer chooses to enter goods of less value than $100 without a certified invoice, charges for cartage (under R. S. 2926) to appraisers' stores and for storage and labor at such stores may properly be exacted.—Kennedy v. Magone (C. C.), (41 Fed. Rep., 768).

(h) Where merchandise valued at less than $100 is entered by appraisement without invoice, and the entry is incomplete for want of particulars, and the goods are taken into custody by the collector and conveyed to a warehouse, the charges for storage and labor are legal.—Hempstead v. Cadwalader (C. C.), (42 Fed. Rep., 529).

(a) What is an incomplete entry under section 2926, R. S.—T. D. 18738, G. A. 4051.

MAIL IMPORTATIONS.

(b) Dutiable goods can not lawfully be imported in the foreign mails under the international postal treaty of Berne of October 9, 1874 (19 Stat., 577). Such goods are, in the hands of the receiver of them from the post-office, subject to seizure, and the fact that there was no intent on the part of the sender or receiver of them to defraud the United States of the duty does not render the customs officers liable to an action for making the seizure.—Von Cotzhausen v. Nazro (107 U. S., 215).

MANIFEST—ARTICLES NOT ON.

(c) When articles purchased abroad for the equipment of a vessel are not used and remain on board at her arrival in the United States, they need not be reported on her manifest.—United States v. Twenty Three Coils of Cordage (Gilp., 299; 28 Fed. Cas., 290).

(d) Articles, such as cables and hawsers, purchased abroad in the course of the voyage for the bona fide purpose of substituting them, as part of the ship's equipment, for articles lost or deteriorated by use, are not subject to duty and need not be entered on the manifest.—United States v. One Hempen Cable and One Hempen Hawser (41 Niles Reg., 273; 27 Fed. Cas., 264).

AVERAGE VALUE.

(e) Section 2912, R. S., has no application to wools which, within the meaning of paragraph 356, tariff act of 1897, have been changed in condition for the purpose of evading duty.—T. D. 25168, G. A. 5629; Stone v. United States (147 Fed. Rep., 603; T. D. 27515).

(f) Section 2910, R. S., does not apply to a mixed invoice where each item of the merchandise on the invoice bears the same rate of duty.—T. D. 28596, G. A. 6690.

REPAIRS TO VESSELS.

(g) The expense of dry-docking included in the cost of repairs made in foreign ports on vessels enrolled and licensed under the laws of the United States to engage in the foreign and coasting trade on the northern, northeastern, and northwestern frontiers of the United States is not an element of dutiable value in assessing duty on the cost of such repairs.—United States v. George Hall Coal Company (142 Fed. Rep., 1039; T. D. 27068), affirming 134 id., 1003; T. D. 26038, followed; T. D. 27154, G. A. 6295.

(h) The expenses incurred in a foreign port in repairing an American vessel and for fittings and work of carpenters and mechanics on the same are expenses for repairs within the meaning of R. S. 3114 and dutiable at 50 per cent on the cost of repairs in such foreign country.—T. D. 21670, G. A. 4575.

(i) An American vessel engaged in trade between Cape Vincent, United States, and Kingston, Canada, was necessarily repaired at Kingston. The cost of the repairs was dutiable at 50 per cent, and if the owner has a right to remission it is a matter for the Secretary under R. S. 3115.—T. D. 12305, G. A. 1077.

SEA STORES.

(a) Hempen cables and hawsers are not "vessel and cabin stores" within section 23 of the collection act of 1799; nor are they "sea stores" within section 45 of that act. These expressions mean stores or provisions laid in for cabin or steerage, for officers, passengers, or crew, or, if capable of further extension, can only be applicable to articles of consumption which perish in the using and not to the tackel and apparel of a ship—the sails, rigging, cable, or anchors.—United States v. One Hempen Cable and One Hempen Hawser (41 Niles Register, 273; 27 Fed. Cas., 264).

(b) Information for the forfeiture of sea stores for not being reported on the manifest. Cordage, raven's-duck, and sailcloth found on board of a vessel on her return from a voyage are not sea stores within section 45, act of 1799.—United States v. Twenty Four Coils of Cordage (Baldwin, 502; 28 Fed. Cas., 276).

(c) If intended for the use of the ship, they are a part of its tackle, apparel, and furniture; if not, they are a part of the cargo.—Id.

(d) Where articles are purchased abroad for a vessel to be used as a part of her equipment, they are not sea stores.—United States v. Twenty Three Coils of Cordage (Gilp., 299; 28 Fed. Cas., 290).

(e) What may be a reasonable allowance of goods to be made to a sea vessel, to be entered free as sea stores, is referred to the judgment of the collector and naval officer, where there is one, and in ports where there is none, to the collector alone.—An Ullage Box of Sugar (1 Ware (350), 355; 24 Fed. Cas., 504).

(f) If there be no reason for imputing collusion between the importer or master and the officers of the customs for the purpose of defrauding the United States of the duties, the decision of the collector is conclusive.—Id.

(g) If an amount manifestly excessive were allowed, it might furnish a presumption of fraudulent collusion.—Id.

(h) If the importer takes goods from the vessel which were entered free as sea stores and uses them as merchandise, as by offering them for sale, he will be liable to an action of debt for the duties; but the goods are not liable to forfeiture.—An Ullage Box of Sugar (1 Ware (350), 355; 24 Fed. Cas., 504).

(i) As to limitations of free entry of steamer coal.—T. D. 13866, G. A. 2019.

(j) Coal used as ballast is not part of the sea stores of a vessel within the meaning of R. S. 2796, 2797.—T. D. 21324, G. A. 4464.

(k) The determination of what constitutes excessive sea stores rests entirely within the judgment of the collector, in conjunction with the naval officer, where there is one. His decision is not reviewable by the courts nor by the Board of General Appraisers.—Id.

(l) Coal stores held not to be entitled to the benefit of the provisions of the act of March 3, 1897.—T. D. 26864, G. A. 6211.

(m) Coal taken on a vessel to be consumed during the voyage is sea stores, and when transferred from one vessel to another of the same line in a port of the United States is exempt from duty. T. D. 23124, G. A. 4464; distinguished.—T. D. 28321, G. A. 6643.

FORFEITURE—SMUGGLING, ETC.

(n) A package of diamonds delivered in Europe to the captain of a vessel with a statement that the package contained nothing of value and with the request that on arrival at Philadelphia he send the package by express to a certain address in Cincinnati. On arrival of the vessel a Treasury agent boarded her and demanded the package, which was delivered to him. The owner indicted under R. S. 2865 for smuggling. Held, that mere acts of concealment of merchandise on entering the waters of the United States, however preparatory they may be and however cogently they may indicate an intention of thereafter smuggling or clandestinely introducing, at best are but steps or attempts not alone in themselves constituting smuggling or clandestine introduction.—Keck v. United States (172 U. S., 434, 445).

(a) The offense of smuggling is not committed by an act done before the obligation to pay or account for the duties arises.—Ibid.

(b) The term "smuggling" had a well-understood import at common law, and in the absence of a particular definition of its significance in the statute creating it resort may be had to the common law for the purpose of arriving at the meaning of the word.—Keck v. United States (172 U. S., 434, 446).

(c) A review of the principal statutes enacted in this country regulating the collection of customs duties establishes that so far as they embrace legislation designed to prevent the evasion of duties they proceeded upon the theory of the English law on the same subject, that is, that they forbade all the acts which were deemed by the lawmaker means to the end of smuggling or clandestinely introducing dutiable goods into the country in violation of law, and which were likewise considered as efficient to enable the offender to reap the expected benefits of his wrongful acts. Therefore they forbade and prescribed penalties for everything which could precede smuggling or follow it, without specifically making a distinct and separate offense designated smuggling or clandestine introduction.—Keck v. United States (172 U. S., 434, 450).

(d) An indictment under R. S. 3082 which charges that the defendant on a date named "did knowingly, wilfully and unlawfully import and bring into the United States, and did assist in importing and bringing into the United States, to wit, into the port of Philadelphia," diamonds of a stated value "contrary to law and the provisions of the act of Congress in such cases made and provided with intent to defraud the United States," is clearly insufficient, as the allegations are too general and do not sufficiently inform the defendant of the nature of the accusation against him.—Keck v. United States (172 U. S., 434, 437).

(e) An indictment based on R. S. 2865 which charges that the defendant "did knowingly, wilfully and unlawfully, and with intent to defraud the revenue of the United States smuggle and clandestinely introduce into the United States, to wit, into the port of Philadelphia," certain "diamonds" of a stated value, which should have been invoiced and duty thereon paid or accounted for, but which to the knowledge of the defendant and with intent to defraud the revenue were not invoiced nor the duty paid or accounted for, sufficiently describes the offense to make it clear to the common understanding what articles were charged to have been smuggled and is sufficient.—Keck v. U. S. (172 U. S., 434, 438).

(f) Examining the case made by the record, it results that, whether we consider the testimony of the captain alone or all the testimony, it unquestionably establishes that there was no passage of the package of diamonds through the lines of the customs authorities, but that the package was delivered to the customs officer on board the vessel itself at a time when or before the obligation to make entry and pay the duties arose and that the offense of smuggling was not committed within the meaning of the statute. Reversing the District court.—Keck v. United States (172 U. S., 434, 455).

(a) In a suit to forfeit goods after the passage of the act of June 22, 1874, which requires proof of an actual intent to defraud the Government, there is no error in charging the jury that, after an actual importation in violation of law has been shown, if the claimant knew that his method of importation was contrary to law the burden is upon him to show affirmatively that he did not adopt such method with intent to evade the payment of duties.—United States v. Nine Trunks, 6 Wkly. Notes (Cas., 542; 24 Int. Rev. Rec., 327; 6 Reporter, 613; 26 Pittsb. Leg. J., 38; 27 Fed. Cas., 164).

(b) The penalties imposed in section 2802 are incurred when dutiable articles which the passenger had intentionally omitted to mention to the customs officer are found in the baggage, whether or not there was any intention to avoid payment of duty. What is meant by "mentioned."—Harts v. United States (140 Fed. Rep., 843; T. D. 26827), affirming 131 id., 886; T. D. 25608.

(c) Dutiable jewelry was found in a hand bag carried by the passenger after she had made an entry of dutiable articles from which she had omitted the jewelry and in which she stated that she had no dutiable articles other than those declared. She said and did nothing to put the customs officer on inquiry as to the dutiable character of any other articles in her baggage. Forfeiture was decreed.—United States v. One Pearl Necklace (111 Fed. Rep., 164), reversing 105 id., 357; Dodge v. United States (131 Fed. Rep., 849; T. D. 25609).

(d) Passenger had declared wearing apparel, which the official form makes include jewelry. She had left the ship, but was within the customs lines on the pier awaiting the examination of her baggage, when a pearl chain which she was wearing around her neck underneath her dress was seized as illegally imported. It was held that the seizure was unlawful, because the declaration of "wearing apparel" sufficiently covered the chain and she had not yet had opportunity to complete the entry by giving the Government officers information in regard to it, an opportunity she would have had during the examination of her baggage.—One Pearl Chain v. United States (Dulles, claimant), (123 Fed. Rep., 371); United States v. One Pearl Chain (139 Fed. Rep., 513; T. D. 26419), affirming id., 510; T. D. 26418.

(e) The bringing of goods into the United States without making an entry and producing an invoice therefor is importing merchandise "contrary to law," and goods so imported are liable to seizure and forfeiture, notwithstanding they are free of duty.—Six Parcels of Placer Gold v. United States (76 Pac. Rep., 473; T. D. 25200).

(f) It is immaterial whether the owner or driver of a domestic team used wholly within the United States in the transportation of smuggled merchandise had or had not knowledge of its illegal use; it is forfeitable under the provisions of R. S. 3061, 3062, and 3063.—United States v. One Black Horse, etc. (147 Fed. Rep., 770; T. D. 27196).

(g) A vehicle used in smuggling is subject to forfeiture irrespective of whether or not the owner of it was cognizant of the purpose for which it was being used.—United States v. One Black Horse (129 Fed. Rep., 167; T. D. 25396).

(h) A decree of forfeiture of merchandise seized for smuggling had been entered by default, and the term of the court during which such entry was made having expired it was held that the decree could not be opened and set aside at any subsequent term. Section 914 of the Revised Statutes, requiring that in causes other than admiralty and certain other specified causes the practice in Federal courts shall conform to the practice in State courts in like cases, does not apply to proceedings for the forfeiture of smuggled goods, for the reason that such actions are in rem and assimilate to actions in admiralty.—United States v. One Trunk containing Fourteen pieces of Embroidery (155 Fed. Rep., 651; T. D. 28515).

(a) The provisions of R. S. 2802 would appear to apply only to the assessment of duty on dutiable articles found by customs officers in a passenger's baggage and are limited to the articles so found, while R. S. 3082 applies not only to articles which have been smuggled or attempted to be smuggled in that manner, but to goods which have been passed through the custom-house without detection.—United States v. Five Packages of Tapestry (114 Fed. Rep., 496).

(b) Articles on the person are "baggage" within the meaning of this section penalizing the concealment of dutiable articles in the baggage of any person arriving in the United States, and a package of precious stones found in the baggage of a passenger, which he had failed to declare, as provided by said section, is subject to the penalty there provided.—218¼ Carats Loose Emeralds v. United States (154 Fed. Rep., 839; T. D. 28235), affirming 153 id., 643; T. D. 27851.

(c) This section (3082) does not provide for the forfeiture of the value of any merchandise fraudulently imported into the United States.—United States v. A Lot of Precious Stones and Jewelry (134 Fed. Rep., 61; T. D. 26159).

(d) Omission to enter goods at the custom-house incurs forfeiture under this section, though the merchandise be American goods returned on which no duty is assessable under the tariff. It is no defense to the action that there was no intent to defraud the United States or that the United States is not actually defrauded of any duty.—United States v. Fifty Waltham Watch Movements (139 Fed. Rep., 291; T. D. 26546).

(e) The court of the district where smuggled property is found is the only court which has jurisdiction of the matter. Where the collector at Cleveland seized in the city of New York certain jewelry which was said to have been smuggled at the port of Cleveland and took it to Cleveland with him, it was held that his act did not constitute a seizure, that the court in his own district was without jurisdiction, and that the seizure could legally be made only in the district in which the articles were found.—United States v. Larkin (153 Fed. Rep., 113; T. D. 28328).

LANDING GOODS WITHOUT A PERMIT.

(f) Libel for smuggling cigars: One Albreu, who owned the cigars, testified that the captain of the bark in Habana had made an agreement to smuggle cigars for him; that he sent the cigars from Habana to Matanzas, where the bark was lying, and received a letter from the captain saying they were shipped; that he then came to New York, and after the arrival of the bark in New York received his cigars, which were brought him by a carman, and paid the captain the agreed freight. It also appeared in evidence that on the seizure of the cigars Albreu's papers were also seized, among which were the invoices of the cigars from Habana to Matanzas and the letter of the captain. The captain denied that the cigars were ever on board the vessel and otherwise contradicted Albreu, but gave no satisfactory explanation of the letter. Some other testimony was given contradicting some parts of Albreu's story. His character for truth was seriously impeached. Held, that the evidence sufficiently sustained the charge against the vessel and that she must be forfeited.—The John Griffin (4 Ben., 19; 11 Int. Rev. Rec., 63; 13 Fed. Cas., 680); reversed by the Circuit Court (case not reported), but sustained by the Supreme Court (15 Wallace, 29).

(a) On the arrival of the steamship at her pier or dock at Hoboken, N. J., certain packages were, without a permit or the knowledge of the customs inspectors, unladen by her officers as baggage of steerage passengers. The customs officers having there examined the packages and found them to contain articles subject to duty so marked them for identification and sent them to Castle Garden, New York City, for further examination. Upon such further examination at that place and the failure to pay the duties the packages were sent to the seizure room at the custom-house. Held, that the seizure was made at Castle Garden and not at the pier at Hoboken. It being fully proved that the packages were so unladen, the court below did not err in directing a verdict condemning them for a violation of section 50, act of 1799.—Four Packages v. United States (97 U. S., 404).

(b) The transshipment of a cargo from one vessel to another while lying at a wharf in port is an unlading and delivery within the meaning of section 50, act of 1799.—The Fame (1 Brown Adm., 42; 8 Fed. Cas., 982).

(c) Silver dollars are goods, wares, and merchandise within section 50, act of 1799, for the landing of which a permit from the custom-house is necessary.—The Elizabeth & Jane (2 Mason, 407; 8 Fed. Cas., 473).

(d) Appurtenances or equipments of a ship, as a chain cable or other articles, purchased bona fide for the use of the ship are not "goods, wares, or merchandise" within the meaning of section 50, act of 1799, which requires a permit before they are landed.—United States v. Chain Cable (2 Sumn., 362; 25 Fed. Cas., 391).

(e) The compass of a steamship, being part of its apparel and tackle, is not "merchandise" within the meaning of section 50, act of 1799.—United States v. Fry (D. C.), (48 Fed. Rep., 713).

(f) A passenger by a steamer from a foreign country had among his baggage three ordinary goods cases filled with new and dutiable goods and intended for sale as such. They were landed on the wharf with the personal baggage of the passengers. They were not named in the manifest of the vessel. No entry was made of the goods, nor had any duties on them been paid or secured to be paid, and no permit had been granted to land them except the general baggage permit issued for the vessel, which authorized the inspector on board to "examine the baggage of all the passengers, and, if nothing be found but personal baggage, permit the same to be landed and send all other articles not permitted in due time to the appraisers stores." The cases were seized on the wharf and an information filed to forfeit them as landed without a permit. Held, that on the above facts the jury must find a verdict in favor of the Government.—United States v. Three Cases (6 Ben., 558; 18 Int. Rev. Rec., 173; 28 Fed. Cas., 110).

(g) Where goods have been seized for illegal importation it is competent to prove that the fact of an intended illegal importation was previously known to the revenue officers and that they acted thereon in making the seizure. Such information may properly be regarded as so connected with the illegal act itself as to constitute a part of the res gestae.—United States v. Nine Trunks (6 Weekly Notes, 542; 24 Int. Rev. Rec., 327; 6 Rep., 613; 26 Pittsb. Leg. J., 38: 27 Fed. Cas., 164).

(h) In a proceeding to forfeit imported goods on the ground of fraud, the goods themselves are regarded as the defendant and offender, and therefore it is no objection to the admission of proof of communications made to the revenue officers that they were made in the absence of the claimant.—Id.

(a) Seamen engaged on board a steamship were arrested while engaged in smuggling cigars, which they had brought into the port on board her; the seamen were promised immunity, and an information having been filed against the steamship under section 50, act of 1799, the evidence of the seamen was relied on to secure the forfeiture. It appeared that neither the owners nor the master nor any officer of the ship was engaged in or knew of the smuggling. Held, that the evidence of the men was sufficient to sustain the action, and the decree required by the statute must follow, but that the course pursued in the matter by the Government officials was open to severe criticism. The district attorney was recommended to present the facts to the Attorney-General before the signature of the decree.—The Cleopatra (5 Ben., 290; 14 Int. Rev. Rec., 29; 5 Fed. Cas., 1029).

(b) The shipment of goods of foreign manufacture from Boston to Baltimore, without certificates of the payment of duties, consigned to fictitious names, the marks of the packages having been changed, taken together constitute probable cause for prosecution under section 50, act of 1799.—Locke v. United States (7 Cranch, 339).

(c) R. S. 2873 is to be interpreted and applied according to its intention, viz, to impose vigilance in preventing unlading without a permit upon the persons having command; and it is not to be applied in cases evidently outside of the statute, such as derelict or salvaged goods, or goods unladen in case of accident to save them from loss, nor to cases of unlading by a superior attacking force, nor in like manner where it is affirmatively shown that it could not by any practicable means be prevented by the master or person in command.—United States v. Curtis (16 Fed. Rep., 184).

(d) In an action for a penalty against a master for unlading goods without a permit, section 16, act of June 22, 1874, requires only that the intent with which the acts were done by the persons who committed them should be submitted to the jury, not the intent of the master.—Id.

(e) Sections 2873 and 2768, R. S., are to be construed together as the equivalent of section 50, act of 1799, and as imposing only one penalty, viz, a penalty either upon the master, or if he be not in command at the time, then upon the person in command of the vessel.—Id.

(f) Where 77 packages of cigars were secretly lowered, for the purposes of smuggling, from the bows of the steamer at 2 o'clock a. m., while she lay at anchor at lower quarantine, New York Harbor, while the master was absent from the ship, he having gone the day previous to the New York custom-house, 15 miles distant, to make entry of the arrival of the vessel, as he was bound to do, held, that though the penalty of $400 was incurred, the suit should have been against the person in actual command of the vessel at the time, and not against the absent master, and that the latter was not liable.—Id.

(g) Where a vessel took on board at New Orleans a chain cable smuggled by another vessel, sections 27 and 28, act of 1799, are not applicable; but the case is covered by sections 50 and 69, which provide a penalty for unlading goods without a permit or license, or for knowingly receiving or concealing goods liable to seizure. But the vessel receiving smuggled goods is not liable to forfeiture.—Clark v. Protection Insurance Company (1 Story, 109; 5 Fed. Cas., 909).

(h) Merchandise free of duty can not be lawfully unladen and delivered without a permit from the collector and naval officer, if any, for such unlading and delivery.—United States v. The Sarah B. Harris (4 Cliff., 147; 12 Int. Rev. Rec., 54; 27 Fed. Cas., 954).

(a) The permit required by section 50 is the same as the one mentioned in section 49, act of 1799, and that, manifestly is a written permit.—Id.

(b) If Congress had intended that goods not dutiable should be unladen and delivered without a permit, evidence of such intention would be found in some part of the act. None such is found.—Id.

(c) Whenever a vessel, or the owner or master of a vessel, has become subject to a penalty for a violation of the revenue laws, such vessel shall be holden for the payment of such penalty, and be seized and proceeded against summarily.—The Saratoga (15 Fed. Rep., 382).

(d) The act of February 8, 1871, provides that no vessel shall be subject to seizure or forfeiture as above unless it shall appear that the master at the time of the alleged illegal act was a consenting party or privy thereto.—Id.

(e) Section 50, act of 1799, applies to all cases of unlading without a permit in any port or place within any collection district, whether such port or place be the port originally intended for the port of discharge of the cargo or not.—The Industry (1 Gall., 114; 13 Fed. Cas., 35).

(f) Goods landed without a permit from the proper collector and naval officer, if any, are subject to forfeiture.—United States v. Twenty Cases of Matches (2 Biss., 47; 10 Int. Rev. Rec., 95; 2 Am. Law T. Rep. U. S. Cts., 48; 1 Chi. Leg. News, 145; 28 Fed. Cas., 242).

(g) It is no defense that the unlading was without the knowledge or consent of the consignee or owner; that it was at an intermediate port and not at the port of destination; and that it was an unlawful act on the part of the master. The forfeiture attaches upon the unlawful unlading, wherever that may be.—Id.

(h) The fact that the goods were the production of the United States, and simply transported through a foreign country, being shipped from Portland, Me., to Chicago through Canada on the Grand Trunk Railway, and were exempt from duty, and that all the laws and regulations relating to transit had been strictly complied with, does not remove the necessity of procuring a permit.—Id.

(i) If goods (mackerel) were the property of an American citizen, taken on board an American vessel at a foreign port and consigned to American consignees, were landed at a foreign port for transshipment to the American port, were caught in an American vessel by American fishermen and shipped to the American port in the American vessel, still they could not be unladen at the American port without a permit in writing.—United States v. The Sarah B. Harris (4 Cliff., 147; 12 Int. Rev. Rec., 54; 27 Fed. Cas., 954).

(j) Innocence of intention can not, any more than ignorance of the law, afford a defense to the master or owner of a vessel for a violation of the prohibition contained in section 50, act of 1799.—Id.

(k) A verbal assent by the customs officers to the landing of goods is not a compliance with section 50, act of 1799.—The Sarah B. Harris (1 Hask., 52; 21 Fed. Cas., 441).

(l) Such assent will not save a vessel from forfeiture for landing goods without a permit.—Id.

(m) The permit must be in writing.—Id.

(n) A permit obtained by fraud is not a permit.—Id.

(o) To create a forfeiture for landing goods without a permit the goods must come from one cargo and be landed from the same vessel, but not at the same time.—The Sarah Bernice (1 Hask., 78; 21 Fed. Cas., 438).

(a) Allegations in the libel as to the goods and their value bind the Government.—Id.

(b) A forfeiture is not created under section 50, act of 1799, as modified by the act of 1827, prohibiting the importation of brandy in casks of less than 15 gallons capacity, by a seaman landing about 2 gallons, all that remained of a purchase in a foreign port, taken on board for his own use on his way home.—Id.

(c) Under section 50, act of 1799, if foreign goods, exceeding $400 in value are unladen without a permit the vessel is forfeited from which they were unladen, although they were not actually brought in such vessel from a foreign port, but had been transshipped into her on the homeward voyage.—The Harmony (1 Gall., 123; 11 Fed. Cas., 556).

(d) Goods taken and landed from a foreign vessel wrecked upon the coast are not subject to forfeiture.—The Gertrude (3 Story, 68; 2 Ware (Dav. 176) 181; 10 Fed. Cas., 265).

(e) A vessel which has been driven ashore by stress of weather has not "arrived" within the limits of the collection district within the meaning of this section, and the unlading of her cargo without authority does not subject it to forfeiture.—The Cargo Ex Lady Essex (D. C.), (39 Fed. Rep., 765).

(f) The failure to give notice of the contingency which makes such unlading necessary does not authorize a forfeiture of the cargo.—Id.

(g) It is good defense that the party has been prevented by inevitable accident, necessity, or distress, from complying with the requirements of sections 50 and 92, act of 1790. But such defense is not allowable under a plea which simply puts in issue a denial of the facts constituting a forfeiture within those sections.—United States v. Hayward (2 Gall., 485; 26 Fed. Cas., 240).

(h) This section applies to goods the importation of which is prohibited by law.—Harford v. United States (8 Cranch, 109).

(i) A vessel engaged in the coasting trade and having goods on board which have not paid duties is not within the purview of this section as to landing foreign goods without a permit.—Jackson v. United States (4 Mason, 186; 13 Fed. Cas., 254).

(j) Discharge of goods into lighters is not an unlading under the statute. After such discharge by general order consignee should be allowed to make a post entry of goods not on the manifest.—United States v. The Express, Same v. Two Hundred and Forty Bundles of Cigars (21 Law Rep., 41; 25 Fed. Cas., 1035).

(k) Where, in an action against a vessel for an attempt to smuggle foreign goods liable to customs duties, there is an irreconcilable conflict between the evidence given, and the case made out by the Government witnesses shows: First, concealment on the part of the captain and mate that the suspected vessel had come in through the pass where, on an island in the pass, the smuggled goods were found, instead of coming in by the main channel; second, prevarications and misrepresentations excusing the fact that she had no boarding officer aboard; third, absence of the yawl and all of the crew on the night of the seizure of the goods, together with finding on the yawl mud and grass similar to that where the goods were found; fourth, a spliced oar, produced in court, and found at the place of the goods, which a witness identifies as the same that he saw the day previous on board and belonging to the vessel's yawl; fifth, finding on board the vessel after seizure goods of the same brand in small quantity in the possession of the captain, with other circumstances, are sufficient to warrant the district court in rendering a judgment of condemnation, and such judgment will be affirmed.—Unlted States v. The Henrietta Esch (12 Fed. Rep., 483).

(a) The Government assumes no obligation toward shipowners to prevent fraudulent discharges of cargo, and the liability of the vessel is the same whether the officers of the customs do or do not prevent such discharges.—The John Griffin (4 Ben., 19; 11 Int. Rev. Rec., 63; 13 Fed. Cas., 680).

(b) A vessel arriving from a foreign port is forfeited by landing goods in any port of the United States, after her arriving in her port of destination, without a permit from the collector.—The John C. Brooks (3 Ware, 273; 13 Fed. Cas., 663).

(c) If opium was shipped from San Francisco via the foreign port of Victoria to Portland, and while the ship was lying at Victoria the shipper of the opium should cause it to be taken ashore and placed in a house in Victoria for even a few hours, or less time, and then cause it to be reladen upon the ship and brought thence to Portland, such opium would be brought from a foreign port and liable to become forfeited without a permit.—Ten Cases of Opium (Deady, 62; 23 Fed. Cas., 840).

(d) A landing in the port of exportation before the ship has broken ground was within the act of 1799, section 82 (R. S. 3049).—Two Thousand Tin Cans (7 Ben., 34; 24 Fed. Cas., 454).

(e) The forfeiture attached, although the bond for exportation had not been given, nor the debenture issued.—Id.

(f) Evidence that the claimant caused the goods to be relanded simply to correct a mistake which had arisen among merchants, whereby he had been led to enter for export a different quality of goods from that intended to be exported, affords no defense.—Id.

(g) An intent to defraud the Government is not required for a forfeiture of goods relanded contrary to section 82, act of 1709 (R. S. 3049).—Id.

(h) In an action against the master for unlading goods without a permit, the master's want of knowledge or of participation in the unlawful acts is no defense.—United States v. Curtis (16 Fed. Rep., 184).

(i) The design of R. S. 2873, like section 50, act of 1790, is to secure vigilance on the part of the masters or the persons having charge of the vessel in preventing illicit traffic, which by virtue of their command they are presumed to be able to prevent.—Id.

(j) The carrying of salt by a fishing vessel to the Bay of Chaleur and bringing the same to the port of departure, and there landing the same, is not bringing the same from any foreign port or place in violation of section 50, act of 1799, even though the vessel touched at a foreign port near the Bay of Chaleur for wood and water.—The E. K. Dresser (2 Hask., 349; 8 Fed. Cas., 398).

(k) Where a person had in store and sold cigars which he seemed to admit were known to him to have been smuggled, it is competent for the jury, unless he offers rebutting evidence, to infer from such admissions both that they had been landed without license from the collector, and that he knew it, and was keeping or storing them with such knowledge. This constitutes one offense under the act of 1799, though it is another but distinct offense to land merchandise without license, or to assist in doing it.—Walsh v. United States (3 Woodb. & M., 341; 29 Fed. Cas., 107).

(l) The remedy for the penalty incurred may be information or debt.—Id.

(a) Goods on board a ship whch had been entered for exportation under the act of 1799, but for which no bond had been given under section 81 and no debenture issued, were put on board a lighter alongside the ship. They were seized as forfeited under section 82, act of 1799 (now R. S. 3049), as having been relanded. A verdict in favor of the Government having been directed, in a suit brought to enforce the forfeiture the claimant made a motion for a new trial. Held, that the discharge of the goods into the lighter amounted to a landing of them within the meaning of section 82 (R. S. 3049).—Two Thousand Tin Cans (7 Ben., 34; 24 Fed Cas., 454).

LIMITATIONS, STATUTES OF.

(b) After suit brought, the time fixed by the statute of limitations for an action to be brought in expired, and certain amendments were made in the writ after the time fixed by the statute. Held, that this did not bar the right of action by the plaintiffs where no new cause of action was introduced by amendments.—McGlinchy v. United States (4 Cliff., 312; 16 Fed. Cas., 118).

(c) Duties paid in 1843 and 1844. From the passage of the act of March 3, 1839, to the act of February 26, 1845, the collector could not be sued. The importer brought suit February 13, 1850, to recover duties alleged to have been illegally exacted. Held, that the statute of limitations did not run during the time no right of action existed against the collector, but that it ran from February 26, 1845.—Richardson v. Curtis (3 Blatchf., 385; 20 Fed. Cas., 707).

(d) Suit to recover duties commenced in 1860 on which judgment was rendered September 30, 1862, on an adjustment had at the custom-house on September 25. In January, 1863, the plaintiff discovered error in the adjustment, and afterwards many more, when, in April, 1863, he commenced a second suit when he should have moved to open the judgment. On adverse determination of the second suit he moved to set aside the judgment and reopen the case. Motion granted.—Crookes v. Maxwell (6 Blatchf., 468; 10 Int. Rev. Rec., 50; 6 Fed. Cas., 868).

(e) Suit against the collector at New York to recover duties. Between the time the cause of action accrued and the date of bringing the suit the collector was absent from New York for several periods, amounting to more than twelve months. Held, that the twelve months is to be added to the six years' limitation prescribed by the New York Code of Civil Procedure, sections 91 and 100.—Hennequin v. Barney (24 Fed. Rep., 580).

(f) Importations were made by A and others whereon they paid, under protest, certain duties unlawfully exacted by the collector. The collector, when sued for the excess of duties, pleaded the statute of limitations; whereupon A filed his bill, setting forth that his attorney was informed by an officer of the custom-house that by the rules and practice of the Treasury Department the presentation of A's claim to the Auditor or refund clerk would prevent the statute from running, and that the statute, if the claims were so presented, could not and would not be interposed as a defense in case suits were brought to recover said excess; that the collector, though he disclaimed any control in the matter, declared his confidence in the knowledge and experience of the officer who made such statement, and expressed his opinion as concurring therein; that A did present his claim to the Auditor or refund clerk, as suggested; and that, relying upon the prior action of the Secretary in recognizing claims of like nature, and upon said statements and opinion of the officer of the custom-house, and the concurrence of the collector therein, he and others had refrained from suing until the bar of the statute had attached. He therefore prayed that the collector be enjoined from pleading it in any of the actions at law for such excess. Held, that the matters alleged are not sufficient to estop the collector from pleading the statute.—Andreae v. Redfield (98 U. S., 225).

(a) The limitation laws of the State in which a suit is brought against a collector do not furnish the rule for determining whether the action is begun in time.—Arnson v. Murphy (109 U. S., 238).

(b) A suit against a collector is practically a suit against the United States; and as the Government is not bound by an estoppel, the fact that the collector did not notify the importer of an adverse decision by the Secretary does not prevent the collector from setting up as a defense that the suit was not brought within ninety days from the decision of the Secretary. 45 Fed. Rep., 778, affirmed.—The John Shillito Co. v. McClung (C. C. A.), (51 Fed. Rep., 868).

(c) Action to recover duties alleged to have been illegally exacted. The question was whether the suit commenced in the Superior Court of the City of New York was begun in time. The decision of the Secretary was made May 28, 1872, and the ninety days expired on August 26. Summons dated August 21 and effort made to serve it without the intervention of the sheriff, but failing in this, the summons was on August 26 delivered to the sheriff of the county in which the sheriff resided and served on August 27. When a suit is brought in a State court the laws of that State will control in the interpretation of the provisions of a Federal statute of limitations as to what is the commencement of a suit. Under the New York Code of Civil Procedure, section 99, the suit was commenced when the summons was delivered to the sheriff with the intent that it be served.—Goldenberg v. Murphy, 108 U. S., 162).

(d) The time fixed by the statute for commencing an action against a collector to recover excess of duties illegally exacted is within ninety days after the adverse decision of the Secretary on appeal; but if the Secretary fail to render a decision within ninety days the importer has an option either to begin suit, treating the delay as a denial, or to await the decision and sue within ninety days thereafter.—Arnson v. Murphy (109 U. S., 238).

(e) It is not the duty of the collector to inform the importer of the disposition of the appeal by the Secretary, and the fact that the collector by his silence, leads the importer to suppose that the appeal has not been acted on, when in fact it has been decided, does not estop the collector from setting up the ninety-day limitation to a suit to recover the excess duties.—John Shillito Co. v. McClung (C. C.), (45 Fed. Rep., 778).

(f) Where the answer alleges that the appeal was decided more than ninety days before suit, a reply setting up that the collector is estopped from setting up the limitation because of his silence and failure to inform plaintiff that the appeal had been decided is not a departure from the petition, which alleged that the appeal had not been decided before the suit was brought.—Id.

(g) The lapse of six years after importation held to bar an action for the forfeiture of a horse said to have been smuggled, the horse having been for five years in the possession of an innocent owner, owner and horse not having been without the jurisdiction of the United States during that period.—United States v. One Dark Bay Horse (130 Fed. Rep., 240; T. D. 25275).

(h) A period of less than five years will not bar a prosecution for effecting an entry of goods at the custom-house by a fraudulent entry of them and a false classification as to their quality and value.—United States v. Hirsch (100 U. S., 33).

(i) Conspiracy to defraud the United States of the duties on certain imported goods is not a "crime arising under the revenue laws," and the persons charged therewith can not be prosecuted therefor unless they be indicted within three years next after the alleged committing thereof.—Id.

(a) A State statute of limitations can not have the effect to bar a right of action on the part of the United States secured to it by an act of Congress.—McGlinchy v. United States (4 Cliff., 312; 16 Fed. Cas., 118).

(b) The two years' limitation in the act of April 30, 1790, section 32 (1 Stat., 119), is repealed by implication by the act of February 28, 1839, section 4 (5 Stat., 332), which extends the time to five years.—Stimpson v. Pond (2 Curt., 502; 23 Fed. Cas., 101).

(c) Section 21, act of June 22, 1874, contains no limitation upon the time when a suit may be brought by the United States to recover duties on a reliquidation of an entry.—United States v. Comarota (2 Fed. Rep., 145).

(d) This section (21) does not prescribe any limitation of time within which the collector may make his original liquidation of the entry. It affects only reliquidations.—Doble v. United States (119 Fed. Rep., 152).

(e) "Time of entry," as used in section 21, act of June 21, 1874, means the time when the document called the "entry" is presented to the collector, rather than the time when the transaction or process of entering the goods is completed by the liquidation and payment of duties, and the pendency of a protest affecting a portion of the merchandise does not give the collector a right to reliquidate the entry as to merchandise not covered by the protest after the expiration of a year from said "time of entry," in the absence of fraud.—Cassel v. United States (146 Fed. Rep., 146; T. D. 27116), reversing T. D. 26147, G. A. 5962).

(f) The year within which the collector can reliquidate the duty runs from the time of the presentation to the collector of the entry by the importer, and not from the time of the first liquidation of the duty.—United States v. Frazer (10 Ben., 347; 25 Fed. Cas., 1207).

(g) After the collector has liquidated the duty, and the duty has been paid and the goods delivered to the importer, no part of the same nor any samples being retained by the collector, he has no power to make a reliquidation upon a subsequent report of an appraiser who never saw the goods.—Id.

(h) This section was designed to apply to past liquidations; and a reliquidation, in the absence of fraud, can not be made more than one year after settlement according to a prior liquidation.—United States v. Campbell (10 Fed. Rep., 816).

(i) The payment in this case having been made before the act of June 22, 1874, the one year commenced to run from the time the act took effect.—Id.

(j) The entry alluded to in this section is the original entry provided for, regulated, and defined by sections 2785 to 2790, inclusive.—United States v. Seidenberg (17 Fed. Rep., 227).

(k) This section is in the nature of a statute of limitations as respects the right of the Government to reliquidate duties, and limits that right, if the duties have been paid, to one year after entry, in the absence of fraud or protest, and any such reliquidation after that period is void; but if such reliquidation was lawfully made within a year the statute is not a limitation upon a suit to collect the duties accordingly, and such suit may be brought at any time afterwards.—United States v. Leng (18 Fed. Rep., 15).

(l) There is no limit of time within which collectors may reliquidate an entry, except those prescribed by section 21 of this act, which has been held to be in the nature of a statute of limitations. Section 21, among other limitations, authorizes a reliquidation to be made more than one year after the entry of the merchandise, provided such merchandise has not been delivered to the owner, importer, agent, or consignee, but is still constructively in the possession of the Government. The purpose of this section would seem to be (other conditions being complied with) to permit all errors and mistakes lawfully capable of correction by the collector to be corrected by reliquidation so long as the merchandise under consideration remains in possession of the Government.—T. D. 27887, G. A. 6536.

LIQUIDATION AND RELIQUIDATION.

(a) C & Company imported on two occasions a quantity of olive oil, which they entered as "olive oil, not salad," and on which they paid the estimated duty of 25 cents a gallon, under section 5, act of July 14, 1862, and received the goods. Subsequeutly the appraisers returned the oil as being "olive oil, salad," and the collector then liquidated the duty at $1 a gallon, under section 11 of the act of June 30, 1864. On one of the importations the importers protested against the rate of $1 a gallon, and appealed to the Secretary, who approved the decision of the collector. The United States brought suit against the importer to recover the difference between the estimated and the liquidated duties. On the trial evidence was received under objections to show that the oil was "olive oil, not salad," and the jury found that it was such. The defendants then moved for judgment on this verdict. Held, that under section 14, act of 1864, the decision of the collector is final as to the amount of duty to be paid in all cases except where there is an appeal to the Secretary and suit brought to recover the duty as provided in said section 14.—United States v. Cousinery (7 Ben., 251; 19 Int. Rev. Rec., 125; 25 Fed. Cas., 677).

(b) The words "decision of the collector," mean the ascertainment and liquidation of the duties in the usual manner by the proper officers.—Id.

(c) The evidence to show the character of the article as not justifying the collector's decision was wrongly received, and the defendants were not entitled to judgment upon the verdict.—Id.

(d) When merchandise is entered in bond the collector may liquidate the entry and ascertain the duties at any time he sees fit; and he is not required to delay his action until the importer withdraws his goods.—T. D. 22805, G. A. 4865.

(e) The collector is the special statutory officer for the liquidation of duties in the first instance, and the Secretary's jurisdiction of any particular liquidation is appellate only.—United States v. Leng (18 Fed. Rep., 15).

(f) The hearing and decision of appeals by the Secretary is a quasi judicial proceeding before a special statutory tribunal, and their effect is to be determined by the rules ordinarily applicable to such tribunals.—Id.

(g) The appraisement and liquidation of duties by the appraiser and the collector are binding and conclusive in all collateral proceedings, and in the absence of any reliquidation and reappraisement can not be disregarded or reviewed, except in the modes provided by R. S. 2929, 2930, and 2931. A suit in the District Court is not one of those modes. Held, accordingly, on demurrer, that after payment of the duties as liquidated a suit for duties alleged to be due in excess of the liquidation, on account of an alleged untrue discount, fraudulently procured to be allowed in the appraisement of value, could not be sustained.—United States v. McDowell (21 Fed. Rep., 563).

(h) The above rule frequently applied in this court against importers, must be equally applied to suits brought by the United States.—Id.

(a) Iron ore was imported in 1881, a certain sum being then paid as duties after the appraiser had raised the valuation. In 1890 the collector decided that an additional amount was due, and an action was brought to recover the same. The importers claimed that their original payment was a liquidation and that the action was barred in one year thereafter. Held, that the liquidation was not complete until the collector had acted in the matter, and that there was no provision requiring him to liquidate within any particular time or to give notice to the importer thereof.—United States v. De Rivera (C. C.), (73 Fed. Rep., 679).

(b) The ascertainment and liquidation of duties under R. S. 2931 is the decision of the collector as to what duties shall be, made after measurement, weighing, or gauging of the merchandise, its inspection and appraisal, the determination of its dutiable value, and the taking of such other steps as the law may call for; and so far from this being required to be delayed until the importer chooses to withdraw his goods for consumption, it may take place at any time after the original entry of the merchandise, and should follow in the regular course of business as soon after the entry as is convenient, just as in the case of merchandise entered for immediate consumption.—Merritt v. Cameron (137 U. S., 542).

(c) The omission of the collector to stamp the date of a liquidation on an invoice does not imply that there was no liquidation, but merely leaves in doubt the date.—T. D. 13208, G. A. 1629.

(d) Merchandise entered October 11, appraised October 13, advanced in value and liquidated same day and importer notified. On October 15 additional duty paid and protest filed. Held, that the action of the collector was irregular, the invoice having been liquidated before notice to the importer (art. 462), and he should be notified that he still has the right to demand a reappraisement.—T. D. 10475, G. A. 125.

(e) So-called liquidations of entries made under the instructions of the Secretary (T. D. 17978), dated April 5, 1897, were designed to be mere provisional or tentative liquidations, and do not constitute such final liquidations as are made subjects of protest and of decision by the Board of Appraisers.—T. D. 18634, G. A. 4032.

(f) The merchandise consisting of lemons having gone into consumption, the decision of the collector as to the capacity of the boxes is conclusive.—T. D. 11044, G. A. 487.

(g) R. S. 2931 makes the decision of the collector respecting "the rate and amount of duties" final and conclusive unless the owner shall, within ten days after the ascertainment and liquidation, appeal therefrom to the Secretary.—United States v. Sowers (36 Leg. Int., 488; 14 Phila., 525; 25 Int. Rev. Rec., 405; 27 Fed. Cas., 1276).

(h) The entire question of rate and amount and as to whether it was legally assessed and found, must be submitted to and passed upon by the Secretary in the first instance.—Id.

(i) This appeal can not be neglected and the courts applied to for relief, and in its absence the decision of the collector is final.—Id.

(j) The collector is the special statutory officer for the liquidation of duties in the first instance, and the Secretary's jurisdiction of any particular liquidation is appellate only.—United States v. Leng (18 Fed. Rep., 15).

(k) The hearing and decision of appeals by the Secretary is a quasi judicial proceeding before a special statutory officer or tribunal, and their effect is to be determined by the rules ordinarily applicable to such tribunals.—Id.

(a) Construing together R. S. 2931 and 3011, the decision of the Secretary, on an appeal from a collector, as to the rate and amount of duties is not final and conclusive, except in a case where, after protest and appeal, a payment of duties is made in order to obtain possession of the goods and then a suit is not brought to recover the duties within the time and under the limitations prescribed by R. S. 2831.—United States v. Schlesinger (120 U. S., 109).

(b) Where, in January, February, and April, 1880, three entries on importations were made and the estimated duties paid at the time of entry, but the duties were liquidated at a larger sum, which on appeal to the Secretary was set aside and the importer's classification sustained and the duties paid accordingly; and afterwards the Secretary gave a contrary order to the collector, who again, in April, 1881, reliquidated the duties according to his first liquidation, and the Government thereupon sued for the excess, held, that the payment of the duties on the first two entries had become a binding settlement by the lapse of a year before the last liquidation under section 21, act of June 22, 1874, but not as to the third entry; held, also, as respects the third entry, that the decision on appeal in favor of the importer, under R. S. 2931, was binding and conclusive upon the Government, and that the subsequent order of the Secretary and the last liquidation are invalid and void.—United States v. Leng (18 Fed. Rep., 15).

(c) The fact that duties paid under protest have been refunded upon a reclassification will not prevent the Government from recovering under a second reliquidation, whereby the original duties were restored, if the suit is brought within one year from the entry of the goods.—United States v. Fox (D. C.), (53 Fed. Rep., 531).

(d) When duties paid under protest are refunded according to a second classification, the office of the protest is then fulfilled, and it can not thereafter operate to extend the period within which the Government may make a third reliquidation of the duties.—Id.

(e) This section does not give rise to a presumption that the collector made a liquidation within one year after entry, nor require a liquidation to be made within one year, but only prevents a reliquidation after a year has elapsed from the entry.—Gandolfi v. United States (C. C. A.), (74 Fed. Rep., 549).

(f) One entry was made of fruit imported in a vessel, which fruit belonged to several owners and was embraced in several invoices. The duties were estimated at $4,648 and deposited and the goods delivered. Afterwards a damage allowance for loss by decay on the voyage was applied for. The report showed that the damage sustained by various lots of fruit was more than 25 per cent of the quantities of such lots, but the damage on all the fruit imported by the vessel was less than 25 per cent. The collector, by allowing the damage on the lots which were damaged more than 25 per cent, liquidated the duties at $270.40 less than the amount deposited, and refunded the $270.40. Afterwards the collector reliquidated the duties at $4,648, refusing to allow any damage because it did not exceed 25 per cent of all the fruit covered by the entry. Suit brought for $270.40. Verdict in the District Court for the defendants. On writ of error held, that under R. S. 2931, the first liquidation was not conclusive as to the United States; the United States are entitled to recover according to the last liquidation; the defendants could not be allowed to give evidence to show that the decision of the collector in the last liquidation was erroneous.—United States v. Phelps (17 Blatchf., 312; 27 Fed. Cas., 521).

(g) Tobacco imported October 8, 1877, warehoused, weighed, and bond given. Withdrawals made in October, November, December, 1877, January, February, March, June, and July, 1878, and duties paid according to weight.

On October 20, 1877, tobacco imported, warehoused, weighed, and bond given. Withdrawals on this entry from October, 1877, to December, 1878, and duties paid according to weight. Tobacco imported October 29, 1877, entered, weighed, and bond given. Withdrawals from October, 1877, to July, 1878, and duties paid according to weight. On May 4, 1878, certain inspectors, the collector, and weighers, reweighed 19 bales of the tobacco remaining in the warehouse and found an increase in the weight. Subsequently the tobacco all withdrawn and the duties paid according to the first weight. The collector made no demand for the additional duties until a reliquidation was ordered by the Secretary, January 9, 1879. Suit brought April 12, 1879. Held, that the reweighing made by the collector and the regular weighers, but of which no notice or order was given and no record made, was not a reliquidation of duties. (See art. 361.)—United States v. Seidenberg (17 Fed. Rep., 227).

(a) The general rule that upon the reexamination and reliquidation of duties the packages of goods must themselves be present, does not apply in the case of lenses for optical instruments, when there is no question as to their value, and it appears that a single specimen is a perfect representation of the whole importation.—United States v. Fox (D. C.), (53 Fed. Rep., 531).

(b). A reliquidation of duties pursuant to a decision of the Board of General Appraisers does not extend the time for taking an appeal from the liquidation nor give a new right of appeal.—Stern v. United States (C. C.), (77 Fed. Rep., 607).

(c) Certain goods were imported in 1893, and the duties were liquidated and paid. One case of the goods went to a bonded warehouse and was withdrawn for consumption under the act of 1894, and the duties on that case were reassessed at a reduced rate under the act of 1894. The duties on the whole invoice were then added anew, without other changes, and the entry was stamped as reliquidated at that date. Held, that this action was not subject to protest as a new assessment and reliquidation.—Jacot v. United States (C. C.), (84 Fed. Rep., 159).

(d) Section 1 of the act of March 3, 1875, does not authorize a reliquidation against an importer in the absence of any pending protest and appeal, except for errors arising solely on matters of fact, and not for an erroneous construction of the tariff law or classification of goods.—United States v. Leng (18 Fed. Rep., 15).

(e) Leaf tobacco imported July 21, 1890, invoice liquidated on September 19, 1890, and final withdrawal on original liquidation January 28, 1891. On January 28 the appraiser changed his advisory classification, but the change was not discovered until April 30, 1892, when the collector reliquidated the entry. The delay in reliquidation having been caused by protests as to the weight, the collector held that the entry was kept open. Held, that the reliquidation was not authorized.—T. D. 13550, G. A. 1822.

(f) Merchandise was delivered to an importer after he had paid the duties on its first liquidation. Within a year after the entry the local appraiser made a reappraisal and a second report, from which the importer appealed within such year. The Board of Reappraisement sat after the year, the importer was present, the merchandise was not reappraised because it could not be found, and it was not examined and the fees of the merchant appraiser were not paid by the importer. The second report of the local appraiser increased the value of the goods from the invoice values, disallowed a discount which appeared on the invoice, and changed the rate of duty on some of the merchandise. The collector, after the expiration of the year, made a new liquidation by disallowing the discount and changing the rate of duty, as suggested by the local appraiser. Held, that under section 21, act of 1874, the first liquidation was final and conclusive against the United States, as it did not appear that the second liquidation was based on any increase in the value of the merchandise, or that the disallowance of the discount and the change in the rate of duty depended on such increase, or were involved in any proper action of the local appraiser in appraising the merchandise, or were matters which could not have been finally acted upon by the collector at any time within a year from the entry as well as any other time, and without any reference to any increase in the appraised value of the goods.—Beard v. Porter (124 U. S., 437).

(a) The "protest" referred to in this section is a protest against the prior "settlement of duties," which the section proposes to declare to be final after the expiration of the year.—Beard v. Porter (124 U. S., 437, 442).

(b) The collector may reliquidate within one year. The provision that the decision of the collector shall be final and conclusive does not apply to the Government.—T. D. 12655, G. A. 1304.

(c) Section 21, act of June 22, 1874, applies only to cases where the merchandise has been delivered to the importer. If it remains in the custody of the collector the statute does not apply. Goods on which the duties remain unpaid, stored in United States bonded warehouses, are in the possession of the United States.—T. D. 14689, G. A. 2411.

(d) Grain bags admitted free under paragraph 493, act of 1890, on entries liquidated on September 14, 1892, and January 11, 1893. Under instructions from the Secretary the entries were reliquidated in October, 1894, and duty assessed under paragraph 365 at 2 cents a pound. It was shown that the bags were entered at Boston before the vessel on which they were claimed to have been exported had cleared at Antwerp. Held, that the false statement that the bags were exported on a certain steamer constituted a fraud within the meaning of section 21, act of June 22, 1874, and that the reliquidation after one year was authorized.—T. D. 16338, G. A. 3167.

(e) Except where reliquidation is made to comply with a change of tariff rates, occurring while part of the goods are in warehouse, or after a decision by the Board of General Appraisers, a reliquidation of an entry by which the rate and amount of duties on the whole or a part of the merchandise is made to vary from the original liquidation, such reliquidation is the decision of the collector as to the rate and amount of duties imposed upon all the merchandise embraced in the entry.—T. D. 17436, G. A. 3610.

(f) Reliquidation after one year on account of alleged fraud set aside and declared void.—T. D. 17967, G. A. 3842.

(g) Section 21, act of June 22, 1874, does not authorize the collector to make a reliquidation by raising the value of goods which have been finally ascertained by lawful appraisement.—T. D. 18617, G. A. 4015.

(h) Goods entered September 29, 1874. Liquidated and duties paid October 28, 1874. Goods warehoused, and on January 5, 1875, withdrawal entry made. Goods delivered and duties paid February 9, 1875. The question as to whether the goods were in bonded warehouse on February 8, 1875, within the meaning of the act of that date can not be raised on a suit by the United States to recover the increased duties on a reliquidation made on April 27, 1875, because the collector may reliquidate the entry after the duties have been paid on the original liquidation and the goods delivered to the importer.—United States v. Comarota (2 Fed. Rep., 145).

(a) In a suit brought by the United States against an importer who, on entering the goods, paid the estimated duties and to whom the goods were delivered, and on a reliquidation of the entry further duties were assessed, and who duly protested and appealed to the Secretary, by whom the action of the collector was sustained, the decision of the collector is not final.—United States v. Schlesinger (120 U. S., 109).

(b) The defendant may show that the duties were illegally assessed.—Id.

(c) When a change in the rate of duties occurs while goods are in bond, the law requires the collector of his own motion to reliquidate the entries on the basis of the new rates. He may do this at or before the time of the withdrawal of the goods from bond.—T. D. 22805, G. A. 4865.

(d) So long as goods are in the custody of the officers of the Government their importation is not deemed complete and they are subject to any duties which Congress may impose.—Id.

REGULATIONS.

(e) Regulations prescribed by the President and by the heads of Departments under authority granted by Congress may be regulations prescribed by law, so as lawfully to support acts done under them and in accordance with them, and may thus have in a proper sense the force of law; but it does not follow that a thing required by them is a thing so required by law as to make the neglect to do the thing a criminal offense in a citizen where a statute does not distinctly make the neglect in question a criminal offense.—United States v. Eaton (144 U. S., 677).

(f) There are undoubtedly many statutory regulations intended for the guidance of officers in the conduct of business devolved upon them which do not limit their power or render its exercise in disregard of the requisitions ineffectual. Such generally are regulations designed to secure order, system, and dispatch in proceedings, and by a disregard of which the rights of parties interested can not be injuriously affected. Provisions of this character are not usually regarded as mandatory unless accompanied by negative words importing that the acts required shall not be done in any other manner or time than that designated; but when the requisitions required are intended for the protection of the citizen and to prevent a sacrifice of his property, and by a disregard of which his rights might be and generally would be injuriously affected, they are not directory, but mandatory. They must be followed or the acts done will be invalid. The power of the officer in all such cases is limited by the manner and conditions prescribed for its exercise.—French v. Edwards (13 Wallace, 506, 511).

(g) The President speaks and acts through the heads of Departments in relation to the subjects which appertain to their respective duties.—Wilcox v. Jackson (13 Pet., 498, 513).

(h) The law imposes a duty of 15 per cent on casks of sirup of sugar cane. The collector, under instructions from the Secretary, required the importer to give a bond for the above or, should it be required, for a duty of 3 cents a pound. Held, that the instructions of the Secretary not in accordance with law do not justify the illegal acts of the collector.—Tracy & Belestier v. Swartwout (10 Pet., 80).

(i) When the Secretary instructed the collector to classify jute rejections as jute butts under the similitude clause of 2499, R. S., after jute butts had ceased to be dutiable and could no longer be a standard of comparison under that clause, and the collector delivered the jute rejections free of duty, and the Secretary having subsequently discovered his error instructed the collector to collect $15 per ton on jute rejections as similar to manufactured jute, it was held that the Secretary had the right to change his first erroneous ruling.—United States v. Cobb (11 Fed. Rep., 76).

(a) A regulation affects a class of officers; an instruction is a direction to govern the conduct of the particular officer to whom it is addressed.—Landrum v. United States (16 C. Cls. R., 74, 86).

(b) Where there has been long acquiescence in a Department regulation and by it rights of parties for many years have been determined and adjudged, it is not to be disregarded without the most cogent and pursuasive reasons.—Robertson v. Downing (127 U. S., 607, 613).

SAMPLES.

(c) A sample is a specimen of an article intended to sell the goods it represents. A blotting pad not a specimen for the purpose of selling similar pads, but containing an advertisement of an ink, is not free as a sample.—T. D. 10461, G. A. 111.

(d) Samples having an invoice value are not free.—T. D. 10886, G. A. 381; T. D. 12562, G. A. 1246; T. D. 12626, G. A. 1275; T. D. 13677, G. A. 1915; T. D. 16426, G. A. 3215.

(e) Shade cards held not free as samples having no commercial value.—T. D. 16426, G. A. 3215.

(f) Appraising officers are justified in returning samples as having no commercial value; but where the appraiser fixes a value, protest can not be entertained, the remedy being an appeal for reappraisement.—T. D. 12645, G. A. 1294; T. D. 13677, G. A. 1915.

(g) Sample books made of stiff paper covers, arnamented and lettered, containing blank paper leaves upon which embroidery patterns are fastened, were properly assessed upon the appraised value. The importer should have expressed his dissatisfaction with the appraised value by an appeal for reappraisement.—T. D. 13330, G. A. 1710.

(h) Hemstitched linen handkerchiefs sewed in paper covers, each cover containing from half a dozen to a dozen handkerchiefs, intended as samples, are not free.—T. D. 13445, G. A. 1782.

(i) Wool imported in 1893 and placed in bonded warehouse. Samples delivered to importer prior to August 28, 1894. Wool withdrawn after August 28, 1894, and the wool liquidated free of duty under the act of 1894. The samples were assessed for duty under the act of 1890, but claimed to be entitled to free entry. Held dutiable.—T. D. 16476, G. A. 3229.

(j) Samples having a foreign market value and appraised at such value are not free merely as samples.—Id.

(k) Samples are dutiable when invoiced, or appraised, or reappraised at a valuation.—T. D. 21327, G. A. 4467.

(l) Whenever imported goods of any description not expressly exempt by law are given a value in the invoice or entry, duty must be assessed upon such value even though the appraiser returns the articles as of no commercial value.—T. D. 23111, G. A. 4940.

SHORTAGE.

(a) Although included in the invoice, goods lost on the voyage are not subject to duty.—United States v. Nash (4 Cliff., 107; 27 Fed. Cas., 75).

(b) The inspector and weigher report 1 tierce of sugar missing, but no satisfactory proof was furnished under article 609, Regulations, 1884, as to short shipment or loss during voyage. Protest overruled.—T. D. 10779, G. A. 332.

(c) Shortage discovered and reported by the appraiser while the goods were in custody of the collector should be allowed as a short shipment. (Art. 609, Reg. 1884.)—T. D. 11576, G. A. 751.

(d) The invoice, entry, and manifest showed 250 bags of saltpeter, while the inspector and weigher reported 246 bags, but the importer did not attempt to prove, as required by Regulation 609, 1884, that the four bags short were not shipped. Protest against the assessment of duty against these four bags overruled.—T. D. 11858, G. A. 849.

(e) Where the goods were not opened in the presence of a customs officer and had left the custody of the collector before the discovery of the alleged shortage, no allowance can be made. (Art. 609, Reg. 1884.)—T. D. 12003, G. A. 916.

(f) On an application for an allowance for an alleged leakage of sassafras oil it was found (1) that no shortage was discovered or reported by the appraisers; (2) that no officer was present when the packages other than those sent to the public store were opened. Protest overruled.—T. D. 12459, G. A. 1197.

(g) Silk goods imported on September 23, 1890, were short and the importers claimed that the excess on the goods of the same kind imported October 1, 1890, should be offset against such shortage. Held, that the importers having failed to claim a shortage can not now legally offset this excess.—T. D. 13509, G. A. 1811.

(h) The merchandise was invoiced as five cases containing 112 cloaks. It arrived at New York and was transported to Savannah, when on opening the cases it was found that there was a shortage of 16 cloaks. Under article 906, Regulations, 1892, an allowance must be made.—T. D. 14758, G. A. 2480.

(i) Wine invoiced as 10 cases and vessel's bill of lading called for same quantity, but only 4 cases were actually received or delivered. In the absence of evidence required by article 922 of the Regulations, designed to show that the missing articles were never laden on the vessel or were lost or destroyed during the voyage, or, in other words, that they never were in fact imported, the protest against assessing duty on the 10 cases is overruled.—T. D. 15578, G. A. 2838.

(j) Where merchandise has its value totally destroyed, allowance may be made as a shortage, not as damage.—T. D. 16114, G. A. 3078.

(k) Cocoanuts, dutiable under paragraph 224, act of 1894, imported in the shell. The number was short, the shortage being accounted for by a mass of rotten and utterly worthless cocoanuts not countable. Held, that merchandise the value of which is totally destroyed, whether by fire, decay, or other causes, ceases to be damaged and may properly be treated as shortage.—T. D. 16114, G. A. 3078.

(l) Cocoanuts and pineapples imported in bulk, when certain specified portions, less than 10 per cent of the cargoes, were rotten and totally worthless. Section 23, act of June 10, 1890, contemplates a case where there remains something to be abandoned in the sense of being impaired in value, and is not applicable where there is no value attached to the items to be abandoned.—T. D. 17072, G. A. 3453.

(a) The invoice showed 212,200 cocoanuts. Protest claims that 11,000 cocoanuts were broken and rotten. These 11,000 were sold by the importer. No allowance for shortage will be made where damaged goods are sold.—T. D. 17630, G. A. 3678.

(b) A claim of deficiency or shortage must be established with reasonable certainty, not only in act, but as to the precise quantity.—T. D. 17844, G. A. 3778.

(c) The mere report of a discharging inspector of a shortage, not corroborated by the sworn statement of the importer denying that he received the alleged missing goods, or other satisfactory evidence, does not justify the reversal of the collector's decision refusing the allowance of the alleged shortage.—T. D. 18084, G. A. 3886.

(d) The vessel ran aground in Dutch Harbor, Alaska. The cargo was entered, a permit given to unlade, and the work of discharging begun, when it became necessary to immediately lighten the ship. Coal was thrown overboard, tally being kept by the inspector. Held, that no allowance can be made for coal jettisoned within the limits of the port of arrival.—T. D. 18630, G. A. 4028.

(e) The loss of fruit through decay in the course of transportation does not constitute a shortage for which an allowance can be made on the ground of nonimportation.—T. D. 22520, G. A. 4776.

(f) Allowance should be made for 13 bottles of whiskey lost on the voyage.—T. D. 14384, G. A. 2268.

(g) Two cargoes of cocoanuts were imported in bulk, invoiced at specified prices per thousand. The number of cocoanuts fell short of the number stated in the invoice, the missing quantity appearing to be contained in a mass of broken and rotten cocoanuts not countable. Held, that such shortage resulting from the entire destruction of specific items of the invoice was not a damage to the merchandise under section 23, act of June 10, 1890, for which no allowance could be made unless it amounted to 10 per cent of the total quantity of the invoice, but that duties could be exacted only on the number of cocoanuts actually received, excluding the worthless débris. T. D. 16114, G. A. 3078, affirmed.—Shaw v. Dix (72 Fed. Rep., 166); overruled by C. C. A. (101 Fed. Rep., 710).

(h) An importation in bulk of pineapples, subject to duty of 25 per cent ad valorem, included in a single invoice, must be considered as a whole, and the importer is entitled to no allowance for damage or deterioration and must pay on the entire invoice unless a portion amounting to 10 per cent is abandoned. Reversing T. D. 19774, G. A. 4222, and the Circuit Court.—Stone v. Lawtler (C. C. A.), (101 Fed. Rep., 710). See 187 U. S., 618.

(i) A report of an assistant appraiser that upon examination of certain merchandise he found a deficiency in the quantity called for by the invoice is proper and sufficient evidence upon which to base an allowance for such deficiency in estimating duties. (Art. 922, Reg. 1892).—United States v. Park (C. C.), (77 Fed. Rep., 608).

(j) The effect of the act of 1842, section 16, was, wherever an ad valorem duty was imposed, to charge it only upon the amount of merchandise actually imported.—Brune v. Marriott (Taney, 132; 4 Fed. Cas., 475).

(k) In the absence of any official appraisement of the amount and value of the deficiency, the only rule of abatement approximating to exact justice would seem to be to estimate the dutiable value of the articles (sugar and molasses) lost by leakage in the same manner and upon the same principles that the dutiable value of the amount mentioned in the invoice is ascertained and to reduce the assessment accordingly, the amount of the deficiency being ascertained from the returns of the weigher and gauger.—Id.

(a) A pro rata abatement is to be made also upon the amount of the incidental charges at the port of shipment, such as commissions, etc., and upon the value of the hogsheads in which the sugar and molasses are shipped (all of which enter into the amount upon which duties are to be assessed).—Id.

(b) The mere report of the discharging inspector is not enough to establish a shortage of imported merchandise, not corroborated by the oath of the importer denying that he received the alleged missing goods, or other satisfactory evidence. The burden of proof is on an importer to show that an alleged loss of goods occurred while in transit to the United States and before importation. Where the evidence fails to show this satisfactorily, relief from payment of duties can not be granted.—Ibid.

(c) Where eight packages out of an invoiced quantity of 350 were reported by the discharging inspector as not found, and the importers failed to file the affidavit required by article 1452, Customs Regulations of 1899, it was proper and lawful for the collector in assessing the specific duty to which the goods were liable to apply to the missing packages the average weight of those which were found, and thus to take duty on the entire invoice quantity.—T. D. 26647, G. A. 6128.

(d) Where the local appraiser reports to the collector that on the opening of a package of imported merchandise a deficiency of goods was found to exist, it is the duty of the collector to make due allowauce for such deficiency in the estimation of duties, and he can not require the importers to produce evidence, under article 1419 of the Treasury Regulations of 1899, that the shortage occurred before the arrival of the merchandise in this country.—United States v. Park (77 Fed. Rep., 608).

(e) A Treasury regulation is invalid which amounts to an amendment of an act of Congress.—Morrill v. Jones (106 U. S., 466) followed; Ibid.

(f) The operation of this section of the Revised Statutes in regard to making allowance for a deficiency of goods discovered on opening a package is not confined to goods lost in transitu before arrival at an American port, but embraces any loss after importation found by the appraisers on the opening of a package and certified to the collector on the invoice.—T. D. 24511, G. A. 5359.

(g) On an importation of hides contained in packages it was shown that 97 out of 175 were missing. Held, that duty could be collected only on the number actually imported, even though the local appraiser had failed to examine the bales and verify the shortage claimed by the importers. Section 2921 is not intended to provide an exclusive method of ascertaining and proving a shortage. The fact of the nonimportation of merchandise, whether by reason of not having been shipped from a foreign port or because of loss in transitu, may be established by satisfactory testimony under the ordinary rules of evidence.—T. D. 25965, G. A. 5891.

TARE AND DRAFT.

(h) Under section 58 of the act of 1799 both draft and tare are allowable on sugar imported in bags and subject to duty by weight.—Napier v. Barney (5 Blatchf., 191; 17 Fed. Cas., 1149).

(i) Draft and tare in a commercial sense and usage have a separate and distinct meaning and application. The former is an allowance to the merchant when the duty is ascertained by weight, as in the present instance, to insure good weight to him. Tare is allowed for the outside or covering of the article imported, whether it be a box, barrel, bag, bale, mat, etc.—Id.

(a) The words "draft" and "draught" (R. S. 2898) do not apply to or mean the impurities contained in an imported article, but mean the arbitrary allowance of certain deductions for loss of weight in handling, or shrinkage, or variation of scales or devices for weighing, and have no reference to such deductions as should be made to ascertain the exact amount of clean seed imported.—Wright & Lawther Lead Co. v. Seeberger (C. C.), (44 Fed. Rep., 258.)

(b) R. S. 2898, prohibiting the allowance of draught in assessing duties, does not forbid deductions for impurities, and a deduction should be made for dirt and similar impurities contained in linseed or flaxseed.—Id.

(c) Invoices of flaxseed showed the gross weight, and a tare of 5 pounds per bag, and a deduction of 4 per cent for impurities composed of clay, sand, and gravel. The collector deducted the tare, which was the weight of the bags, but refused to allow for impurities, assessing a duty of 20 cents per bushel of 50 pounds upon the gross weight less the tare. The case turned upon the meaning of the word "draught" in R. S. 2898, the Government claiming that it is a misspelling of the word "draft." The court sees no good reason for this view. The word refers to arbitrary deductions and not to impurities, and the importer is entitled to an allowance of percentage for impurities.—Seeberger v. Wright & Lawther Co. (157 U. S., 183).

(d) An allowance should be made on steel in bundles for iron ties or bands which are of no commercial value after being removed from the bundles.—T. D. 17559, G. A. 3650.

(e) The act of July 30, 1846, did not vary the law previously in force regulating the method of ascertaining the quantity of merchandise imported. Such quantity is still to be ascertained by the rules prescribed in sections 58 and 59, act of 1799. Accordingly, where soap in boxes was imported in 1850 the dutiable weight was the gross weight of the soap and boxes, deducting only 10 per cent as tare, as prescribed by section 58, act of 1799, and the importer was not entitled to an allowance of the actual weight of the boxes as tare.—Wilson v. Maxwell (2 Blatchf., 316; 30 Fed. Cas., 147).

(f) Under R. S. 2898 an allowance must be made, in estimating the duty on jute in bales, for the weight of jute tie ropes with which the bales are bound up, it appearing that between buyer and seller these ropes are regarded as tare and are never charged for, a deduction equal to their weight being made from full weight of the bale and only the net weight being billed.—Fachri v. Magone (C. C.), (53 Fed. Rep., 789).

(g) The invoice tare was allowed on certain Sumatra tobacco at the request of the importer, who afterwards claimed that allowance should be made of tare for outside bagging in addition to invoice tare. Protest overruled.—T. D. 13510, G. A. 1812.

(h) Empty flour bags made of jute, dutiable according to weight, were imported, tare being allowed on the bands binding them into bales. The importer claimed an allowance for the estimated weight adhering to the bags. Held, that it is impracticable to estimate the weight of the flour and that the refusal to make such allowance was correct.—T. D. 13553, G. A. 1825.

(i) Eight per cent of tare allowed on ochre dry in casks. The importers did not declare in writing on the entry their assent to the estimate of tare as set forth in the invoice (as required by article 1090, Regulations, 1892). Protest claiming invoice tare overruled.—T. D. 15074, G. A. 2627.

(a) Article 1090, Regulations, 1892, being in accord with both the letter and the spirit of the statute, has the force of law.—Id.

(b) Under section 2898, Revised Statutes, and articles 1657 and 1658 of the Treasury Regulations of 1899, where the original invoice is produced at the time of making entry and the tare is specified thereon, the collector may, if he sees fit, estimate the tare according to such invoice, but the importer is not bound to accept such estimate unless he has declared in writing on the entry his assent to the estimate of tare as set forth in the invoice. In the absence of such assent, if the importer is dissatisfied with the tare allowed by the collector, and serves notice of such fact on the collector, the actual tare, to be estimated by weighing, must be allowed. Under said regulations the consignee, owner, or agent is not bound to give notice in writing at the time of making entry of his desire to have the actual or the schedule tare allowed. The filing of a protest within the statutory time is sufficient notice to the collector of such desire.—T. D. 23919, G. A. 5190.

(c) The tare allowable for the weight of casks containing china clay weighing one-half ton, exported from Great Britain, held to be an average of 72 pounds per cask in the absence of evidence satisfactorily showing the actual tare of the particular importation.—T. D. 28349, G. A. 6650.

TREATY—EFFECT OF.

(d) The second article of the treaty with Portugal of August 26, 1840 (10 Stat., 560), did not restrict either party from laying discriminating duties on merchandise not the growth or production of the nation of the vessel carrying the same into the port of the other nation, and the provision in schedule 1 of the act of July 30, 1846 (9 Stat., 49), exempting tea and coffee from duty when imported direct from the place of their growth or production, in American vessels or in foreign vessels entitled by reciprocity treaties to be exempt from discriminating duties, tonnage, and other charges, does not apply to such articles when imported in Portuguese vessels.—Oldfield v. Marriott (10 How., 146).

(e) The reciprocity treaty between the United States and Great Britain and the act of August 5, 1854 (10 Stat., 587), did not operate to repeal the previous laws as it respects penalties and forfeitures that had already been incurred. Their effect was to suspend the previous statutes after a given time so far only as they affected certain enumerated articles and to admit them thereafter free of duty.—One Hundred and Thirty-Four Thousand Nine Hundred and One Feet of Pine Lumber (4 Blatchf., 182; 18 Fed. Cas., 707).

(f) It being provided by article 6 of the treaty with Russia of December 6-18, 1832 (8 Stat., 446), that no higher duties shall be imposed on the importation into the United States of any article the produce or manufacture of Russia than are or shall be payable on the like article being the produce or manufacture of any other foreign country, Congress by section 1, act of August 5, 1861 (12 Stat., 292), imposed a duty on unmanufactured Russian hemp of $40 per ton and on Manila and other hemps of India, of $25 per ton. This legislation is a declaration by Congress that such provision of the treaty shall no longer operate as the law of the land in respect to the duty on unmanufactured Russian hemp.—Ropes v. Clinch (8 Blatchf., 304; 13 Int. Rev. Rec., 124, it conflicts with an existing treaty.—Id.

(g) Congress may pass any law, otherwise constitutional, notwithstanding it conflicts with an existing treaty.—Id.

(a) If an act of Congress is plainly in such conflict, a court can not inquire whether in passing such act Congress had or had not an intention to pass a law inconsistent with the provisions of a treaty.—Id.

TREATY.

(b) Though a treaty is the law of the land under the Constitution of the United States, Congress may repeal it, so far as it is a municipal law, provided its subject-matter is within the legislative power of Congress.—Taylor v. Morton (2 Curt., 454; 23 Fed. Cas., 784).

(c) A promise in a treaty that the products of one country shall not be subject to a higher rate of duty than the like products imported into the United States from other countries addresses itself to the political and not to the judicial department of the Government, and the courts can not try the question whether it has been observed or not.—Id.

(d) Though the treaty with Russia of December 18, 1832 (8 Stat., 444), stipulated that no higher rate of duty should be imposed on goods imported from Russia than upon like articles imported from other places, this court can not try the question, whether a certain species of hemp, on which a duty of $25 per ton has been imposed, is "like" Russian hemp within the meaning of the treaty. This is a question for Congress, not for the courts.—Id.

(e) Section 11, act of March 3, 1883, was not intended to revive and set in motion the inert features of the Dominican treaty.—Kelly v. Hedden (31 Fed. Rep., 607).

(f) Sugar imported from the Dominican Republic in 1884. Duty imposed. The importer contended that sugar was free under the treaty of February 8, 1867 (15 Stat., 478), with the Dominican Republic and the treaty with Hawaii of 1875 (19 Stat., 625). Held, that section 11, act of 1883, was not intended to revive and set in motion the inert features of the Dominican treaty.—Netherclift v. Robertson (27 Fed. Rep., 737).

(g) The treaty of January 30, 1875 (19 Stat., 625), making molasses from Hawaii free, did not operate upon the previous treaty with the Dominican Republic, so as to establish a like exemption as to molasses imported from the latter country.—Kelly v. Hedden (31 Fed. Rep., 607).

(h) The provisions of the treaty with the King of Denmark, concluded April 26, 1826, and revived by the convention of April 11, 1857, do not by their own operation authorize the importation free of duty from Danish dominions of articles made duty free by the convention of January 30, 1875, with the King of the Hawaiian Islands, but otherwise subject to duty by a law of Congress, the King of Denmark not having allowed to the United States the compensation for the concession which was allowed by the King of the Hawaiian Islands.—Bartram v. Robertson (122 U. S., 116).

(i) The treaty of February 8, 1867, with the Dominican Republic (article 9) provides that "no higher or other duty shall be imposed upon the importations into the United States of any article the growth, produce, or manufacture of the Dominican Republic, or of her fisheries, than are or shall be payable on the like articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of any other foreign country or of its fisheries." The convention of January 30, 1875, with the King of the Hawaiian Islands provides for the importation into the United States, free of duty, of various articles, the produce and manufacture of those islands (among which were sugars), in consideration of certain concessions made by the King of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States. Held, that this provision in the treaty with the Dominican Republic did not authorize the admission into the United States, duty free, of similar sugars, the growth, produce, or manufacture of that republic, as a consequence of the agreement with the King of the Hawaiian Islands, and that there was no distinction in principle between this case and Bartram v. United States (122 U. S., 116).—Whitney v. Robertson (124 U. S., 190).

(a) A stipulation in a treaty with a foreign power that "no higher or other rate of duty shall be imposed on the importation into the United States of any article, the produce or manufacture of the treaty making power, * * * than are or shall be payable on the like articles, being the produce or manufacture of any other foreign country," does not prevent Congress from passing an act exempting from duty like products or manufactures imported from any particular foreign dominion it may see fit.—Whitney v. Robertson (21 Fed. Rep., 566).

(b) Where an act of Congress is in conflict with a prior treaty the act must control, since it is of equal force with the treaty and of later date.—North German Lloyd S. S. Co. v. Hedden (C. C.), (43 Fed. Rep., 17).

(c) The act of June 6, 1872, section 3 (17 Stat., 232), is not in conflict with the treaty with Persia (11 Stat., 709).—Powers v. Comly (101 U. S., 789).

(d) Dutiable goods can not lawfully be imported in the foreign mails under the International Postal Treaty of Berne of October 9, 1874 (19 Stat., 577).—Von Cotzhansen v. Nazro (107 U. S., 215).

WAREHOUSES—GENERALLY.

(e) Though the owner or importer of cigars from a foreign country may by his agent lawfully affix and cancel the internal-revenue stamps required by R. S. 3402, to be affixed and canceled while such cigars are in the custody of the proper customs officers, yet the collector may, in the exercise of a sound discretion, exclude such an agent from resorting to the public stores for that purpose; and in the absence of legislation, or regulation by the Department, no action accrues thereby to the agent thus excluded.—Slaight v. Hedden (C. C.), (39 Fed. Rep., 103).

(f) The importer is liable irrespective of the bond and as to him a reliquidation prior to the act of June 22, 1874, might have been made at any time afterwards.—United States v. Campbell (10 Fed. Rep., 816).

(g) Payment of duties on goods imported into the State of Florida in July, 1860, into the treasury of the State during the rebellion in no way affected the right of the United States to recover the amount of the duties by action on the warehouse bond.—United States v. Pensacola & G. R. R. Co. (11 Int. Rev. Rec., 78; 27 Fed. Cas., 494).

(h) The liquidation fixes, for the time being, the amount to which the goods are subject, under R. S. 2964, 2970. On a bond conditioned for the withdrawal of the goods within one year, "on payment of the duties and charges to which they may be subject by law at the time of such withdrawal," held that a payment within a year of the amount of duties as thus liquidated was a discharge of the bond, and that, upon a subsequent reliquidation at a higher rate, no recovery could be had against the surety, though the importer would be liable in a different action for the additional amount.—United States v. Georgi (D. C.), (44 Fed. Rep., 255).

(i) Statutes not designed to affect the rights and liabilities of third parties, but only to guide the officers of the Government in the performance of their duties, are to be construed as directory to them only and as not creating any obligation to sureties or forming any part of their contract.—United States v. De Visser (10 Fed. Rep., 642).

(a) Sureties in warehouse bonds have the same rights and liabilities as ordinary sureties except as modified by the special laws and regulations concerning the collection of duties. Warehouse bonds must be interpreted in reference to the statutes and authorized regulations in force belonging to the warehouse system, and in so far as by design or necessary effect they modify the ordinary rights of sureties they are controlling, and to this extent must be regarded as parts of the coutract of suretyship.—Id.

(b) The act of August 5, 1861, sec. 5 (12 Stat., 292), directing a sale of the goods after three years, and the regulations providing for quarterly sales and the sale of the abandoned goods at the next sale after three years, are all material parts of the contract of the surety, because they fix and determine the duration of his risk. Contracts of sureties are interpreted strictissimi juris as respects the subject-matter or duration of their risk, and any change in either, without the sureties' assent, operates as a discharge. Where, upon goods being advertised for sale upon a regular day, the Secretary, at the request of the purchaser of the goods in bond, iutervened by order and directed a postponement of the sale until further orders, without the consent of the surety, the latter was discharged. The importer being liable as principal, and not being in the situation of a surety having the right of indemnity against any other principal, is not discharged by the postponement of the sale. A surety's ordinary right to pay the debt and take possession of the goods at the end of three years is cut off by this act, and the right of the surety on a warehouse bond to pay the deficit and proceed for indemnity against his priucipal is also suspended until after the sale. The proceeding by abandonment and sale is a substitute for the ordinary remedy upon the bond after the lapse of three years. Immediate suit by the Government upon the bond before sale, would involve such inconsistencies that the common-law remedy must be deemed suspended by necessary implication until after the sale of the goods. Until after sale of the goods the surety in a warehouse bond has at no time any right of payment, of subrogation, or of suit for indemnity against his principal, and his risk continues necessarily until that time.—Id.

(c) The sureties risk does not exceed the three years named in it, or the additional period until sale of the goods not withdrawu. A reliquidation after the lapse of this period is not legal as against him.—United States v. Campbell (10 Fed. Rep., 816).

(d) The sureties' contract being only for the payment of duties upon withdrawal, semble, liquidation is a condition precedent to the payment and withdrawal, and, in the absence of fraud, reliquidation should not be enforced against the surety after a delivery and payment of the duties as once liquidated. It is the legal duty of the collector, not of the surety, to ascertain and liquidate the duties. Such liquidation is final and conclusive upon all persons interested, unless appealed from, and determines the amount of duties to which goods are then subject. Withdrawal and payment according to the liquidation existing at the time is a fulfillment of the terms of the bond for the time being, and the surety can not be held except upon the bond. Where the surety became bound for the withdrawal of goods within three years upon the payment of the duties "to which they shall then be subject," and the goods were withdrawn within that time and the duties paid as then liquidated, but upon the discovery of an error, seven years afterwards, a reliquidation was made showing a deficiency, the surety was not liable.—Id.

(a) Cargo of rice imported. Duty on uncleaned is 2 cents and on cleaned 2½ cents per pound. The rice was entered for warehouse and the usual bond given, conditioned to pay $12,524.95, or the ascertained duties. Rice withdrawn and duties of 2 cents paid amounting to $12,352.15 or less by $172.80 than the sum named in the bond. The rice was afterwards liquidated as clean rice, making a difference of $12,111.17. The bond was held for this amount.—Westray v. United States (18 Wallace, 322).

(b) The ordinary warehouse bond in the form prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, in which the condition provides in the alternative that the penalty may be avoided by the payment of whatever duties may be ascertained to be due whenever the goods shall become subject to duty by withdrawal for consumption, is hardly an ordinary pecuniary bond, but is rather a bond given to secure whatever duties may be by law chargeable upon the goods to which it refers. At all events if the obligor pay but a part of the sum of money fixed as above, and the whole of the sum thus fixed proves, on liquidation of the duties for which the bond was given, to be less than the sum with which the goods are rightly chargeable, he can not come in after the expiration of a year, and when at law a forfeiture has occurred, and tender payment of the difference (with interest) between the sum named in the bond and the amount which he has actually paid. He can be relieved from the forfeiture only on doing complete equity, and that, in such a case, is nothing less than the payment of all the duties to secure which he gave the bond.—Id.

(c) Where importers have entered for warehouse and given bond for duties and have subsequently sold the goods in bond and authorized the purchaser to withdraw them from warehouse upon payment of duties and the goods are withdrawn without the payment of the proper duties in full, the original importers are liable on their bond, after the withdrawal of the goods, for the balance of duties unpaid and which should have been paid on the last withdrawal.—United States v. Minturn (21 Int. Rev. Rec., 182; 26 Fed. Cas., 1272).

(d) An importer of sugars having entered them at the custom-house by "warehouse entry," gave, with sureties, a bond conditioned to be void if he or his "assigns" should, within a specified time, withdraw them from the warehouse within the mode prescribed by law, and pay to the collector a sum specified "or the true amount when ascertained" of the duties imposed. The act required the sugars to be kept subject to the order of the importer "upon payment of the proper duties to be ascertained on entry and to be secured by his bond" with surety. He afterwards sold the sugars in bond and gave to the purchaser, who agreed to pay the duties as part of the purchase price, a written authority upon which the sugars were withdrawn; but the full amount of the proper duties, which was less than the sum specified in the bond, was not paid. Held, that the obligors are liable for the unpaid duties.—Minturn v. United States (106 U. S., 437).

(e) Although it is the usage of trade to sell goods in bond and deliver them by an order for their withdrawal, the purchaser withdrawing and paying the duties, the obligors do not become merely sureties with the goods as the primary security for the duties nor are they released because the officers of the United States unlawfully part with the goods without exacting payment of the duties.—Id.

(f) The 10 per cent additional duty imposed by the act of March 14, 1866 (14 Stat., 8), on goods withdrawn from the warehouse after one year from their importation, is also to be assessed upon goods never withdrawn but sold to satisfy duties.—United States v. Unger (18 Int. Rev. Rec., 164; 28 Fed. Cas., 332).

(a) Certain goods were imported in November, 1869, and stored in a bonded warehouse until March 20, 1871, when they were withdrawn for consumption. Held, that having so remained in such warehouse they were, under the act of 1866, subject to the additional duty of 10 per cent.—Fabbri v. Murphy (95 U. S., 191).

(b) The words "date of original importation" used in R. S. 2970 refer to the exterior port of first arrival of the merchandise and not to the interior port of destination.—Seeberger v. Schweyer (153 U. S., 609).

(c) Goods were imported by way of New York from whence they were transported in bond to Chicago. Within one year from their arrival at Chicago, but more than a year from their arrival at New York, the importer offered to pay the duties and charges, but the collector assessed an additional duty of 10 per cent. Held, that the words "date of original importation" mean the date of the arrival of the goods at the port of destination. (This case overruled in 153 U. S., 609.)—Farwell v. Spalding (24 Fed. Rep., 18).

(d) Goods which remained in bonded warehouse more than one year prior to August 1, 1890, are subject to the additional duty of 10 per cent.—T. D. 10354, G. A. 75; T. D. 10466, G. A. 116; reversed T. D. 15517, G. A. 2827 (54 Fed. Rep., 145).

(e) The provision in section 5, act of August 6, 1846, that goods not withdrawn in three years shall be deemed abandoned to the Government and sold was not designed merely for the security of the Government and to recover its duties in a particular case, but to secure in all cases, so far as possible, the prompt payment of duties within three years, and for this end to cut off peremptorily, after that period, the right of any person to pay the duties and withdraw the goods. Under the amendment by the act of July 14, 1862, section 21, the policy thus enacted involved a forfeiture of any surplus from the sale.—United States v. De Visser (10 Fed. Rep., 642).

(f) If goods remain in the public store or bonded warehouse more than three years, the Government has the right to sell them for the collection of charges and the clearance of the warehouse. But the goods are not forfeited, and may be redeemed at any time before advertisement of sale (R. S. 2972).—Abbott & Co. v. United States (20 C. Cls. R., 280).

(g) Where a statute gives a person discretionary powers to be exercised by him upon his own opinion of certain facts, it is a rule of construction that the statute constitutes him judge of those facts. In the exercise of that discretion he is in the discharge not of a ministerial but of a quasi judicial function. To render him liable to damages for his conduct, it must be proved either that he exercised his power in cases not within his jurisdiction or in a manner not confided to him, or with malice, corruptly or oppressively.—Gould v. Hammond (1 McAll, 235; 10 Fed. Cas., 874).

(h) Warehouse keeper reported to collector perishable nature of goods, whereupon the collector directed two United States appraisers to obtain information and report to him the condition of the article; and upon their recommendation of the necessity of an immediate sale, ordered the perishable articles sold under section 1, act of August 6, 1846. In the absence of any imputation of a corrupt motive, the shortness of the public notice of the contemplated sale (one day) was not, per se, sufficient evidence of fraud to warrant a judgment against the collector. The regulations governing the sale of goods of the first class (such as have been in public stores more than one year) do not apply to the second class perishable goods.—Id.

26579—08——71

(a) Where a statute (R. S. 2976) authorizes a collector to sell goods "upon due notice" and the clerk whose duty it was to give such notice failed to put up any notice whatever, the collector could not be held liable for his negligence in that regard, in the absence of proof of negligence on his part in the selection of the particular individual who was assigned to that duty.—Rubens v. Robertson (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 86).

(b) The collector can not be charged with negligence in delegating to an appraiser the duty of examining merchandise and reporting whether it is deteriorating in value.—Id.

(c) A collector who sells unclaimed goods in pursuance of R. S. 2976, in the belief that they are deteriorating in value, is not liable in trover, or in an action on the case of negligence, even though it appears that there was no substantial deterioration, if he acted in good faith and was not personally guilty of negligence.—Id.

(d) In an action against a collector to recover the value of goods lost while in a warehouse, no recovery can be had unless it appears that the collector was guilty of actual personal negligence in regard to the safekeeping of the goods, and that in consequence of such personal negligence they were lost. Such negligence can not be inferred from the mere loss of the goods.—Brissac v. Lawrence (2 Blatchf., 121; 4 Fed. Cas., 153).

(e) The collector is not personally responsible for the negligence of his subordinates in the custom-house. The rule stated as to the responsibility of the collector for losses occurring through the regulations established by the Treasury.—Id.

(f) The fact that the bookkeeper in the warehouse was intoxicated daily is not enough to render the collector liable for loss of goods stored in the warehouse, but it must be shown that the goods were lost from the particular cause.—Id.

(g) Jewelry seized in 1859 as invoiced below its value. Trial delayed until 1867. Verdict for owner and no certificate of probable cause. The jewelry was placed by the collector in the public store of the custom-house. It was lost and can not be found. Held, that when goods are lost from the custom-house while the libel is being tried, the circumstances of the loss not being shown, and the negligence of the collector and storekeeper being neither charged nor disaffirmed, the Government is not liable for the loss, especially where no certificate of probable cause is given. Under section 66, act of 1799, the Government is not liable for the loss of goods while in the public store awaiting trial.—Schmalz v. United States (4 C. Cls. R., 142; 5 Id., 294).

(h) Where goods are consigned to the collector of customs at the port of shipment to be by him shipped abroad, and he gives a receipt reciting that "the said merchandise was duly inspected and marked at this port and laden on board the foreign steamer W. * * * and that said vessel and cargo were duly cleared from this port," the exporters had a right to presume that the goods had been entered on the ship's outward manifest, and the fact that they had not been so entered was not a breach of the export bond. The fact that in the collector's receipt, which was on a printed form, the clause expressing the entry of the goods on the outward manifest is struck out, is immaterial when such receipt is not given until after the vessel has cleared.—United States. v. Allen (D. C.), (39 Fed. Rep., 100).

(i) An export bond given in the sum of $1,000, without containing any reference to the amount of the estimated duties (article 587, Regulations) on the goods, is valid, and the Government is entitled, upon breach of the conditions, to recover the whole amount of the bond and is not limited to judgment for double the amount of the duties as subsequently estimated. The steamer Oteri.—United States v. Valensona, Same v. Oteri (C. C. A.), (67 Fed. Rep., 146).

(a) When goods were entered for warehouse, but, before they were removed to the warehouse the importer applied for a permit to land the goods for consumption and the collector, under instructions from the Treasury Department, charged him for half a month's storage, although the goods had remained all the time on board the vessel and the importer paid the amount under protest, held that the charge was an illegal one, but that the payment of it was voluntary, as the importer might have allowed the goods to go to the warehouse and have withdrawn them from there and that therefore the amount could not be recovered.—Irvin v. Schell (5 Blatchf., 157; 13 Fed. Cas., 106).

(b) Where no warehouse entry of goods was made, but the importer wrote on the entry the words "vessel, as warehouse," and the goods remained in the vessel only two days beyond the period allowed for the discharge of the cargo and the collector exacted $10 for half storage, held that the charge was illegal.—Ogden v. Barney (5 Blatchf., 189; 18 Fed. Cas., 607).

(c) Goods deposited in private stores by the importer are to be taken possession of by the collector at the charge and risk of the owners, consequently the goods are in the custody of the United States and in charge of an inspector.—Clark v. Peaslee (1 Cliff., 545; 26 Law Rep., 609; 5 Fed. Cas., 900).

(d) Under the act of August 6, 1846, no person has any right to keep a warehouse for the storage of dutiable goods unless appointed by the Secretary, and such appointment can be revoked at pleasure.—Corkle v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 413; 6 Fed. Cas., 555).

(e) A person who has his private warehouse designated as a place for the storage of dutiable goods, under the act of 1846, and who, on being required by the Government, before the depositing of any goods in his store, to elect to pay either the salary of an inspector or one-half storage, elects the former and makes payments, which are paid into the Treasury, can not recover them back. And this is so even though the Government had no legal right to demand the payments.—Corkle v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 413; 6 Fed. Cas., 555).

(f) Under the act of August 6, 1846, the Government has the right to require the person whose warehouse is designated as a place for the storage of dutiable goods to pay the salary of an inspector to superintend the receipt and delivery of goods from the warehouse.—Id.

(g) The case of Corkle v. Maxwell (above) as decisive against the claim to recover moneys paid to the collector for services of an inspector at their private bonded cellar.—Harriman v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 421; 11 Fed. Cas., 603).

(h) The theft of imported goods while within the limits of a port of entry and before the same have been landed under the supervision of the officers of the customs is not a "casualty" within the meaning of this section, and a protest asking relief from payment of duties on goods thus stolen presents a case within the jurisdiction of the Board of Classification.—T. D. 24511, G. A. 5359.

(i) Where the Government is liable to refund duties on imported merchandise if destroyed by fire while in customs custody, it is under the same obligation to pay salvage on the duties saved as if property of the Government of the same value had been salved. This liability arises out of the fact that the Secretary of the Treasury is "authorized" by this section to refund duties on merchandise destroyed by fire while in customs custody.—United States v.

Cornell Steamboat Company (202 U. S., 184; T. D. 27365), affirming 137 Fed. Rep., 455 (T. D. 26191), and 130 id., 480 (T. D. 25601).

(a) A lot of 1883 bags of sugar on which duty had been paid was on board a lighter which caught fire and was in danger of being destroyed when it was saved from the flames by salvors. It was held that the Government was liable for salvage services upon the duties thus saved to the United States, on the ground that the Government would have had to refund the duties if the merchandise had been in fact destroyed. The court held that, although R. S. 2984 is permissive in form, no doubt existed that the Secretary of the Treasury would have refunded the duties in the contingency of the total destruction of the merchandise.—United States v. Cornell Steamboat Company (202 U. S., 184; T. D. 27365), affirming 137 Fed. Rep., 455 (T. D. 26191), and 130 id., 480 (T. D. 25601).

(b) Congress may, if it sees fit, make the Secretary the final arbiter in any class of cases arising under the revenue laws, to determine in a quasi judicial manner, whether by virtue of laws any claim against the Government in favor of the petitioner.—D. M. Ferry & Co. v. United States (C. C. A.), (85 Fed. Cas., 550).

(c) This section makes the Secretary the final tribunal to decide on the validity of any such claim, and his decision is not subject to review by the Court of Claims or any other tribunal.—Id.

(d) R. S. 2984 does not authorize the refunding of duties on merchandise after it has been delivered to the importer on his giving bond for redelivery to the customs officers under R. S. 2899.—Id.

(e) The theft of merchandise from a bonded warehouse does not operate to relieve the importer from payment of duties accruing on the articles. Foreign exhibits stolen from Charleston Exposition.—T. D. 24118, G. A. 5249.

(f) A loss of goods while en route from the port of original importation to the port of ultimate destination is a loss of merchandise constructively in a bonded warehouse, and does not present a case within the jurisdiction of the Board of General Appraisers.—T. D. 25802, G. A. 5857.

(g) Where imported goods which have been designated by the collector for examination and appraisal are stolen when on the wharf and in charge of customs officers, such loss is not a casualty within the meaning of section 2984. The merchandise is to be regarded in the same position as if technically in a public store or bonded warehouse, no permit for its delivery having been issued to the importers by the collector and an abatement of the tariff duties thereon is prohibited by this section.—T. D. 27129, G. A. 6291.

WEIGHT.

(h) Under the act of 1846 ad valorem duties are to be paid on the quantity of goods actually imported, not on the amount put in the foreign country. Where such quantity is measured by weight, a loss of weight on the voyage, whether by drainage or evaporation, will proportionately diminish the duties, notwithstanding what is lost in weight may be gained in value.—Austin v. Peaslee (20 Law. Rep., 443; 2 Fed. Cas., 235).

(i) Wool weighed in England and the invoice gave the weight there. The weight here was greater than that in the invoice. Proof that wool became heavier by from 1 to 5 per cent by absorption of moisture while at sea. Although increased weight may have accrued from moisture or any other action of the elements—except being exposed to or injured by sea water—it was liable to pay duty at this port on the weight here.—United States v. Choteau (32 Hunt Mer. Mag., 715; 25 Fed. Cas., 420).

(a) Ad valorem duties, where they are required to be assessed on weight, must be so assessed on the actual weight when landed, as ascertained by the proper officers.—United States v. Nash (4 Cliff., 107; 27 Fed. Cas., 75).

(b) Appraisers determine the actual market value or wholesale price of the merchandise in the principal markets of the country from which the same were imported, but they have no authority to determine the weight or quantity of the importation.—Id.

(c) Under section 18 of the act of June 30, 1864 (13 Stat., 202), teas imported from London were subject to a duty of 25 cents per pound and also 20 per cent ad valorem.—Id.

(d) When teas were bought in England for export, what is delivered as 100 pounds actually weighs more, and importers in this country reckon their profits with reference to the difference between the weight there and here. Held, that the customs officers here were not bound by the invoice weight.—Id.

(e) Where the United States weigher ascertained the exact weight of the teas, the collector was bound to adopt that quantity and the value ascertained by the appraiser as the legal basis for the assessment of duties.—United States v. Nash (4 Cliff., 107; 27 Fed. Cas., 75).

(f) Wool cost less than 12 cents per pound in Buenos Ayres, whence it was imported, and was packed in hides which were of the same value as the wool, and the bales were paid for at the gross weight, including the hides, which were an article of value here. Held, that the appraisers ought not to include the hides in their gross estimate of cost and then to exclude their weight in ascertaining the cost of the wool per pound.—Saxonville Mills v. Russell (1 Lowell, 450; 11 Int. Rev. Rec., 207; 21 Fed. Cas., 595).

(g) Where a cargo of coke, by reason of the evaporation of the moisture during the voyage, weighed several tons less than when shipped, duties could only be collected on the actual weight at the time of the importation and not on the weight shown by the invoice.—Balfour v. Sullivan (17 Fed. Rep., 231).

(h) A regulation of the Secretary (article 532, of 1874) that duties shall be collected according to the invoice, unless the importer accounts, by proofs, for the discrepancy between the amount shown by the invoice and the actual weight at the time of importation, is no defense to an action to recover the duties exacted on the difference between the amount actually imported and the amount shown by the invoice to have been shipped.—Id.

(i) Castile soap imported and the importer claimed that an allowance should be made for shortage on weight. Duties are to be paid only upon the actual quantity of merchandise which is imported and not upon the original quantity bought and shipped.—Reiss v. Magone (C. C.), (39 Fed. Rep., 105).

(j) Where, however, an importation has shrunk in weight, from evaporation or other like cause, and such shrinkage has added a percentage of value, so that the actual quantity which arrives is worth more per pound in the markets of the country from which it came than the original quantity bought and shipped was worth per pound, the actual quantity should be appraised at its increased value per pound, and duty assessed upon the value so appraised, although the invoice describes the original quantity as worth less per pound.—Id.

(k) But to warrant such an assessment of duty the appraiser must first find that the actual quantity was worth per pound such a sum as would warrant the particular amount of duties assessed. The appraiser having found the soap to be worth the amount as given in the invoice, without having found that the value of what was left was enhanced by shrinkage, verdict and judgment was rendered in favor of the importer.—Id.

(a) Allowance for increase of weight caused by the water soaking into the ash refused because the importer had not complied with articles 602 and 603, Regulations 1884.—T. D. 10230, G. A. 8.

(b) Duty assessed on 6,703 pounds of castile soap, the invoiced and entered value, while the weigher's return was net weight 6,263. The soap was invoiced by the kilo at a specified sum per kilo and the invoiced and entered value was returned by the appraiser as correct. Held, that duty should have been on the invoiced price and weigher's return.—T. D. 10661, G. A. 245.

(c) The weigher's return as to sultana raisins held to be conclusive though only 10 boxes out of 650 were weighed and though there was a strong presumption that duty was assessed on an excessive weight.—T. D. 10882, G. A. 377.

(d) The evidence must show that the alleged deficiency was discovered before the goods left the custody of the Government.—T. D. 12009, G. A. 922.

(e) The return of the Government weigher must be accepted unless clear and satisfactory evidence is furnished to overcome it. The affidavit of the city weigher, showing a deficiency in favor of the importer, held not sufficient.—T. D. 12009, G. A. 922.

(f) Duty assessed on the gross weight of Siemans-Marten metal, which included the weight of bands of wire and pieces of wood used to confine the metal. The weight as returned by the weigher and upon which duty was assessed is not tare under R. S. 2898, and, in the absence of proof, its value is the same as the value of the metal.—T. D. 13168, G. A. 1589.

(g) A duty assessed on gross weight of burlaps including sea water absorbed during voyage. Held, that allowance should have been made for sea water and duty assessed on the actual weight, as shown by the invoice, excluding the weight of the water.—T. D. 13339, G. A. 1719.

(h) Error in weight of wool waste. Collector's decision reversed in order that he may make the correction rather than return the papers for reliquidation.—T. D. 13484, G. A. 1786.

(i) A protest as to the question of weight did not reopen the question as to the rate of duty.—T. D. 13550, G. A. 1822.

(j) Invoice weight of steel 1,794 pounds. Weight as reported by United States weigher 1,624. It was shown that the shipper had made an allowance of 170 pounds. Held, that duty should have been assessed on 1,624 pounds.—T. D. 13704, G. A. 1942.

(k) The actual weight as against a trade custom must govern.—T. D. 14624, G. A. 2382.

(l) Wool imported the weight of which was increased by the absorption of sea water between the time of departure from the port of exportation and arrival at destination. Held, that the Board of General Appraisers has jurisdiction of a protest against an assessment on the weight caused by the absorption of sea water and that an allowance should be made for sea water so absorbed.—T. D. 16001, G. A. 3025.

(m) The weight of the Java picul is 136 pounds.—T. D. 17811, G. A. 3745.

(n) Weight of Puerto Rico libra 1.0161 pounds.—T. D. 18870, G. A. 4067.

APPEALS TO AND DECISIONS BY SECRETARY OF TREASURY.

(a) A vessel from a foreign port with dutiable goods on board arrived at New York and was there sold, under a decree on a libel in admiralty, to the plaintiff. The duties on the goods not being paid or secured, the inspector in charge, under the order of the collector, took the goods to the public stores, under section 56, act of March 2, 1799, and the act of March 2, 1861. The collector exacted from the plaintiff the fees, charges, and expenses connected with the removal of the goods as a condition to granting a clearance for the vessel for an ontward voyage. The plaintiff paid the amount under protest, but did not appeal to the Secretary, and then brought suit to recover the amount paid. Held, that although the exaction was not warranted by law the suit could not be maintained because of the failure to appeal to the Secretary.—Shaw v. Grinnell (9 Blatchf., 471; 21 Fed. Cas., 1190).

(b) A protest or notice of dissatisfaction to the collector is of no avail unless followed by a valid appeal. Consequently proof of protest without an appeal after liquidation was inadmissible.—Watt v. United States (15 Blatchf., 29; 29 Fed. Cas., 441).

(c) The appeal to the Secretary, to be available for the purpose of a review of the decision of the collector, must be taken after such an "ascertainment and liquidation" of the duties as would be final and conclusive if no appeal should be taken. The Secretary can not be called upon until after the final disposition of the matter by the collector. He is not required to act upon the rulings of that officer from time to time, as they are made, while "ascertaining and liquidating," but only after the work of the collector has been fully completed.—Id.

(d) It seems that under the act of March 3, 1857, section 5, a suit against a collector to recover an excess of duty or penalty paid for an alleged undervaluation, without first having appealed to the Secretary, can not be maintained.—Reimer v. Schell (4 Blatchf., 328; 20 Fed. Cas., 504).

(e) The decision of the Secretary upon an appeal, when promulgated by his order and acted upon by a subsequent reliquidation of duties accordingly, is "final and conclusive" upon the Government and can not be lawfully recalled by the Secretary and reversed or modified, either as a part of the same proceeding on appeal or collaterally by any independent order. R. S. 2931, enacting that his decision shall be final and conclusive, enacts the rule ordinarily applicable to such decisions and is intended to bind the Government as in appraisals of value under R. S. 2930.—United States v. Leng (18 Fed. Rep., 15).

(f) A decision by the Secretary that he will not entertain an appeal from the decision of the collector because the protest was not filed in time is a decision "on the appeal" within the meaning of this section.—The John Shillito Co. v. McClung (C. C. A.), (51 Fed. Rep., 868).

(g) An importer suing to recover duties, in order to avoid the bar resulting from his failure to bring the action within ninety days after the decision of his appeal to the Secretary, alleged that such decision was void because made, not by the Secretary, but by the Assistant Secretary, acting in his official capacity as assistant. Held, that the assistant secretaries would have authority to decide such appeals if that duty were assigned to them by the Secretary, or in case of his absence or sickness (R. S. 161, 177, 179, 236, 245), and it must be presumed, in the absence of a contrary showing, that the appeal was lawfully decided.—The John Shillito Co. v. McClung (C. C. A.), (51 Fed. Rep., 868).

(h) A failure to appeal from a decision of the collector as to the rate or amount of duty does not bar a recovery of the excess of duty, as the act of 1857, providing that the collector's decision shall be final and conclusive "as to the liability of the importation to duty or exemption," "unless an appeal is taken," etc., refers to the liability of the importation to and not to the rate or amount of duty.—Benkard v. Schell (5 Int. Rev. Rec. (1867), 3; 3 Fed. Cas., 192).

(a) The importer is not entitled to notice of the decision of the Secretary upon appeal, and the limitation on ninety days within which the importer may commence an action commences to run from the date of the decision and not from the time the importer may have had knowledge of it.—Chung Yune v. Shurtleff (10 Fed. Rep., 239).

(b) It is not incumbent on the Secretary to communicate to the appellant his decision on an appeal from the decision of the collector.—Arnson v. Murphy (24 Fed. Rep., 355).

(c) It is not necessary, under R. S. 2931, that the decision of the Secretary on the appeal should, in order to be operative, be communicated to the party appealing.—Arnson v. Murphy (115 U. S., 579).

(d) Under the act to increase the duties on imports, passed June 30, 1864, the collector is under no obligation to give notice to the importer of his liquidation of duties. The importer who makes the entries is under obligation himself, if he wishes to appeal from it, to take notice of the collector's settlement of the duties.—Westray v. United States (18 Wallace, 322).

(e) It is not the duty of the collector to inform the importer of the disposition of the appeal by the Secretary, and the fact that the collector by his silence, leads the importer to suppose that the appeal has not been acted upon, when in fact it has been decided, does not estop the collector from setting up ninety-day limitations to a suit to recover the excess duties.—John Shillito Co. v. McClung (C. C.), (45 Fed. Rep., 778).

(f) Where the answer alleges that the appeal was decided more than ninety days before suit, a reply setting up that the collector is estopped from pleading the limitation because of his silence and failure to inform plaintiff that the appeal had been decided is not a departure from the petition, which alleges that the appeal had not been decided before the suit was brought.—Id.

(g) When an appeal from a collector is lawfully pending before the Treasury Department, the Secretary has authority to determine the same at any time without at first notifying the importer, nor is he required to notify the importer of the result of his decision. 45 Fed. Rep., 778, affirmed.—The John Shillito Co. v. McClung (C. C. A.), (51 Fed. Rep., 868).

(h) A suit against a collector is practically a suit against the United States; and, as the Government is not bound by an estoppel, the fact that the collector did not notify the importer of an adverse decision by the Secretary does not prevent the collector from setting up as a defense that the suit was not brought within ninety days from that decision.—Id.

BONDS FOR DUTIES.

(i) The bond for duties is required to be given by all persons who are importers whether they be partners or part owners, and the collector is not authorized to take the separate bond of one of the importers in extinguishment of the joint liability of all.—Meredith v. United States (13 Pet., 486, 495).

(j) A bond is not avoided by erasing the name of one obligor and inserting the name of another, after delivery, by consent of all parties, proved by parol.—Speake v. United States (9 Cranch, 28, 36).

(a) An erasure or interlineation apparent on the face of a deed does not avoid it unless shown to have been made fraudulently or without the assent of those affected.—Speake v. United States (9 Cranch, 28).

(b) If the law prescribes the terms of a bond to be taken, and one be taken variant therefrom, it is void, so far at least as it is variant. But the officers of the Government may, without any law, take securities from debtors to the public for what they may owe.—United States v. Howell (4 Wash. C. C., 620; 2 Am. Lead. Cas. (5th ed.), 419; 26 Fed. Cas., 394).

(c) In a suit on a bond for the recovery of duties the defendant, filing an affidavit stating that there was error in the liquidation of the duties, in that the vessel belonged to citizens of the United States and not foreigners, is, under 1 Stat., 627, section 65, entitled to a continuance.—United States v. Willing (4 Dall., 376, note; 28 Fed. Cas., 695).

(d) The bond given by the importers, in which they expressly stipulate to pay the amount which might be found due upon the final liquidation of the entry over and above the amount of the estimated duties already paid, is a distinct notice to them that a further adjustment of the duties on the entry was to be made and that they might be called upon for a further payment.—United States v. Cobb (11 Fed. Rep., 76).

(e) A receipt of a collector upon a duty bond acknowledging payment and satisfaction of the bond does not operate as an estoppel. It is open to explanation and is no bar to a suit on the bond if it be not paid.—United States v. Williams (1 Ware (175), 173; 28 Fed. Cas., 678).

(f) The cancellation of a bond does not, per se, destroy it when it is canceled through fraud or evident mistake, but it may be declared upon as a good and subsisting obligation.—Id.

(g) In an action on a bond given for the payment of duties on goods deposited in the public stores at Savannah, it is no defense that the principal actually paid, under compulsion, the amount of the duties to the Confederate collector during the occupancy of Savannah by the Confederate authorities.—United States v. Low (13 Int. Rev. Rec., 124; 10 Am. Law Reg. (N. S.), 455; 26 Fed. Cas., 1006).

(h) Nor is it a defense that there was no United States collector of customs or other agent at Savannah, to whom payment should be made, during the three years within which the duties were to be paid under the provisions of the bond.—Id.

(i) Where, in an action of debt brought by the United States against two defendants on a bond, it was set up, in defense, that the bond was given for an antecedent debt consisting of duties due at the custom-house, the payment of which was secured by a bond executed by the defendants and another person, that more than twenty years had elapsed after the giving of the first bond before the execution of the second, that no demand of payment had been made in the meantime, that the defendants executed the second bond without a knowledge of this defense, and that they were advised by the agent of the United States that there was no defense to the demand. Held, that this was no defense to the action.—United States v. McKewan (4 Blatchf., 383; 26 Fed. Cas., 1121).

(j) If a creditor, whether the United States or an individual, give time to the principal in a bond prior to the breach of the obligation, without the consent of the surety, the surety is discharged, and he may set up the defense at law aliter, if the time be given after the breach, for then the only remedy of the surety is in equity.—United States v. Howell (4 Wash. C. C., 620; 2 Am. Lead. Cas. (5th Ed.), 419; 26 Fed. Cas., 394).

(a) Two custom-house bonds were lodged in the bank in the usual course of business for collection. The bank discounted for the principal obligor certain notes for the payment of these bonds and the proceeds were carried to the credit of the United States by the bank, in discharge of the bonds, and it turned out that the notes were forgeries practiced by the principal. Held, that the bonds were discharged and that there was no remedy in equity to acquire a priority on the assets of the principal.—United States v. Rousmaniere's Adm'rs (2 Mason, 373; 27 Fed. Cas., 905).

(b) A collector is not at liberty to receive anything but money of the United States or foreign gold or silver coin made current in payment of duties. If he receives a check on a bank in payment, it is at his own peril, and if the check is not paid the bond is not discharged; a fortiori, it is not discharged by the receipt of a memorandum check.—Johnson v. United States (5 Mason, 425; 13 Fed. Cas., 868).

(c) Goods imported July 2, 1812. Bond given with a penalty of $7,000 upon condition to be void upon payment of $3,500 or the amount of duties to be ascertained. Under the act of July 1, 1812 (2 Stat., 768), the goods were subject to double duties, amounting to $6,168.35. On the day the bond became due the obligors paid single duties $3,084.18 and tendered the collector the further sum of $415.82, making $3,500, in discharge of the bond. Tender refused and suit brought on the bond for the double duties. Held, that a bond given for the payment of duties in the alternative is discharged by the performance of either part of the condition at the election of the obligor, although the sum named in the condition be less than the duties.—United States v. Thompson (1 Gall., 388; 28 Fed. Cas., 90).

(d) The importer is liable for the duties but the bond is discharged as to the surety by the performance of one of its alternative conditions.—Dumont v. United States (98 U. S., 142).

(e) If a collector cancels a bond for duties without receiving payment of the amount of the duties, in connivance with the debtor, the cancellation is void and the bond may still be declared upon as a subsisting deed, for the cancellation is, in such a case, a flagrant violation of duty.—Johnson v. United States (5 Mason, 425; 13 Fed. Cas., 868).

(f) Eight bonds for the payment of duties were given by Samuel Thompson and Jonah Thompson. Suit brought on each bond. Five suits against Samuel Thompson and Jonah Thompson and judgment on each. On the remaining three separate suits were brought against each and judgment against each. On December 13, 1832, Jonah was released by the Secretary under the act of March 2, 1831 (4 Stat., 467). On proceeding to revive judgment against Samuel Thompson, held that where the joint judgments were rendered the release of one of the defendants operated as a release of the other, that the separate judgments against Samuel Thompson are not released by the release of Jonah.—United States v. Thompson (Gilp., 614; 28 Fed. Cas., 92).

(g) If the surety of the consignee on a custom-house bond pays the debt he has no remedy against the owner if the latter did not request the surety to sign the bond, but the remedy of the surety is against the consignee only.—Knox v. Devens (5 Mason, 380; 14 Fed. Cas., 801).

(h) Under section 5 of the act of July 14, 1832, a surety is liable on a bond given for duties under $200.—United States v. Linn (Crabbe, 307; 26 Fed. Cas., 973).

(i) A surety on a custom-house bond who has paid it has the same priority as the United States against the estate of his principal in the hands of his assignee.—United States v. Hunter (5 Mason, 62; 26 Fed. Cas., 437).

(a) In an action upon a duty bond the United States are entitled to a judgment at the return term.—United States v. Johns (1 Cranch C. C., 284).

(b) Judgment on a bond for the payment of duties can not exceed the penalty thereof and interest from the breach, although the sum actually be larger.—United States v. Arnold (1 Gall. 348; 24 Fed. Cas., 868).

(c) Where a judgment was obtained upon a joint and several bond for duties at the custom-house in a joint suit against the obligors, and afterward one of the obligors died, it was held that no action at law lay against the administrator of the deceased debtor, but only against the surviving judgment debtors.—United States v. Cushman (2 Sumn., 310; 25 Fed. Cas., 732).

(d) Where the Secretary releases an insolvent debtor under the acts of Congress, upon the condition of the assent of the sureties to his release, without prejudice to their liability, the assent must be by the parties if living, and if dead by their personal representatives. An assent by the heir of a surety is not sufficient.—Id.

(e) On a bill in equity on the same bond, held that the United States were entitled to maintain a suit in equity for the recovery of the debt out of the assets of the deceased judgment debtor, whose estate was also insolvent, in virtue of their general priority in cases of insolvency.—United States v. Cushman (2 Sumn., 426; 25 Fed. Cas., 734).

(f) In such a case, as between the United States and the obligors, all of them are deemed principal debtors.—Id.

(g) Where sureties bind themselves jointly and severally as principals in a bond, there is no difference as to their liability in equity for the debt between them and the principal debtor for whom they are sureties.—Id.

(h) A collector is not authorized to receive anything in payment of a duty bond but the lawful money of the United States or foreign gold or silver coins made current by law. If he receives a check this is not payment until the check is paid.—United States v. Williams (1 Ware (175), 173; 28 Fed. Cas., 678).

(i) Under section 65 of the act of 1799, the surety having discharged the bond for duties, is entitled to no other advantages secured to the United States except the preference and priority reserved to the United States, to be paid out of the estate of the principal. He is not entitled to proceed against the person and effects of the executors and assignees in the cases mentioned in said section, to require special bail, to demand judgment at the first term, to sue in the Federal courts when the parties are citizens of the same States.—United States v. Preston (4 Wash. C. C., 446; 27 Fed. Cas., 616).

(j) Where the surety has paid the bond he can not maintain assumpsit in the name of the United States against the assignee of the principal. The only remedy is for money laid out, etc., on the bond in his own name, under the privilege granted to him by section 65, act of 1799.—Id.

(k) Where one obligor, though a surety, pays the bond, he can not maintain an action on it in the name of the obligee against his co-obligors, nor an action for money laid out and advanced except in his own name.—Id.

(l) Though the United States have, in the Treasury, money belonging to a surety, they may agree to hold it without a final appropriation to the payment of the debt, and bring an action against the principal for the benefit of the surety. This is in accordance with the purpose of section 65 of the collection act—Meredith v. United States (13 Pet., 486, 496).

(m) Bond given conditioned that the importer would pay $425, that being the estimated duty based upon the invoice, or the amount which should be subsequently ascertained to be due, or that he should within three years withdraw and export them or transport them to a Pacific port. That sum paid and the goods withdrawn, but it was found on liquidation that the duty was $676. Suit brought against surety. Held that he was not liable.—Dumont v. United States (98 U. S., 142).

ACTIONS FOR DUTIES (PRIOR TO ENACTMENT OF CUSTOMS ADMINISTRATIVE ACT).

(a) The consignee is to be considered, under section 62, act of 1799 (1 Stat., 673), as the owner of the goods. The consignor never was debtor to the United States for the duties.—United States v. Murdock (2 Cranch C. C., 486; 27 Fed. Cas., 34).

(b) The importer or consignee of imported goods is personally liable for the duties charged thereon.—United States v. Dodge (1 Deady, 124; 25 Fed. Cas., 878).

(c) Every partner is civilly liable for violations of the revenue laws by his copartners, whether he knew of or consented to such violations or not.—United States v. Thomasson (4 Biss., 99; 28 Fed. Cas., 80).

(d) Penal statutes not authorizing indictments are not within the rule of criminal law that a man is not punishable unless he has been guilty both of a criminal act or omission or unlawful intent.—Id.

(e) Duties are not simply a charge upon the merchandise to be collected only by means of the custody of the property, but are a personal debt against the importer, which may be collected by a civil action.—United States v. George (6 Blatchf., 406; 25 Fed. Cas., 1277).

(f) The right of the Government to duties is not limited to the lien on the goods or the bond given for their payment. The revenue acts make the duties a personal debt or charge against the importer, which accrues immediately upon the arrival of the goods.—United States v. Cobb (11 Fed. Rep., 76).

(g) The duties upon all goods imported constitute a personal debt due to the United States from the importer (and the consignee for this purpose is treated as the owner and importer) independently of any lien on the goods and any bond given for the duties.—Meredith v. United States (13 Pet., 486, 493).

(h) If the articles were purchased by defendant after they had been imported and passed the custom-house without the payment of duties by others, he is not liable for the duties unless he connived at and is known to be privy to the importation.—United States v. Koblitz (15 Fed. Rep., 900).

(i) The fact that dutiable goods were allowed by the customs officers to pass the custom-house without payment of duties will not relieve the importer from liability for the duties.—Id.

(j) As the right to duties accrues by the importation of merchandise with intent to unlade, and immediately upon importation the duties become a personal charge upon the importer, the United States is deprived of the duties within the meaning of section 12, act of June 22, 1874, the moment it becomes entitled to them and they are withheld, and it is immaterial whether its officers retain the goods or not.—United States v. Boyd (24 Fed. Rep., 690).

(k) There is nothing in section 12 that limits its application as regards fraudulent intent to enter goods free, to proceedings at the custom-house only, and it is applicable to such attempts wherever made.—Id.

(a) The second proviso of section 62, act of 1799, makes the consignee of goods liable as owner for the duties thereon, but it does not prevent the consignee from passing, by sale or otherwise, a good title to the same goods, subject only to the payment of the duties thereon. If the consignee owes other bonds for duties, which are due and unpaid, he is entitled to no credit for duties at the custom-house, but the goods themselves may pass by sale and are liable only for the duties payable thereon and not for other duties due and unpaid.—Howland v. Harris (4 Mason, 497; 12 Fed. Cas., 734).

(b) The act of March 3, 1863, section 11, does not give district attorneys a per centum on the amount of a judgment or decree obtained in favor of the United States, but only upon the amount actually collected or realized thereon.—The Pacific (Deady, 192; 18 Fed. Cas., 943).

(c) The words "collected" and "realized" used in said section are substantially synonymous, and money is not "realized" by the United States within the meaning of the same until the United States has received the same or the benefit of it.—Id.

(d) The meaning of the words "any suit or proceeding arising under the revenue laws," in R. S. 825, must be determined as they appear and not as similar words may be employed elsewhere in other connections.—Beckwith v. United States (16 C. Cls. R., 250).

(e) Where a district attorney prosecutes a suit arising under the revenue laws to a judgment, and the judgment is satisfied by deducting the amount thereof from a judgment recovered against the United States, he is entitled to his per cent.—Id.

(f) Dutiable merchandise imported. The importers, by means of false and fraudulent representations to the Secretary that the goods were imported for the use of the United States, induced the Secretary to issue a permit for the entry of the merchandise free of duty. Held, that the United States may maintain an action for the duties.—United States v. Boyd (24 Fed. Rep., 690).

(g) The United States may maintain indebitatus assumpsit for duties not bonded.—United States v. Howland (2 Cranch C. C., 508; 26 Fed. Cas., 396).

(h) Debt lies against the importer for the duties on smuggled goods. So, where by mistake, or accident, or fraud, no bond is given to secure them. So, where short duties only have been paid.—United States v. Lyman (1 Mason, 482; 26 Fed. Cas., 1024).

(i) An information of debt or an information in the nature of a bill of discovery and account is a proper remedy for the United States in such cases.—Id.

(j) A suit can not be maintained in admiralty in rem to enforce the payment of duties.—The Waterloo (Blatchf. & H., 114; 29 Fed. Cas., 399).

(k) Tea imported in 1816. Six days after importation goods sold. The purchaser gave bond for the duties; the goods were delivered to him, sold; the purchaser failed and the duties were not paid. Suit against importer. Held, that debt lies in favor of the United States against the importer for the duties due on goods imported. The right to duties accrues by the importation with intent to unlade, and immediately upon importation the duties become a personal charge and debt on the importer. A bond taken at the custom-house to secure the duties due by the importer is not an extinguishment of the debt so accruing, but merely collateral security for its payment.—United States v. Lyman (1 Mason, 482; 26 Fed. Cas., 1024).

(l) Recovery for duties and double values may be had in the same case.—Stockwell v. United States (3 Cliff., 284; 12 Int. Rev. Rec., 88; 23 Fed. Cas., 116).

(a) The United States have no specific lien on imported goods for the duties after having taken bond and security therefor and delivered the goods to the consignee.—United States v. Murdock (2 Cranch C. C., 486; 27 Fed. Cas., 34).

(b) A lien for duties can not be enforced by a libel in admiralty.—United States v. Three Hundred & Fifty Chests of Tea (12 Wheat., 486).

(c) In respect to a single consignment of goods covered by a single entry, the lien for the payment of the whole duties attaches to each and every part thereof, and where the whole consignment is warehoused under bond and parts of it are fraudulently withdrawn without the payment of duties the collector is entitled to hold the remainder until the duties on the entire consignment are paid, and is not bound to surrender the same upon tender of the amount of duties payable upon that part alone. Reversing T. D. 14815, G. A. 2498, and the Circuit Court.—Hendricks v. Schmidt (C. C. A.), (68 Fed. Rep., 425).

(d) Under section 62, act of 1799, the United States have no lien for duties incidentally due on custom-house bonds.—Harris v. Dennie (3 Pet., 292, 302).

(e) Where the answer alleged the demand for reappraisement and that the collector appointed to act on the reappraisement, a person who was not "a discreet and experienced merchant," was a personal enemy of the defendant, and not competent to act impartially, that the collector was notified of the defendant's objections, who refused to remove such person; the reappraisement was thereafter made by him with the general appraiser, but the answer contained no averment of protest and appeal from the liquidation based upon such reappraisement, held on demurrer that the collector had jurisdiction of the proceedings, that the irregularities alleged were, at most, errors in the proceedings, reviewable by the Secretary on protest and appeal, and that the answer was insufficient for want of any averment thereof.—United States v. Earnshaw (12 Fed. Rep., 283).

(f) The receipt of the collector, acknowledging payment of duties, is prima facie evidence, but not conclusive, of the fact of payment.—Johnson v. United States (5 Mason, 425; 13 Fed. Cas., 868).

(g) The collector's books in the handwriting of a deceased clerk are evidence for the United States.—United States v. Howland (2 Cranch C. C., 508; 26 Fed. Cas., 396).

(h) Although a bill of discovery will not lie against the United States, yet under R. S. 724, which is a reenactment of the act of 1789, section 15 (1 Stat., 82), the United States will be compelled to produce the official weigher's returns of the weight of merchandise, on the motion of a defendant, the defense being that the duties were fully paid, and the motion being supported by an affidavit that an inspection or copies of the returns is necessary to enable the defendant to prepare for trial.—United States v. Youngs (10 Ben., 264; 28 Fed. Cas., 801).

(i) The remedy is not confined to the production of books and papers upon the trial.—Id.

(j) Defendant made a demand on the collector for an inspection of the invoices, entries, warehouse bonds, entries for withdrawal and permits, and the custom-house memoranda of payment of duties, or in the books of the custom-house in which the payment of duties should be noted, if the same were paid. The collector refused. The importers proved that they had intrusted money to pay duties to one of their clerks and that their own books and papers did not furnish means of ascertaining the amount of duties nor what payments, if any, were made. The collector supported his refusal by reference to a regulation of the Treasury Department forbidding any person not connected with the custom-house to inspect or have access to or take copies of any custom-house paper, except upon written application to the collector, stating his personal interest in the application, and providing for a statement to be made on such application to be submitted to the collector and by him furnished to the applicant if deemed consistent with the public interest and necessary to the rights of individuals. (Regulations made under R. S. 251.) Held, that any regulations made under this section not inconsistent with law and fairly within its scope and purpose and not infringing upon any existing legal rights of individuals have the force of law.—United States v. Hutton (10 Ben., 268; 25 Int. Rev. Rec., 57; 26 Fed. Cas., 454).

(a) Such of these custom-house papers as belong to the merchant when delivered to the collector, as, for instance, invoices, continue his property, though required by law to be impounded at the custom-house, and he has a legal right to inspect them and also other custom-house papers, relating to his transactions with the custom-house in respect to his importations, under reasonable restrictions.—United States v. Hutton (10 Ben., 268; 25 Int. Rev. Rec., 57; 26 Fed. Cas., 454).

(b) Mandamus is the proper remedy to enforce such right of inspection, if denied.—Id.

(c) Mandamus was denied and order entered staying all proceedings in this case until twenty days after the papers described in the petition have been exhibited to the attorney for the defendant. If not exhibited within ten days after service of this order, alternative mandamus will issue requiring the collector to exhibit such papers or show cause why a peremptory mandamus should not issue.—Id.

(d) The burden of proof is on the Government to show that the defendant imported the articles without the payment of duties and also to show the quantity imported, and this must be done by a fair preponderance of evidence.—United States v. Koblitz (15 Fed. Rep., 900).

(e) A collector can not bind the United States by any acts beyond or contrary to the authority given him by the law.—Johnson v. United States (5 Mason, 425; 13 Fed. Cas., 868).

(f) In this case it appeared that the collector did not designate on the invoice the requisite number of sample bales for examination nor did the appraisers make proper examination of the merchandise, and the merchandise was, in fact, erroneously classified to the prejudice of the importer; but the appraiser made a certificate of appraisal in due form, and the collector made final liquidation of the duties on the basis of the appraiser's report, and the importer, having already paid the estimated duties, refused to pay the balance demanded. Held, that in a suit to recover such balance the importer could take advantage of none of these facts in his defense.—United States v. Chase (25 Int. Rev. Rec., 161; 25 Fed. Cas., 410).

(g) The decision of the collector is final and conclusive against all persons interested, upon the question necessarily decided, and in a suit for duties it is not necessary for the United States to show that the collector adopted the proper rate and amount of duties nor can the defendant impeach the liquidation by showing irregularities in the mode of appraisement.—Watt v. United States (15 Blatchf., 29; 29 Fed. Cas., 441).

(h) The fact that goods imported in 1870 were subject to a lower rate than that charged, and that action of the principal appraiser was irregular because he did not see the goods, can not be set up by the importer in an action to recover the difference between the amount paid and that of the final liquidation, where he was notified by the collector of the liquidation of the entries at the higher rate and did not take an appeal to the Secretary.—Chase v. United States (9 Fed. Rep., 882).

(a) When the United States sue to recover duties upon importations of bar steel, which was entered and duties paid as upon "scrap steel," and the goods were delivered before the final liquidation, the importer may set up facts which make the assessment illegal and is not bound to suffer judgment to be entered and proceed by suit to recover the amount paid at any time within ninety days thereafter.—United States v. Schlesinger (14 Fed. Rep., 682).

(b) Payment of duties to the Confederate government at places entirely in control of the insurrectionary power was not a discharge of the duties. The acknowledgment of belligerent rights did not make the rebel power a government, either de jure or de facto.—United States v. Seventeen Packages, Etc. (2 Am. Law Rev., 785; 27 Fed. Cas., 1029).

(c) Goods imported at Savannah May 7, 1861. The collector resigned January 31, 1861. The port of Savanuah was in the paramount, forcible, military possession of the Confederate authorities and the duties were paid to the collector of customs for the Confederate States. Held, that this did not operate to so suspend the laws as to relieve the goods from the payment of duties to the United States.—United States v. Stark (15 Int. Rev. Rec., 48; 11 Am. Law Reg. (N. S.), 37; 6 Am. Law Rev., 573; 27 Fed. Cas., 1293).

(d) An attempted payment in counterfeit money as cash is in law no payment.—United States v. Morgau (11 How., 154, 159).

(e) Importers drew checks for duties, showing on their face they were for the payment of duties, amounting to $12,438.75. The clerk to importer converted to his own use check amounting to $715.25 and sold it to other parties who paid duties with it. Held, that the face of the check showed that it was drawn on a special fund for this particular purpose, that the collector was put upon inquiry as to the diversion of the check, that he had sufficient funds belonging to the importer to satisfy the duties, and that the exaction was illegal.—T. D. 14815, G. A. 2498; reversed 68 Fed. Rep., 425.

(f) Certain importers of teas stated to a deputy collector that they would make a tender of a certain amount of duties due on same, and he told them they need not do so, as he would acknowledge the tender. Held no tender, especially as none was pleaded.—United States v. Nash (4 Cliff., 107; 27 Fed. Cas., 75).

(g) A deputy collector has no authority to make such a waiver.—Id.

(h) The judgment was originally for the amount due payable in gold coin for duties, and afterwards, during the term, amended by order of the court so as to make it "payable in gold and silver coin for duties." The objection is to the amendment and to the statement in the judgment that it is "payable in gold and silver coin for duties." The amendment during the term was clearly within the power of the court. The statement merely declared the legal effect of the judgment. The whole case shows that the judgment was for duties on imports, and nothing but gold and silver coin has been made a legal tender for this description of indebtedness to the Government.—Cheang-Kee v. United States (3 Wallace, 320, 326).

(i) Where two persons are bound jointly or jointly and severally in an obligation, the release of one of them will discharge the other.—United States v. Thompson (Gilp., 614; 28 Fed. Cas., 92).

(j) Where a separate judgment has been rendered against one obligor on a joint and several obligation, and a scire facias is issued to revive the judgment, the defendant can not avail himself of a release given his co-obligor subsequent to the original judgment.—Id.

(a) Where a joint judgment has been rendered against two defendants, a release of one of them subsequent to the judgment will discharge the other.—Id.

(b) Where a release is given under the act of March 2, 1831 (4 Stat., 467), it has the same effect and is subject to the same legal consequences as an ordinary release from a creditor to a debtor.—Id.

(c) When the United States is plaintiff and the defendant has pleaded a set-off which the acts of Congress have authorized him to do, no judgment can be rendered against the Government, although it may be judicially ascertained that on striking a balance of just demands the Government is indebted to the defendant in an ascertained amount.—United States v. Eckford (6 Wallace, 484, 491).

(d) In an action to recover duties the Government is not entitled to interest on the unpaid duties. The amount of the recovery can not exceed the amount claimed in the petition.—United States v. Koblitz (15 Fed. Rep., 900).

(e) Section 5, act of March 3, 1797 (1 Stat., 512), giving a preference to the United States in cases of insolvency, is not confined to persons accountable for public moneys, but extends to debtors of the United States generally.—United States v. Fisher (2 Cranch, 358, 385).

(f) Congress has power to make the law giving preference to the United States.—Id.

(g) Under the act of 1797 the United States is entitled to priority of payment, but not to a lien.—United States v. Hooe (3 Cranch, 73, 88).

(h) Under the act of March 3, 1797 (1 Stat., 512), and the act of March 2, 1799 (1 Stat., 627), section 65, the insolvency necessary to give the United States preference must be a legal insolvency and not a mere failure or inability to pay debts.—United States v. Hooe (3 Cranch, 73, 88; Prince v. Bartlett (8 Cranch, 431).

(i) The assignment mentioned in the act of 1797 is of all the property of the debtor, leaving him in a state equivalent to technical insolvency.—United States v. Hooe (3 Cranch, 73, 91).

(j) The word insolvency mentioned in the act of 1790 (1 Stat., 169) and repeated in the act of 1797, section 5 (1 Stat., 512, 515), and the act of 1799, section 65 (1 Stat., 627, 676), means a legal insolvency, which, whenever it occurs, the right of preference arises to the United States as well as in the other specified cases to which the acts of 1797 and 1799 have extended the cases of insolvency.—Thelusson v. Smith (2 Wheat., 396).

(k) If before the right of preference has accrued to the United States the debtor has made a bona fide conveyance of his estate to a third person, or has mortgaged it to secure a debt, or if his property has been seized under an execution, the property is divested out of the debtor and can not be made liable to the United States.—Id.

(l) In the distribution of a bankrupt's effects in this country the United States are entitled to a preference, although the debt was contracted by a foreigner in a foreign country and although the United States had proved their debt under a commission of bankruptcy and had voted for an assignee.—Harrison v. Sterry (5 Cranch, 289).

(m) One party being indebted to the United States and the firm being insolvent, having assigned all its property for the benefit of creditors, the United States have no right to priority of payment out of this fund under the act of 1799.—United States v. Hack (8 Pet., 271).

(a) The United States was the creditor of Jay Cooke, McCulloch & Co., doing business in London and consisting of several persons, some of them residing there. The others resided in this country and with another partner constituted the firm of Jay Cooke & Co. The members of the latter firm were duly declared bankrupt, and a trustee was appointed under the forty-third section of the bankrupt act of March 2, 1867. Held, that the relation of the bankrupt members of the firm of Jay Cooke, McCulloch & Co. to the United States are the same as if they were severally liable to the United States, and that the United States is entitled to the payment of its debt out of their separate property in preference or priority to all other debts due by them, or either of them, or by the firm of Jay Cooke & Co.—Lewis, Trustee v. United States (92 U. S., 618).

(b) The United States was under no obligation to prove its debt in the bankruptcy proceedings or pursue the partnership effects of Jay Cooke, McCulloch & Co., before filing this bill against the trustee, and the circuit court had original jurisdiction of the case thereby made, although the fund arose and the trustee was appointed under the bankrupt act.—Id.

(c) The form of the indebtedness is immaterial. It may be by simple contract, specialty, judgment, decree, or otherwise by record. The debt may be legal or equitable and have been incurred in this country or abroad. A valid indebtedness is as effectual in one form as another. No discrimination is made by the statute. The debtors may be joint or several or principals and sureties.—Lewis, Trustee, v. United States (92 U. S., 618, 621).

(d) Under the act of 1797 a corporation may be included under the word person. The filing of a bill and the appointment of receivers, the purpose of a suit being merely to collect a debt, do not amount to such a transfer of the property of the debtor as is contemplated by that act.—Beaston v. The Farmers' Bank of Delaware (12 Pet., 102).

(e) Under the act of 1799 if the assignees of an insolvent debtor have notice of a claim of the United States they are not protected by an order of a court to distribute the funds to other creditors.—Field v. United States (9 Pet., 182).

(f) A judgment gives to the judgment creditor a lien on the debtor's lands and a preference over all judgment creditors, but the law defeats the preference in favor of the United States in the cases specified in the act of 1799.—Thelusson v. Smith (2 Wheat., 396).

(g) The United States are not entitled to preference upon the ground of the debtor having made an assignment for the benefit of creditors unless it is proved that the debtor has made an assignment of all his property.—United States v. Howland (4 Wheat., 108).

(h) Where the deed of assignment conveys only the property mentioned in the schedule annexed, and the schedule does not purport to contain all the property of the party who made it, the onus probandi is thrown on the United States to show that the assignment embraces all the property of the debtor.—United States v. Howland (4 Wheat., 108).

(i) The United States is entitled to priority of payment out of the effects of its bankrupt insolvent debtor whether he be principal or surety or be solely, or only jointly with others, liable, and it is immaterial where the debt was contracted.—Lewis, Trustee, v. United States (92 U. S., 618).

(j) H. was a surety of B., collector, who died February 2, 1797. The act of priority was passed March 3, 1797. The accounts of B. were adjusted at the Treasury and balance found due after the passage of the act. The act did not apply to a balance adjusted at the Treasury, although the debt was previously contracted.—United States v. Bryan (9 Cranch, 374).

(a) A party who obtains from a disbursing officer public moneys without right thereto and with full knowledge that they are such becomes indebted to the United States within the meaning of the act of 1797, and in the event of his insolvency the United States is entitled to priority out of his assets.—Bayne v. United States (93 U. S., 642).

(b) Where a partnership firm, being indebted for duties, makes an assignment of all their effects for the payment of their debts, for which the social fund is inadequate, this act is an act of insolvency, quoad the social fund, under the act which gives the United States preference over other creditors "in all cases of insolvency," and it seems that such an assignment amounts to an act of general insolvency and that the private property of the individual partners will also be subjected to the payment, in the first instance, of the debts due to the United States in the event of the inadequacy of the partnership fund.—United States v. Shelton (1 Brock, 517; 27 Fed. Cas., 1056).

(c) The revenue laws give a preference over other creditors in several cases, but must not be so construed as to destroy a prior legal claim.—United States v. Sheriff of Charleston (Bee, 196; 27 Fed. Cas., 1065).

(d) Under the act of March 3, 1797 (1 Stat., 512), which is not controlled by the act of 1799, the priority of the United States in cases of a general assignment by their debtor comprehends a bond for duties executed before the assignment, but payable afterwards.—United States v. The State Bank of North Carolina (6 Pet., 29).

(e) One party being indebted to the United States and the firm being insolvent, having assigned all its property for the benefit of creditors, the United States have no right of priority out of this fund.—United States v. Hack (8 Pet., 271).

(f) If the assignees of an insolvent debtor have notice of a claim of the United States, they are not protected by an order of a State court to distribute the fund to other creditors.—Field v. United States (9 Pet., 182).

ACTIONS TO RECOVER EXCESS OF DUTIES PAID (PRIOR TO ENACTMENT OF CUSTOMS ADMINISTRATIVE ACT).

(g) At common law an action for money had and received lies against a person who withholds goods from another, colore officii, upon an illegal claim or demand, and thus compels him to pay money to obtain them. The act of March 3, 1839, took away that right as respected suits against collectors to recover duties illegally exacted upon importations.—Knoedler v. Schell (4 Blatchf., 484; 20 How. Pr., 216; 14 Fed. Cas., 780).

(h) Under section 5, act of March 3, 1857 (11 Stat., 192), an appeal is not a condition precedent to a right of action against a collector to recover back duties illegally exacted by him where the question is as to the rate or amount of duty, it being conceded that some duty is payable, but the statute applies only to cases where the question is whether the goods are liable to any duty or are exempt.—Schmeider v. Barney (13 Blatchf., 37; 21 Fed. Cas., 702).

(i) Whether a suit can be brought where the Secretary unreasonably neglects to make and communicate a decision on an appeal, Quære.—Id.

(j) Where merchandise is withdrawn on the written authorization of the importer by third parties, who pay the duties thereon, in an action by the importer to recover the duties illegally exacted the duties thus paid may be recovered upon the assumption that they were paid in behalf of the importer.—Simpson v. Schell (14 Fed. Rep., 286).

(a) The protest and appeal and bill of particulars required by R. S. 2931, 3012, ordinarily furnish all the necessary information as to the question actually to be tried.—Muser v. Robertson (17 Fed. Rep., 500).

(b) The liquidation upon each entry is the foundation of an entire cause of action, and the importer can not split it up and make it the subject of different suits.—Hennequin v. Barney (24 Fed. Rep., 580).

(c) The right of action to recover duties is purely statutory. A stipulation made between the importer and the deputy collector, after due protest and appeal in the case of one entry, that the duties and charges in succeeding entries should be controlled by the decision of the Secretary therein, is not a substantial compliance with the statute, and the importer can not maintain suit after a decision in his favor by the Secretary and the refusal of the collector to abide by the stipulation.—Haynes v. Brewster (D. C.), (46 Fed. Rep., 471).

(d) A voluntary refunding to an importer, whose protest was in the alternative, of the excess of duty collected according to one of his claims and the discontinuance of a suit brought for the collection of such excess, in the absence of any release or evidence of accord and satisfaction, will not preclude him from maintaining another suit to recover the remaining excess according to his other claim.—Robertson v. Edelhoff (C. C. A.), (91 Fed. Rep., 642).

(e) When an action is brought under R. S. 3011 as amended by the act of February 27, 1877 (19 Stat., 247), to recover back an excess of duties paid under protest, the plaintiff must under R. S. 2931, as a condition precedent to his recovery, show not only due protest and appeal to the Secretary, but also that the action was brought within the time required by statute.—Arnson v. Murphy (115 U. S., 579).

(f) Prior acts giving persons the right to sue without similar conditions did not confer on them any such vested right so to sue, in regard to transactions which accrued before the passage of the act of 1896, as that they still could sue, irrespective of the conditions, after the time when this act by its terms was to take effect.—The Collector v. Hubbard (12 Wallace, 1, 15).

(g) An action can not be maintained against a collector of customs to recover duties alleged to have been illegally exacted in 1892 upon an importation appraised according to law, no reappraisement being asked for and the duties being assessed upon the valuation so arrived at.—Schoenfeld v. Hendricks (152 U. S., 691).

(h) In 1888 a right of action accrued to an importer if he paid the duties in order to get possession of his merchandise and if he made his protest in the form required within ten days after the ascertainment and liquidation of the duties.—Saltonstall v. Birtwell (164 U. S., 54).

(i) Under the act of July 11, 1798 (1 Stat., 594), a judgment by default on a collector's bond, the writ not having been served fourteen days before the return thereof, is erroneous.—Dobynes & Morton v. United States (3 Cranch, 241).

(j) Where an importer obtains judgments in the name of his agent against a collector for an excess of duties collected on goods imported in the name of such agent, and the agent refuses to assign the judgments to his principal, the latter has no adequate remedy at law, and a court of equity has jurisdiction to compel such assignment.—Burke v. Davis (C. C.), (63 Fed. Rep., 456).

(a) Suits against a collector to recover duties are to be regarded as actions against him in fact as well as in name.—Andrae v. Redfield (12 Blatchf., 407; 1 Fed. Cas., 856).

(b) In an action to recover excess of duties, where the claim embraces items of account too numerous for the consideration of the court and jury, a reference will be made to an officer of the court to adjust the same.—Benkard v. Schell (5 Int. Rev. Rec. (1867), 3; 3 Fed. Cas., 192).

(c) Where the plaintiff through a clerk entered goods at the custom-house as cotton goods and made the usual oath that the entry contained a just and true account of the goods, and upon the faith thereof they were delivered to him without examination, and nine months after the duties were paid the plaintiff gave notice to the collector that the goods were silk hose not subject to duty, held that the mistake of fact, if any, having arisen from the culpable negligence of the plaintiff, whereby the Government was no longer in a condition to ascertain by examination the character of the goods, the money could not be recovered.—Bend v. Hoyt (13 Pet., 263).

(d) A new trial was granted, on payment of costs, on account of loss of papers in the custom-house and because it was doubtful whether the truth of the transaction appeared on the trial for want of the proper preparation of the defense.—Boker v. Bronson (4 Blatchf., 472; 44 Hunt Mer. Mag., 74; 3 Fed. Cas., 807).

(e) Invoices of shipments in July and August (this shipment being made in May) are admissible to show the market value of sugar.—Alfonso v. United States (2 Story, 421; 1 Fed. Cas., 395).

(f) Although a bill of discovery will not lie against the United States, yet under R. S. 724, which is a reenactment of the act of 1789, section 15 (1 Stat., 82), the United States will be compelled to produce the official weigher's returns of the weight of merchandise on the motion of a defendant sued for a balance of duties alleged to be due thereon, the defense being that the duties were fully paid and the motion being supported by affidavit that an inspection of copies of the returns is necessary to enable the defendant to prepare for trial.—United States v. Youngs (10 Ben., 264; 28 Fed. Cas., 801).

(g) Regulations of the Secretary, article 625, requires the officer who has charge of the inspection and deliveries from vessels to make returns in writing of each delivery within three days, and article 517 requires the assistant storekeeper, or whoever was in charge of the warehouse, to keep accurate account of all goods received, delivered, and transferred. Held, that the records kept under those regulations were competent evidence without the testimony of the individuals who made the entries.—Grandmange v. Schell (32 Fed. Rep., 655).

(h) Letters from the Secretary of the Treasury to a collector of customs affirming an assessment of duty, and to an importer acknowledging the receipt of his appeal from the collector's assessment, are admissible in evidence to show that the appeal was taken.—Robertson v. Downing (127 U. S., 607, 613).

(i) Secondary evidence of the instructions of the President to the Secretary of the Treasury admitted after evidence tending to show the destruction of the written original instructions.—Williams v. United States (1 How., 290, 298).

(j) Prices current obtained from the agent of a manufacturer or from dealers in manufactured articles generally, and which have been prepared and used by the parties furnishing them in the ordinary course of their business, are so far evidence of the value of the articles mentioned in them as that they may be submitted to the jury as "throwing light" on the matter, as "some guides to candid men" and for their "consideration." And this rule was held to apply so far as that the comparative value at the town of manufacture (Rheims) and at the capital of the country (Paris) of champagne wines made by one manufacturer (Cliquot) was allowed to be shown by the prices current giving the value of that made by others (Mumm, Moet & Chandon), it not appearing by evidence in the case set forth in the bill of exceptions, or by any admission of the judge upon the bill, that such evidence was given, but that the articles were the same in price, kind, and quality.—Cliquot's Champagne (3 Wallace, 114, 140).

(a) In a suit to recover duties paid under protest, where the only question tried was whether in reappraisement proceedings the importer was denied rights secured to him by law, held that it was proper to admit in evidence a protest filed by the importer with the reappraisers, as a paper showing what rights the importer claimed, and especially his claim that the merchant appraiser was not qualified.—Hedden v. Iselin (142 U. S., 676).

(b) A report made at the request of customs officials, without express instructions from the Treasury Department, generally as to what charges were properly exacted, based upon information obtained from merchants and others, is inadmissible in evidence as not forming a proper standard by which to determine what charges were properly made in the case in hand.—Benkard v. Schell (5 Int. Rev. Rec. (1867), 3; 3 Fed. Cas., 192).

(c) A refusal to produce papers admitted to be in a party's possession raises the strongest inference that the papers if produced would operate against the person holding them.—Bartlett v. Kane (Taney, 186; 2 Fed. Cas., 971).

(d) The act of August 30, 1842 (5 Stat., 548), section 17, makes it in such a case as this conclusive proof that the papers when produced would be demonstrative against the pretensions of the party having them in his possession.—Id.

(e) On an appeal from the Circuit Court to the Circuit Court of Appeals it is an irregularity to address the citation to the importing firm instead of to the individual partners, but the irregularity is cured by the general appearance of the partners in the Circuit Court of Appeals without making any objection.—United States v. Hopewell (C. C. A.), (51 Fed. Rep., 798).

(f) The United States was properly substituted in this court as a party defendant in place of the Secretary of the Treasury.—Anglo-Californian Bank v. United States (175 U. S., 37).

(g) Judgments against collectors for excess of duties are not "claims against the United States" within the meaning of R. S. 3477.—Burke v. Davis (C. C.), (63 Fed. Rep., 456).

(h) Even if such judgments are claims against the United States, R. S. 3477 does not affect assignments to the real owner of the judgments, made by an agent in whose name they were rendered, by order of a court, since such statute applies only to voluntary assignments.—Id.

(i) This certificate may be granted by a different judge from the one before whom the judgment was rendered.—Cox v. Barney (14 Blatchf., 289; 6 Fed. Cas., 675).

(j) It having been the practice of the defendants in cases against collectors for excess of duties not to ask for a certificate until the judgment was about to be paid by the Treasury Department, no laches or delay can be alleged against the defendant for not applying for a certificate before the issuing of an execution.—Id.

(k) Where a collector has exacted money in the performance of his official duty, under the directions of the Secretary of the Treasury, it is the duty of the court to grant a certificate of probable cause, leaving the consequences to take care of themselves.—Id.

(a) A judgment having been rendered against a collector of customs in a "charges and commissions" case, and the judgment not having been paid by the Treasury Department, the plaintiff issued an execution against the defendant. The defendant applied for a certificate of probable cause. Held, that the application must be granted.—Id.

(b) A suit against a collector is a private suit, and there is no claim against the Government until a certificate of probable cause has been obtained from the court. Then the Government assumes a certain liability.—White v. Arthur (10 Fed. Rep., 80).

(c) The acts of 1799 (1 Stat., 627) and 1845 (5 Stat., 727) do not prevent the actual owner of goods imported from suing for the recovery of duties paid under protest by the consignee and do not require such suits to be brought in the name of the consignee.—Mason v. Kane (Taney, 173; 24 Hunt Mer. Mag., 717; 16 Fed. Cas., 1044).

(d) A person who purchases merchandise from an importer while in bond and pending an appeal may sue for the excess of duties claimed to have been paid.—Castro v. Seeberger (C. C.), (40 Fed. Rep., 531).

(e) An assignee of an unliquidated claim for duties alleged to have been illegally exacted can not maintain a suit against the collector, for the assignment of such a claim is void under R. S. 3477.—The John Shillito Co. v. McClung (C. C. A.), (51 Fed. Rep., 868).

(f) The action under R. S. 3011 as amended by the act of February 27, 1877 (19 Stat., 240, 247), authorizing suits to be brought to recover an excess of duties paid, can not be maintained by a stranger suing solely in virtue of the purchase of claims from those who did not see fit to prosecute them themselves.—Hager v. Swayne (149 U. S., 242).

(g) The purchaser of an imported article in bond pending an appeal from the assessment of duties upon it, which is subsequently overruled, can, on paying the duties as assessed, maintain an action in his own name against the collector to recover an excess in the payment exacted.—Seeberger v. Castro (153 U. S., 32).

(h) A suit against a collector was brought in time as to two importations, but prematurely brought as to a third importation, in that ninety days since the appeal had not elapsed and no decision of the Secretary made, and as to a fourth importation in that no such decision, or an appeal, or protest (also required) had been made. Subsequently to the commencement of this suit such protest, appeal, and decision were made. Thereafter complaint and bill of particulars and answer were served. The collector refunded the duties sued for as to the first two importations, but refused to refund as to the last two, solely on the ground that as to them the suit was prematurely brought. Held, that a recovery was authorized by R. S. 2931, 3011, and 3012 when construed together.—Moller v. Merritt (29 Fed. Rep., 678).

(i) Whether under the act of March 3, 1857 (11 Stat., 192), a suit can be brought when the Secretary unreasonably neglects to make and communicate a decision on an appeal, Quære.—Schmeider v. Barney (13 Blatchf., 37; 21 Fed. Cas., 702).

(j) Under said act an appeal was taken from the decision of the collector as to the rate and amount of duties. On the trial of a suit to recover the duties the importer gave evidence tending to show that he was justified in considering his appeal as having been decided against him, but the court directed a verdict for the defendant. Held, that the question as to whether there was evidence of a decision by the Secretary upon the appeal ought to have been submitted to the jury.—Id.

(a) Where in June, 1863, the same precise question had been decided by the Secretary, on appeal, against the importer, and the Secretary had published a circular to that effect, and in September and October, 1863, the importer presented the same question to the Secretary on appeal, and up to January, 1866, he had made no response, the importer was justified in considering his appeal as having been decided against him.—Id.

(b) The act of February 26, 1845, restored the common-law right of a suit against a collector to recover duties illegally exacted, which had been taken away by the act of March 3, 1839 (5 Stat., 348), section 2, and under it an execution can issue against a defendant to recover from him personally the amount of a judgment obtained against him for duties illegally exacted.—Knoedler v. Schell (4 Blatchf., 484; 20 How. Pr., 216; 14 Fed. Cas., 780).

(c) A collector who demands and receives illegal duties which are paid to him under protest is liable in an action of assumpsit for the amounts thus collected by him.—Schmeider v. Barney (13 Blatchf., 37; 21 Fed. Cas., 702).

(d) The construction of a tariff act by the Treasury Department is not conclusive upon the collector or the importer, and the collector is not justified by such instructions in imposing duties not warranted by law.—Lennig v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 125; 15 Fed. Cas., 312).

(e) The law imposed a duty of 15 per cent ad valorem on casks of sirup of sugar cane. The collector, under instructions from the Secretary, required the importer to give a bond for the above, or, should it be required, of 3 cents a pound. Held, that the instructions of the Secretary not in accordance with law do not justify the illegal acts of the collector.—Tracy & Belastier v. Swartwout (10 Pet., 80).

(f) After the act of 1839 (5 Stat., 348) no action could be maintained against a collector for the exaction of excessive duties, after the money had been paid into the Treasury, until the act of 1845.—Curtis v. Fiedler (2 Black, 461).

(g) The common-law right of action against the collector to recover back duties illegally exacted is taken away by statute and a remedy given based on statutory liability which is exclusive.—Arnson v. Murphy (109 U. S., 238).

(h) Where the complaint states that the plaintiff paid under protest, and a bill of particulars is also served according to R. S. 3012, which shows that the protest and appeal were in writing and in time, held sufficient under the first clause of R. S. 3011.—Muser v. Robertson (17 Fed. Rep., 500).

(i) In an action to recover alleged excess of duties exacted by the collector, held that an averment that a certain sum of money in excess of the legal duties was exacted of the plaintiff and paid by him under compulsion in order to obtain the goods was an averment of fact, sufficient under the Code (New York) as at common law, and not a statement of a conclusion of law merely; so, also, of averments that the legal duty on certain goods was a certain specific sum and that a certain other specific sum was exacted by the collector.—Muser v. Robertson (17 Fed. Rep., 500).

(j) Actions to recover duties paid under protest are purely statutory.—Wedemeyer v. Lancaster (30 Fed. Rep., 670).

(k) Where the petition shows on its face that the plaintiff has taken all the steps antecedent to a suit prescribed by R. S. 2931 and 3011, and furthermore contains a statement of all those matters required to be contained in a bill of particulars under R. S. 3012, it is not demurrable on the ground that it does not state a good cause of action.—Id.

(a) The facts required to be stated in the bill of particulars need not be stated in the petition any more fully than they are required to be stated in the bill.—Id.

(b) Where the petition stated that the defendant on a given day required the plaintiff, as importer, to pay a given sum in excess of the lawful duties on certain described goods which were invoiced on a certain day, shipped from a certain place on a certain steamer, and were entered in the custom-house on a given date, held that it was not demurrable on the ground that it merely stated legal conclusions and did not state any facts in an issuable form.—Wedemeyer v. Lancaster (30 Fed. Rep., 670).

(c) An allegation that a collector "exacted" certain tonnage duties is equivalent to saying that they were "ascertained and liquidated" by him, as provided by R. S. 2931, and an allegation that the grounds of the objection to the decision of the collector were specified in the notice to him "clearly and distinctly" is equivalent to saying they were "distinctly and specifically" set forth therein, as required in section 2931.—Laidlaw v. Abraham (C. C.), (43 Fed. Rep., 297).

(d) It is not necessary that the plaintiff show by his declaration that he has brought limited by R. S. 2931, although that must appear as a condition precedent to recovery.—Beard v. Porter (124 U. S., 437, 443).

(e) Under the practice in New York, allegations in the complaint that the plaintiff "duly" protested in writing against the exaction of duty and duly appealed to the Secretary of the Treasury, and that ninety days had not elapsed at the commencement of the suit since the decision of the Secretary, if not denied by the answer are to be taken as true and are sufficient to prevent the defendant from taking the ground at the trial that the protest was premature or that the plaintiff must give proof of an appeal, or of a decision thereon, or of its date.—Robertson v. Perkins (129 U. S., 233).

(f) Where plaintiff fails to serve a bill of particulars within thirty days after defendant's appearance, as required by R. S. 3012, judgment non pros. must be entered against him.—Castner v. Magone, Conant v. Same, Avis v. Same (32 Fed. Rep., 578).

(g) The court has no power to grant an application to serve a bill of particulars nunc pro tunc after the expiration of thirty days from defendant's appearance.—Id.

(h) R. S. 3012 is mandatory, not directory, in its provisions. Pott. v. Arthur (15 Blatchf., 314), modified and distinguished.—Id.

(i) The original bill of particulars had the following phrase at the bottom: "E. & O. E. Above intended to include all entries upon which duties and fees were paid by plaintiff to defendant between April 8, 1861, and September 8, 1864." Held, that the sufficiency of the notice was to be determined on the trial and not on motion to amend the bill of particulars.—Rickard v. Barney (32 Fed. Rep., 581).

(j) In an action against a collector he obtained an order of court requiring the plaintiffs within a specified time to serve a bill of particulars of their claim, and that in default of such service the defendant should have judgment of non pros. against the plaintiffs, provided that, on the proof by them of certain service, on their compliance with the conditions then prescribed by the order they should not be required to furnish such bill. More than three years having elapsed and no bill meanwhile having been served, the defendant notified a second motion for such bill, and, in default of the service thereof within five days, for judgment of non pros. The plaintiffs noticed a counter motion for the production of certain papers, under R. S. 724, and, on failure of their production, that this action be continued and not placed on the day calendar. Upon the argument the plaintiffs produced affidavits which they claimed showed the existence of the circumstances mentioned and a substantial compliance by them with the conditions prescribed by the order for the nonservice of the bill. The court held that the plaintiffs had not shown the existence of these circumstances, and therefore had not complied with these conditions, but, as they might have omitted through some excusable negligence to state in their affidavits the facts showing the existence of such circumstances, extended the plaintiffs' time to comply with the terms of the order for the bill five days from the date of the service of an order granting this extension, but ordered that in default of such service, and on proof thereof, the defendant should have judgment of non pros.—Schmieder v. Barney (32 Fed. Rep., 657).

(a) Under R. S. 3012, construed in connection with R. S. 954, this court has power in a suit to recover duties to allow a bill of particulars to be served after the expiration of thirty days after notice of the appearance of the defendant and to allow a defective bill of particulars to be amended.—Pott v. Arthur (15 Blacthf., 314; 19 Fed. Cas., 1131).

(b) Two suits were pending the same parties for the recovery of duties illegally exacted. The first suit was brought within ninety days after the decision of the Secretary on the appeal. The second suit was not commenced until more than a year after the decision of the Secretary. The importer did not know at the time of the commencement of the first suit that any decision had been made by the Secretary on the appeal covering the entries in the second suit. A bill of particulars in each suit was served within the statutory time. The plaintiff moved to amend the bill of particulars in the first suit by adding or transferring thereto 11 entries contained in the bill of particulars in the second. Held, that amendments will not be allowed which introduce a new cause in this case, where the granting of the amendment would be to take the entries sued on in the second suit out of the limitation.—Dieckerhoff v. Robertson (29 Fed. Rep., 781).

(c) The bill of particulars may be amended by increasing the amount of the duties claimed in case of reasonable excuse for a bona fide mistake, but the specific cause of error or mistake should be shown, and why the original was not made in proper form.—Dieckerhoff v. Robertson (32 Fed. Rep., 73).

(d) The act of February 18, 1867, section 1, provides that all suits or prosecutions that have been or shall be commenced under any prior act of Congress repealed or supplied by the act of July 18, 1866, for acts committed previous to that date, shall be tried and disposed of as if the act of July 18 had not been passed. Section 26 of that act, requiring service of a bill of particulars within thirty days after notice of defendant's appearance, reenacted in R. S. 3012. Held, that the question of the repeal of this section by the act of February 18, 1867, was not before the court on a motion to amend the bill of particulars.—Rickards v. Barney (32 Fed. Rep., 581).

(e) Action begun in January, 1866. Bill of particulars served in February, 1867, an amended bill in December of the same year, and a further amended bill November 3, 1882. The earliest entry was of date April 29, 1861. In the latter part of 1887 the plaintiff moved to further amend. Neither the merchandise, the vessel, nor the dates of the invoice, entry, payment, or protest were, as to the items forming the subject of the motion, stated in the bill. In fact, the dates as proposed were January, 1861. Held, that under R. S. 954, providing for amendments for defects of form, the court has power to allow amendments of the bill of particulars after thirty days, the discretion was to be exercised only in extreme cases, and the plaintiff was not within the rule.—Rickards v. Barney (32 Fed. Rep., 581).

(a) A motion to amend the bill of particulars by increasing the amount claimed therein for excess of duty will be denied where it appears that the mistake in making up the original statement was entirely that of the plaintiff's agent or broker and was in no way induced by any misinformation furnished at the custom-house.—Dieckerhoff v. Robertson (32 Fed. Rep., 758).

(b) The bill of particulars did not contain the name of the importer or importers, the place from which the merchandise was imported, the date of the invoice, and the date of the payment of the duties claimed to have been exacted in excess. Held insufficient and defective and a judgment of non pros. granted.—Sherman v. Hedden (32 Fed. Rep., 756).

(c) Where the bill of particulars does not contain all the items required by R. S. 3012, the court is without power to grant leave to amend nunc pro tunc.—Id.

(d) Matters of estoppel in pais may be set up in actions at law as well as in suits in equity.—John Shillito Co. v. McClung (C. C.), (45 Fed. Rep., 778).

(e) An estoppel in pais operates only in favor of the person actually misled, and an assignee of a claim for duties paid can not rely upon an estoppel alleged to arise from acts of the collector which misled the assignor.—The John Shillito Co. v. McClung (C. C. A.), (51 Fed. Rep., 868).

(f) In an action to recover duties illegally exacted, where the issue was whether certain articles were within the commercial designation "hemstitched handkerchiefs," defendant offered a witness who for many years had been engaged in the manufacture of cotton handkerchiefs and articles similar to those in question, but who had never bought or sold imported handkerchiefs or been present when they were bought or sold. Held, that he was, nevertheless, competent to testify by what name the imported articles in question were known at the time the act was passed, for his want of personal experience in handling imported goods only affects the weight of his testimony. Reversing the Circuit Court.—Erhardt v. Ballin (C. C. A.), (55 Fed. Rep., 968).

(g) In an action to recover duties, which action is based on a reliquidation, the fact that the appraiser who made the examination can not at the trial identify particular samples as belonging to particular invoices is immaterial when the goods consist of lenses for optical instruments which are exactly alike in all invoices and the testimony further shows that at the time of making the reexamination the appraiser had each sample marked as from the particular invoice.—United States v. Fox (D. C.), (53 Fed. Rep., 531).

(h) To entitle the plaintiff to recover for excess of duties paid, he must establish three facts: (1) That the duties were not authorized by law; (2) that he, at or before payment of the duties, made a protest in writing setting forth distinctly and specifically the grounds of objection to the payment of the duties; (3) that the payment was made in order to enable him to obtain possession of the goods.—Drake v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 116; 7 Fed. Cas., 1052).

(i) In a suit to recover an alleged excess of duties it is incumbent on the plaintiff to show: First, that he protested; second, that he appealed; third, that he brought his suit within the time required.—Arnson v. Murphy (24 Fed. Rep., 355).

(a) In an action to recover duties paid, on the ground that there was a shortage in the importation, the only evidence consisted of the returns to the collector of the subordinate customs official, which were conflicting on the question of the existence of a shortage, and an ex parte affidavit of the master, indorsed on the manifest, that certain packages were "short shipped." At the close of the evidence each party requested the court to direct a verdict, and the defendant's motion was granted. Held, no error.—Merwin v. Magone (C. C. A.), (70 Fed. Rep., 776).

(b) An illegal exaction can not be proved by the testimony of a customs official that he adjusted the accounts of overpaid duties from the papers on file together with a statement of the same, where he produces but a part of the entries and no proof of the payment of such alleged excessive charges is made by the plaintiff.—Benkard v. Schell (5 Int. Rev. Rec. (1867), 3; 3 Fed. Cas., 192).

(c) In such a case proof by a customs official of the practice of the Government in respect to appeals to the Secretary and the refunding of duties is admissible in evidence as bearing on the construction of the law.—Id.

(d) Proof was admissible that the appraisers did not examine or see any of the original packages, but only samples (of sugar) which had been taken out several weeks before and which could not afford a true criterion of their value.—Converse v. Burgess (18 How., 413).

(e) It is competent to inquire of a witness, in a suit to recover duties paid under the act of July 14, 1862 (12 Stat., 543), section 9, whether the words "of similar description" is a commercial term, and, if so, what is its commercial meaning; but it is not competent to inquire whether the particular goods alleged to have been improperly subjected to duty were of similar description to delaines.—Greenleaf v. Goodrich (101 U. S., 278).

(f) A statute which requires the dutiable value of goods to be reached by adding to the market value of the goods the cost of transportation and other defined charges does not authorize the appraiser to reach the amount of such charges by an estimate of percentage, and an importer who pays duties on an importation thus calculated may, in an action brought to recover such as were illegally exacted, show wherein such estimate or percentage was illegal and excessive.—Robertson v. Frank Bros. & Co. (132 U. S., 17).

(g) In an action tried in 1890 to recover duties paid in 1861 on an importation of barèges, grenadines, maretz, and merinos, the plaintiff introduced no samples of imported goods nor any evidence as to their loss or destruction, and gave no reason why they were not preserved and produced. He showed to one of his witnesses samples of grenadines, barèges, etc., but without connecting them in any way with the importations, and questioned the witness concerning them. Held, that their admission tended to mislead the jury and was error, and that such evidence came within the rule that "a fact which renders the existence or nonexistence of any fact in issue probable by reason of its general resemblance thereto, and not by reason of its being connected therewith, it is deemed not to be relevant to such fact."—Barney v. Rickard (157 U. S., 352).

(h) An expert called to testify as to the processes of manufacture, quality, and similarity of certain fabrics from an inspection of them may be shown other samples of like fabrics by the adverse party and asked his opinion as to the kind of goods they are and how they were manufactured, and his opinion may be contradicted by such party to impair his testimony as an expert.—Greenleaf v. Goodrich (1 Hask., 586; 21 Int. Rev. Rec., 324; 10 Fed. Cas., 1168).

(a) The act of 1857 did not change the legal effect of the act of 1846. The plaintiffs were confined to testimony as to the commercial designation of an article at and previous to the passage of the act of 1846.—Christ v. Schell (17 Leg. Int., 350; 5 Fed. Cas., 653).

(b) In weighing the testimony of witnesses as to trade usage, the jury should consider the extent to which any of the witnesses may have an interest which might color their evidence.—Dodge v. Hedden (C. C.), (42 Fed. Rep., 446).

(c) In considering the question of chief use it is the duty of the jury to give more attention to the course of trade in the original distribution of the goods among those who import them than to the guesses of individuals as to the various uses to which the articles may be put by individual consumers.—Meyer v. Cadwalader (C. C.), (49 Fed. Rep., 26).

(d) Though one of the witnesses was at the time of the trial engaged in the handkerchief business and had been prior to 1881, it was proper to exclude the question, What was included in the term "hemmed handkerchiefs" in 1883? where it was shown that from 1881 to 1885 he was wholly engaged in a different business.—Erhardt v. Ballin (C. C. A.), (55 Fed. Rep., 968).

(e) In the absence of evidence of the entry of a protest in writing, a verdict for plaintiff in an action to recover excess of duties will be set aside.—Bodart v. Schell (33 Fed. Rep., 825).

(f) Where, in a writ of error, exception was taken to the admission of the testimony of merchants and appraisers in Boston in respect to the market value of sugars in Cuba, it was held that the market value being a question of opinion as well as of fact such testimony was admissible as being in the nature of evidence by experts and of the same degree as the evidence of merchants in Cuba.—Alfonso v. United States (2 Story, 421; 1 Fed. Cas., 395).

(g) In any action to recover duties claimed to have been illegally exacted because the merchant appraiser in the reappraisement was not familiar with the character and value of the goods, as required by R. S. 2930, the importer may, if the objection was taken in his protest, show by the testimony of the appraiser himself that the provisions of said section were not complied with. Sustaining the circuit court.—Magone v. Origet (C. C. A.), (70 Fed. Rep., 778).

(h) Under R. S. 2930 the merchant appraiser must be a person familiar with the character and value of the goods, and under R. S. 2931 he must open, examine, and appraise the packages designated by the collector and ordered to be sent to the public stores for examination.—Oelbermann v. Merritt (123 U. S., 356); Mustin v. Cadwalader (id., 369).

(i) An importer has a right to show that these provisions have not been complied with, and the merchant appraiser is a competent witness for this purpose.—Id.

(j) The court properly excluded a question propounded to the merchant appraiser as to whether or not he and the General Appraiser did not agree to apply the valuation of one case in each invoice to the entire importation of which it was a part, and also the question whether or not those goods in the several cases were of the same character as to value.—Origet v. Hedden (155 U. S., 228, 235).

(k) Whether there is sufficient proof of agency to warrant the admission of the acts and declarations of the agent in evidence in a preliminary question for the court.—Cliquot's Champagne (3 Wallace, 114, 140).

(a) Whatever is done by an agent in reference to the business in which he is at the time employed, and within the scope of his authority, is said or done by the principal, and may be proved, as well in criminal as in civil cases, in all respects as if the principal were the actor or the speaker.—Id.

(b) What an importer's agent says to an assistant appraiser, or conversations had subsequent to the appraisement, are not competent evidence.—Origet v. Hedden (155 U. S., 228, 234).

(c) Dictionaries are not of themselves evidence, but they may be referred to as aids to the memory and understanding of the court.—In re Wise (C. C.), (73 Fed. Rep., 183).

(d) The court takes judicial notice of the ordinary meaning of words in our tongue, and dictionaries are admitted, not as evidence, but only as aids to the memory and understanding of the court.—Nix v. Hedden (149 U. S., 304).

(e) In an action against a collector of customs to recover the amount of duties alleged to have been exacted in violation of law, the burden of proof is upon the plaintiff.—Arthur v. Unkart (96 U. S., 118).

(f) The presumption is that the decisions of the collector and Secretary are correct, and the plaintiff must overcome that presumption by a fair preponderance of proof as to the commercial use of the term at the date of the act.—Hutton v. Schell (25 Int. Rev. Rec., 168; 12 Fed. Cas., 1099).

(g) A collector who has compelled an importer to pay a higher rate of duty than that imposed by law on such articles as are named in the invoice has the burden of proof to show the authority under which such higher duty was exacted.—Wilkinson v. Greely (1 Curt., 439; 29 Fed. Cas., 1259).

(h) The collector is presumed to have assessed the duty according to law, and the burden is on the plaintiff to show by preponderance of evidence that the collector was wrong.—Luckemeyer v. Magone (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 30).

(i) The burden of proof is on the plaintiff to show by a preponderance of testimony that the goods did not properly belong to the class to which they were assigned by the collector and that they were dutiable only as claimed in the protest.—Fisk v. Seeberger (D. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 718).

(j) If the jury is unable to say from the testimony whether or not the goods properly belong to the class claimed in the protest, the defendant is entitled to a verdict.—Id.

(k) The burden of proof is upon the importers to establish their allegations as to chief use by sufficient evidence.—Meyer v. Cadwalader (C. C.), (49 Fed. Rep., 26).

(l) The burden is on the importer to overcome the presumption of legal collection by proof that their exaction was unlawful.—Erhardt v. Schroeder (155 U. S., 124).

(m) Where the collector classifies an article under a different designation from that on the invoice, the burden is upon the Government to show that his classification is proper.—Kennedy v. Hartranft (9 Fed. Rep., 18).

(n) The plaintiff has the burden of proving that the chief use of the goods is such as to bring them within the schedule under which he claims they are dutiable.—Hagedon v. Seeberger (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 401).

(o) The burden of proof is on the importer to show by a preponderance of testimony that the goods did not belong to the class to which they were assigned by the collector and that they were dutiable only as claimed in his protest.—Walker v. Seeberger (C. C.), (38 Fed. Rep., 724).

(a) The Government can not be prejudiced by an opinion or promise made or expressed by the defendant, especially when at the time he said what he said he was no longer in office.—Andrae v. Redfield (12 Blatchf., 407; 1 Fed. Cas., 856).

(b) Regarding a suit to recover duties as a suit against the defendant collector, he can not be prejudiced by anything said or done by the Government or its officials without his concurrence, especially after he ceases to be collector.—Id.

(c) Whether certain black laces, handmade and all of silk, are dutiable as silk laces under section 8, act of June 30, 1864, or as "thread laces" under section 20, act of 1861, and section 6, act of 1862, depends upon the question whether they were known in commerce by the one or the other designation, which is a question for the jury on the evidence.—Duden v. Murphy (18 Int. Rev. Rec., 174; 7 Fed. Cas., 1148).

(d) The question whether the goods known as "yak lace," which are composed entirely of worsted, are dutiable as dress trimmings or as manufactures of worsted depends on whether they are known in commerce as dress trimmings or as laces, which is a question of fact for the jury upon the testimony of merchants dealing in such goods.—Duden v. Arthur (24 Int. Rev. Rec., 380; 7 Fed. Cas., 1146).

(e) Ladies' dress goods made wholly of worsted, called "mousseline de laines," were imported and duty exacted at 24 per cent. The importer claimed that the goods were dutiable at 19 per cent as manufactures of worsted or as manufactures of which worsted was a component material. What goods are included in the term "delaines" is a question which the jury must determine upon evidence showing how that term was used at the date of the passage of the act by importers and dealers in that class of goods.—Hutton v. Schell (25 Int. Rev. Rec., 168; 12 Fed. Cas., 1099).

(f) The question whether a particular importation is properly included in a particular name of a substance as employed in the tariff laws is for the jury, not the court.—Weilbacher v. Merritt (37 Fed. Rep., 85).

(g) Whether an imported article is or is not known in commerce by the word or terms used in the tariff act is a question of fact for the jury and not a question of construction, and in the case of an appeal from a decision of the Board of General Appraisers it must be determined by the court as a question of fact.—In re Wise (C. C.), (73 Fed. Rep., 183).

(h) In 1872 "jute rejections" were imported from India and duty of 10 per cent imposed under section 24, act of March 2, 1861, as a nonenumerated manufactured article, and $5 per ton under section 11, act of July 14, 1862, as a vegetable substance not enumerated. Duty paid under protest and suit to recover the specific duty of $5 per ton. The jury was instructed that it was for them to find "whether or not jute rejections were of a class of nonenumerated vegetable substances similar to the enumerated articles in section 11, act of 1862. If they were, then the duty was properly assessed; if not, then their verdict must be for the plaintiff." Verdict for defendant. Held, that the instruction was proper.—Wills v. Russel (100 U. S., 621).

(i) Goods imported in 1862 and 1863 and duty of 30 per cent ad valorem paid under the mixed-material clause of the act of March 2, 1861 (12 Stat., 192), and 2 cents per square yard under section 9, act of July 14, 1862 (12 Stat., 553). The importer claimed that under the act of 1862 the goods were subject only to a duty of 30 per cent. It appeared in evidence that the goods were known in trade and were bought and sold as poil de chevres, reps, plaids, lusters, and

Saxony dress goods; that they were always woven in colors, the yarns being dyed or colored before weaving; that they never existed in the gray or uncolored condition, but were made as delaines are made, with a cotton warp and worsted weft, the difference between them and delaines being that the latter are a fabric of all wool, or cotton warp and worsted weft, made of yarns not dyed, the cloth being printed or dyed in the piece; that as early as 1857 both the all-wool delaines and those with cotton warp and wool or worsted filling were known in trade by names changing from time to time to suit the fancy of importers and purchasers. It also appeared that in several other particulars the goods differed from delaines. The court charged the jury that, in addition to the duty of 30 per cent imposed by the act of 1861, the act of 1862, "imposed a specific duty on all delaines, whether colored or uncolored, and all goods of similar description to delaines, whether colored or uncolored, if such delaines or goods of similar description do not exceed in value 40 cents a square yard," and that it was for them to determine whether the goods were "similar in description to these delaines, whether they are colored or uncolored." Held, that the instruction was proper.—Greenleaf v. Goodrich (101 U. S., 278).

(a) Certain articles were imported by A from Liverpool November 14, 1871, upon which the collector collected a duty of 6 cents a pound, imposed by section 5, act of July 14, 1862, upon "argols or crude tartar." A claimed that they were argols crude and as such were, by section 22, act of July 14, 1870, free. A paid the duty under protest and brought suit to recover. The court instructed the jury that it was for them to determine from the evidence whether the argols in question were "argols crude" then known as such to commerce or to science or whether they were argols that were more or less refined. Held, that the instruction was proper and covered the entire ground of controversy. The jury found the duty properly assessed.—Recknagal v. Murphy (102 U. S., 197).

(b) White linen torchon laces and insertings were imported in 1878. The importer claimed that they were dutiable at 30 per cent under R. S. 2504, schedule C. He paid under protest 40 per cent, the duty prescribed on manufactures of flax, and brought suit against the collector. The court instructed the jury to determine from the evidence whether the goods were "thread lace" such as the schedule describes, and, if they were not, to find for the defendant. Verdict for importer. Held, that the instruction was correct.—Smith v. Field (105 U. S., 52).

(c) A request by each party for a direction of a verdict in his favor is virtually a request that the court find the facts, and its finding is consequently conclusive on the parties if there is any evidence to sustain it.—Merwin v. Magone (C. C. A.), (70 Fed. Rep., 776); Magone v. Origet (id., 778).

(d) Where there is a general finding in favor of the plaintiff on the issues of fact raised by the pleadings, the facts must be taken to be as alleged by plaintiff in his pleadings.—Badger v. Cusimano (130 U. S., 39).

(e) Where the court below makes special findings, no exception is necessary to raise the question whether the facts support the judgment.—Seeberger v. Schlesinger (152 U. S., 581, 586).

(f) Findings of fact which do not show what the collector charged the plaintiff nor sufficiently describe the articles imported, and a record which fails to show under what provisions of a tariff act the parties claimed, respectively, leaves this court unable to direct judgment for either party.—Saltonstall v. Bartwell (150 U. S., 417).

(a) In such a case the opinion of the court below can not be resorted to to help the findings out.—Id.

(b) The Supreme Court accepts the findings of ultimate fact made by the Court of Claims and can not review them.—Mahan v. United States (14 Wallace, 109); Collier v. United States (173 U. S., 79, 80).

(c) Where the verdict is that by the consent of counsel the jury find for the plaintiff "for the amount, with interest, of the excess of duties paid, under protest, on more than 2 per cent commission on all importations specified in the bill of particulars in this case, from the Continent of Europe, except Paris, the amount to be adjudged by the clerk of this court or his deputy," and the clerk reports that according to his adjustment the plaintiffs are entitled to judgment for a sum named, the report can not be excepted to on the ground that the duties are shown to have been paid by a certain firm and that the plaintiffs did not prove before the referee that they composed that firm when the duties were paid or that they alone paid the duties.—Greenleaf v. Schell (6 Blatchf., 225; 10 Fed. Rep., 1173).

(d) Even if such objection be not one which ought to have been taken by plea in abatement, as being an objection that some party who ought to have been joined as plaintiff in the suit was not joined, the verdict cures any defect in that regard.—Id.

(e) Such verdict must be considered as being also an order of reference and confines the action and duty of the referee to an arithmetical adjustment.—Id.

(f) Under such verdict the plaintiff is not required to prove before the referee that the duties were paid under protest.—Id.

(g) Where the jury by mistake in calculating the amount of duty illegally exacted render a verdict for too large an amount, such verdict may be sustained on remitting the excess and a new trial refused.—Windmuller v. Robertson (23 Fed. Rep., 652).

(h) In 1864 a verdict was rendered, by consent of counsel, in an action to recover duties alleged to have been illegally exacted, "for the plaintiffs, for excess of duty, with interest thereon, illegally exacted from the plaintiffs, and paid under protest, and not barred by the statute of limitations." Among the charges which were specified as recoverable were "charges on merchandise imported at New York for the transportation of the goods from the interior of the country by railroad or water carriage, incurred prior to the time of exportation." A reference was made to ascertain the amount due, and defendant excepted to the report. Held, (1) that the verdict precluded the defendant from denying that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the excess of duties illegally exacted by and paid under protest to him, and that when plaintiffs showed that they had paid excessive duties under protest they were entitled to recover the same; (2) that the verdict was to be treated as a stipulation and subject to modification, and an order of court refusing to allow the defendant to set up the statute of limitations precluded him from making such defense at this stage of the case; (3) that, construing the verdict with the aid of the protest, it was never intended to authorize the recovery of duties paid for "frais jusqu'à bord;" (4) that, as the verdict did not liquidate the damages recoverable by the plaintiffs, there was no rest at the date of the verdict, but the interest ran continuously from the date of payment of the excessive duties until the date of liquidation by the referee; (5) that a misjoinder of parties could not be availed of by the defendant under plea of nonassumpsit, though possibly under this very peculiar verdict it might have been taken advantage of by a plea of misjoinder.—Bartels v. Redfield (16 Fed. Rep., 336).

(a) In a suit to recover back duties paid under protest, where the only question tried was whether in reappraisement proceedings the importer was denied rights secured to him by law, held that a motion to direct a verdict for the defendant was properly denied, the court having ruled in accordance with the decision in Auffmordt v. Hedden (137 U. S., 310) and having instructed the jury fully and properly, and there being no exception to the charge, and a question proper for the jury.—Hedden v. Iselin (142 U. S., 676).

(b) Liability of the Government for interest on a judgment against a collector must be created by statute; it can not be implied.—White v. Arthur (10 Fed. Rep., 80).

(c) If the jury find for the plaintiff, they should render a verdict in his favor for the difference between the rates of duty charged and the proper charge, with interest from the time the duties were paid until the first day of the term at which the case is tried.—Ross v. Fuller (17 Fed. Rep., 224).

(d) An importer who has brought suit against a collector to recover duties can not recover interest by way of damages if he has been guilty of laches in unreasonably delaying the prosecution of the suit after it has been brought.—Bartels v. Redfield (27 Fed. Rep., 286).

(e) In this case, however, although judgment had been delayed twenty years, after a special verdict interest was allowed.—Id.

(f) Suit to recover duties commenced in 1863 and tried in 1886. If the jury find that the delay was the fault of the plaintiffs, they are not entitled to interest. If they find that for a part of the time the plaintiffs are to blame, they are not entitled to interest for such time. Verdict for plaintiffs without interest.—Stewart v. Schell (31 Fed. Rep., 65).

(g) When a collector of customs brings a writ of error to review a judgment recovered against him for moneys exacted by and paid to him on entries, this court will, if it affirms the judgment, allow interest on it under rule 23.—Schell v. Cochran (107 U. S., 617).

(h) In such a case the "final judgment," the amount whereof is payable under R. S. 989, is that rendered by the court below pursuant to the mandate of this court.—Id.

(i) The allowance of interest from the time of rendering of the verdict till the judgment was proper, this court having adopted the practice of the State court.—Fowler v. Redfield (9 Fed. Cas., 620).

(j) The liability assumed by the Government does not include the payment of interest upon judgments recovered against collectors of customs.—White v. Arthur (10 Fed. Rep., 80).

(k) The allowance of interest as damages on a writ of error, under R. S. 1010 and under rule 23, Supreme Court, and the form of mandate affirming with interest a judgment where a collector is plaintiff in error, does not affect the question. They belong solely to putting the judgment in shape.—Id.

(l) There is no personal liability on the part of the collector, after the making of a certificate of probable cause, to pay the interest on judgments obtained against him. Under R. S. 989 he is not liable for interest if the Government is not.—Id.

(m) It is not necessary that there should always be a protest accompanying the payment of money which is paid in order to obtain the performance of a duty or the allowance of a right to render the payment an enforced payment. Where there is settled and well-known course of business requiring such payment, which has been continued for a considerable time, and the fact is known that the right is not accorded and the proceedings are not had without such payment, a payment made under such circumstances may be just as much a constrained and coerced payment as if it were the first in the series and made upon an express protest.—Iselin v. Hedden (28 Fed. Rep., 416).

(a) Duties paid after the delivery of goods to the importer can not be recovered.—Rossman v. Hedden (37 Fed. Rep., 99).

(b) Where an importer pays the duties estimated by the collector on several packages of merchandise and receives all but one of the packages, which is sent to the public stores for examination, and executes the usual bond for return thereof if required, payment of the additional duties on all the packages as returned by the appraiser, without which or a deposit thereof the importer could not, under article 358, Regulations, 1884, obtain possession of the examined packages, is not voluntary. Sustaining the Circuit Court.—Erhardt v. Winter (C. C. A.), (92 Fed. Rep., 918).

(c) Where the importer claimed that certain goods should be appraised at their value abroad at the time of their purchase, and the collector directed them to be appraised at their value at the time of their exportation, they having risen in value in the meantime, and the importer, for the purpose of obtaining possession of the goods and of avoiding the penalty imposed by section 8, act of July 30, 1846, for an excess of 10 per cent in the appraised value over the value in the entry, added to the cost of the goods a sum which made their value equal to their value abroad at the time of their exportation, and paid duties on that value under protest, held that the payment of the duties was not voluntary.—Griswold v. Lawrence (1 Blatchf., 599; 11 Fed. Cas., 66).

(d) A payment voluntarily made can not be recovered even though it could not have been enforced by law.—Corkle v. Maxwell (3 Blatchf., 413; 6 Fed. Cas., 555).

(e) When a payment has been obtained by fraud, oppression, or extortion, or when it has been made to secure a right which the party paying was entitled to without such payment, and which right was withheld by the party receiving payment until such payment was made, such payment was not voluntary and may be recovered.—Id.

(f) It may also be recovered when it was made upon a wrongful demand to save the party paying from some great or irreparable mischief or damage from which he could not be saved but by the payment of the sum wrongfully demanded.—Id.

(g) Duties must be held to have been voluntarily paid unless protest was given as prescribed by the statute.—De Celis v. United States (13 C. Cls. R., 117).

(h) Vegetable buttons imported in 1884. Goods seized for undervaluation (R. S., 2839), in that the cost of the cartons and packing were not added. Claimant applied for release under R. S. 3081. Goods appraised, the appraised value paid, and the goods released. The Supreme Court in Oberteuffer v. Robertson (116 U. S., 499) decided that the cost or value of cartons and packing are not dutiable items under the act of 1883. Held, that this was clearly a voluntary settlement and compromise, with full knowledge of all the facts of the matters at issue between the parties, whether they were in accordance with statute provisions on the subject, and is binding alike on the claimant and the defendants. Money so paid can not be recovered back.—Shantz v. United States (23 C. Cls. R., 384, 398).

(i) A voluntary payment made to a collector under a mistake of law can not be recovered back; but if the party paying declare that he makes the payment to get possession of his goods, that he intends to sue to recover it back, and that the collector must not pay it over, the collector is liable.—Elliott v. Swartwout (10 Pet., 137, 153, 158).

(a) It can hardly be meant that in this class of cases to make a payment involuntary it should be by actual violence or any physical duress. It suffices if the payment is caused on the one part by an illegal demand and made on the other part reluctantly and in consequence of that illegality and without being able to regain possession of his property except by submitting to the payment.—Maxwell v. Griswold (10 How., 242, 256).

(b) If an importer on being refused permission to enter his goods at their value at the time of procurement and to avoid the penal duty provided by section 8, act of July 30, 1846 (9 Stat., 43), thereupon adds to the valuation in his invoice under protest and pays the duty assessed thereon, he may maintain an action to recover back the difference between the duty leviable by law on the original and the increased valuation.—Maxwell v. Griswold (10 How., 242).

(c) Merchandise was delivered to an importer after he had paid the duties on it as first liquidated or estimated on its entry. Subsequently the collector recalled the invoice, the local appraiser increased the valuation, there was a reappraisement by the General Appraiser and a merchant appraiser, and a new liquidation which increased the amount of duties. The importer paid the amount under protest and appealed to the Secretary (who affirmed the action of the collector) and then brought suit against the collector. Held, that under R. S. 3011 the action would not lie because the payment was not made to obtain possession of the merchandise.—Porter v. Beard (124 U. S., 429).

(d) The compulsory insertion by the importer of additional charges upon an entry and invoice, which necessarily involves the payment of increased duties, makes the payment of those duties involuntary.—Robertson v. Frank, Brothers & Co. (132 U. S., 17).

(e) The payment of money to a customs official to avoid an onerous penalty, though the imposition of that penalty may have been illegal, is sufficient to make the payment an involuntary one.—Id.

(f) Where an excess of duties is paid under protest after possession has been obtained by the importer of the goods on which the excess is paid such excess can not be recovered.—Drake v. Redfield (4 Blatchf., 116; 7 Fed. Cas., 1052).

(g) Contract whereby plaintiffs and others authorized the institution of suits to recover alleged illegal customs duties and fees construed, and held that the substitution of attorneys through whom some of such suits were settled was valid, that plaintiffs were bound by the action of said attorneys, and that the cases so settled should not be revived against the executors of the collector.—Dale v. Redfield (22 Fed. Rep., 506); Strange v. Schell (22 Fed. Rep., 506).

(h) The assignor of the defendants in error employed the plaintiffs in error as their agents to enter at the custom-house in New York importations of sugar and after protest to commence suits to recover an excess of duty, and the plaintiffs in error undertook to perform those services; and, it being settled in actions brought by other persons under similar circumstances and on like importations that such duties were illegally exacted, and the plaintiffs in error having failed to commence suits within the period limited by law to recover such as were illegally exacted from the assignor of the defendant in error, held that the judgment of the court below for their recovery must be affirmed.—Bowerman v. Rogers (125 U. S., 585).
